LACK OF QUORUM CANCELS ELECTION OF STUDENT OFFICERS: MEETING RE- SCHEDULED FOR TUESDAY

For lack of quorum the Student Government election was not held Thursday, September 23 as scheduled.

Under Article II, Section 3 of the Constitution of the Students of Wilmington College, at least fifty-one per cent of the students enrolled in the college must be present for a quorum.

Eleven more students were needed to make the meeting official.

The election for important student body positions has been re-scheduled for 11:33 A.M. Tuesday.

President of the Student Government, Kenneth Phelps, has expressed the importance and necessity of the attendance of all members of the Student Body, at this meeting.

DRAMATICS CLUB TO PRESENT "PENNYWISE"

Twenty-one of the Dramatics Club's twenty-five members were informed at the second meeting of the semester last Tuesday night of the decision to produce "Pennywise," a three-act comedy by Gene Ferguson Black.

TO THE STAFF:

I would like to pay tribute in this first issue of our school paper to those have been ambitious and courageous enough to launch such a worthwhile project for the service of Wilmington College. It is my hope that the coming weeks and months will see a substantial increase in the number of students affiliated with the staff of this paper. The valuable experiences of those who have the responsibility of sharing in its publication together with the services and enjoyments which the paper will render to the entire college are all very much worthwhile and will add greatly to the desirable features of our expanding program of activities. I join the present staff in soliciting the unanimous support and enthusiasm of the college personnel in the furtherance of this

Miss Mildred Johnson, Director of the Dramatics Club announced that the play had been ordered and would arrive in time for tryouts to be held tonight at the meeting.

Tentative date for presentation of "Pennywise" is November 4th or 5th. Until that time rehearsals will be held three nights per week and every night the week before the play.

The group is expected to outdo its past performances this semester, with the return of such standbys as Donald Becker, Tracy Engle, Evelyn Mercer, Joe Fridgen, and Faye Sloan.

At the first meeting of the Dramatics Club on September 13th, Gene Fales was elected Chairman, Harriet Becker, Secretary, and Robert Scott, Treasurer.

Committees thus far have been chosen for the

In this, the first edition of a student publication in Wilmington College, the staff wishes to express a few things on its mind.

First, we are proud and honored to be able to have published this small paper as the first "SEAHAWK." We are gratified to know that we have been the beginning of something which we believe will grow with time as Wilmington College grows. We have made a small beginning but nevertheless, have taken the first step.

Secondly, the staff wishes to thank all of those who have given us encouragement when we have needed it. We thank Mr. Dale Spencer for his interest in a student publication last semester, and we thank Mr. R. C. Beemon, our new dean, for his enthusiasm and support of our project.

DILEMMA

By Frank Bradley

In a metropolis the size of Wilmington, what do you find to occupy those spare moments? After all the lessons have been carefully prepared and the remainder of the evening or weekend looms brightly ahead, just what are your plans? The Sunday picture at the Bailey with that lucky date, or perhaps it's Thursday night choir practice, or Saturday afternoon bridge?

Do you tire of the same old routine? Well, here's your solution. Simply make a mental note to begin now, today, to learn about that interesting something that's lodged in your storehouse of desires. Break down needless inhibitions.

Do Flashing sabers present a challenge? If you're slightly on the hefty side, awkward, or just plain interested, while away the hours reading, "The Art of Fencing" by Dan Vince.

Dusty old volumes, family history, and, coats-of-arms would require less energy, but can be none the less exciting.

"Searching For Your Ancestors," in the public library, tells, in a fascinating manner, the way to find out just which Jones, or Vanderbilt, was your great-grandpappy.

These are just two suggestions for reading, neither of which appeal

FIRST DANCE SOCIAL HIT

Our first social-event last Tuesday night in the Isaac Bear Gym was a big success, with both students and faculty members enjoying the games and dance.

First on the program was the playing of various games by half the crowd, designated as the "Greens," while the "Reds" were engaged in bingo. Then the Greens and Reds switched. And if you think it's easy to throw balls in Pop-eye's mouth or grains of corn in a dish, just try it sometime, if you have not already.

Following the games, the dancing began, highlighted with the Paul Jones dance later in the evening.

Refreshments consisted of cookies, crackers, and jelly-beans topped with a "steaming green volcanic drink." (It really was like a volcano, too).

The carnival and dance were under the sponsorship of the Dramatics Club and the Student Body Council. We wish to express appreciation to the members of these two organizations, and to Miss Mildred Johnson who worked hard to make this social successful.

Mr. Beemon, our new Dean, gave us a few to you; but you can't say they aren't something different.

OPEN LETTER

Several people have mentioned to me that they cannot meet with the College Choir if it meets at the regularly scheduled hour of 11:30-12:30 on Tuesdays and Thursdays. However, they feel that they could do so if the choir met at some hour in the evening after the 6:00 P.M. class.

Because I do want to get a choral group organized which will represent our college, I will meet all those interested in joining a choral group at 6:00 P.M. on Tuesday evening September 28, in the music room, No. 208.

If you are interested and can possibly make this meeting, please do so and let's get underway. If the hour of 6:00 P.M. is not convenient for you, but you could make it at a later hour, please leave a note in my box in the foyer to that effect. We will set the regular rehearsals to meet the needs of the most people. Please do come out and help to build a good choral group.

COLLEGE WILL HAVE BASKETBALL TEAM

Wilmington College will definitely have a basketball team this season according to Dean R. C. Beemon. As yet, a coach for the Wilmington College Seahawks has not been found, but efforts are being exerted to obtain one as soon as possible.

selection of plays and publicity. Frank Bradley, Tracy Engle, Evelyn Mercer, and Adelaide Wilson are working under Mr. T.G. Browning in the selection of plays. The Publicity Committee headed by Mrs. Mary Cameron Bellamy consists of Eleanor Doss, Gene Jewell, Eugene Piner, and Daye Wilkins.

Other than producing plays, the group has expressed interest in the study of speech arts, interpretive reading, and debating and may include them in its meetings.

In the past the Dramatics Club known as the Wilcol Stagers has been the most successful social function of Wilmington College. Last year the Wilcol Stagers presented two major productions and four one-act plays. The group was also the sponsor of the Wilmington College Banquet last semester.

SCHOOL OF HIGHER LEARNING

"How did the college get such a bad name?"

PROVERB

Forgetting of a wrong is a mild revenge. 105156

Veterans of last year's outstanding squad in school this semester are James Croom, Carl Mason, and Leroy Towles. R. L. Church and A. L. King, also members of the Seahawks last year, are doubtful if they will play this season.

Croom, last year, held the highest individual scoring honors for the Seahawks with an average of 14.9 points per game. Towles was next with an average of 9.2 points per game.

Against conference opposition the Seahawks won six games and lost two, both losses being to the champion Campbell College quintet.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE EN- ROLLMENT FIGURES SHOW MORE NON-VETERANS, MORE GIRLS THIS SEMESTER

Out of the dean's office come some statistics on enrollments in Wilmington College.

Although the total enrollment this semester is slightly below that of last semester, it is pointed out that the college now has more non-veterans than it does veterans. Many of the veterans did and still do take part-time courses. Non-veterans usually take a full load and thus bring more money into the college.

Of the 133 students enrolled this semester in Wilmington College, sixty-four are veterans and sixty-nine are non-veterans. Twenty-two of the total enrollment are girls.

University parallel courses seem to be the most popular to eighty-five of the college's students while forty-eight study under terminal courses. Under university parallel, the liberal arts course has twenty-nine enrolled and pre-engineering, seventeen. Business administration and accounting, with sixteen students, seems to be most popular under the terminal courses.

Also enrolled in the college are 110 students taking technical and vocational courses. Courses being offered in the field are bricklaying, refrigerating, and aircraft, engines, and air-conditioning.

Wilmington College is proud to have as its new Registrar, Miss Janice Pickard, a native Wilmingtonian and graduate of New Hanover High School.

Receiving her A.B. degree from W.C.U.N.C., Miss Pickard has taught mathematics at Winter Park Grammar School and in 1946 was a member of the College Center faculty as a math instructor. She has been employed by the Tide Water Power Company until her acceptance of the position as Registrar of our college. This is Miss Pickard's first experience as a registrar.

CAST CHOSEN FOR PLAY

Tryouts for the three-act comedy, "Penny Wise" by Jean Ferguson Black, which is to be presented on November 5, have been held during the past week, and the cast has been announced by Miss Mildred Johnson, Director of the Dramatics Club.

Daye Wilkins, as Jeff, will portray a handsome young man in his early thirties who is afraid of work. Tina, portrayed by Marilyn McCullen, is a good-looking actress, a vivid personality, in her late twenties. Donald Becker, successful in presentations of the Wilcol Stagers last year, appears again, this time as Gordon, a good-looking playwright

ON ACTING

By Donald Becker

An excuse that seems favored by anyone asked to join the ranks of the Wilcol Stagers is, "I can't act."

If these people would stop and review their own actions they'd realize that they are guilty of committing the horrible crime of acting each and every day that passes. For instance, close observation of the characters that congregate on the steps between classes will show many types of GOOD acting. "Brick" Mason's comic characterization of the "Mad Man Muntz" would sweep an audience with gales of laughter if portrayed in an auditorium. The constant bickering between Kenneth Phelps and Billy Wagner on the merits of their respective "wrecks" would make a comedy skit of rare quality.

The little boy who feigns injured innocence when charged with rifling the cookie jar is an actor. The gushing dowager who loudly sings praises of a simply divine hat that her neighbor is wearing, when she secretly dislikes the hat immensely, is an actress of no mean ability.

Good acting abounds among us, waiting to be developed, and we may discover another Barrymore in the rank and file of our student body.

LOOKIN' AND LISTENIN'

By Frank Bradley

By observation in and around Wilmington College, one acquires an informative cross-section of college life.

Having eight-fifteen coffee at the Campus Grill, formerly the Buttermilk, one sees such well-known "characters" as J. D. Winters, Don Becker, Ted Webb, and Tracy Engle. By eight-o'clock, Wilcol steps are studded with resigned scholars discussing current issues. Conversation ranges from balance sheets and income statements to isotopes and protoplasm. A literary circle composed of Chris Blossom, Glenn Bass and Martin Rabunsky might well be discussing the latest dope or dirt about the popes, as presented by Mr. Browning. English aspirants, 101, will, no doubt, put up a stiff opposition or defense on the subject, "Who Should Go to College?"

Incidentally, have you noticed Freddy Sternberger's Hattie Carnegie Hat, commonly called a "pork-pie"? Anyway, its turned to a crisp brown.

In the field of fashion, corduroy jackets, gay sport shirts, saddle oxfords, and "liquid sunshine" hair still hold their sway.

MRS. BELLAMY INTERPRETS

Any student who thinks that studying Spanish is wasted effort, may profit by Mrs. Bellamy's experience last week. A frenzied phone call to Mrs. Bjonerud's office in the Isaac Bear Building begged for someone able to speak Spanish. It seems that a Cuban had driven up to a local filling station seeking mechanical repairs for his car. The station attendant could not understand the troubled Cuban and sought help from someone who was able to speak his language. Well there was a big scurry until Mrs. Bellamy came to the rescue.

The car had been making a very peculiar noise. But no time was wasted, for Mrs. Bellamy soon understood that the carburetor had been the cause of the trouble. She interpreted to the station attendant, and all was well.

The Cuban, whose name is not known, was extremely pleased and thankful that someone could understand him and speak his language. Mrs. Bellamy had a short talk with him and learned that he had come from Havana, Cuba and was touring the States. The only English he knew was a few words pertaining to food. The Cuban went on to say that he is having a most wonderful time. This little incident leaves us all with a good neighborly feeling. Si???

office of the day with Foy finally winning on the third ballot. Carolyn Blake, Rebecca Near, Evelyn Hickman, and Robert Lewis gave Foy competition for the position.

Walter Cutchin, running against William Hull was elected President of the Second Year Class; while Donald Becker won out over John Dickens as Second Year Class Representative.

Evelyn Hickman, Gene Jewell, and Gene Piner were set back by Robert Lewis in the race for President of the First Year Class.

Chosen as Representatives of the First Year Class were Gene Jewell and Bernard Corbett in the only secret ballot election of the day. Corbett and Jewell defeated Gordon Blair, J. D. Winters and James Trawyck.

Members of the Election Board who assisted in the nominations and election of officers are William Hull, Chairman of the Board, Frank Bradley, Evelyn Hickman, William Jenkins, and J. D. Winters.

Mr. Charlton, who hails from Barracksville, West Virginia, is not new in basketball. While earning his A.B. degree at E.C.T.C., he played three years of varsity basketball and later coached the Greenville High School team to a successful season.

At George Peabody, Mr. Charlton received his M.A. degree.

BASKETBALL PRACTICE

TO BEGIN NOV. 15

All those interested in playing basketball will be glad to hear that the Seahawks will begin practice on or before November 15.

Mr. Charlton, new mentor of the Wilmington College quintet, has stated that he hopes to have one or possibly two games before Christmas.

Last year the Hawks dribbled and passed their way through their Eastern Conference foes with only two defeats.

This year, due to the expansion of the Conference into South Carolina, the competition should be much stiffer.

OPEN LETTER:

So far, the college chorus has held two meetings with eight attending. In order to have a good chorus it is necessary that more people join.

Some of us can't even read music, yet we still have fun. After all, we aren't trying to compete with Fred Waring or Paul Whiteman.

The singing of the "blues" on test days proves that we have musical talent in the student body. Let's organize it.

The regular meetings are held from 6:00 to 6:45 every Tuesday and Thursday. If you are planning to join and the time is inconvenient, place suggestions in Mr. Taylor's box.

A number of the socialites can be seen eating at Pete's about twelve-thirty. Pete's, with its cosmopolitan atmosphere, features hot dogs, hamburgers, and Pepsis.

The power of true friendship was especially exemplified in the student elections last Tuesday. The first and third rows can be likened to the vote of the "Solid South."

College students are not allowed to sit in the high school stands at football games, according to Gene Jewell, first year class representative. SEAHAWK SEES CHANGES

Being a newly-born paper, THE SEAHAWK has already seen many changes in its staff, its layout, content, distribution, and production. We hope these changes, which we believe to be for the better, will continue until THE SEAHAWK becomes a model college newspaper.

Our staff has enlarged, the paper is a member of the Intercollegiate Press for the next academic year, we have graduated from production in the lobby to a corner in Mrs. Bennett's office, we have a box in the faculty box section for suggestions and letters, we have increased distribution, we have re-

To raise a mustache one must have a motive, desire or the want of something better to do. It will take a lot of will power on the part of the person, as he must stand up under heavy kidding and much comment. Then also one can not always grow a mustache. First, it is limited to the male sex, and then, there is an age or glandual condition to be considered. If these qualifications can be met, one can then think over the steps to be taken to grow this unusual brush.

To begin with, a little larger patch than the mustache must not be shaved for about a week. This is so it may be trimmed and shaped with the utmost perfection. The shape and size must be taken into consideration also. Unusual shapes are desired by novices, whereas a large mustache on a street cleaner looks comical because it will look like a miniature reproduction of the push-broom that precedes him. A wearer of a long mustache must be extremely careful of picking up babies; it provides a convenient grasping point for the infant.

Color is another factor which must be taken into consideration. A man with brown hair may by some odd freak of nature sometimes grow a red mustache. This of course will clash with his natural color scheme.

After the supreme sacrifice is made, the wearer may or may not find it to

SOCIAL = = ZENITH

By Donald Becker

It's too bad that the social life of Wilmington College must reach its zenith on the college steps or by the monument for war heroes at Thirteenth and Market. Certainly the social communion derived from the variety of stories told and the nostalgia produced by reliving and expanding upon past experiences is both interesting and educational, but it seems that the student body deserves something more in the way of social activity.

Now that we have a social activities committee under the apt leadership of Ed Pitts and the equally able faculty guidance of Miss Mildred Johnson, things should begin to look up in the form of dances and parties galore.

However, the finger of responsibility also points directly at you and me. We can't sit back on our complacency and wait to be handed entertainment on a platter. Figuratively speaking, the suggestion box is always open, and our social committee will welcome helpful suggestions in any form. For the more energetic, a spot in one of the subcommittees will be open so that we may carry out our ideas to perfection.

Industry makes happiness and the best way to be entertained is to entertain. So, let's entertain an idea or two for a college social season that will have the country club set gasping for breath.

COLLEGE ENROLLMENTS WILL REACH GREATER HEIGHTS IN FUTURE YEARS

Kent, O.-(I.P.)-Instead of returning to pre-war normal, American college and university enrollments will go on to greater heights within the next 25 years, according to Robert I. White, dean of the college of education, Kent State University.

"Using the current birth rate figures," he said, "we can predict that 4,000,000 students will enter halls of higher learning in 1965, almost twice as many as today--and we think we have an educational problem."

The American birth rate, on the decline since 1790, took a turn for the better in 1939, and, helped by the war, showed a 50 per cent increase in the last nine years, according to Dean White.

Today, only 15 per cent of the college age group, 13 to 21, have entered institutions of higher learning. In 1965, he claims, this group will be augmented by 4,000,000 more candidates and the percentage will be increased to 25 per cent.

According to Dean White, the present college enrollment will continue into 1951 when the backlog of veterans and high school graduates, hitherto unable to get into crowded colleges, will complete their courses. A slight slump is expected for 1952 with significant increases starting in 1957.

"Sure gonna be tough sledding today."

"Yeah? How come?"

"No snow."

PROFESSOR APPROVES MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN FOR COLLEGE STUDENTS; GOVERNMENT SUBSIDIZATION AND PARENTS SHOULD AID THEM HE SAYS

Denver, Colo.-(I.P.)-Students who marry while still in college have the approval of Dr. Eugene Link, professor of sociology and marriage counselor at the University of Denver.

INDEPENDENT COLLEGES DECLARED ESSENTIAL

Crawfordsville, Ind.-(I. P.)-Potentially, the most effective advocate of the private enterprise system is the independent college and these "colleges and business ought to be inseparable partners," according to Dr. Frank H. Sparks, president of Wabash College.

"Privately financed colleges cannot exist in a society which fails to support private enterprise and I am personally of the opinion that private enterprise will not long survive in America if our privately financed colleges disappear," he continued.

Pointing out that our system of education is changing and "is not changing for the better nor for the benefit of private enterprise," Dr. Sparks reproved business for the "poor job" it has done "of explaining the principles of private enterprise to the public and to the oncoming generation."

Reader: "Where do you get those jokes?"

Editor: "Out of my head."

Reader: "You must be!"

"Can you pass the bread?"

"I think I can. I moved pianos all summer."

According to Dr. Link, the advantages of married life to students very greatly outweigh the disadvantages if the following requisites are met: The couple should not be burdened unduly with economic responsibilities. "I believe in subsidization of education such as outlined in Truman's educational program," he said.

"If there is none--then parents who can afford to should finance the college couple."

Both the boy and the girl should go to college. This prevents the man's intellectual development from getting too far ahead of his wife's. One of the great causes of divorce is too great an educational difference between mates, he declared. "Any man who does not want his wife to have the same educational background as he does is not really mature yet."

Children should not be postponed until after schooling is finished. Dr. Link believes that couples who wait too long before starting their families, have difficulty in adjusting to their children. "Nursery schools should be set up on college campuses in order to free the mother so that she can take a few courses at the university," he said.

RUSSIAN STUDIES BEING TAUGHT

VETERANS RAISE IQ OF TENNESSEE UNIVERSITY

Knoxville, Tenn.-(I.P.)-Since veterans began entering the University of Tennessee in 1946, the average IQ of freshmen has risen from 108 to 109, Dr. Joseph E. Avent, director of the State Testing Program, declared recently.

Twenty-five per cent of the freshmen entering the University have an IQ of 117 to 150, Dr. Avent said. "Those with IQ's of 125 to 150 should become the brilliant leaders in the state if they will make the proper use of their opportunity," he added.

Although some of the entering students have an IQ as low as 90, they can still graduate from the University if they will work hard enough, Dr. Avent said.

"Mental age increases from birth up to 15 or 20 years and tends to level off after mental maturity is reached," he declared. "The IQ of a person is the ratio of his mental age to his chronological age up to maturity of mental ability."

"In Tennessee, and elsewhere, the IQ appears to get slightly higher as students advance through the grades," Dr. Avent said. "This is probably because the slower-learning students tend to fall behind and drop out."

MARY WASHINGTON COLLEGE TAKES LEAD TO BECOME CENTER FOR RUSSIAN STUDIES IN VIRGINIA

Fredericksburg, Va.-(I.P.)-While many colleges and universities have hesitated to include Russian in their curriculum, President M. L. Combs of Mary Washington College has determinedly taken the lead by making his institution a center for Russian studies in this state.

COST OF LIVING FORCES WITHDRAWAL OF VETERANS

Los Angeles, Calif. (I.P.)

"Veterans are dropping out of Los Angeles Colleges and universities at an alarming rate--casualties of the high cost of living," declares Arthur H. Tryon, director of the Los Angeles Veterans Service Center.

Upsetting all previous predictions of a steady rise until 1952, veteran enrollment has dropped 3 per cent in the last year, Tryon revealed, in the release of a special center survey of 27 schools of higher learning in this area.

"Subsistence allowance of ex-GIs have been far out-stripped by cost of living increases. And with part-time employment unavailable, veterans are rapidly being forced to abandon their college education," he said.

Absent-minded professor:
"A collector at the door? Did you tell him I was out?"
Maid: "Yes, sir, but he doesn't believe me."
Professor: "Very well, then, I shall have to go and tell him myself."

It is emphasized by the Virginia chapter of the American Association of Teachers of Slavic and Eastern European Languages, an organization in which more than 500 teachers of these languages hold membership, that the United States needs an ever greater number of people with a good command of Russian.

Even if these people can not speak the language fluently, a reading ability would make them valuable as translators. There are some 600 Russian magazines, creating a steady demand for translators in this field.

The Navy Communications Annex in Washington, D.C., invited several students from the Russian classes here to apply for positions. Generously aided by the Rockefeller Foundation, Columbia University last year founded the American-Russian Institute which now is able to give grants to outstanding students to continue their studies and to acquire an M.A. or Ph.D. degree in the field.

EDUCATION BY RADIO MAKES NATIONAL DEBUT; OFFERS COLLEGE COURSES

Louisville, Ky.-(I.P.)-A radically new experiment in the field of teaching, "Education by Radio," made its national debut recently after months of preparation by the University of Louisville, Radio Station WHAS, and the National Broadcasting Company.

Designed to deliver the equivalent of an organized college classroom into the homes of thousands of adults throughout the country, the newly inaugurated classroom of the air promises to become the progenitor of revolutionary trends in correspondence-education.

These radio--assisted courses have been planned for people interested in studying for self improvement as well as for those desiring to complete degree credit work.

STUDENT GOVERNMENTS NEED RE-EVALUATION

Chicago, Ill.-(I.P.)-Debunking the idea that it is dangerous for students to have a direct means of expressing their opinion, William N. EDUCATORS URGED TO TAKE TIPS FROM COMICS

Columbia, Mo.-(I.P.)---

American educators might do well to take a tip from the currently popular comic books, according to Dr. Dorothy Farthing, assistant professor of education at the University of Missouri.

Dr. Farthing observes that "Comic books are so much a part of the reading diet of young Americans that it is foolish to rail at them or to ignore them with amused disdain."

Rather than allow comic books to remain as mere sources of irritation, Dr. Farthing encourages American teachers to seek the reason for their appeal.

We hope we shall continue to receive the encouragement and support we have received thus far, both from the students and the college itself.

He believes "a practical education in democratic self-government....is in effect an insurance policy for a nation that prides itself on the capacity of its people to govern themselves."

Welsh pointed out that too often college administrations are afraid of the public criticism that arises if mistakes are made by student governing bodies. For this reason they tend to withhold complete delegation of authority. "We must inform the public that student government is a learning process," he said.

Politics for politics' sakes, too much emphasis on disciplinary powers were cited as additional pitfalls to properly functioning student self-government. The NSA leader feels that such factors too often interfere with the legitimate functions of student government--those of "serving the people who make it up and representing them to the other groups with whom those people must work and live."

WHAT HAPPENS TO TOP SCHOLARS?--ANSWER--THEY BECOME PROFESSORS

Cambridge, Mass.--(I.P.)

What happens to the top scholars who graduate from American colleges? What do they do for a living? How do they contribute to American life? Do they win success in the world?

A case study of 64 outstanding younger scholars from every section of the country, picked for their promise of original thought became available recently with a report on the first 15 years of the Society of Fellows at Harvard University.

The Society's method is to give these young college graduates, most of them under 25, three years in which to do free study and research. They do not study for the traditional Ph.D. degree. They are not forced into a mold of classes and credits. But all the facilities of Harvard--laboratories, libraries, class-rooms, faculty--are available to them.

After 15 years--with most of its "graduates" still under 40, and many of them not yet 30--the Society reports these accomplishments of the 64 men who have been "Junior Fellows:"

Forty-nine of them are now teaching in colleges and universities across America, from McGill University in Canada to the University of California. Of these, 32 are in the highest rank of professor or associate professor. And 21 of them are now on the Harvard faculty.

BEST GRADES MADE BY DATING STUDENTS AT BOWLING GREEN UNIV.

Bowling Green, O.--(I.P.)

The more most students date, the better grades they make.

So concluded a faculty member at Bowling Green State University after studying 3,000 questionnaires made out by students on this campus.

The professor, Dr. S. Harman Lowried, chairman of the sociology department, teaches the only American college course exclusively devoted to dating.

He learned that the combination of frequent dates and high grades occurs more often among women than among men and more often among freshmen than among upper-classmen.

COLLEGE PLANS WEINER ROAST

WILCOL STUDENTS, BLAIR AND BRADLEY, APPEAR.

IN THALIAN PRODUCTION OF "LIFE WITH FATHER"

Gordon Blair and Frank Bradley, Wilmington College's contributions to the stage, appeared this week in the Thalian Association's production of "Life With Father," the record-breaking play which has had audiences "rolling in the aisles" since 1939.

Robert Helms, a student of Wilmington College last year, also appeared in "Life With Father." Helms was a member of the Student Council and was outstanding with the college's dramatic group, the Wilcol Stagers.

The stage is not new to Frank Bradley. In high school Frank played the lead in the Junior play, had a leading role in the Senior play, won the Declamation contest, and was seen in two operettas and two one-act plays. His abilities as a singer are well known. Frank is portraying Clarence Day Jr., the author of the play, in "Life With Father."

PROMISES TO BE GALA

AFFAIR; TICKETS 35¢

The Social Committee of Wilmington College has arranged a weiner roast to be held November 20 which promises to be a gala night, weather permitting.

With tickets in hand, those attending will meet in front of the College 7:30 P. M. to depart for "Piney Point," Fourth Street entrance to the road around Greenfield Lake. Tickets to attend the fun are on sale for .35 cents and those hoping to go with the crowd are urged by the Social Committee to purchase their Tickets now.

SO YOU STUDY FRENCH

Ithaca, New York.-(I.P.)-Taking a long way around, 20 new instructors have prepared to teach European languages at Cornell University by learning an Asiatic tongue--Hindustani.

Operating on the principle that the best preparation for teaching is a knowledge of what it feels like to receive it, Dr. J. Milton Cowan, director of Cornell's Division of Modern Languages, conducted a short course in the India tongue for the new staff members. Hindustani was chosen because it was totally unfamiliar to the group, which represented 11 nationalities and five different European languages. Dr. Cowan says the instructors acquired a "student point of view" and a sense of humility--a virtue he terms a teaching "must."

This is to be the first social of its kind offered to the students of the college, and it is expected that a large crowd will attend.

The Student Council, Wilmington College's own 80th Congress, passed a measure recently to put a notice on the bulletin board asking students to observe the traffic lights while crossing the street. The high school Marshall had sent a letter requesting such action. A measure was passed also to request college students "to be careful of their language around high school students." The high school students are no "white sheets." The request should ask us merely to be careful of our language around the school. Then there was discussion as to what color paper to put behind notices on the bulletin board so as to make them more attractive.

RECENT SURVEY REVEALS CRAMMING HELPFUL

Peoria, Ill.-(I. P.) - A recent survey on "Cramming" by Dr. David M. White of Bradley University reveals that an average of 87 per cent crammed about six and one-half hours for each final examination. Findings were based on a survey of 10 per cent of Bradley's enrollment.

Since the psychological effect of cramming seems to help the veteran student as much as the actual additional facts he picks up, Dr. White believes that "it is possible that there is some tie-over from their (the veterans') wartime indoctrination with its focus on D-Day, H-Hour type of activity and the necessity to direct themselves psychologically to a D-Day, H-Hour stimulus situation in the classroom."

The latest from the court is that our basketball team is doing fine. Coach Charlton says, "we are going to take 12 boys with us to every game." Asked if he had picked his first starting five, he replied, "No, I don't believe in a first string. I have some fine boys. Although some of the boys will play more than others, each one will get a chance to play."

Fighting hard to fill the twelve empty uniforms of the Seahawks for the coming season are Bob Lewis, Carl Mason, and Bruce Hinson, working for center position.

Our guards will be hard for one to choose with such good material as R.L. Church, Leroy Towles, Tommy Dan, and Jim Cushing.

Striving for a forward position, and leading, is our star letter-man Jim "Luddie" Croom. Also out for the position is Big Harry Coleman, Glenn Bass, Huck Moore, and Billy Weathersbee.

Who will fill the twelve vacant uniforms for this year is hard to say, but as you can see, we are going to have a fine team.

We at Wilmington College are very glad to learn that Carl Mason's younger brother, Billy, will join our ranks in January. Although Billy will be unable to play in conference games he will be in there fighting for our non-conference tilts. Billy who is now attending Campbell Junior College, is making headlines for his brilliant playing in football. Holding down a first string end position, he has rocked up many TD's for Campbell.

We at Wilmington College are looking forward to having Billy Mason join us.

OREGON THINKS VOCAB- ULARY IMPORTANT

Corvallis, Ore.--(I.P.)-

The English department at Oregon State College is formulating a vocabulary-building program which it will introduce into composition courses this term.

The department's program will include the study of about 150 roots and prefixes on the basis of which thousands of English words are formed. In addition, a list of 600-800 words will be taught directly, words which are of frequent occurrence but which students do not generally use.

Recent investigations on the part of psychologists have revealed an almost startlingly close connection between the size of a man's vocabulary and his professional and business success, it was pointed out.

Among the various groups that have been tested, top business executives are found to have larger vocabularies than do college professors.

BROOM BREEDING ? ? ? ?

Clayton Smith had an excellent report for zoology. It seems after several unsuccessful experiments a not too clever Russian scientist finally succeeded in the cross-breeding of an octopus and a porcupine--result being a broom with eight handles. Of course Smith gets A's in zoology!

THE WAY I LIKE IT

By Bill Dobo

Cooking in an isolated Coast Guard Station is a job to be avoided as long as possible. In the crew of seven men there is no cook and each man must take his turn at this chore. Being human males, the crew of men did not thrive on this type of domestic work. Their main pleasure was hunting on off duty hours. This would vary their diet and lighten the food bill. All this was very well, but still the food had to be cleaned and cooked.

Now at this unpleasant task one man had to take a month's turn. If, in the meantime any of the crew members complained about the cooking, he would have to take over the job for the rest of the month. Every man specialized in at least one very palatable dish, but the rest of his cooking was mediocre. At the beginning of a new month another man who was famous for his puddings had just taken over the job. This man didn't seem to enjoy the idea of a whole month's drudgery so he carefully laid plans for a way out. The next night the dinner was superb and then came the famous pudding, into which the cook had placed a large quantity of salt. The first crew member took a large helping and dug in. The first mouthful revealed to the

COLLEGE WOMEN MORE SUPERSTITIOUS THAN MEN SAYS PSYCHOLOGIST

Bowling Green, O.-(I.P.)

College women are more superstitious than men, according to Dr. Earle E. Emme, associate professor of psychology at Bowling Green State University.

Horseshoes, wish bones, broken mirrors, fortune tellers, four-leaf clovers, all intrigue coeds more than their male classmates, the professor contends.

Dr. Emme has done more research on college superstitions than any other American. A financial grant from the Iowa Academy of Science in 1941, encouraged his studies.

"Most college students change their minds about most superstitions once they try them and no bad luck results," the psychologist asserts. He reports members of his classes have broken more than 50 "taboos" in a day—without ill effects.

Dr. Emme had found that persons become less superstitious as they grow older and advance in educational attainment, that emotion is not related to superstitious beliefs; that parents, not chums,

CHRISTMAS SOCIAL TERMED SUCCESSFUL

Saturday night, December 11, plans laid under the direction of Miss Mildred Johnson by the Social Committee and the Dramatics Club were culminated in what has been termed one of the most successful socials held in Wilmington College.

CHEERLEADERS SQUAD ORGANIZED IN WILCOL

Wilmington College has a new member in its ever growing list of extra-curricular activities. A cheerleaders squad has been organized to lead our cheering sections at basketball games.

So far the squad has three members. They are: Carolyn Blake, Harriet Becker, and Marilyn McCullen. The girls will be wearing white sweaters and green skirts with yellow linings.

GYM SECTION RESERVED FOR COLLEGE STUDENTS

The middle section of the right side of the N.H.S. gym has been set aside by the Student Council for the students of Wilmington College. All college students are requested to take advantage of this space reserved for them.

DON'T MISS THE GAME

Included in the evening's entertainment were two one-act plays, "Just What They Wanted," and "The Day After Christmas." Harriet Becker, Mrs. Belamy, Francis Foy, Marilyn McCullen, and Robert Scott appeared in the first comedy. Seen in the latter play, also a comedy, were Carolyn Blake, Lois Cunningham, Evelyn Hickman, Evelyn Mercer, Miss Pickard, and Adelaide Wilson.

The rest of the evening was devoted to the awarding of the door prize, distribution of "character" gifts to everyone present, and dancing. Refreshments consisted of ice cream and cake.

The gym was appropriately decorated for the season in red and green with an eight foot Christmas tree brightly bedecked with traditional lights and ornaments. The tree was obtained by Gene Fales, president of the Dramatics Club, and Claude MacAllister.

CHARTERS CONSIDERED

A committee has been appointed by the Student Council to make a study of charters and to make recommendations to the Council for charters for student activities of Wilmington College.

This move is seen as a progressive step in the development of the college. Under the charter system, student organizations would petition the Student Council for a charter. The Student Council then, after having found the organization acceptable, would grant it a charter declaring the organization to be an official student activity of Wilmington College. The granting of a charter would merely be issuance of an official certificate to the organization giving it sanction to function.

An official charter given to an organization by the Student Council would give them prestige and their letters or pins meaning.

Then, too, the organizations when applying for a charter would be required to meet certain standards, thus assuring worthwhile activities. Charters would prevent the functioning of organizations not sanctioned by the Student Council.

We hope the considerations of the charter committee and the Student Council will be favorable. We hope they will have a charter drawn up and printed for issuance to student activities deserving of them. These charters could be applicable to all student organizations if a blank space were left for the name of the activity.

The staff of the SEAHAWK wishes to thank the members of the Student Council and particularly Walter Cutchin for their successful efforts to find a place for us to work on our paper. We are glad we can still publish our SEAHAWK for the college.

THAT'S THE SPIRIT

By Donald Becker

Surprising as it may be, we seem to have some students who do not know that we have activities at school other than the three "R's." Assuming that these people are not too busy to read this sheet, we hope to inform them that we have a basketball team of no little renown which had its opening game last Tuesday, and we would be delighted to have complete support of every student at every home game.

A bulletin has been posted asking persons to try out for the cheerleaders squad. This summons has met with indifference, but a squad of cheerleaders has been organized under the leadership of Daye Wilkins. These people have spent much time in this organization and deserve a cheering section themselves.

We must realize that student attendance at our home games will have a decided effect on adult attendance. In the first place, it's logical to assume that each student will bring one or more persons with him, and in the second, each student's degree of enthusiasm will spread to others with whom he comes in contact. If we give our team conclusive proof that their efforts are appreciated and that they are not playing entirely alone, the extra incentive will surely be shown on the scoreboard.

Let's give our team and college the old "collego try."

SEAHAWKS LOSE FIRST CONFERENCE TILT 58-38

The Wilmington College Seahawks suffered their first conference defeat last Tuesday, December 7, 58-38 to the Wildcats of Louisburg College, a team the Green and Gold five had beaten in two out of three games last year.

The score in itself does not tell the whole story, however. Reports have it that several members of the team became sick after eating supper in Louisburg before the game and entered the fray on empty stomachs. Then, too, the loss of James Croom, who had been in all practice sessions, may have thrown the Seahawk's timing off. The Louisburg quintet had played several games previously while the Seahawks had participated only in an exhibition tilt with the Marines of Camp Lejeune.

The Seahawks, trailing 23-10 at the half, fought the Wildcats almost score for score in the last half but could never muster the necessary points to catch up and forge ahead.

The Seahawks will face Louisburg again January 27 on our home court and are looking for a win. Most members of the squad believe they can turn the tables.

SEAHAWKS SEEK WIN OVER PJC TUESDAY

Tuesday night, December 14, the Seahawks of Wilmington College will tangle with the Presbyterian Junior College of Maxton in the first home game of the season.

CROOM, CHURCH DECLARED INELIGIBLE BY CJCAA

James "Ludie" Croom and R. L. Church, two of the college's finest basketball players, are ineligible for conference competition this year because of a quirk in the rules.

The Carolinas Junior College Athletic Association permits a man to play only two years in junior college basketball. Both Croom and Church played one season with the College Center aggregation and then last year with the Wilcol Seahawks.

The loss of Croom and Church is seen as a major blow to the Seahawks. Croom last year was the team's top scorer with an average of 14.9 points per game. Church ranked sixth with an average of 4.5.

Billy Weathersbee has moved up to replace Croom, and James Cushing will fill Church's vacancy.

The Seahawks, seeking their first win of the season, will be playing Tuesday night for all they are worth. PJC will be out to avenge their defeats last year. The large crowd expected to attend the game will surely witness an action-packed contest.

VETERANS AGAINST BANS ON MARRIAGE, WANT AID FOR MARRIED STUDENTS

South Bend, Ind.--(I.P.)-

A group of married veterans attending the University of Notre Dame recently urged colleges and universities throughout the United States not to return to the prevalent pre-war policy of most schools which forbade the marriage of undergraduate students. Seventy-five percent of those polled went on record as opposed to this pre-war policy.

The veterans also advocated a federal tax on landlords who refuse to rent their property to families with children as a means of financing appropriations for government aid to future married college students.

Eighty-six percent of the married veterans polled were in favor of government aid to married college students of the future, and of this group 93 percent of the veterans favored a government loan instead of an outright grant.

The group polled, which included only those veterans who were single when they first enrolled in college and who married while still students, indicated that marriage has had a definite beneficial influence on their collegiate scholastic work. Eighty-six percent of the students declared they had received higher scholastic marks since assuming the family responsibility.

COLLEGE TOSSES OUT THREE-HOUR FINAL EXAMS

Grinnell, Ia.--(I. P.)-

Three-hour final exams are virtually a thing of the past on the Grinnell College campus here.

The faculty, after numerous sessions on the subject, following equally numerous committee reports and studies by the psychology department, recently voted that starting with the second semester this year, a minimum of three hour examinations must be given during a semester, with a final hour examination on the last class day.

This move upsets a long tradition on this and other campuses. It also automatically adds almost a week of classroom instruction to the calendar, since with three-hour sessions it was necessary to space out the testing over more than a week and to allow special study time for the students.

"The faculty of the college believes this move educationally sound," declared President Samuel N. Stevens. "It should relieve much of the dangerous tension students undergo under the old plan, without in any way sacrificing the educational advantages of a testing experience.

Continued will be, however, the nine hour departmental examinations given at the end of the senior year.

hat would Christmas be without the Christmas Tree?

It is the one universal symbol of the Christmas season. Whether it is indoors or out; flickering with candles, or glittering with colored bulbs; trimmed with fragile ornaments, or homemade popcorn balls; it is welcomed the world over as the joyous sign of the Christmas festivities.

But why do we have a Christmas tree? The probable answer would be, "Oh, everyone does" which leaves us just where we started. It is true, "everyone does" and it is just as true that strangely few people know the reason. It has been claimed the Christmas tree originated in Egypt hundreds of years ago when it was a general practice to decorate the house with branches of the date palm at all religious festivals. The date palm being the symbol of life over death. Other traditions place its origin with the Jews, as a heritage of their Feast of the Lights, of which lighted candles were a feature.

The most popular tradition of all comes from Germany, and is told in a popular German legend. It seems that Hans

ROAD TO SUCCESS

The members of our basketball team are to be commended for their undaunted courage after losing to Louisburg Junior College. Instead of throwing up arms in despair and discouragement, they became more determined to make a good showing. They did last Tuesday night.

The students who attended the game deserve some credit also for their unwavering support of the Gold and Green.

With spirit such as is being shown in the college this year, we cannot but help having a successful season, win or lose.

Tonight I visited The World's Largest Living
Christmas Tree at Hilton Park, Wilmington, N. C.
As I approached the tree,
I could hear the soft music of Christmas carols. I noticed from the license tags that many people had traveled for many miles to catch a glimpse of this beautiful and inspiring sight. Many people marveled at the tree which was bedecked with thousands of multi-colored lights enhanced by streamers of Spanish moss.

To me, the tree brought back many memories. I remembered the days when I used to go to Hilton Park with many of my friends to play. Then the tree was surrounded by many swings, sliding boards, and see-saws. I remembered swinging from the branches of the tree as Tarzan, and how many times I hid behind it to protect myself from my friends in an exciting game of cowboys.

Then, it was just another tree among many, but tonight it seemed to have changed. It changed just as a person seems to change on Christmas. Yes, tonight it was different. Not different because it was dressed in many beautiful colors, or because the many swings, sliding boards and seesaws were gone, but because it seemed to instill a feeling into the many people gazing upon it. This tree

FALL TO MARINES

Completly outclassed by a more experienced, smoother operating team, the Wilmington College Seahawks fell Thursday night to the Camp Lejeune Marines by the score of 74 to 38. In a non-conference tilt.

The service aggregation had absolute control of the floor from the beginning, leading at the half 43-20.

Top scorers for the Green and Gold were James Croom with thirteen points and Harry Coleman with nine.

Coach John Charlton's charges were playing a team which had defeated Campbell College, last year's conference champions, 77 to 48. The Lejeune quintet has been facing such teams as Wake Forest, N.C. State, and several other service squads and has been making good showings, losing to Wake Forest 88-66.

SCORE TIED IN LAST MINUTES OF PLAY;

COLEMAN SAVES GAME; MASON TOP SCORER

In one of the most thrilling, nerve-shattering encounters ever witnessed by the students and fans of Wilmington College, the Seahawks eked out a 56-55 win over a favored Presbyterian Junior College quintet Tuesday night in the N.H.H.S. gym.

Cheered by their classmates, the Green and Gold tallied first, and during the first half of the Carolinas Junior College Conference tilt, built up and retained what seemed to be a comfortable margin. The score at half time was 28-19.

In the second half the refreshed P.J.C. quint, a stronger and more determined team, scored time and time again, gaining on the tiring Seahawks until they captured the lead 55-53 in the last minutes of the game. With the fans screaming encouragement to the locals, the score was tied 55-55 all by Harry (Country) Coleman. Coleman then proceeded to save the game in the last twenty seconds of play when he sunk an all-important foul try after Bob Lewis and Carl Mason had failed in previous attempts. This point gave the Seahawks the margin when the buzzer ended the fray.

Veteran cager Carl Mason led the 'Hawks' scoring with a total of sixteen points. Towles and Coleman followed with eleven points each, and Bob Lewis with ten.

The Seahawks, after losing to Louisburg, were seeking their first win. The Maroon and Blue of P.J.C., after having won two games this season from Pembroke State College, was making an effective bid to avenge two defeats suffered last year at the hands of the Seahawks.

Conspicuous at the contest was the spirit of the Wilcol students---spirit such has never been exhibited before. Cheerleaders Marilyn McCullen and Harriett Becker saw to it that all Wilcol students were wearing the Green and Gold, but the fans needed no other encouragement to cheer their team to victory.

CHRISTMAS TREE AND TRADITION

and Gretchen, two German youngsters were left all alone in their cottage one winter evening. As the wind howled about they huddled before the fire and told each other stories of the strange sights they had seen in the forest. Suddenly there came a faint knock at the door. They were very much frightened, yet Hans bravely advanced to the door and flung it open. Standing before them was a little boy, smaller than either one of them. His feet were bare, his clothes were thin and he stood shivering with the cold.

In a timid voice he asked them if he might come in and warm himself at their fire. "Yes indeed" cried the children and eagerly made a place for him before the small blaze, depriving themselves of most of the warmth. Then they urged him to eat their frugal supper which meant that they themselves would go hungry.

As he grew warm and sleepy they persuaded him to go to sleep on their bed and tried to make themselves comfortable on hard wooden benches.

After they had finally gotten to sleep, Hans and Gretchen were awaked by strains of soft music outside the cabin. Rushing to the window they found a band of children, dressed in shining robes and playing beautiful golden harps.

As the boy and girl stared in amazement, the strange child that they had sheltered stood before them. Gone were his thin rags, gone the hungry look. The child was dressed in shining robes and a strange light shone around his head. In a soft, beautiful voice he was speaking:

"I was cold and ye took me in. I was hungry and ye fed me. I was tired and ye gave me your bed. I am the Christ child wandering through the world to bring peace and happiness to good children. As ye gave me so will this tree give you every year at this time rich fruit."

So saying, he broke a branch from a fir tree, planted it in the ground, and with a word to the shining children they all disappeared. But the small branch grew into a beautiful tree and every year bore a crop of toys and all things good for the two children.

Wilmington College halls abound with humorous little anecdotes, a few of which I would like to relate in review.

Girls beware, Charles Brisson is now legally a single, unattached, non-woman-hating bachelor.

The remark by Bill Dobo that if anyone would write Bill Odin's epitaph, he personally would take care of the rest, deserves mention.

From "Becky" Near's description of Clayton Smith's Baltimore cousin, she sounds like a lush, and even Clayton would like to meet her.

In discussing the play, "The Glass Managerie," with Joe Pridgen, we never could figure out just exactly what the play intended.

After all this news, I choose as my theme song, "All I Want For Christmas Is My Two Front Teeth," or as Julian Barbot would say, "Thank you, Frank Bradley."

stood forth as a true symbol of the Christmas spirit. Yes, the tree seemed to say, "Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men."

MERRY CHRISTMAS

By Henry R. Johnson

Karl pressed his nose against the cold window, and his big blue eyes widened with wonder and hope. In the window was a bicycle like the one he had asked Santa Claus to bring him. He had a lot of faith in Santa, but his mother had told him Santa was having a hard time this year because of the past war, and he might have to wait until next year to get his bicycle. So, to make it easy on good old Santa, he had written a letter saying he would settle for a scooter if Santa couldn't see his way clear to bring him a bicycle.

Karl's father had been an officer in the German Army and was killed in the "Battle of the Bulge." His mother, like other widows in Germany, was having a hard time making ends meet. Her little son was all she had left, and she wanted so much for him to have one wonderful Christmas before he was too old and bitter to enjoy one. She hated the Occupation Forces of the United States because she had grown up under the Hitler Regime and was taught that Germany was the superior race.

Karl was different; he liked the American soldiers because they treated him well and gave him candy for running errands. He especially liked one, a big husky sergeant, who rode him around in his jeep.

Bill, the American sergeant, was very fond of Karl because he reminded him of his own son at home. Christmas was close, only fourteen days away. He was homesick for his family, but somebody had to stay over here and help pull a broken nation together.

All Karl could talk about now was Santa Claus and the bicycle he was going to get. He poured his heart out to Sergeant Bill who treated him like his own son and consoled him that Santa would not miss his house this year.

It was biting cold the night of December twenty-fifth in blockaded Berlin. Sergeant Bill approached Karl's home which was still dark. He tried the kitchen door which was unlocked; then he opened the door, left his gifts and departed quickly and silently.

Karl's mother dreaded this Christmas morning. She didn't know how to explain to Karl that Santa had missed their house this Christmas. She walked into the kitchen and her eyes opened wide with amazement. What had happened? In front of her was a little red bicycle, a scooter, candy, fruit and all the things one could wish for to make a happy Christmas. She took the note off the bicycle with trembling hands and thought somebody had made a mistake. Tears rolled down her cheeks as she read: "Tell Karl that the huge planes that fly over everyday are Santa's reindeers and the pilots are Santa Clauses from America." As she read the note, an American airlift plane flew over, and she looked up and asked God to protect them in their mission of mercy.

Judge: Do you mean to tell me that you murdered this poor little old woman for a paltry three dollars.

Killer: Well, judge, you know how it is. Three bucks here and three bucks there soon mounts up.

FAMOUS GRILL TO BE SCENE OF 2ND ANNUAL BANQUET

Those students and faculty members who remember the Wilmington College Banquet last year have joyfully received news of a similar affair to be held on Friday, May 13 at the Famous Club.

Plans for the major social event of the school year have virtually been completed by Ken Phelps, president of the student body, and Donald Becker and Virgil Creech, president of the Second Year Class and president of the First Year Class, respectively.

It has been emphatically stated that this is to be a banquet, not a "hot dog and Pepsi Cola affair." It is to be a "significant and important occasion; something that will compare favorably with similar occasions at the best institutions in the country."

Presidents Becker and Creech have announced that dress will be optional and have requested that there be no flowers. More than 150 tickets have already been sold for the occasion.

COLLEGE TO HOLD FIRST GRADUATION

Wilmington College will hold its first graduation exercises this month with the presentation of diplomas to fourteen students who have earned the required number of credits to be graduated from the junior college.

STUDENT COUNCIL APPROVES ORGANIZATIONS

The Student Council, functioning under the charter system, has examined applications of four student organizations in the college, and has found them acceptable. Thus, THE SEAWALK, our student newspaper; The Varsity Club, athletic organization; the Penpushers, creative writing club, and the Wilcol Stagers, dramatics club have been approved and established as official student activities of Wilmington College.

The move is seen by many as a big step toward the progression of students' organizations, functioning more efficiently and with some degree of prestige afforded from official recognition.

The approval of the three organizations was the culmination of months of dis-

WE WANT TO BE INVITED!

We have sat in on many Student Council meetings, both last semester in obtaining news and this semester when presenting our application for a charter, and we have found it to be a very worthwhile experience. It seems to us that more members of the student body should attend these Council meetings to learn what their representatives are doing for them.

There doesn't seem to be any ruling as to whether students may sit in on these meetings to observe our legislative body in action or not. We think an

SHAME ON THOSE WHO CHEAT AT THE UNIVERSITY OF PITTSBURGH; IT GIVES EXPULSION

Pittsburgh, Pa.--(I. P.)--Two time losers will be subject to expulsion from the University of Pittsburgh under the new cheating policy. For the infraction of the cheating rules a student will receive failing grade on the assignment in which the cheating occurs.

The second offense brings a dismissal from the University for one semester. Cheating on a final will result in a failure in the course.

A disciplinary committee composed of faculty members, has been set up in each of the schools, with the dean of the school acting as chairman, to hear all cases involving cheating and related offenses. If a faculty member feels that a student is guilty of cheating and the student denies guilt, the faculty member must present the case to the disciplinary committee of his school for a hearing and final decision. In other cases it is the duty of the individual instructor to enforce the penalties and report any action taken to the dean of the school.

When cheating penalties have been enforced, the school must notify the dean of men or the dean of women and the registrar (as in all cases of disciplinary action). If a student should be dismissed because of a second offense, a report of such action is recorded on his permanent record in the registrar's office.

The new cheating regulations are the results of deliberations of a special student-faculty committee appointed earlier to investigate the problem as applied here and suggest methods for handling the situation.

ENGLISH INSTRUCTOR GIVES UNIQUE EXAMINATION; CLEOPATRA SEEKS JOB WITH WELL-KNOWN ORCHESTRA

Bethlehem, Pa.--(I.P.)--One of the most unique final examinations ever given at Moravian College was presented recently to a class in English literature by instructor Walter Beaupre. Students were told to write letters of recommendation for various characters from literature who were applying for jobs in the present day.

For instance, Cleopatra applied for a job with a well known orchestra; Grendel wanted a position posing for a horror comic magazine; and Morgan le Fay desired a place on the House Un-American Activities Committee.

To top the examination off the students were given a cross-word puzzle with words taken from the course book on literature. This last part of the test was optional; it gave the student points if he passed it but it took nothing away if he didn't pass it.

PEN PUSHERS TO PUBLISH BOOKLET OF CREATIVE WRITINGS

President of the Pen-pushers, Harriet Smith has announced the selection of a staff to publish a booklet of selected writings of members of the club.

Details still remain to be worked out by the Editorial Staff composed of Frank Bradley, Lillian Carras, and Eugene Piner and the other members of the club.

OFFICERS OF VARSITY CLUB ANNOUNCED

Newly elected officers of Wilmington College's newest student organization, The Varsity Club are Edward Moore, president; Donald Edwards, vice-president; Glenn Bass, secretary; and Harry Coleman, Treasurer.

Other members of the club are James Cushing, Tommy Dann, Bruce Hinson, Bob Lewis, Carl Mason, and Billy Weathersbee.

STUDENT FAILURES CAUSE ANXIETY

Charlottesville, Va.--(I.P.)--The University of Virginia is seriously concerned to learn the cause of academic failure among its first-year students. An announcement by Assistant Dean of Students, Peters Rushton, recently disclosed that approximately one-half of the members of the entering class of 902 students failed one or more courses last semester.

COURSE IN READING OFFERED AT FENN

Cleveland, O.--(I. P.)--A course in better and faster reading is being offered to a limited number of freshmen at Fenn College, as a direct result of a recommendation by Dr. John L. Bergstresser of the University of Chicago.

The reading course, which is on a non-credit, two-hour per week basis, is voluntary and is intended to aid students of reasonably good ability who have reading handicaps serious enough to impede their academic progress. The class is divided into two sections, each containing a maximum of 20 students.

According to Professor John C. Mathews, who directs the new course, programs of this type have been instituted on a compulsory basis in many of the nation's colleges to aid those whose scholastic achievements have been hampered by the lack of comprehension and speed reading.

cussion in the Student Council beginning then the charter system was first proposed, accepted, and details ironed out.

"Because of the higher than usual rate of first-year failures, the administration has made a study to discover the causes. Results of the study show that the failures are due to failure to study, inadequate living quarters, and inability to read sufficiently well," Dr. Rushton stated.

"Experience has shown that for many of these men the cause is to a considerable extent their inability to read their assignments, either in their speed of reading or in the rate at which they understand what they read. Since this inefficiency is easily correctible once it is discovered, it has been decided to require of all students who failed one or more of their courses in the first semester to take a reading examination given by the McGuffey Reading Clinic of the University.

LOOKIN' AND LISTENIN'

By Frank Bradley

May 30 looms prominently ahead on our time schedule, and there are so many loose ends that demand attention as the days slip past.

The college banquet, which is to be the climax of the college social year, will come off tonight and reserved places have already been paid, mind you, for a record attendance of about 160.

This week's orchid goes to Lawrence Robbins for his bull story and illustrations concerning "a steak on the loose."

Clayton Smith is playing the clarinet with the Wilmington Choral Society and Gordon Blair and yours truly are sweating it out on a couple of Thalian one-act plays.

"Hamlet" and "Little Women" recently attracted a number of our theatergoers who managed to break away from their studies.

Glenn Bass's hair sports a new bottle of peroxide, and his clothes are struggling for survival. (Not to be outdone). Get it!!!

The last English theme of the year beckons me to a standstill, as it has been my ambition all year to get one in on time!!!!

See you and yours at the BANQUET!!!

COLLEGE RADIO PROGRAM NOW ON WMFD

Working as its theme "The wider domination of College activities," first in a series of forty broadcasts, "WILMINGTON COLLEGE ON THE AIR" was presented over WMFD last Monday at 10 P. M. The radio programs, with an all college student cast, are presented Monday evening through the operation of R. A. Dunlea, owner-manager of radio station WMFD which, under its recently signed increased power of 1000 watts, spreads the voice of the college throughout Eastern North Carolina.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE ON THE AIR," under the direction of McDonald, well known radio commentator and Public Relations Counselor for the college, is extra curricular college activity which is opened to all students. All students interested in appearing on the college programs are requested to leave their names with Janice Pickard, registrar.

Program's Purpose
The purpose of the programs, it was stated on the initial program, is both to "entertain the listeners and to tell the people of this area about the progress the college is making." It is planned to present a variety of programs with a department in the college producing and casting one of the spots during the program presentation. Several of the departments have already planned to present programs symbolic of particular days. From time to time the program will include a variety of music, drama, and other like items.

Freshmen Elect Hurst as Advisor

Ray Haas, Anne Canady, and Mr. A. D. Hurst were elected vice-president, secretary-treasurer, and faculty advisor for the freshman class, Monday, October 10, when the first year students held their initial meeting. The meeting was held in the choir room.

Ray Haas had to defeat Howard Kester to win the position of vice-president of the class. Ray is a local lad and attended New Hanover High, where he held several important offices. He was the editor of the WILDCAT last year and is now serving as sports editor of the SEAHAWK.

It was a very close race for the secretary-treasurer office, with Anne Canady edging out Ruth Maultsby in a run off election for the position. Anne also attended New Hanover High last year and is on this year's SEAHAWK staff.

Mr. Hurst, who teaches math, was unanimously elected as faculty advisor to the class.

Douglas Sessoms, president of the freshman class, said that he would call another class meeting in the near future in order to discuss plans for a freshman dance.

OHIO PROFESSOR GIVES OUT ADVICE

"Marry a woman who knows more than you do" is the advice given to college students by Warren Bruner, management consultant who is conducting an experimental course in career determination at Marietta College, Ohio.

"A man's personality and mental stature tend to increase as he progresses in his occupational field," he told his class recently. "On the other hand, a woman starts going backward as soon as she enters a career as a homemaker—unless she realizes the danger and fights hard against it."

"Educate her less than the man, or start them even, and you provide one of several causes for the case of a man in middle life divorcing the partner of his early struggles to seek a more compatible mate."

PRIZES GALORE

The Halloween party, which was held last night in the Issac Bear Gymnasium, was termed a big success by Ruth Maultsby, editor of the annual staff. The party was sponsored by the annual.

There were such entertainments as a spook house, fortune teller, square dancing, and concessions. Also, there were prizes galore. The only must of the dance was that everyone come in costume, and there surely were some crazy ones. It seemed that everyone had broken out their old ones and was having a good time in make believe land. Those who did not have a witch, or skeleton suit on wore dungarees and acted as a farmer.

Some of the top events were the grand march, the prizes that were awarded for the most attractive costume, and the auctioning of a cake baked by Claude McAllister. Also the title of the annual was announced at this time.

The party got underway at 8 o'clock and lasted until midnight. There was a short time during the party when every thing was quiet; that was while the "Wilmington College on the Air" program was on. The profits made on the dance are to help defray the expenses of the annual.

This party was for all the students in all the departments of Wilmington College. The old circus barker's saying, "Come one, come all," surely held true at the dance, for everyone and his brother was there. "It was the best party of the year," said Ruth.

FALL EVENTS

Oct. 25 — Wilco staggers present a play for Community Chest.

EDITORIAL

The seed is planted, and with the proper care and attention, growth occurs. Wilmington College, founded in 1947, is the seed of higher education in this city. We, its students, have been entrusted with its development. Neither a seed nor a college, if neglected, will prove beneficial to anyone.

In ownership there is pride. Wilmington College is our college. Without it, many of us would have completed our education in high school. Appreciation should accompany the realization of this fact.

A seed must be planted in fertile soil. Likewise, a college must be situated in a progressive community. Upon the students of Wilmington College falls the responsibility of retaining this spirit of progress. Enthusiasm, willingness to work, and foresight will move our junior college forward.

Wilmington College is a reality and must blossom to full maturity through the constant care and perseverance of its students. We who sow the seeds shall also reap the harvest.

WILCO WISPERS

School days are now turning "school daze" as students at Wilmington College struggle through their first tests. Don't despair, someday you will pass so science, algebra, trig., Eng. . . . Say, I could go on forever. Speaking of social science, Geo. Jones and Tommy Dann were fully quiet in Miss Johnson's class the other day. It seems they were working a puzzle—an impossible one at that. Were you puzzled boys?

It's hard to believe, but it's true. Billy Odin, former Wilco student in the army. After six weeks of training, he is heading for Officer Cadet School. Billy is getting along fine. There is only one thing wrong—he's having trouser trouble. It seems that trousers in the army come in only two sizes—large and larger. Right now he is hard work on an invention that will hold them up.

Is that the ring of a telephone I hear? Somebody, answer it quickly. Golly. It's for Mona Faye again. My, but her Bill is a mighty determined fellow.

1, 2, 3, 4. All set for some gymnastics, boys? A certain lad I know is extremely worried about the physical condition of the Wilco boys. I hear this muscle man really a second Charles Atlas. Un . . . I wonder if he drinks Hada too?

I hate to report this sad story but I feel that I must. An epidemic struck Wilmington College one Friday afternoon. Many people were forced to leave their cherished studies and go home. The cause of this epidemic is unknown. It was too bad they had to leave, especially when the Goldsboro football game was played that same night.

Some students are noted for their incredible excuses they can give for being late to class. Well, the one really takes the cake. Two students upon entering class a few minutes tardy remarked, "Could we help it if the wind wasn't blowing in the right direction?" Better explain yourselves, Pete Acree and Jack Shytle.

Seen Here and There:

Dora Nell Pitts and Mary Porter on their way to shorthand—N. Etheridge flashing her come hit smile—Gordon Blair talking to Ben McDonald—Glenn Bass hunting for his typing book—Morris Cottrell beaming over a 100 he made on an Algebra test—Maurice Moore talking to Dean Beemon—Sylvia Watson and Herbert Fisher down town—Jackie Cowan worrying about social science—and Ray Haas, Randy McIver, and Ed Jewell in the music room.

And now the time comes to draw to an end, this column of nonsense about you, my friend.

THE NOSE

RAMBLES BY RAY

Howdy, sports fans.

In this, my first column, I'm going to tell you a little something about one of the first five boys to receive a letter from Wilmington College.

This lank lad is Carl, better known as Brick, Mason, who has been a center for the Wilco Seahawks for the past two years.

Brick entered W. C. in 1947, after receiving a medical discharge from the U. S. Army Air Force, where he had served for eighteen months.

Mason will not be able to play conference basketball this year because he has played out his eligibility, but he hopes to play in the non-conference tilts, provided the coach will allow it.

Brick started his basketball career at New Hanover High in 1944. He played second team ball his first year as the understudy of John Tsantes, who, by the way, is playing second team ball at the University of North Carolina, and was moved up to the first team as a center in 1945.

This six-foot, three-inch lad is noted for his great wit and his large nose, which you will see sticking out of any crowd around school, provided that that crowd is laughing.

Many times you will probably hear someone call Carl, Coach Mason. If so, don't laugh, for it is a true title. In 1944, Brick coached Tileston grammar school to three city championships: basketball, football, and baseball. You ask how I know this? Well, you see, I played these three sports under Carl that year. One of the top high school basketball scorers of the state last year, Ed Morris, played under the watchful eyes of Carl. Another one of the top players Brick turned out was Joe Warren, who is now attending Wake Forest on a baseball scholarship.

Mason hopes to go to Elon College next year. If he doesn't get a chance, he plans to go to work.

CAROLINA—Now if you don't mind, I'll get on my favorite subject for a while.

Did you listen to the Carolina-Georgia game or journey up to Chapel Hill to see it? If so, you heard the name, Kuhn, repeated many times over the public address system, or if you listen to the broadcast, our own radio loud speaker. I want to tell you, just in case you didn't know, that that was Wilmington's own Bill Kuhn who they were talking about.

Georgia had marched down to the Carolina four yard line. It was first and goal to go, but they could not go over as that big Carolina line held them back for the four downs. On each of these four downs the name Bill Kuhn came blaring out over the PA system. Yes, that's the same Bill Kuhn that started for NHHS two years ago at tackle. Watch this lad; you may someday see his name on the All-American list.

Basketball Practice Gets Underway At Wilco

Table Tennis vs. Feet, Hair

A couple of weeks ago, while browsing over the local sports page, I noticed that there was a heading about a table tennis tournament. I decided to read this and to my great surprise, I saw some very familiar names.

The first name to flash into my sight was Mr. John (Feet) Charlton. This lad is exceptionally good at this sport because he can lean in any direction as far as he wishes without falling over (and who couldn't with such obvious peddle extremities).

The next was Mr. Paul Wright. This gladiator is also an outstanding ping-pongist, and he is best known for his faking abilities. It is said he learned this from his stuffed birds. Could be true.

Hugh Garris was next on the list, but it was noticed that he had been eliminated, because the ping-pong balls got lost in his nice, long hair. Too bad, and he was such a nice boy.

Next was Charles Cooper, who, it seems, always knocked the ball back before it crossed the net to his side of the table. At last report he was at James Walker Hospital having six inches cut off his arms. This is one case of long arms being in your way. Better luck next time, Charles, and here's hoping you have a speedy recovery on your amputation.

David (TNT) Smith followed this crew, but could not keep his eyes off the female spectators, so was quickly eliminated along with Garris. That TNT in Smith's name is to warn all shy (ha! ha!) girls to "Take No Thances." And now with that in mind, I'll close, because I have already taken too many TNT's.

This is the "Crazy Sports Man" signing off. (Editor's Note . . . Thank Heavens.)

Marriage as a career is one of many fields considered by Bruner in his course. The course is intended, he said, to "lead to a wise choice of specific careers by exposing students to comparable information about a number of career fields."

Marietta College is one of the few Liberal arts colleges that has a course of this type, and the results of the experiment at Marietta is being watched by many other colleges.

Although football is still in the sport spotlight, basketball can be seen creeping on the stage, especially here at Wilmington College where basketball practice has been taking place for more than two weeks.

At the present time eighteen prospects are out for the team, which has been working out every night at the Chestnut Street gymnasium. Out of this large number of boys, only four players have had very much hardwood experience. Around this quartet, consisting of Linwood Taylor, Harry Coleman, Glenn Bass, and Robert Miller; head coach, John Charlton, hopes to build his squad.

Taylor played first team ball for the Eastern conference champions last year and is expected to team with Coleman at the forward slots. Six-foot, three-inch Harry Coleman is the only starter of last year's Seahawk squad that has returned and is a definite starter this year. Bass also played ball for the 'Hawks last season and is a prospect for one of the starting positions, while Miller saw a good deal of action in the YMCA church league.

WORKS AS TEAM

Working as a team so far are Coleman and Taylor at forwards, Bob Sheppard and Maurice Moore at guards, and Bass at center. Sheppard is a righthander and has shown up well with his ball handling. Moore is another one of the boys who tower over six foot and has shown his skill as a push shot artist.

Other boys out for the team are Pete Lee, Ray Haas, Huck Moore, Corky Bolton, Doc Williams, Charles Cooper, Frank Hazelton, Don Harrel, and Bud Murray.

Helping Coach Charlton with his coaching duties is Leroy Towles. Towles was one of the outstanding 'Hawkers last season and is lending his hand to make this year's edition of the Seahawks a better ball club.

Coach Charlton has not released the schedule for this season, but it has been learned that the Wilco cagers will play the N. C. State Freshmen in Raleigh during the month of December.

Have you ever heard of the Intercollegiate Press? No, I guess that you haven't, for it is a new feature that was started a few years ago to help transfer news of college life from one college to the other. It works something on the plan of the United Press. Well, your school is a member of the IP, and in each issue of the Seahawk, there will be a column of news that was taken from the IP bulletins.

Bulletin one . . . A holiday between semesters to give students and faculty a necessary rest between exams and the beginning of the spring semester will be put into effect at Davidson College this year. The new holidays will consist of an extended week-end between semesters. First semester exams for the '49-'50 academic year will end on Friday, January, 27. The second semester will not begin until Tuesday, thus giving holidays on Saturday and Monday between semesters.

Bulletin two . . . It's getting rough in Texas. Psychologists are testing the tests at the University of Texas. Testing and Guidance Bureau Assistant Director, Gordon V. Anderson, says a program has been initiated there to follow up results on freshman aptitude tests, and see if the tests are an accurate index of student ability. Grades of the student, for example, who made a high math score will be checked in his math class to see if his performance bears out his test score.

Bulletin three, and the last one for this week . . . Just as the South's vast wealth of natural resources has been shipped out of the region for years with no return, so are the best brains in the South now being lured to the "big name" schools of the North. Such are the findings of a survey conducted by Dr. C. A. Mackenzie and J. M. Scott, associate professors of chemistry at Tulane University. The professors surely hit the nail on the head as proved by Notre Dame's win over Tulane.

THEY TELL ME:

Miss Morton: "What is ignorance, Herb?"

Herb Fisher: "Ignorance is when you don't know anything and somebody finds it out."

Bradford Murray to his father: "Here's my report card and one of yours I found in the attic."

Cooper Page (at the almond counter): "Who attends to the nuts?"

Salesgirl: "Be patient. I'll wait on you in a minute."

Miss Morton: "Maurice, will you please give three collective nouns?"

Maurice Cottle: "Flypaper, wastebasket, vacuum cleaner."

A nut at the wheel, a peach in his arm, the car makes a turn—fruit salad!

Ann Canady says that the best way for a girl to keep her youth is not to introduce him to anybody.

The trouble with lipstick is that it doesn't.

December 2nd and 3rd in Raleigh, North Carolina. It was decided that we send two boys and one girl from each class to represent Wilmington College at this meeting. This would make a total representation of six official delegates for us. J. D. Winters, Robert Hayes, and Adelaide Wilson were chosen to represent the second year class, and Walter Biggs, David Smith, and Gail Oliver were elected to represent the freshman class. These delegates will have the responsibility of drawing up and introducing any bills which Wilmington College wishes to present at the Assembly.

J. D. Winters, president of the Student Council, announced that "Wilmington College On the Air" will go on the air on October 31, 1949 with the Dramatics Club assuming presentation of the first program. The president also announced that a Wilmington College bowling team is being planned and will begin practice soon.

The possibility of getting Wilmington College stickers was also discussed at the meeting on Tuesday. It is hoped that we will be able to order these stickers in the near future for sale to the student body.

Last, but not least, on the Council's agenda for Tuesday, the following resolution was passed in an effort to make our bulletin board more effective and concise: In the future all announcements to be placed on the bulletin board must first be okayed by the college office; furthermore, no one is to remove any announcement from the bulletin board as this will be taken care of by the college office also.

STUDENTS CAUSE ADELPHI COLLEGE TO CHANGE SYSTEM

Freedom to roam through the library stacks has been denied Adelphi College students. A call slip system comparable to the system used at the New York Public Library and Queens College has been instituted here this semester. Only the faculty, seniors, and students with special permission will be issued passes allowing them direct access to the stacks.

Students' neglect in charging books is the prime factor provoking change in the library system on this campus. Since uncharged books are taken out of the library and rarely returned, the college has suffered heavy losses the past three years.

A shelving problem is brought about by the student failure to return books to their proper places in the stacks. The small library staff cannot give sufficient care to the stacks, since reserve and circulation duties limit staff time.

The new plan will require students to write the name and call number of the desired book on call-slips, to be picked up by librarians who will secure the books from the stacks.

Student Council Picks Delegates

Delegates to represent Wilmington College at the annual state mock legislature, which is to be held in Raleigh, December 3, were elected by the student council at their regular weekly meeting October 18.

The delegates, who were selected from a list of volunteers received from the student body, are J. D. Winters, student council president, Robert Hayes, and Adelaide Wilson from the sophomore class; Gail Oliver, David Smith, and Walter Biggs have the honor to represent the freshmen. Wilmington College was allotted six delegates, and it was decided by the council that three students from each class should be sent, giving full representation to the whole student body.

It is the purpose of this mock assembly to give the students of the colleges of North Carolina an opportunity to express their views and offer their advice on current state, national, or international problems. The various colleges have the right to present any bill they desire before the legislature for discussion and action. The results of these discussions will form the basis for recommendations from our assembly to the state legislature.

Dramatic Club Salutes Community Chest Drive

The College Dramatic Club, under the direction of Miss Mildred Johnson, will salute the New Hanover County Community Chest campaign with a skit on the "WILMINGTON COLLEGE ON THE AIR" radio broadcast next Monday at 10 P. M. The skit, which the club presented at the campaign kick-off dinner last Tuesday evening, has been specifically written for the radio presentation.

Student Council Plans Devotional

The Wilmington College Student Council held its weekly meetings on November 22 and November 23. The last two meetings have been comparatively short—by short means that we've been able to get through within the record time of 45 minutes. This shocking fact is due to the precedence of the work being done on our State Legislature bill. It seems that Tuesday was also a good day for the delegates' committee meetings. Come November 6 and we'll be back with our old meetings where after an hour or more, no member dares to get back in his seat for fear someone might make a motion to adjourn and his rockets wouldn't be lit. Seriously though, we've really been working even though we have had a few extra minutes. Here's a score on some of our Council pop-chop these past two weeks.

Mr. D. Winters, Council president, announced that Wilmington College will introduce a bill at the State Student Legislative Assembly in Raleigh on December 3. The bill advocates the establishment of a State Fingerprinting Bureau under the supervision of the State Dept. of Education. It is hoped that we would not be able to draw up the bill within the proposed time, but a recent report from the S. S. L. Interim Council extended the time limits, and our bill will be introduced.

DEVOTIONAL DISCUSSED

At our meeting on November 22 it was suggested that an early morning devotional period be conducted each morning. The Council discussed this suggestion and decided to get the students' opinions on this matter before any definite steps are taken. During the November 29 meeting, the subject was again taken up by the Council. Someone suggested that we have the devotional period between 8:15 and 8:30 in the morning. Again the Council decided to get more views on this matter before taking action. Well, Students, it's up to you. Do you want a devotional period each morning? If so, what time would you like for it to be held? We on the Student Council would appreciate it if you would let us hear your comments on this matter. Before you cast your agreeable "yes" vote though, ask yourself this question: "Would I be a faithful supporter and attend as many of these periods as possible?"

At our November 22 meeting, Mr. Beemon announced that V. A.

Fledgling Staff Makes Report

The annual staff of THE FLEDGLING has been very busy these past few weeks, and they are pleased to report that their plans are materializing splendidly.

Jack Moore and Shirley Johnson are now taking subscriptions for THE FLEDGLING. The price of THE FLEDGLING will remain at $3.50 until after the Christmas holidays. Names of the persons to have their pictures taken for the annual are being posted on the bulletin board. These pictures are being taken at the Cape Fear Studio by Mr. Browning, whose fine reputation in photography is known throughout North Carolina. The cost of each picture is a dollar, and each person has three proofs from which to choose.

Ruth Maultsby, editor of THE FLEDGLING, is very enthusiastic about the annual. She says, "I think Wilmington College is very much in need of an annual, and I believe the students of the college will find a great deal of enjoyment in it."

The annual staff wishes to express their thanks to its faculty advisors, Miss Barksdale and Miss Pickard, who are doing so much toward making THE FLEDGLING a big success.

Embarrassing Situation Caused by WC Monikers

Season Tickets Now on Sale

"Ticket! Ticket! Who's bought his ticket? Every student of Wilmington College should take advantage of his opportunity of obtaining season tickets to help support our basketball team," stated Walter Biggs, one of the student salesmen.

The Varsity Club in conjunction with the Student Council has accepted the responsibility of the selling of these tickets. It has been pointed out by Mr. Charlton, Varsity Club advisor, that it is essential that all tickets be sold if the current basketball team is to come out in the black. The complete success of the campaign will not only be beneficial to the basketball team, but will also make it possible for other college activities to obtain funds for their needs.

The cooperation of every student is essential. If you would like to aid in the selling of the tickets, see one of the members of the Varsity Club or Student Council today. Be sure that you buy your ticket!

DEAN BEEMON GIVES ADVICE FOR SUCCESS

"While still in high school, I made up my mind to teach high school mathematics," answered Mr. Beemon when asked why he had chosen education as a field in which to devote his life.

After graduating from a Kentucky high school on May 26, he was attending University of Michigan eleven days later on June 7. It was there he obtained his master's degree in mathematics.

As he had planned, he taught math in several high schools and then in colleges but it was in Covington, Kentucky, that he became interested in administration. Then he attended summer school at Columbia University for five years studying administration.

In picking a life's vocation, Mr. Beemon advises that a person choose a field that one is really interested in and from that one's ideas and ambitions will work out into making a successful life.

Wilmington College students nowadays are using the moniker WC and are actually affording more publicity to Woman's College of the University of North Carolina than the large representation of students from the Port City area.

An embarrassing situation has arisen for numerous athletes wearing local WC monograms, who continually explain to inquirers that the WC is the abbreviation for Wilmington College and not Woman's College in Greensboro.

And for the general public, a puzzling situation has arisen. They can't comprehend why and when Woman's College began accepting male students.

Main reason for the complication is that Wilmington College is a relatively new baby in the college worlds, whereas Woman's College is one of the oldest colleges in the South and is commonly referred to as WC.

The co-ed school here was founded two years ago and has a two-year terminal and university parallel enrollment of 197 students. Forty-nine of this number are girls.

In contrast, the third portion of the Greater University was founded

Birth of a Club

A few weeks ago, the political science instructor of Wilmington College was dogmatically teaching the American system of government. As the discussion progressed into international affairs, this teacher mentioned very enthusiastically that she had been a member of a highly thought of club dealing with international relations. Thus the ball was thrown into the stands. The ball being the International Relations Club.

This progressive organization is a member of the American Progressive and Optimist clubs of Wilmington College and the city of Wilmington. It is associated with other International clubs throughout the nation.

Since its first meeting, the club has made rapid progress. It has acquired its charter from the Student Council, elected officers, and made arrangements for weekly meetings. The Club meets every Monday at 3:15 in room 3. If you would like to attend one of their meetings, do so, for you will see how a progressive organization works.

EDITORIAL

We are as much at war today as the American colonies were when Patrick Henry said, "Gentlemen cry peace, peace, when there is no peace." So far it is a cold war. The United States will never make it a shooting war unless that dreadful decision is forced upon us. Our enemies will not force us to fight unless they feel we are weak. We must keep strong!

Russia did not drop any bombs on the countries that have already fallen to communism. She did not need to. She rotted them from the inside. She has come into power through minorities, strong and disciplined enough to control labor, communications, schools, and churches. Poisoning the minds of youths through schools and colleges is more effective than poisoning a city's water supply. When the daily paper arrives at the college, the students rush to read it. Most of them glance at the funnies, the latest sports articles, and the society page. Then they throw it down. A few of the more progressive minded students may look over the front page headlines. The communists tell us to have fun. They say it isn't the students' job to worry about political affairs, but we say that it is our job.

If one starts to school at the age of six and passes all his work, he should be through college by the time he is twenty-one. In four years, he will be eligible to run for a congressional office, and in fourteen years, he may run for the office of president. So you see, you must take interest in politics while in school, for there's your foundation. It's not President Truman or Secretary of State Acheson who is responsible for maintaining our democracy. It's you and I, the boys and girls of today, who are going to be the men and women of tomorrow.

Robert Hayes

HAVE YOU MET?

Robert Caldwell Hayes who is representative of the sophomore class, parliamentarian of the Student Council, delegate to state assembly, and president and janitor of the drink box.

His home has always been in—Wilmington, but he longs for the big town and bright lights. (No offense Wilmingtonians.)

He's crazy about—Roz, the girl he met and married while serving in the Navy in Providence, Rhode Island.

Pet peeve—crying children.

He dreams of owning a spanking new Cadillac (but until then he wouldn't mind a set of straight "A's" on all his subjects.

His favorite food is—oysters, roasted, fried, stewed, raw, or just plain oysters.

Next year he wants to go to Boston University to study criminal law.

His favorite article of clothing is a yellow bow tie which he saves for special occasions.

Odd likes are Spitz dogs, Robert Caldwell Hayes, II (otherwise known as Bobby).

MILLER FEATURES WC

The Page One story was written by Robert G. Miller, reporter for the Wilmington Morning Star and well known throughout North Carolina as a feature writer. Can't you just hear the laughter coming from the Mr. Appreciation class. They must be laughing at the joke about grandpa having to start wearing breeches because he cut his beard.

Henry Johnson has a new thought on his mind lately. Really in the form of a question. Maybe you would like to think of the question. Here it is. Do people who work in glue factories really stick to the job?

John Funderburg might be interested to know of someone who is going deer driving the 24th December. In case John is, we say, "Santa Claus."

A few mornings ago Mary Kane came to college with a cold nose. True the weather had a bit of nip in it. When Mr. Frost said the temperature had dropped to 26 degrees, everyone knew that it would be cold because that prediction really didn't sound so hot.

Kicking gets you nowhere, unless you're a chorus girl.

TEAM CAPTAIN

The blonde headed lad pictured above is Harry "Country" Coleman, captain of the Seahawks, who plays left forward. "Country" is one of the three returning lettermen from last year's squad. He stands six-two and averaged better than ten points a game last season.

RAMBLES BY RAY

The Wilmington College Seahawks have steadily improved since their first scrimmage game with the Coastal Motors semi-pro quint a couple of weeks ago. In their first tilt with this aggregation, the Hawks looked mighty poor. The main thing that hindered them was their frequent fumbles.

Although the Hawks have come a long way since that night, they still have a long way to go; they still have a much longer and rougher road to travel. No one would set out on a long trip in a car without gas in the tank, but the Seahawks are doing just this. The present team could show up mighty well against any conference team, for the first minute or two. The boys are just not in shape, and don't seem to be trying to get in shape. It takes a person in mighty good shape to play an entire game of basketball, and the Hawks at the present time could not even play half a game without needing an oxygen tent to revive them.

Even with all this, the Hawks have done a good job. They have a very inexperienced team. "Country" Coleman, the only regular returning from last year's squad, and Sonny Taylor, a first string man for the Wildcats last year, are the only boys with much experience behind them.

All in all, it looks as if this is going to be a good year for the Hawks, that is if they continue to improve as they are doing now.

Table Tennis Tournament Takes Toll of Wilco Students

SEAHAWKS ENGAGE WINGATE TONIGHT

The Wilmington College Seahawks open their 1949-50 basketball season tonight at 8 o'clock in the NHHS gym against Wingate. The probable starting lineup for the locals is: Linwood Taylor and Harry Coleman at forwards, Turkey Edwards at center, and Maurice Moore and Glenn Bass at the guard slots.

Love is like garlic . . . your best friend doesn't have to tell you.

Table tennis has taken the lime-light at Wilmington College. This sport is rapidly gaining momentum in popularity at the local institution, thanks chiefly to Paul Wright, teacher and former Cornell University table tennis star.

All students and college faculty are urged to participate in the ladder ping-pong tournament which is being held in the college's game room. "No experience is required; a beginner may do as well as an expert in this type of tournament," stated Mr. Wright. There is a small entrance fee of ten cents, which will go toward defraying the expense of the tournament and the purchase of new equipment.

The table tennis matches may be held at any time convenient to the participants. Each participant has the opportunity of moving up the ladder by being allowed to challenge any three entries immediately above him.

The primary purpose of this tournament is to promote an interest in intramural sports at Wilmington College. Paul Wright announced that a table tennis team may be organized, pending the success of this tournament. Letters already have been mailed to fifteen colleges in a 250 mile radius of Wilmington requesting team contests.

Those participating in the tournament at the present time are: Paul Wright, Huck Moore, Howard Kester, Bruce Hinson, Donald Edwards, Gail Oliver, David Smith, J. D. Winters, Ben Lamb, Nick Pantagis, Homer Inman, Claude McAllister, Gus Stefanadis, John Funderburg, Carlton Bolton, Tracy Duval, Johnnie Clewis, George Jones, Helen Patellis, Miss Morton, DeWitt Kennedy, Bill Bowling, Bill Smith, Sam Jones, Adelaide Wilson, R. V. Duncan, Art Stanley, Pete Lee, Charles Cooper, Fred Hight.

Gail: Have any of your childhood dreams come true?

Clayton: Only one. When my mother used to comb my hair I used to wish that I didn't have any.

Having trouble with your research themes? Look what Barnard College did to remedy the situation. A new handbook on the preparation of research papers has been adopted as a required text for the freshmen of Barnard College. The handbook, entitled "The Research Paper," is achieving wide acceptance in colleges throughout the country as a required or recommended freshman text. By following the text, the research paper is pictured not as a series of unrelated steps but as one continuous process of growth. It is so popular that forty-five college and university English departments have adopted it.

Bulletin Two—The Intrafraternity Council at the University of North Carolina recently clarified rules concerning fraternity "hell week" in letters sent to presidents of 23 campus fraternities. The statement explained that the practice of hazing is condemned by a Student Council ruling, prohibited by North Carolina state law, and blacklisted generally because of the death of a student in the past as a result of hazing. The faculty committee on fraternities and the Rules Committee of the Intrafraternity Council meeting in joint session adopted a three point program to govern pre-initiation fraternity practices.

Number three—From Carolina to Notre Dame—Job counseling for undergraduates and for graduates who may be displaced by an economic recession is the number one task to be performed in the immediate future by the University of Notre Dame and by the Notre Dame Alumni Association. This help begins with an intensification of Notre Dame's present program of undergraduate vocational counseling. (Editor's note: Wonder if this pertains to the football players.)

Last one—In a recent survey made by the Population Reference Bureau and in which Radford College took a part, it was found that an A. B. degree apparently could mean "abolish babies." The bureau found that college graduates aren't producing enough children to replace themselves. The women have failed to reproduce themselves by 40 per cent; the men by 16 per cent. According to the bureau, any class of people wishing to reproduce itself must, as a group, average 2.1 children per couple. I sure would like to know more about the .1 child, wouldn't you.

Creech has officially withdrawn from our student body. The Student Council regrets Mr. Creech's departure, for Wilmington College lost a fine officer and fellow worker. V. A., as most of you know, held the office of sophomore class president. He was also a delegate to the State Student Legislature. The Council elected Douglas Sessoms to attend the Raleigh assembly in V. A.'s place.

Students, let's get on the ball and support our basketball team. Remember, our first basketball game is to be played on December 7 in the NHHS gym. You may buy your season tickets from any member of the Student Council or the basketball team for only $2.00, so let's all turn out on Dec. 7, and really lend a little razzle-dazzle support to our Seahawk quints. Members of the Student Council this year will handle the door and take up tickets. Anyone else who desires to aid the Council in this project, please contact J. D. Winters.

Well, that's all on the agenda so far. DON'T forget the basketball game.

ed in 1891. It has an enrollment of 2,196 students, with 38 being residents of Wilmington.

Although it is a woman's institution, not all of the 2,196 students are females . . . one is a male. This "foreign" WC clings to the proverb "variety is the spice of life," and in 1932-33 admitted a male student. He is the current lone male and is a student in the graduate school.

But with all of the explaining and even the writing of this feature, some persons will continue to query the Port City students on the WC situation.

Thus, day after day, the inquirer will inquire and Wilmington College's red-faced student will explain, consequently giving Woman's College at Greensboro more and more publicity.

Education Marches On

It was in August of 1940 the vocational and technical training above the high school level had its beginning in the schools of Wilmington. This was near the outbreak of World War II. Training people were soon to be needed. You can see the early demand that the school was called to meet. The war years saw 5,000 adults trained in intensive short courses that qualified them to meet the demand.

When Wilmington College opened its doors in 1947, it was only natural that this established program would become a part of its curriculum. Since the college is a community college, every effort is made to meet the needs of the community which it serves. The industrial life of the territory served by Wilmington College is wide in its scope. For this reason a program to meet its needs must be varied and entail the services of many people with a wide variety of training and experience. In the next issues we will give you information about the various courses with side lights of former and present students. The news stories will follow in this order.

300 Persons Attend WC's Open House

Some 300 persons from Southern North Carolina toured Wilmington College during its first open house observed on February 27 from 7:30 until 9:30 o'clock. Upon entering the college, the guests were greeted by the college faculty and other county school officials, guided through the various departments of the college, and served refreshments. Highlighting the tour were the demonstrations of the equipment of the refrigeration department, chemistry, biology, and physics laboratories; showing of several films and the playing of musical recordings in the music department rooms. The guests were guided through the college's administration office, general classrooms, office machine room, typing room, laboratories, mechanical drawing room, recreation rooms and music room. Faculty members said that after the guests' tour they no doubt affirmed the fact that Wilmington College is one of the best equipped junior colleges in North Carolina.

Attractive Young Teacher Surprises Numerous Students

By THERESA JOHNSON
Some of the students here think the beautiful, blond-haired, blue-eyed girl that sits at the desk in the lobby is a student. But students, she is a member of the faculty. She is none other than Miss Dorothy Powell, who was born in Leland. Miss Powell graduated from Leland High in 1945. After finishing school, she attended East Carolina Teachers College and graduated in 1948 with an A. B. degree. She became a member of the faculty in 1949. Before coming to Wilmington College, she was secretary for the American Red Cross. Miss Powell enjoys watching sports, dancing, traveling, reading in bed, cooking, and trying to be YOUNG—Page 4

New Class Officers

Robert Miller, Joe Johnston, and Ruth Maultsby have been elected to serve on the student council as vice-president, secretary-treasurer and freshman class representative respectively. These three officers were elected after the positions were vacated at the end of the first semester.

Debators May Compete With Other Colleges

Plans are being formulated by the Debating Club to compete with other schools and colleges throughout North Carolina in formal debating contests, it was announced at the club's last meeting by Robert Hayes, president.

During the last meeting Miss Shannon Morton, faculty advisor, addressed the members on the correct procedure for formal debating.

Hayes urged students interested in representing the college in the Raleigh delegation next year to become members of the club.

He added that plans are under way to make the club, one of the newest organizations in the college, a "very active" group.

Sylvia Watson Will Represent WC In Festival

Sylvia Watson, Wilmington College's beautiful 19 year-old freckled-freshman, was elected by the student body to represent them as queen in the Azalea Festival parade.

Serving as attendants for the sandy-haired and blue-eyed Sylvia will be Jacqueline Cowan, Ruth Maultsby, and Jean Cross, all members of the freshman class.

Other than the float bearing the Azalea queen and her court, this institution has the only festival float formally announced to have a queen and attendants.

Prior to graduation last year from New Hanover High School, Sylvia was one of the Wildcats' most popular students. Besides being a member of several clubs she was a cheerleader and won the superlative as the student "with the most school spirit."

A student in the general business and secretarial science course here, modest Sylvia is five-foot-

ROBERT MILLER ELECTED EDITOR

Robert Miller, reporter for the Morning Star and well-known throughout North Carolina as a feature writer, was recently elected editor in chief of the Seahawk.

Robert is the most experienced journalist to ever serve on this publication. During his four years affiliation with the Star-News he has held such positions as state news editor, news commentator, and acting sports editor.

Perhaps his greatest contribution to this institution thus far were the features he wrote about Theodore Webb, Jr., and students in general wearing WC monikers.

The feature about Webb, a student last year who was acclaimed the youngest Navy veteran in the United States, appeared in the large newspapers of eight states in the U. S.

The article about WC monikers appeared in the large newspapers in North Carolina and several college publications. Consequently, Wilmington College received hundreds of dollars of free advertisement.

These are only two examples of the innumerable features which have been published in daily newspapers over North Carolina with the by-line of Robert Miller.

The new editor in chief entered the journalism field in the summer of 1946, shortly before he entered his senior year at New Hanover High School.

During his last year at NHHS he was a member of the reportorial staff of the Wildcat, and it was that year that the paper attained the highest rating in its history. Immediately following his graduation in 1947, he was named a reporter for the Wilmington Star-News.

COLLEGE MAY HAVE BAND NEXT YEAR; SESSOMS DELEGATED TO STATE MEET

The announcement that Wilmington College expects to have a concert band next year and the election of Doug Sessoms as interim council member to the North Carolina State Student legislature highlighted the last Student council meeting.

Dean R. C. Beemon said the band will be composed of men and women over high school age.

Dean Beemon said the band would serve as an outlet for musically inclined persons of the community and will be directed by Fred Bouknight, New Hanover High School band director.

If the band pans out as expected, the dean hopes to let persons register in the fall for instrumental music and receive college credits.

In regard to the election, Doug will represent Wilmington College in formulating plans for the state legislature meeting next year in Raleigh.

The council members passed a motion to start working on a bill which will be presented at the legislature meeting. Sessoms urged any person interested in working on this bill to attend the council meeting.

Also during the meeting the council expressed its appreciation to the students who assisted in beautifying the college grounds. Various students planted azalea bushes, which were donated by the city, beside the walls in front of the college. Grass was also planted.

Dean Beemon announced that 162 persons enrolled in the two-year terminal and university parallel course during the second semester. This was a slight increase over the 156 persons who enrolled during the first semester. "A total of 609 persons have enrolled in college courses here since July 1," Dean Beemon said, "and 326 are currently in membership in the various departments."

Over The Transom . .

By MARY PORTER and JACKIE COWAN

The writers of this column are stumped as to just how to go about introducing it. We'll just say it's a new (and we hope a regular) feature of this newspaper. Well, on with the news, gossip, and campus goings-on.

The other day a group of students on the front steps saw a streak of black, heard a screech of brakes and were wondering what new jet machine had hit town, when someone noticed Glenn Bass climbing out of his new '50 Chevrolet. Seems it's a delayed Christmas present. Maybe Santa took a whirl before delivering it! Let's go for a ride, Glenn!! While we're on the subject, here's Glenn's latest—when asked what the letters "W. C." meant, his reply was "Whisky Creek."

We've all noticed some new faces in the halls this semester. Gilbert Thomason, a former Davidson lad; "Sandy" Robertson from the University of Virginia; Olivia Costin from E.C.T.C.; Charles Russell from Emory; Joe Schlegal from State; and David Sawyer from the University of California are just a few who have recently joined our ranks. Some other new students are Bill Hadley, Robert Cowan, Earnest Schnibber, Edwin Ennis, Bill Tart, Norman Bass, and Bob Shepard. We wish to extend a hearty welcome on behalf of our student body to all of the new students.

Sickness and operations have claimed two of our students—Pete Lee and Robert Blake. Pete has just recently returned to school following an operation on his knee. We missed you, Pete, and we are glad you're back! Robert is in the hospital now recovering from an appendectomy. We send along our best get-well wishes, and hope to see you back out here soon, Robert.

THROUGH THE KEYHOLE: Harry Coleman and Ruth Maulsby, one of our "steady couples," sitting on the wall enjoying the sunshine; Becky Near and Claude McAllister going to lunch; Nancy Ball waiting for George Jones on the front steps; Theresa Johnson and Betty Padgett studying shorthand; Grace Kelly just "thrilled to death;" Frank Hazleton and Billy Smith playing ping-pong; Macon Rice and Phillip Jones leaving

MR. H. M. ROLAND SPEAKS ON CHINA AT I-R MEETING

"Our mistake in dealing with China was letting Russia into Manchuria," stated Superintendent of Schools H. M. Roland before the International Relations Club on February 13.

Mr. Roland began his speech by describing the various parts of China. In describing the population of China he humorously pointed out that "the population of Chinese cities varies with the chamber of commerce." Mr. Roland, however, went on to say that the average population per square mile in China is 300 persons.

In describing communism in China, the superintendent said that communism in China is different from that in Russia. Communism in China offers reforms in land tenure and in voting. "In communistic China people live on semi-collective farms and vote in groups," Mr. Roland stated.

"The masses of Chinese are indifferent to their government," he said, "provided their government comes from within China."

In closing, Mr. Roland emphasized the fact that Russia expects China to become a part of the "Iron Curtain."

The EDITOR SPEAKS

by ROBERT MILLER

From a sports-minded aspect Wilmington College is perhaps the most ungrateful student body of any college in the United States, despite the fact that it is endeavoring to make a reputable name for itself in the collegiate world.

This was obvious to the handful of persons who attended the Seahawk basketball games. The Wilmington College squad received the least moral support of any team in the North Carolina Junior College Basketball conference.

Consequently, for the third consecutive year, the team was a financial deficit rather than an asset to this institution. But most of all, it was a literal disgrace to the college student body.

To the students who played basketball we owe a sincere appreciation. To the few students, faculty members and others who supported the team we are grateful. To the student body and faculty members who did not support the team—we owe nothing.

Of the 11 players on the basketball team, four were attending college, playing basketball, and continuing in employment—some working 48 hours every week.

We ask why they practiced ball under those conditions? Was it because they were given scholarships? Were they getting paid? Were they forced to do so?

The answers are negative. Those persons familiar with the sports rules of a junior college know that a student cannot receive a scholarship, they cannot receive pay, and certainly they were not forced to play.

The reason was—they simply loved the sport of playing basketball. And, too, they were there to afford Wilmington College publicity and advertisement, and give as good a representation as possible in the college conference.

The basketball season opened December 5th; there were about 100 paid admissions to the initial game. The basketball season ended February 13th—there were about 40 paid admissions to the final home game.

It's true the team lost consistently. But the players didn't quit, they weren't disheartened, and the coach stuck faithfully. But what about the student support? There were no students there. Maybe one reason the team did lose so often was that it didn't have the moral support that the cagers were accustomed to.

The students can't say truthfully that the reason they didn't attend the contests was that the team lost every game—because only a few students even attended the first game when the Seahawks were rated favorably with other teams in the conference.

Most of us realize that the college can't continue to sponsor a team which consistently runs in the red. And without sports, a college is like a ship without a rudder.

Thus, perhaps upon the shoulders of students next year will lie the decisive question—will basketball be continued or discontinued in Wilmington College?

We think the answer is in the affirmative. And we hope that next year's student body is more appreciative of the basketball team than the student body we have today.

Seahawk Hoopsters Lose 23 Basketball Games

PEIFFER CONTEST BEST OF CAMPAIGN

By GENE WARREN

Coach John Charlton's Seahawks closed out their season by losing to Wingate Junior College in the Eastern Carolina Junior College tournament at Dunn. That defeat gave the Seahawks a record of 23 consecutive losses.

The best game that Wilmington College played all season was against Pfeiffer, regular season champions, at the NHHS gymnasium two weeks ago. For three quarters the inspired Seahawks led the vaunted visitors, but after two first stringers, Glenn Bass and Robert Miller, fouled out, the Pfeiffer team poured on the pressure to win, 79-65.

Other scores during the last few weeks of play were EMI 45, Seahawks 43, Louisburg 81, Wilmington College 65; and ECTC 69, Wilmington College 56.

In the last four games, Linwood Taylor and Harry Coleman tied for high scoring honors, each chipping in 87 points for averages of 21.8.

Donald Edwards bucketed 38 points in the four tilts for a 9.5 average. Bass tallied 13 points, Miller 11, Maurice Moore 15, Ed Moore one, and Charles Cooper, eight.

Although the Seahawks had a terrible season from the standpoint of their record, it should be noted that they improved during the latter stages of the campaign.

Agers playing their last season for the Seahawks were Harry Coleman, Donald Edwards, Glenn Bass, and Ed Moore.

A married man is a player who has been penalized for holding.

SEAHAWKS END SEASON

'T' SHIRT DAY

Francis Foy and Scoop Warren, muscle men extraordinary, have announced that "T" Shirt Day will be observed in Wilmington College sometime soon. While "T" Shirt Day is being observed, the two muscle-men said that all males will be "compelled" to wear "T" shirts. Anyone interested in taking the "Foy-Warren" course are asked to be at the YMCA tomorrow at 5:30 a. m.

Student council representatives said today that announcement of superlatives, who were elected Tuesday, will be made in The Fledgling, college annual.

THIRD ANNUAL WC BANQUET TONIGHT AT 8; JUDGE JOHN J. BURNEY WILL SPEAK

Hitting Around the I. C. Circuit

CORAL GABLES, Fla.—Mail-of grades to students each semester has been discontinued by registrar's office at the University of Miami, it was announced here recently. This move was necessary because of the hundreds of envelopes returned to the post office each semester because of incorrect local addresses.

DES MOINES, Ia.—Nearly 100 students are taking religion courses under the liberal arts program this year at Drake University, according to Dr. R. H. Pittman, head of the Department of Religion in the College of Liberal Arts. "Religion is taught like any other course in the field of social science. Many students are of the opinion that religion is a kind of idle study that is a little more sophisticated than regular Sunday school," Dr. Pittman said.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—American civilization is now studied on the basis of comparable periods in history rather than from the usual chronological angle in a seminar given at Barnard College for the first time this year by Professor Isidore Raich, executive officer of the Department of History.

PRINCETON, N. J.—The development of new measures of attitude and personality to aid in counseling, selection, and guidance are among the most promising current activities of testing research, Henry Chauncey, president of Educational Testing Service, stated in his first Annual Report, issued recently.

COLLEGE INFORMATION MAILED

Annual Goes to Press

Ruth Maultsby, business manager of The Fledgling, said the annual went to press Friday and is scheduled to be ready for distribution on May 1.

The Fledgling will have approximately 70 pages, containing individual pictures of practically all students, clubs, athletic teams, superlatives, faculty members, and class officers.

Ruth reminded students that they may still subscribe to The Fledgling for $3.50. Anyone interested in purchasing an annual should contact any member of the Fledgling staff.

Some 1,000 letters and bulletins about Wilmington College have been mailed out to seniors and principals of every high school in Southeastern North Carolina.

Miss Pickard, registrar, said that some of the letters were personally signed by Dean Beemon.
Counties included were New Hanover, Brunswick, Pender, Onslow, Duplin, Bladen, and Columbus.

Another means of publicizing and enticing SENC students to attend college here began recently when copies of the Seahawk were mailed to the various high schools.

200 Persons Expected, Including Alumni, Special Guests

By ROBERT MILLER
Editor

John J. Burney of Wilmington, judge of Superior court, will address the expected 200 persons at Wilmington College's third annual banquet tonight at 8 o'clock at the Famous club.

Judge Burney's speech, recognition of superlatives, awarding of monograms to the Seahawk basketball team, and presentation of charters to the various new club officers will highlight the banquet.

Banquet committeemen estimated that 150 college students will attend the banquet.
The remaining 50 persons expected to attend will include the faculty, alumni, and special guests.

The banquet will get underway with an address of welcome by Douglas Sessoms, president of the
president of the sophomore class, will give the response.

Following the response Burris
Bender, head of the devotional class of the college, will deliver the invocation and Eugene
Mauney, former organist at Duke university, will furnish a musical program.

R. C. Beemon, dean, will deliver a brief address immediately before the introduction of superlatives by Ruth Maultsby, editor of the college annual.

Coach John Charlton will then present athletic letters to Linwood
Taylor, Harry Coleman, Glenn
Bass, Robert Miller, Donald Edwards, Maurice Moore, Charles Cooper, Huck Moore, Bradford
Murray, Ronald Ely, and Doc Williams.

J. D. Winters, president of the student body, will present charters to Robert Hayes, president of both the International-Relations club and the debating team. Winters said that these were the only two organizations activated this year.

VET STUDENT'S STORY OF WAR BATTLES AND BIOGRAPHY OF TEACHER RELATED

MR. SAM W. TAYLOR

By Theresa Johnson

If you meet a short, sandy-haired fellow in the hall, who is always smiling from ear to ear, you can rest assured that it will be Mr. Sam W. Taylor, who was born in Burlington, in 1921.

Mr. Taylor says that he failed the first grade, not because he was dumb, but because he memorized everything. After he finished the first grade, he moved to Greensboro where he completed the third grade. Later on he moved to High Point for junior high, and completed the circuit by graduating from Asheboro High School.

Mr. Taylor attended High Point College for three years; then Uncle Sam called him into the Army where he stayed for three years, during which time he served 18 months in India and Burma.

After getting out of the service, he returned to High Point and did under-graduate work; during this period he was elected to "Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges." He received his Masters Degree at Northwestern University, to which place he plans to return this summer for work on his Ph.D.

Mr. Taylor, who teaches music, became a member of the high school and college faculty in September, 1948.

NORMAN HUDSON, JR.

By Walter Biggs

During the last war, many of the veterans who are now students at Wilmington College saw action and service in many far-flung areas over the globe. Such a veteran was Norman Eldridge Hudson, Jr.; and such an area was France. As a member of the 120th Infantry, 30th Division, Eldridge served his country in various locales and in various ways.

After his graduation from high school in 1940, he entered the National Guard in Wilmington, remaining in the states for three years during which time he helped train recruits. As a paratrooper he made 21 jumps, a series which ended only after an unexciting stay in the hospital for broken bones.

In 1943, his focal point for training became Scotland and England, this time in preparation for the Normandy invasion. He missed the big show on D-day but arrived on the second day of the invasion to relieve troops only a mile from the beach. From this point on, he was in direct combat for three months and took part in the battles of St. Lo, St. Mere Eglise, and Falias Jap, a drive from Normandy to Northern France. Of the 30 men of his company from Wilmington, he was one of the last

Coach Said Bowlers Will Not Receive Letters

Makes Decision After Lengthy Talk With Dean R. C. Beemon

Coach John Charlton said today that bowling is not an intercollegiate sport, and therefore the Wilmington College bowling team will not be awarded monograms. The coach's statement ended rumors circulating around the college that members of the bowling team will be awarded monograms along with members of the basketball team.

Coach Charlton added that he held a lengthy discussion with Dean R. C. Beemon, before he definitely decided that the bowling team should not be presented letters.

"The Keglers are participating in a city ten-pin league and not in any intercollegiate competition," the coach said. They are merely bowling under the name of Wilmington College, and are not sanctioned by the college.

The coach continued to point out that as far as the college is concerned the bowling is strictly illegal. He reiterated that the team was composed of college students who merely wanted to bowl under the name of the college.

"Technically, bowling is an intra-mural activity," he said, "and university letters are not awarded to participants in intra-mural sports."

Coach Charlton concluded by saying, "If it comes up again, I doubt that any group of students can bowl under the name of the college."

CHALLENGE TO WC BOWLERS EXTENDED

A challenge to play any two duck pin bowlers in the college, either students or teachers, was made today by two other students who asked to remain anonymous. The challengers boast an average of 102 and 100 respectively for the last two months bowling in a city duckpin league. Persons interested in competing with the challengers should place their name in the Seahawk mailbox.

SEAHAWK CAGERS GRADUATE

When the 1950-51 basketball season rolls around, the Seahawks will be minus four players, three of whom played on the first team. Ending their two years eligibility in the North Carolina Junior College conference were Glenn Bass, left; Donald Edwards, top center; Huck Moore, bottom center; and Harry Coleman, right. Glenn and Huck played the guard positions while Donald and Harry played the pivot slot and forward position respectively. All four basketball players won monograms on the 1948-49 squad.

Tar Heel's Youngest Institution Has 293 Students

Wilmington College, the youngest college in Tar Heelia, has the fifth highest enrollment of any public or private junior college in North Carolina.

According to statistics released recently by the secretary of the North Carolina College Conference, the enrollment here is 293 students, as of October. This is an increase of 83 over the previous year.

When the institution was founded in 1947, there were 140 students enrolled, most of whom were veterans. During 1946-47 the institution was known as the College Center, a branch of the Greater University.

The tabulation showed that of the 293 students enrolled 243 are men and the other 50 are women.
Junior colleges with a larger enrollment than Wilmington College are Mars Hill, 910; Gardner-Webb, 430; Brevard, 405; and Campbell, 362.

Other junior colleges and enrollment are Asheville-Biltmore, 287;
Charlotte, 269; Belmont-Abbey,
159; Chowan, 127; Edwards Military Institute, 36; Lees-McRae, 254; Louisburg, 214; Mitchell, 272;
Oak Ridge, 79; Peace, 230; Pfeif-fer, 289; Pineland, 29; Presbyterian, 159; Sacred Heart, 51; St.
Genevieve, 80; St. Mary's, 213;
Warren Wilson, 82; and Wingate, 224.

ATTENDANT TO AZALEA QUEEN

PARTY IS BIG SUCCESS

Wilmington College has been invited by the Azalea Festival Committee of the City to elect from the list of women students an attendant to the court of the Azalea Queen in the forthcoming Azalea Festival. The fortunate girl is to be elected within the next week, it was disclosed by Dean Beemon and the Student Council Thursday.

This is the first year that such an honor has been established for Wilmington College girl.

The Azalea Queen's Court is composed of representatives from many Colleges throughout the state. They are selected by the individual Colleges and are present in this City to take part in the festivities of the week-end, March 30-31, April 1. It is the duty of these lovely young ladies to parade with the Queen and attend the Azalea Ball at Lumina at Wrightsville Beach. There are also other events for their entertainment.

Mr. Hugh Morton, in disclosing the Committee's decision concerning W.C., stated that the only requirements they asked in governing the selection of our attendant were that she be as attractive as possible and that she be able to act as guide to her companion attendants in touring the city.

At a recent meeting of the Student Council, it was decided that ballots are to be prepared and presented in the several classrooms for the purpose of election. This matter is one in which each student should feel pride and a sense of obligation to elect a person who will represent Wilmington College in the best possible manner.

Elections will be Monday and Tuesday, Feb. 26 and 27. The nominees are:

Harriet Beckett
Mona Faye Caines
Jacqueline Cowan
Betty Jean Scott
Joan Warshauer

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. Beckett gave Harriet a surprise birthday party at Miss Johnson's during Dramatics Club meeting, Feb. 6. I hear a good time was had by all, eh Marty?

ORCHIDS

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Sam Taylor Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Crows on the new additions to their families: Charles Thomas Taylor and Phyllis Crews.

The students of Wilmington College took time out from their studies, Friday night, February 16, to pursue the gayer side of life by attending the Valentine Party which was sponsored by the International Relations Club. Upwards of fifty students came to the party to help make it a success.

The featured attractions for the evening were:

Two selections on the piano by Mr. L.L. Hewett - "Malaguena" and an unnamed composition of his own;

"You Were Meant for Me", a song sung by Miss Harriet Beckett;

A tap dance by Mr. Macer Rice, and a repeat by encore demand.

Also, Mr. Rice acted as Master of Ceremonies for the occasion.

Some other activities that went on at the party were: dancing with the lights down low, followed by a square dance. Refreshments consisted of punch and cookies. The cookies were furnished by the "Dixieland Bakery" free of charge.

The party was concluded at 11:00 p.m. by an announcement by Mr. Sam Jones that "All good things must come to an end."

Miss Powell - What's your husband's average income?

Mrs. Gurganus - About midnight.

EDITORIAL

Students of Wilmington College welcome to the pages of the new SEAHAWK which will appear Friday of every week from now on. (We hope) The staff and editor wish to express joy in being able to serve you and sincerely hope we will be allowed to remain on Campus after you have read for our first issue.

We also wish to extend an "ENGRAVED" invitation to any and all students who would like to join us in making this paper a real credit to Wilmington College.

If you cannot join us on the staff, then be sure to give us your opinion of this paper. Let us know whether it is good or bad. If bad, tell us how we can improve it, because after all this whole business is for you, the students.

Remember this is YOUR paper and without your continual help and support it cannot exist. Do be kind, and give us your views.

Also in this small space the editor wishes to express his sincere thanks to the staff for his election. He will try to live up to the honor by making the SEAHAWK the best paper in College history.

THE DEAN'S NOTEBOOK

The students who have reorganized the SEAHAWK STAFF and rebised this college publication are to be highly commended for their ambition and industriousness. The carrying out of this project can be of great value to each student of Wilmington College and to the institution as a whole.

It is to be hoped that the coming weeks will find an increasing number affiliating with the present staff and contributing to the services and pleasures which the paper renders.

Few of the extra curricular programs of a school offer such fine opportunities for cooperative endeavors, training in the practice of good citizenship, and service to one's associates, as does the regular publication of a school paper.

The values derived from the efforts here expended will not be dissipated with the passing of a month of a semester. The permanent rewards thus provided will, in years to come, prove a fruitful source of historical information relative to the early years of an institution.

May I extend my sincere congratulations to those who have undertaken this work and wish for them every success for the forth coming issues

Do you have any snapshots of yourself or other students? If so, please lend them to the Fledgling staff to be used in your 1951 annual. By the way, pre-publication orders are now being taken for the Fledgling; so get yours now and avoid the rush.

SITTIN' IN ON THE COUNCIL

David Phillips

During the past five months of school, the Student Council has undertaken many outstanding projects that have been very advantageous to Wilmington College and to the students. Among the things accomplished are the game room improvements which include better ping-pong facilities, checkers, new tables, chess, and above all the student store.

The Council has sponsored several parties and dances for the Student Body and has had a good showing at each of these social functions.

In order to tell the student body the purpose of the Student Council, it would be best to give the preamble as stated in the constitution. "The Student Government of Wilmington College was organized to encourage initiative and instill responsibility on the part of the Students. It promotes a closer student-faculty cooperation and the common interest and general welfare of the student body, and it maintains and perpetuates high ideals in this college." The Student Council has discussed many problems that have risen among the students this year, and they have talked with the faculty which in turn took action to meet the desires of the students.

To explain this point it would be best to use the school store to show the fine cooperation that prevails among the student and faculty of Wilmington College. Several months ago the students were asking if some arrangements could be made to install candy, crackers, gum and other things that go well between meals.

Blackmail!!!

To start off the semester right, we inform the girls that Joe Jarrott is no longer eligible - congratulations to Sparky Carroll and Joe on their engagement.

Wonder why Duane Cheek was hustling over to Franklin Street last Thursday night all spruced up in that new green suit - maybe because Miriam Johnson lives there? Wonder if Joe Johnston will let him get away with it? DID YOU HEAR -

Miss Johnson threatening to throw her 11:30 History Class out on their respective ears, if they don't behave - good luck kids.

Miss Morton saying she wished someone would get the man's hat off the rack in her room, because everytime she walks in she gets scared to death, thinking it's a man. Then she gets disappointed because it isn't. (Anybody know a man who needs a hat? Please leave all names in Seahawk box.) DID YOU SEE -

R.E. Corbet having trouble in Physics class - quite a problem, eh R.E.?

Ann Anderson trying to study chemistry at the Den with Joe Jarrott and Stella Hatcher chattering away, and Macon Rice flexing his muscles - who can study?

Doug and Buckett got caught rehearsing (?) in the Teacher's Room.

Bob Fugh going to get his Front Street gal. Who is she Bob? Let us in on the secret.

We also would like to know who that young lady is that Phil Jones must call up every day. Can you discuss the law of Thermodynamics with her, Phil?

We saw Doug Sossone showing his muscles to Ann Anderson in Zoology class, but Mr. Wright says it could be an early mosquito bite.

Also saw Jackie Cowan flirting in the lobby with David Phillips (Ed. note - Who hasn't?)

Who parks in front of 2710 Van Buren most every night? That's where Jackie Cowan lives isn't it David Phillips? We've always heard that late hours aren't good for one, but they seem to be all right for two.

Betty Jurgenson and David Lockamy agree on that too.

And Macon Rice, please don't keep our actress out so late - Rev. Beckett is ant to meet you with a shot gun some night.

Joan Washour may be new, but wese she hasn't wasted any time - saw her with Marty Miller at the dance Friday night.

Bill Tart squiring Macon Rice's girl at the basketball game Tuesday night - Better watch that guy, Rice

Gotta go now, we'll see youns next week

CLUB NEWS

Extracurricular activities are important to the students because they give him association with other students, application of studies to everyday living and furnish participation in group discussion.

This column will henceforth furnish all club news.

The Dramatics Club meeting on Tuesday Feb. 13, at Miss Johnson's house had a group picture made for the Annual, and Joan Washaver was appointed to work with the STARHAWK. Rehearsal for the radio broadcast was held.

The International Relations Club devoted most of the meeting on Tuesday morning, February 13, to making plans for the Valentine party which they were sponsoring. Its regular program "Should we Re-Arm Western Germany" was postponed until Tuesday, February 20.

Counting the ballots for superlatives was finished at the meeting of the FLEDGLING Staff Wednesday, February 14. No one except the four members of the committee who counted the ballots know who was elected. It was decided that it would remain a secret until the Annual is published.

DAVID P. - What would you say if I asked you to be my wife?

JACKIE C. - Nothing - I can't laugh and talk at the same time.

WELL, WELL, MY LITTLE HONEY
Long Ca

Macon - I' a lady killer!

Harriet - Yeah, they take one look at you and drop dead!

"C. ON THE AIR"

"Wilmington College on the Air" is presented Thursday of every other week on station WMFD at 8:45 pm. The program is under the sponsorship of the Wilcol Stagers and last Thursday was presented by that club.

A playlet was presented which sighted the signing of the Magna Carta as the initial incident in the long struggle of the English people for a democratic form of life. Raymond Rush portrayed King John, David Lockamy took the part of a counselor, Walter Biggs and Joe Schlegel were the barons. The program was considered an excellent presentation.

Next Thursday, March 1, the program will be presented by the International Relations Club. Sam Jones, President, has said he will present a discussion of some current topic. This should prove interesting and enlightening.

WILCOL STAGERS PRESENT PLAY

The Wilcol Stagers of Wilmington College once again proved its worth to the students of Wil-Col when they presented the modern playlet, "Funiculi, Funicula", at the Sorosis meeting, Thursday, February 15.

As was announced by Miss Dorothy Forbes, Literature Department Chairman, the play was staged in observance of National Drama week.

The excellent cooperation of the actors, Harriett Beckett, Raymond Rush, and Douglas Sessoms, coupled with the fine direction of Miss Mildred Johnson, made the playlet a big hit with the Sorosis

SEAHAWKS BEAT CHOWAN, 76-61

MURFREESBORO, Feb. 21. ---The Wilmington College Seahawks snapped a dogged 35 game losing streak here tonight when they defeated Chowan College, 76-61 before a small crowd in the local gym.

Before tonight Wilmington had lost all 12 played this season and 22 last year.

The 'Hawks hopped off to an early lead and Chowan never led. WC was ahead 45 to 30, at halftime.

Thurston Watkins racked up 30 points on 14 field goals and two fouls set the pace. Donald Anderson was next with 13 and Sonny Furlong chipped in with 10. He also played well under the boards.

The two tangle in Wilmington Saturday night.

Let's everybody go and back up the team.

(The above article is from the MORNING STAR.)

VOTE ON PREMIERE FOR A DAY

Would you like to see the World Premiere of a famous movie right here in Wilmington? What Movie am I talking about? Why I mean the new picture "Queen For a Day."

If Wilmington were chosen as the site of its premiere all the stars of the picture and also the stars of the radio show would be present here in Wilmington.

Here is all we have to do to get this premiere in Wilmington. Just drop a card to "Queen For a Day", Hollywood 28, Calif. Be sure to mention our Mutual station WGNL. Come on everyone send in those cards.

The members of the Student Council soon heard of this and decided that a store would be possible, and several people were appointed as a committee to purchase the necessary supplies. The faculty jumped on the band wagon, and Mr. Beemon was able to have the have a place in the gameroom. The store was soon built, stocked, and became an active part of Wilmington College.

The Student Council had also grown a great deal in members. Last year there were only ten members of the council and two faculty advisors. This year there are fourteen members. This growth in size is due to the interest of the council to the various clubs around school. The importance of the clubs was discussed and it was decided that if the social life was to be improved, it would be necessary for the council to allow each club a representative so that these members could have a better relationship between the clubs and the Student Council.

All in all, the Student Council is the main factor that connects the clubs, the faculty, and the student body. The future of Wilmington College lies in the fact that its future governing students will be in just as capable hands as the present one.

NOTICES

Attention students and faculty. This is your bulletin board. Any notices, announcements, etc. you want brought before the student body just turn them over to the SEAHAWK Staff and they will be printed. All notices must be in by Wednesday to make publication in Friday's edition.

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

The Board of Elections headed by Jimmy High has released the results of the election held February 26 and 27.

Phillip H. Jones was elected to the vice-presidency of the second year class. Until this election the Senior Class has been without a vice-president. Paul Rush was selected by the Freshmen as their president. The office of Secretary to the Student Council was left undecided by the voting. According to the Board of Elections, a date will be provided shortly for voting on this office.

EMPLOYEE-EMPLOYER BANQUET TO BE HELD

This year, as in previous years the Merchandise Class along with the DE and DO Classes of the High School will sponsor an Employee-Employer Banquet.

The purpose of this banquet is different from others in the fact that the employee invites his boss out to a night of fun & food.

A committee, composed of representatives from all Distributive Education classes has chosen "The Pink House" for this year's activity. The event will take place March 14 at 7 p.m.

Mr. W.K. Dorsey who is in charge of the College part in this affair assures us that a good time will be had by all.

THE FLEDGLING FLIES

After weeks and months of toil and labor, after endless typing of copy work, hours of arranging pictures and thousands of minor details, the Fledgling Staff is proud to announce that the 1951 FLEDGLING has been sent to press. Naturally, we think it will be the best annual Wilmington College has ever published.

Subscriptions are selling like "wild fire," Don't forget to reserve a copy by paying a down payment of fifty cents or more, or the full price of $3.50 to Mona Faye Caines, Joe Johnston, or Mr. Wright. The balance is due upon receipt of the annual May 1. Don't wait until the last minute and be left without memories of this exciting year at Wilmington College.

THE ANNUAL STAFF

PROSPECTIVE GRADUATES

On March 14 and 15, prospective 1951 graduates of W.C. will take part in the National College Sophomore Testing Program. The tests are sponsored by the Educational Testing Service. An analysis of the data made available through these tests should show a comparison between our school and students and other schools and students.

No preparation for the test is necessary on the part of the student. The test will consist of sections on English, General, and Contemporary Affairs.

Test time will be Wednesday, March 14 from 8:30 a.m. to 11:45 a.m. and Thursday March 15, 8:30 to 11:00 a.m. The place will be Room 1.

THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

by Christian White

The law of Arithmetic that 'two and two makes four' holds true always. It is a definite, absolute statement of fact. No one can imagine a world where two and two will not make four.

This same continuity is found in the realm of the moral and spiritual affairs of men. There is absolutely no basis for the often expressed idea that a young man can sow his wild oats, then suddenly become a fine moral specimen without reaping any tares. There is a penalty for sowing wild oats and it shows in the man, not the oats. As one wise man has said, "Impulses lead to choices; choices become habits; habits harden speedily into character; and character determines destiny."

EDITORIAL

The second issue of THE SEAHAWK is now in your hands and the Editor again wants to urge any one with journalistic ability or anyone who likes to write, to please come and join us on Wednesday nights at 730-the staff's regular meeting time.

The editor would also like to answer the question, "What is the purpose of a school paper?"

The first duty of any school paper is to serve its student readers in all ways possible; to report all campus news and views unbiasedly and truthfully, to act as historian for our present class so that future classes will be able to know just what happened to the students in college now; to serve as a medium through which all students may express themselves freely; and to stimulate interest in all school activities.

The school paper is the most important extra curricular activity in which students can participate during their college life.

"I will now illustrate what I have in mind," said Mr. D'Amico as he erased everything from the blackboard.

Macon: Do you neck?

Harriet: That's my business.

Macon: Oh, a professional.

THE DEANS NOTEBOOK

Many Wilmington College students, upon the completion of their two-year university parallel courses, transfer to four-year institutions. Former W. C. men and women are now enrolled in practically all of the senior colleges and universities of North Carolina and in several outside the state including Boston University, Emory University, Maryville College, George Washington University, University of South Carolina, National University, Georgia School of Technology, University of Georgia.

Students who anticipate transferring to other schools should bear certain things in mind.

Care should be taken that all entrance requirements are met and that freshman and sophomore subjects are appropriate to the courses later to be followed. Necessary information can usually be obtained from the college catalogue. The catalogue will also be of assistance in selecting elective subjects which will be readily acceptable to the four-year institution. Catalogues of various colleges are available for student use in the registrar's office. If this source of information proves inadequate, correspondence should be carried on directly with the institution.

It is usually advisable to file admission applications soon after the close of the fall semester. Application blanks should be filled out carefully and completely. If a photograph is called for, it should be attached to the blank. It is the student's responsibility to have complete records of all

A YOUNG MAN'S FANCY

It's spring, almost, and the fancy of the young men of Wilmington College is turning to baseball. Several baseball enthusiasts have succeeded in having the subject brought before the student Council in the hope that our school might have a baseball team. The answer has been no baseball this season. The administration has replied that the request has come too late for provision of funds, for coaching plans, and for scheduling games this season.

Yet, this answer does not exclude baseball from our campus next year. The answer seems to imply that baseball is quite likely to be established if asked for at the right moment. If all persons now interested would band together, this dream could sometime become a reality.

SITTING IN THE COUNCIL

David Phillips

At the regular meeting of the the Student Council on Thursday, March 8, there were not enough members to make a quorum, so there were no important bills passed.

The preceeding week did see the discussion of two of the main topics confronting the council and the student body.

The first of these two was the possibility of a baseball team. After considering several of the major problems it was deemed inadvisable to organize college baseball.

It would be possible to organize a team to play in the city league.

The next question was the rewriting of the constitution.

Black Mails!!

Gee, where's everybody been lately? Aw, come on, do something we can tattle about.

Jackie Cowan was soloing it the last part of this week we noticed- Seems as if David went to take his physical. Sure hope it isn't a permanent separation.

Where've Betty & David L been keeping themselves. We haven't seen them around much.

This corner hears that Mr. Wright is constantly buying guys coffee over at the 12th & Market Grill. We can't understand why they don't buy him any? Hmm a two-headed "gift"? (a nickel to you non-players)

What's happened to Donal Anderson's truck? We've been missing the sound of tires scratching on gravel and dust clouds in the side alley. Watsa matter Don, did the motor fall out?
SE N HERE AND THERE////////

All the boys gathered "droolingly" around the poster of the Azalea Queen Attendant nominees, on the bulletin board. We will now pause twenty seconds to push Marty's eyeballs back in place.

"Stuffy" Stefandis and Teck Rice trying to find out who has the strongest grip-by the law of averages Stuffy's bound to win sooner or later.

We saw Jimmy High with a pack of butts the other day. ALL HIS VERY OWN, too he says!

Duane Check seems to have acquired somebody's class-ring. Could it be Ann's?

Our dear old Ed had a trying day, Mon. While waiting in line to get a money order to pay his dad's income tax, he also acquired a parking ticket. Lucky boy.

We'll find you next time! Don't Hide.

GRADUATE A AND E CLASS FLIES IN KOREA

Earl Moore, Wilmington College graduate from the A & E class, 1949, Went on to Cadet Training School at Randolph Field and then to Korea. From 61st troop Squadron, he has recently written to Mr. George West of the technical faculty of the College. Excerpts follow:

"I was in southern Japan one month from the day I graduated from Cadets.

Four weeks later I was awarded the air medal for combat missions. It just so happened I was in the place at the time; anyone could or would have done likewise.

"I'm co-pilot on a C119 which is the new version of the flying boxcar the old C82.

"I'm mentioning a few experiences, because it may help some of the students at your A&E school. I've done no more than anyone else. The training I got in your school has proven invaluable to me here. We have flown through rain, snow, sleet, hail and sunshine. It's amazing what these conditions do to an aircraft engine. The temperatures of engines, heaters and everything varies so much and had we not had the best engineers, crew chiefs, and general crews, our missions could not have continually been completed. You see, from take-off on a mission to completion, I've noticed temperature changes from plus 10° C. to minus 24° C. before completion of the mission. I want to add here that all our flight instruments are electrically operated. Mr Ledford can explain the pros and cons of vacuum versus electrical instruments.

"Aviation will perhaps save our homeland. We will certainly be lost without it."

SCOTT ELECTED AS ATTENDANT

In the election held Feb. 26 and 27, Miss. Betty Jean Scott was elected as attendant to the Azalea Festival Queen. This marks the first time that Wilmington College has been allowed an attendant to the Queen's Court. Miss Scott was chosen from a group of five, including Mona Faye Caines, Harriett Beckett, Jackie Cowan, Joan Warshauer, and herself. Miss. Caines was the second choice.

CLUB NEWS

Sam Jones

At the last meeting of the International Relations Club- What meeting? So few members showed up that a quorum could not be obtained. No wonder the world is in such shape!

The club has been saddened by the news that Lon Clewis, Club representative to the Student Council, may have to withdraw from Club Activities. Mr Clewis said that a small thing like a class at the same time has interfered. The members discussed the radio program for the following Tuesday. They also chose Mr. Eccles to lead the discussion for the next meeting on the subject, "Should We Cross the 38 th Parallel in Korea."

The Dramatics club met this past Tuesday night in the music room at Wil. Col. Almost all of the evening was taken up with the rehearsal for the minstrel which the club is presenting on April 5.

Bill Tart, pres. of the club, said, "Anyone who would like to be in the minstrel, come to the next meeting of the club."

A social of some sort was also suggested for the late spring, during the meeting.

Never hit a man when he's down.....He may get up.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS BROADCASTS

"America's reservoir of youth is her most precious asset," concluded Sam Jones Pres. of the International Relations Club, in a special meeting on the air. In a program presented by the the Dramatics Club Thursday, March 1. We can prevent World War 3 by a more effective U. N." was thoroughly discussed by the members of the I R C.

Those participating in the program were: Douglas Sessoms, Sam Jones, Lon Lewis, Mona Faye Gaines, Phillip Jones, David Lockamy and David Phillips.

Through the setting up of a real U N police force the U. S. will not have to carry the torch of peace alone. An International Contingent should be organized immediately consisting of volunteers from all the nations of the world except the big five. This should be commanded and managed by a UN Police Authority. The Police Authority would consist of delegates from the major States and the small states. Three from Great Britain, three from the US, three from France, and three from the smaller States.

"This proposal is not the result of hasty and feverish thinking, but comes rather as the next and inevitable step in the struggle to remedy the fatal defects in the structure of the UN - defects which account for much of the present situation," emphasized Mr. Lockamy.

Finally the meeting was adjourned with an invitation to the "Friends of the College" to attend some of the I R C meetings - Tuesday mornings, 11:30 to 12:30.

SEMI-FORMAL GIVEN

On Saturday, March 10 a semi-formal dance was given for the students of Wilmington College. This wonderful dance took place at White's Lodge located on Castle Hayne Road just out of the city.

The music was furnished by the orchestra of James Phillips, and refreshments were served at no additional cost.

The students can thank Jackie Cowan and David Phillips for the wonderful job they have done in making this dance possible.

One of our students in the merchandising class has just gone through a period of severe mental anguish.

The story is as follows: Pete Lee left his car parked downtown when he left with the basketball team for their last road game. When he returned he discovered his car was gone. He immediately reported the matter to the police, and asked them if they had towed his car in for improper parking. They checked their list of cars and told him they had not. Immediately they put out the alert for the stolen car.

After spending ten days in anxiety, Pete ran into one of his police friends and asked him if he had heard anything about his car. His friend told Pete that he had seen his car being towed by a MacMillan Cameron wrecker two weeks ago. Pete went to MacMillan Cameron's garage and found his stolen car where the Police had put it ten days before. An embarrassing situation--uhuh? *A. R. Stanley

PRETTY CO-ED RIDES FLOAT

Margaret Sheridan, RKO film actress, reigned over an azalea carpeted city last week-end at Wilmington's annual Azalea Festival. Her court was composed of some of the loveliest college women in the state. Miss Sheridan is a very striking woman with dark hair and hazel eyes.

Miss Betty Jean Scott was selected by the students of W.C. as their attendant to the Queen's Court. Betty Jean is a vivacious brunette, stands five-feet three - inches tall, and is a charming combination of brains & beauty. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A.D. Scott of Route Two, Rocky Point. Her escort was Mr. R. E. Corbett, also of Wilmington College.

Friday afternoon the Queen's Court was entertained at a luncheon at Orton Plantation, after which a tour was made of the azalea gardens. Friday evening, they were present at the Legion Stadium music festival, and the Teen-Age Dance at Lumina.

On Saturday at 11 o'clock, Miss Scott and the other attendants participated in the Azalea Parade, and at 1 o'clock were guests with Miss Sheridan at a luncheon at St. James. Later in the afternoon the court visited the Country Club links to follow the action of the Azalea Open Golf Tournament.

The Coronation Ball at Lumina Saturday evening brought the festival activities to a close. The people of Wilmington had enjoyed another celebration of the azalea blossoms.

Wilmington College was very honored and pleased to have one of its beautiful co-eds selected by White's Ice Cream & Milk Co. to ride on their Azalea parade float this year.

The lucky girl selected was Miss Mona Faye Caines, the runner-up in the voting for the Azalea Queen's Attendant.

Miss Caines looked very charming during the Parade Saturday morning as she smiled and waved at the crowds from her position of honor on the White's Float.

She stated that this was one of the greatest thrills she has had in College and wishes to express her thanks to White's.

EDITORIAL

The worth of a college is determined by the degree of benefit derived from it by the student. To achieve the full benefits from a college education, a student should learn to apply the knowledge that is acquired in the classroom.

In Wilmington College, as in all other colleges, there is an opportunity afforded all students to participate in various school activities. Through participation in these school activities, a student may broaden his knowledge and experiences; but since participation is not compulsory, many students do not realize this benefit.

A Freshman class meeting was called for Tuesday, March 21 - only 14 students attended. This meeting was the responsibility of every person in the first year class, but the majority did not see that this meeting was as much a part of their work as their regular curricular. Many students do not realize that school activities run parallel with their curricula. If all students could realize the importance of school activities and do something about it, I think that would be one of the great steps toward achieving the full benefits from a college education.

DEAN'S NOTEBOOK

(Con't from last issue)

 R.C. BEEMON *

Students who anticipate transferring to other schools should bear certain things in mind.

It is very important that the transfer student make as high a scholastic record as possible. High quality freshman and sophomore work provides a sound foundation upon which later general and professional training can be built. Many colleges accept students on the basis of their past achievements. Where the number of enrollees is limited, those with the best scholastic standings are the ones admitted. Most senior institutions require a "C" average; and "D's" are ordinarily not transferable.

One should never be careless about dropping a subject for minor or unimportant reasons. A student must be making a passing grade in order to get a "W" or official withdrawal in any subject. The "F" which is recorded for an unofficial drop becomes a part of the permanent record and will be included with other grades in the determination of an overall average.

Wilmington College students have been very successful in the colleges and universities to which they have transferred. Many have made honorary societies, deans' lists, and honor rolls.

It will pay those who expect later to attend another college to give time and attention to the above mentioned items; and if these suggestions are carefully followed, the changes can be made without loss of time or credit.

SITTING IN ON THE COUNCIL

The Student Council's clean-up campaign last Monday, proved to be a very successful project. The front door and woodwork was repainted; the porch and front steps were washed; the lawn was raked and cleaned; and the custodian, Buck Brunson, planted grass and furnished two railings to protect the grass from trampling feet. We would like to thank Mr. Marshall, head of the Board-of-Education, for supplying the council with the necessary equipment.

The Council expresses appreciation to Mr. David Lockamy for his kind co-operation and gracious effort he has shown in operating the school store. Under much criticism and rebuff, Mr. Lockamy opened the store with little financial backing, and built the store into a successful Council project. Upon Mr. Lockamy's resignation, he has been replaced by Mr. Biggs and Mr. Phillips, acting as co-managers of the store.

The Student Council requests the co-operation of the student body in keeping the campus clean and the entrances attractive.

Six Yanks were crouched in a Korean rice paddy when an enemy shell landed nearby, spraying them with mud and rice.

"We're in a tight spot here!" growled one of the soldiers.

"Brother," said a young man who had been twice married and divorced, "you're always in a tight spot when they start showering you with rice!"

* BLACK-MAILS!!! *

Rescued Miriam Johnson from Cooper Page the other day; he had her cornered in the hall. Cooper, don't you know it isn't polite to go around frightening poor little innocent girls? Shame on you!

Stuffy finally got the best of Macon! Congratulations Stuffy!! Hope you found something for your "big head" you said you were suffering from.

Bill Tart has turned his attentions on Mrs. Elizabeth Mandl - a couple of intellectuals, no doubt.

Discovered that David Lockamy has rivalry! While he went to broadcast on the College Radio Program, Joe Johnston squired Betty Jurgenson to the show. Interesting complications!

Hear Mona Faye and Sam are doing a good job as Manny and Pappy in the Minstrel. Oh Sam, this is so sudden — and "leben chillun," too!!!

Saw Harriet looking very blue last week: guess she was lonesome without Macon, who was out with the flu.

If anybody has any old candles, please give them to Phil Jones. He wants to melt them and pour the wax on his convertible top to stop it from leaking.

MATERNITY WARD

IT'S A BOY???

Jackie's begging pennies from everyone in sight so David could start a fund to build the "Phillips Hotel." Any "help" will be appreciated.

Noticed Doug was missing from around school Friday and Saturday. (Who wasn't on Saturday?) Guess it was Azalea Festival fever.

What has Betty Jean Scott done to R.E. Corbet? He was certainly "charged up" about the Azalea Festival Dance. He even "shorted" a battery in Physics lab last week.

Cooper Page really is giving the Co-eds a time! He was pestering the typing staff of the SEAHAWK, and trying to throw Stella Hatcher down the clean front steps. Don't think he succeeded, however.

We have been asked to inform the Co-eds of W.C. that an "Anti-Jimmy High" Club is being formed. Any Co-eds interested, see Ann Anderson, or Jackie Cowan.

Macon Rice informs us that he's now working at Rollin's Barbecue, on the Wrightsville Beach Highway, and says for y'all to drop out to see him.

Be seeing ya around out there till next time.

CLUB NEWS

OUT OF TOWN CLUB

The regular meeting was held in Room 5 on March 7. In the absence of David Phillips, president, Mona Faye Caines, regular secretary, acted as president. The main item of business was discussion of the possibility of obtaining club pins.

DRAMATICS CLUB

The halls of W.C. resounded to the tune of "Dixie" & "Shortnin' Bread" last Tuesday night.

The source of the Chorus was the rehearsal of "The Lazy Moon Minstrels" by the Wilcol Stagers, which will be presented April 5, in the Chestnut Heights School Auditorium. Let's all go and support our dear old Alma Mata....

The Club wishes to announce that the meeting has been changed to Mondays.

WITH THE I.R.C.

The U.N. Forces should recross the 38th Parallel in Korea, or so the I.R.C. thought at its last meeting. No advantage could be gained by the U.N. in fighting a perpetual stalemate.

Mr. Eccles, who introduced the subject, said that the purpose of the U.N. was to establish a united government of the people of Korea. How can this be done unless Communist China is driven out of all Korea? All were not in complete agreement with this and said so. They thought that the U.N. Forces should get out of Korea.

The club voted to discuss on Tuesday, March 20, "Should the U.N. Forces Cross the Manchurian Border?"

FUTURE TEACHERS ENTERTAINED AT A DELTA KAPPA GAMMA TEA
Joe Johnston

At four o'clock Saturday, March seventeenth, Mona Faye Caines, Clayton Eccles, Miriam Johnson, Joe Johnston, Betty Jurgenson, David Phillips and Betty Jean Scott were entertained along with approximately one hundred other future teachers at a tea given at St. Andrews-Covenant by the Delta Kappa Gamma, Theta Chapter.

The Tea was preceded by a delightful program with Miss Kate Marks Kitchin as guest speaker. She was introduced by Miss Van Glahn who presided over the meeting. Mrs. Inez Hinnant, president of the local chapter, welcomed the guests and was followed by a devotion led by Miss Ann Hamilton and a prayer rendered by Nancy West.

Miss Kitchin, a person with a dynamic personality, explained the need of teachers in the elementary schools and high schools. The former will soon need 125,000 teachers while the latter will need 23,000. Each one present realized the due need for future teachers.

Immediately following the program, lime punch, hors d'oeuvres, nuts, mints and cookies were served in the social rooms of the church which were decorated with lovely spring flowers.

Each guest, being graciously received by Miss Kitchin, Miss Gaynor and Mrs. Hinnant, realized that he had chosen a field of challenge and vision.

Clerk: Yes, what can we do for you?
David L.: I want Betty's goldlity insured.

MR. CHARLTON PRESENTS
LECTURES ON ATOMIC FISSION

John D. Charlton, Wilmington College chemistry instructor, is now presenting a series of lectures on atomic fission and atomic power. The lectures are given each Monday night; next Monday, April 2, the third in this series of lectures will be given. This course is presented to the public and students under the Adult Educational Program. The cost to adults is one dollar for the entire lecture series, while students are admitted without cost.

Mr. Charlton seems well informed on the subject, and thus far the lectures have been of great interest. Any adult or student who wishes to, may attend.

★ ★ SPORTS ★ ★
Doug Sessoms

Prospects for a winning Seahawk quintet next year looms very bright on the horizon. Of the twelve players on this year's squad, only two of them have used their eligibility. All the others will be back to form the nucleus for the '51-'52 edition of the 'Hawks. Spearheading the local's attack will be such ballplayers as Thurston Watkins, who sparked the Seahawks in both wins over Chewan College. Six-foot four-inch, Sonny Furlong, Thomas Culbroth, Gene Russ, and Harold Parker. Along with this group will be the other lettermen who saw action this year and a group of high school players who are planning to enroll at the fall term.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE AZALEA ATTENDANT

Miss Harriet Gallup, Wilmington College's attendant to the Azalea Queen for the Wilmington 1952 Azalea Festival is a very attractive eighteen year old brunette with dark brown eyes and warm smile.

Harriet was born in Charleston, S. C., and lived in Norfolk, Virginia, for a time. But most of her years have been spent attending school here in Wilmington. She is a graduate of N. H. S.

She not only has beauty, but she has a warm and pleasing personality and plenty of talent. Harriet excels in music, which she states is one of her hobbies. She is a talented pianist and has a lovely alto voice. Since she lives near the water (Greenville Sound) she enjoys water skiing, swimming, and many other outdoor sports.

When Harriet was told that the students of Wilmington College had elected her Azalea Attendant, she was stunned to speechlessness. After she had regained her senses, she said, "I can't believe it."

Harriet was attendant to the Homecoming Queen at the recent Alumni affair staged after the Salisbury College game. During her high school career she was elected as May Queen, R. O. T. C.

The Dean Speaks

The Dean is glad to welcome the resumption of publication of the SEAHAWK for several reasons. Two of these are particularly important. First, because the enterprise shown by the individuals who have organized and carried through the project is, I hope, symptomatic, and of a kind with that which entrepreneurs the bus to the PJC game. Second, because the College needs a newspaper as a vehicle for group expression and communication and to insure and foster the solidarity of the College population. We are small, as colleges go. But that does not mean that we are unimportant, either to ourselves or to the immediate community or even to the State or the country as a whole. Generally speaking, people are likely to take you, at least at the beginning, at your own evaluation. Of course, they expect you to measure up to it in what you do. But if you start off with a low opinion of yourself, you will find that others agree with it very easily.

This is your college. It does not belong to the Dean or to the members of the faculty or to the Board of Education. It belongs to you. Its reputation and its standing in the educational community are in your hands. No element essential for real greatness is missing. It will become, in the end, the sort of college you make it.

Harriet will represent the college in the parade, at the Teen-Age Azalea Ball and the Coronation Ball. She will ride on the float with other attendants during the parade and will be present with the Queen during other occasions.

Wilmington College is proud to have Miss Harriet Gallup as its attendant to the Azalea Queen during the 1952 Azalea Festival.

HOMECOMING BIG SUCCESS!

Dorothy Melton, freshman and part time receptionist at Wilmington College, was elected by the student body as first homecoming queen for the college. The homecoming was sponsored by the Alumni Association.

Serving as attendants for pretty, brown-eyed Dorothy, were Harriet Gallup and Jayne Alexander. Harriet is taking a general business and secretarial science course, and Jayne is in nurses' training at JWM Hospital.

The queen and her attendants reigned over the homecoming dance which was held immediately after the ball game. The coronation was at 10:30 p. m. Betty Jean Scott, WC's Azalea Festival queen of last year, presented the queen with flowers; and Dot was crowned by Donald Blake, president of the Alumni Association.

When Dot was asked how she felt when elected queen, she said, "I was so thrilled and excited, I didn't see how I could keep it confidential until Saturday—but I did!"

A graduate of NHHS, Dot is taking a secretarial science course at Wilmington College. She likes dancing, listening to good music, and shorthand. She has a winning smile, a sweet personality, and all the things that make us proud of our first homecoming queen.

Attractive pictures of the nominees were placed on the office door, and the winner was kept confidential until Saturday night.

FRESHMAN CLASS MEETING

On March 5 a meeting of the Freshman Class was held in the student lounge, with the president, Jack Franks, presiding.

A very appropriate devotion was given by Richard Ottaway. After which the class officers were introduced and recognized.

In the first order of business, the election of a faculty adviser

PUPPET SHOW PLANNED

The Dramatic Club was started off with a bang this semester. Joan Warshaur, the new president, gave a supper at her home for members of the club. Everyone present enjoyed eating spaghetti and meat balls. It was a gay time for all. After the supper a business meeting was held. A discussion of plans for a puppet show was continued from previous meetings. The date has not been set for this show but further information of the details are forthcoming.

Plans for a hay ride and weiner roast were also discussed. Peggy Land was appointed to find out about the possibilities of obtaining a truck and plans will be completed at the next meeting.

New members are still being called for; so, if you are interested in joining, make every effort to be at Miss Johnson's home at 1505 Grace Street on Wednesday nights at 7:30 o'clock.

EDITORIAL

Thanks are out to both the faculty and student body in helping the SEAHAWK STAFF to revive its publication. This is the first of many future issues of the school paper. In order to be a success one must keep his chin up and face hardships with the good. Everyone knows that in order for a school to grow, interest must be shown in every organization. So don't let anyone say that Wilmington College does not have school spirit. Let's all pull together and we are bound to be a success. The cooperation of the student body is requested in handing in material and in subscriptions.

LIFE AT ITS BEST

By CHRISTIAN WHITE.

A legend from Northern England tells of a man who thought himself constantly pursued by a monster. His crops were ruined, his buildings caught fire, his cattle died and trouble invaded his home. So he decided to lie in wait for the monster, and in the darkness he saw it coming toward his house. With a cry he rushed upon it, and wrestled with it throughout the night, staggering, falling and rising again; but at last a flood of strength came to him, and he overthrew it. As he drew his knife to kill it, a shaft of moonlight broke through the clouds and lit upon its face, and when he saw the face of the monster, he discovered that it was his own.

One of the greatest tragedies in human experience, yet by far the most challenging, is that man finds himself his greatest enemy. If we are to keep our lives in line with the "eternal verities" of life, we must guard them against indolence, irresolution, and undisciplined living. Samuel T. Coleridge is a good example of this type of living. Without question, he was a genius, yet because of his failure to discipline and to guard his life against himself, he almost wrecked it before it had really begun.

This does not mean that life is to have no joy or that we can get no thrill from living, for a person that is true to himself will find that he has attained the highest joy and the greatest thrill of all. Someone has said that the greatest tragedy of man is that he must live with himself and that he cannot get away from himself as long as he lives. Our task is to bring our lives and work into conformity to the will of God which is always the highest and best for us, that our lives might not be a tragedy but a blessing.

to the class, Miss Dorothy Powell was unanimously elected.

The giving of a dance in honor of the graduating class was discussed, and Kenneth Murphy was appointed chairman of the committee to draw up plans for the function. In order to finance the dance, the class decided to sell decals for use on cars or other desired places. Jimmy Schulken was appointed chairman of the committee to select and order the decals for prompt distribution.

Bill Stromsoe was appointed chairman of a committee to plan and make arrangements for a student body social.

All committees are asked to report their plans at the next meeting, the time for which will be announced on the bulletin board.

EVESDROPPERS

Hello, you good people (and I wonder how good you really are).

Walk lightly, live circumspectly, for we blackmailers are on your track. And—since blackmailing is a serious business with us, let's get down to brass "attacks."

Hey! Wait a minute! Don't wake up those boys! I hear they really "pitched one" in Shelby and didn't get any sleep. It seems the Seahawks really had a ball at the tournament. Saw Alex Robbins writing a letter during Economics to a girl he met in Shelby, while Donald Anderson and Thomas Culbreth took a much needed nap.

If you would like to enjoy a bit of free entertainment, go down to the game room while Donald Stein plays an exciting game of ping pong. His style is out of this world.

Speaking of ping pong, did you see Thomas Culbreth hiding behind the school store counter waiting for the ball to come find him? After one of Paul Wright's slams, he gave up looking for the ball and decided to let the ball find him.

I believe we have a monster lover in our midst, by the looks of the grotesque drawings on that blackboard in the lounge. Looks like a Rogue's Gallery in there.

One has about one second to propel himself through the door of room 202 before it shuts. Wonderful way to lose a few limbs. If you want to see Sonny Furlong move fast, (which is very seldom) just watch him scramble through that door (leaving class, that is!)

If you hear a noise that resembles a woodpecker eating on the game room wall, don't be alarmed. It's only Roy Beasley indulging in his new game of wall ping pong.

Oh, yes, if you ever need a place to hide while cutting classes, just crawl under the ping pong table. It seems to work fine for some people.

If you should want to find Peggy Land some time, you will usually find her in the lounge asleep on the sofa. It seems she takes a nap between customers. That is, those who come in to buy her delicious coffee.

Vic Batson has a violent attack of spring fever. Some girl in Shelby seems to be the instigator of his "hots" (spring fever).

Don't be alarmed! The roof won't fall in. It's only Harriet or Ann banging on the piano in the lounge, and those groans you hear are only the sweet voices of some characters who insist on trying to sing.

WELCOME TO THE DEAN

Wilmington College has in the past few years progressed leaps and bounds, but the best thing that has happened yet has been the arrival of our new dean, Dr. Randall. Dr. Randall came to Wilmington under very unusual circumstances.

He was in a car accident as he was motoring through Wilmington, and hearing of our former Dean's resignation he agreed to accept the duties of head man of Wilmington College. In the short time he has been here things have really been popping. Application for membership in the Southern Association of Colleges has been made, and we will probably be on the quarter system next year.

Dr. Randall holds the AB and MA degrees from the University of Michigan and a Ph.D. summa cum laude from Hartford Theological Seminary with a major in philosophy.

He was in the Intelligence Service during the war and traveled in Asia.

The Dean finds time to talk with everyone and encourages our visiting him at any time. Any time any of you are not busy drop in and see for yourself what a wonderful person we have working with us.

We sincerely wish that Dr. Randall's stay in Wilmington College will promote its interests each year.

mighty dangerous game of ping pong lately. He always refers to his most unworthy opponents as "fish."

Well, we've done all the damage we can; so, we'll just wait tight until you "good" people provide us with some more gossip.

TENNIS TEAM

Now that basketball season is over Wilmington College should have other sports to participate in. A tennis team is good both financially and physically. Get on those old tennis shoes and drag out your tennis-racquet and let's do something toward organizing a team. Maybe you are not a champion in the game, but the exercise will do you good!!

BASEBALL

A baseball team is under consideration, and it is well worth considering. The loss of Thurston Watkins hurt our chances for a team, since he is the most capable pitcher; but maybe if we try to carry this out things will open up and we will have a ball team anyway. Let's hope so!!!

CROSS-COUNTRY TEAM

Dean Randall is all for WILCO having a cross-country team. This would be a new adventure but one worth trying. Two other junior colleges have cross-country teams and a trophy is presented to the winner each year—worth working for, huh?

TENNIS COURTS

Wilmington College will have something new added in a few weeks. A tennis court will be built on the southeast corner of the college campus. This will help in forming a tennis team, since a place to practice would be necessary. Lockers to keep equipment in during the day would make things even better.

ogy, Microbiology, Psychology, and one course which includes anatomy and physiology. He is one of the faculty advisors to the Out-of-Town Club. Also, he is an advisor to the Alumni Association. He and Mr. Crews might be considered as business managers of the basketball team.

Basketball Season Reviewed

The Wilmington Seahawks started off their 1951-1952 basketball season at A. C. C. where they came out on top by a 47-42 score. Doug Felts was high with 20 points.

The next game was against Chowan College. This game will be remembered because Thurston Watkins, a stellar forward, was injured. The 'Hawks won by a score of 61-42 with Cross high man with 23 points. The House of David was next on the list and the bearded beauties squeezed out a 51-50 win. Vic Batson was high for the home team with 21 points. W. C. split the next two games with the Citadel Freshmen, with the 'Hawks winning the initial game at Charleston and the Bulldogs winning at the 13th Street gym. A. C. C. played the 'Hawks here and were outclassed 64-46. Wilmington took to the road for the next four games, the first being a loss to Louisburg 46-40 in the first conference game. They took P. J. C. 68-43, beat E. M. I. 49-43 with the home team ahead in "first downs" 4 to 3. Then the 'Hawks ran into Campbell's high flying Camels and were stomped 96-62. At home the Wilmington crew fared better, beating P. J. C. 61-39 and fighting Campbell right down to the wire before losing 57-55. This was the outstanding game of the year. Furlong with 17 points was high, with Culbreth next.

The team then went to Pembroke College and scalped the Indians 64-55. A game between two home teams, the Seahawks of W. C. and the All Star Colonials, composed of College players who graduated from Wilmington, gave the fans a dazzling display of some fancy shooting. The Colonials outlasted the 'Hawks 74-63. The Seahawks got back on the winning side with a decisive triumph over E. M. I. Cadets 89-66. Louisburg topped the home team 64-47 at the homecoming game. The 'Hawks played one of their worst games of the season.

The Seahawks showed their stuff in the next home game, which was against Pembroke College with a 104-83 decision. Sonny Furlong led all players with a 38 point spree.

The last game of the season was a loss to Campbell in the N. C. J. C. C. Tournament at Shelby. But as we look over the past season, Wilmington College can only say — CONGRATULATIONS FOR A JOB WELL DONE.

The Wilmington College Seahawks traveled over 3,000 miles this past season.

Seahawks' Defeated In N.C.J.C.C. Tournament

The Seahawks' appearance in the North Carolina Junior College basketball tournament was brought to a quick end by Campbell College to the tune of 84-63. Coach Billy Brooks' combine led the victors throughout the first quarter which closed with the Seahawks ahead 17-15. In the second quarter the Camels took over and began pouring in points. At half-time, Campbell led, 43-27. After that the Seahawks were never in the game.

Smith Langdon, the high scoring guard of the victors, was the deciding factor in the game. He controlled both backboards and burned the nets for 20 points. Forward Sonny Furlong sparked the Seahawks with 21 points. Coach Billy Brooks' charges had a successful year, and THE SEAHAWK wishes him many more.

Night Classes

On January 22, 1952, second semester classes began at Wilmington College. This is the first time since classes have been held in the Isaac Bear that Freshmen have been offered classes at night. Enrolled for this term are people from Wilmington and the surrounding counties.

The classes are as follows:

Accounting 101 — Tues., and Thurs.—6:30-8:00, Miss Powell, instructor. Enrolled 15.

Typing 101 — Mon.-Fri.—5:30-6:30. Miss Powell, instructor. Enrolled 8.

Sociology — Mon., Wed., Fri.—5:00-6:00. Miss Johnson, instructor. Enrolled 21.

History 101 — Mon., Wed., Fri.—7:00-8:00. Mr. Gurganus, instructor. Enrolled 17.

English — Mon., Wed., Fri.—8:00-9:00. Mr. Cheek, instructor. Enrolled 17.

Math 101 — Tues., and Thurs.—7:00-8:30. Mr. Hurst, instructor. Enrolled 17.

These night classes enable men and women who have jobs or part-time jobs to attend.

Even though all these students are not able to take an active part in school functions, they are still an important part of Wilmington College.

Campus Chatter

Hi campus folks! They tell us that life gets awfully dull around the "house of higher education" but this can hardly be said about Wilmington College, for things seem to be happening somewhere, sometime and somehow.

Mr. Charlton, Fred Townsend, and Mr. Crews seem to enjoy their morning coffee in the lounge while talking over the latest findings in algebra. (Mr. Charlton really has made a hit in his class with his unusual findings in algebra. The answers he comes up with are amazing.

Say, did you know that we had a poker club in our college? Doug Felts, James Raynor and Don Anderson are the prominent members. If you ever hear shouting you'll know that they can't decide whether Doug won with a "flush" or James with a "full house." (Honestly sometimes you would think these boys had been brought up in some of the casinos in Florida).

Thomas Culbreth, Alex Robbins and Zeke Morton always seem to enjoy a topping by the lounge after a class to listen to some of the latest records. They especially like to see the peeved expressions on Peggy Land's, Jo Maultsby's, and Wanda Wither's faces when they interrupt their delight in studying to ask them to dance to "September Song" or "Unforgettable." C. L. Smith and Sonny Furlong can be heard talking over in a corner about the latest movies in town. If you ever have an occasion to know what is playing, just ask one of these characters. (They're well versed on the subject). The basketball team must have enjoyed the picture of the "Globetrotters" last week, because they saw it at least four times. (Must be trying to learn something about basketball. My, how they underrate Coach Brooks' intelligence).

WHO'S WHO

I walked into the game room yesterday just in time to see the end of a fast game of ping pong between Thomas Culbreth and Jimmy Medlin. Thomas was really hot with his slam and Medlin was having a hey day with his cuts. I was talking with Jimmy after the game and found out that Thomas lucked out on his "That game didn't prove anything. Lady Luck was just against me," breathed Jimmy. "I can beat him any time that Lady Luck isn't against me."

It's a shame having two disillusioned teachers around school. Mr. "Skinny" Wright and "Fly Head" Crews think that they are the Stan Musial and Ted Williams of ping pong. What they don't know is that all the students that they beat let them know. These students know that Stan and Ted take their ping pong seriously and probably would take it out on one's grades if he were to score more points than they. These students give up the glory of winning to humor our disillusioned faculty members.

Speaking of ping pong,—for a quarter, just one fourth of a dollar — you can enter the ping pong tournament. The standings are at the present time: Mr. Paul Wright, Alex Robbins, Thomas Culbreth, Bradford Murray, Bill Stromsoe, Ann Anderson, Kenneth Murphy, James Medlin, Ann Chadwick, James Raynor, Don Anderson, Fred Hight, Larry Lewis.

to his first school enrollment eligible for membership. Since James Walker Memorial Hospital School of Nursing is affiliated with the college, the student nurses are eligible to become members during their first year in the nursing school.

There are at present twenty-six members in the organization with two faculty advisors. The club officers are: president — Betty Johnson; vice-president — Duane Cheek; treasurer — Glenn Klutz, and secretary — Ed Williams. Its faculty advisors are Paul G. Wright of Wilmington College and Miss Miriam Browder of James Walker Memorial Hospital School of Nursing.

It is hoped that this organization will establish closer relationship between the out-of-town students and between these students and the City of Wilmington as well as help to solve problems common to out-of-town students. The club is new, having been formed in 1950. All students interested in joining it are invited to attend the meetings which are held twice a month alternately between the college and the nurses' home.

THREE STUDENTS ATTEND ASSEMBLY IN CAPITAL CITY

Three Wilmington College students attended the model United Nations Assembly in Raleigh recently. Representing the college were Linda Hines, Susan Parsons, and Dick Feagin. Sponsored by State College, this assembly was the first of its type to be held in this area. Each college sending delegates represented a certain country in the General Assembly and various committee meetings. Our delegation represented the country of Greece.

The first gathering of all the delegates was at the General Assembly which met at the Capitol Building. The delegates were welcomed by Dott Morton, secretary-general of the model assembly, and Mrs. Roy N. Anderson, president of the Raleigh chapter of the A.A.U.N.

A short address was given by Mr. Allard Lowenstein, former field secretary of the Collegiate Council for the U.N. The meeting was presided over by the field secretary for the C.C.U.N., Miss Constance Curry. After this meeting the delegates went to the State College Union Building to see the film, "Campus United Nations," about a model assembly held in California.

Dick Feagin represented Wilmington College and Greece in the Economic and Social Committee. Susan Parsons represented the college in the Ad Hoc Committee, and Linda Hines represented the college in the Political and Security Committee. In the Economic Committee, Greece succeeded in getting a resolution passed condemning Great Britain for its action in Cyprus. While this resolution did not pass the General Assem-

College To Have New School Song

Wilmington College has been in existence for ten years and is still without a school song, but not for long. The Student Council recently requested that the Penpushers Club assume the task of writing a suitable song. This club accepted the responsibility, and on November 12, presented a rough draft that received many favorable comments from the Council members.

The members of the Penpushers Club have stated that a school song should express the students' feelings and admiration for their alma mater.

In addition to the writing of a school song, this club has written a "fight" song for use at athletic events. This song will be one of the feature events at the Rally Week before the first home basketball game.

by Saturday morning, it was an accomplishment to get it past the committee.

Dr. Alvin C. Bahnsen, vice-president of the Southern New York Region of the American Association for the U.N., was the speaker at the banquet held in the N. C. State College Cafeteria for the Assembly delegates.

Delegates, representing 24 countries, gathered in the House for final General Plenary sessions. The purpose of this session was to pass the resolution presented by the three committees.

The delegation from North Carolina College, representing the U.S.S.R., did much to make the model assembly seem like a real U.N. assembly by stalling and delaying the vote on resolutions.

George Lyons, faculty advisor, accompanied the students on the trip.

Plans To Bring College Under State Control Discussed At Meeting of Band Boosters Club

Plans for bringing Wilmington College under the state Community College Act in February were outlined this week by Mrs. Addison Hewlett, Jr., county legislative chairman of the Parent-Teacher Association. She was a speaker on the five-member panel that explained an $8,575,000 bond issue that will be put to a vote in New Hanover County next year. The panel appeared before about 70 persons assembled at a meeting of the New Hanover High School Band Boosters Club in the high school band room.

The bond issue would provide $6,425,000 for a new hospital, $1,550,000 for county schools, and $600,000 for Wilmington College.

Mrs. Hewlett spoke about the bond issue as it is related to Wilmington College and briefly outlined the history of the Community College Act passed by the last session of the North Carolina General Assembly. The February election would place Wilmington College under this new law and provide $600,000 for capital improvements.

She explained that control of the college would then shift from the New Hanover County Board of Education to a board of trustees. The $600,000 voted by the citizens of New Hanover County would then be matched by state funds.

Operating Expense

Mrs. Hewlett also stated that the college would receive, in addition to the $600,000 for capital improvement from the state, about $60,000 each year for operating expenses. The college would continue to receive the support from the county tax levy voted by the citizens of New Hanover County in 1947.

Under the state's Community College Act, control of the college would still remain in local hands. Members of the new board of trustees would be appointed as follows: four by the New Hanover County Board of Education, two by the Wilmington City Council, two by the

COLLEGE REGISTERS 432 STUDENTS FROM WIDE AREA

The foreign countries of Mexico and Thailand as well as ten of the 48 states are represented in the autumn quarter's enrollment here, college officials announced recently.

College Registrar J. M. Crews disclosed that of the 432 regular students enrolled for the fall quarter, 413 were from North Carolina and 17 were from other states. Of the 413 North Carolina students present, there are 31 counties outside of New Hanover represented. Pender, Brunswick, Columbus, Duplin, and Onslow are supplying the largest numbers.

Crews stated further that the 432 enrollment figure for this quarter was slightly below the 478 number for the same period last year, but went on to say that he expected the number of different students registering throughout the year to reach the 650 total which was set during the 1956-57 year.

He also explained that the small drop in registration this quarter resulted from a smaller group of nurses and fewer G.I.'s enrolled due to the fact that their Bill of Rights is nearing an end. Enrolled this quarter are 91 men veterans and one woman veteran. Crews further asserted that there were actually more full time students just out of high school than before, which was a definite sign of the college's growth.

Crews stressed the fact that all figures given included only the regular students and nurses and did not include any adult education courses offered by the college.

Of the number enrolled here, 41 are nurses and the remainder are classified as regular students. A breakdown of the enrollment shows that there are 302 men (178 freshmen and 126 sophomores) and 130 women (29 sophomores, 60 freshmen, and 41 nurses) registered. This approximate ratio of 2 to 1 is about the same as last year the registrar declared.

The approximate enrollment figures for the past ten years are

Wilcol Student Presented At Citadel Football Game

A Wilmington College student was named one of the Homecoming Sponsors at The Citadel in Charleston, S. C., recently. ABILITY OF COLLEGE DEAN REVEALED IN VERSATILITY

Our Dean is certainly a man of versatile ability, as is seen by his many accomplishments. His work has taken him about the globe from Cairo, Egypt, to Casablanca, Morocco.

While looking over his past, we find that Dean Randall was born on August 6, 1899, at Belleville, Michigan. From the University of Michigan he received his A.B. and M.A. degrees. At Harvard Theological Seminary he was awarded his Ph.D. in philosophy, summa cum laude, in 1929. Dr. Randall's thesis was an "Annotated Catalog of Arabian Collection of Arabic Manuscripts."

During World War II, he served as a lieutenant colonel with the Air Force and with Military Intelligence. His tour of duty took him through the Mediterranean area, the Middle East, and North Africa.

During his career in the education field, he has been dean of students and director of libraries of the University of Georgia, and academic dean of the U. S. Merchant Marine Academy. He was a member of a committee sent to reorganize the Vatican Library at Rome. Dr. Randall is a master of languages, having taught 31 languages, and speaking eight fluently. He has written several books on library science.

Dr. Randall is listed in WHO'S WHO IN EDUCATION and also in WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA.

He became Dean of Wilmington College in the fall of 1951.

STUDENT NURSE

Congratulations, student nurse! You are now cast in one of the world's most challenging roles, and now carrying two loads, that of student and nurse. In choosing this career you have expressed your desire to serve all humanity. Remember, "the service of man is the service of God."

What are some qualifications for a good nurse? The determination of a taxi driver, the assurance of a college boy, the energy of a bill collector, and most of all a highly developed sense of humor. What kind of nurse will you be with this as a criteria? The world pictures two extremes in nurses: a "Sairey Gamp," dedicated to sin and uselessness, or a Florence Nightingale dedicated to the high calling of her vocation. Your role as a student will be the mold for your nursing career.

You wear on your wrist a watch with a sweep second hand, the purpose of which is not only to check the pulse of a patient, but to measure each fleeting moment of your school life. To make your college days more rewarding, take an active part in school activities; choose the best organization in which you can develop your talents, become acquainted with your fellow college students, use every opportunity to create lasting friendships, for your college campus is a miniature world with wonderful students who represent each part of life.

NOVEMBER

November is the eleventh month of our calendar year. The month was named by the Romans from the Latin word novem, which means nine. The reason for this is that November, in the Roman calendar, was the ninth month of the year. The number of days in the month have varied from 29 to 31.

This month has as its flower the chrysanthemum, and as its stone the topaz. During this month we celebrate Thanksgiving Day and Veterans Day. All of us know why we celebrate Thanksgiving Day, but how many of us know why we observe Veterans Day? World War I ended on this day, November 11, 1918.

There are a number of famous people who were born in this month. Some of them are: James K. Polk, Mark Twain, Martin Luther, George Eliot, Daniel Boone, James A. Garfield, Zachary Taylor, Warren G. Harding, and Robert Louis Stevenson.

Important events which have happened in this month are too numerous to mention; however, here are some: the Marine Corps was organized in 1775; the controversial Suez Canal was opened in 1869; Lincoln made his famous address in 1863 at Gettysburg.

THE LIBRARY

The library is the place where you go when you want to know something, whether what you want to know is "Have you seen Bill?" or "What year did Thomas Jefferson die?"

Many of the people who come in with questions never have to ask them. They have had enough experience with libraries to know that by looking under the "J's" in any of our several sets of encyclopedias they can find an article on Thomas Jefferson that will give the date of his death and quite a bit of other information. If the person actually wants to know more than the date of death and other pertinent biographical facts, he goes to the card catalog, looks up Jefferson, Thomas, and finds the title and author of the book written about Jefferson. Then, guided by the letters and numbers in the upper left hand corner of the catalog card, he goes to the shelf and selects his book. If this student has a good memory, he returns the book within 14 days after he borrows it. If his memory fails him, he finds himself paying three cents a day for each day he keeps it out over two weeks.

For the convenience of the English students, the library keeps a shelf of reserve books handy by the door. It's best to have an excellent memory when using reserve books. The fine is ten cents a day, each day they're late.

For the new students and any old students who may have forgotten this word of advice: return your overdue books and pay your fines early. You will not be allowed to take your exams until you are clear with the library. A list of those students who have a deficit will be posted shortly before exams.

Trinity College
Faculty Approves
No Limit On Cuts

HARTFORD, Conn. (I.P.)—Faculty member sat Trinity College have approved an unlimited cuts proposal for the 1957-58 academic year. Absence privileges do not apply to the attendance requirement for Chapel and Physical Education. There are no restrictions before a holiday recess, but students are responsible at all times for assigned work.

Two other changes in the academic rules were promulgated: Effective with the class entering in September, 1957, any student who has not received at the end of a term passing grades in four courses with grades of at least seventy in two of these courses will be placed on probation for the following term.

The faculty also voted to tighten the "D" rule. In order to enter his junior year, a student must have grades of 70 in at least five full courses or the equivalent in one semester course.

In another local move to strengthen the scholarship picture, the Interfraternity Council has voted to raise the average for pledging to 70. The motion states that no man shall be pledged to a fraternity after the entrance of the Class of '61 unless he shall have a 70 average at the conclusion of the semester prior to his pledging.

Commenting on the status of fraternities on this campus, Dean of Students Joseph C. Clarke stated that "the faculty and the administration are in favor of fraternities, unlike many other colleges."

To the Editor:

The storm of controversy which has raged on the editorial pages of the state newspapers over the actions of the State Student Legislature recently is due in large measure to misreporting, misstatements, and misinterpretation. Over the course of the last 12 years, the State Student Legislature has done a great deal of good in both giving students the experience of meeting with students from other colleges to discuss the issues of the day and in teaching these students the responsibilities that go along with government. It has become a body unique in the United States and one of which the State of North Carolina can well be proud.

The University of North Carolina has a great tradition of respecting the rights of students to vote various convictions regardless of whether or not they anger, criticize, or disagree. Though they were not elected specifically for this meeting, many of the students here who went were responsible leaders in other positions on the campus, and they split on many of the votes just as the student body would split if a vote were taken.

When a newspaper, such as the Raleigh News and Observer, does not report the truth from an assembly such as this, then we students are virtually powerless. Contrary to the newspaper account, the highly talked about

Temple University
Tries New Method

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. (I.P.)—Temple University's foreign language department will institute a laboratory for first year language students, beginning this year. It will be the first of its kind in this area. Forty booths will line the interior of the laboratory.

The students will enter a booth and turn a channel selector to the language he is studying. For approximately three minutes a specially-made recording will be piped into the booth. When the recording is finished, it will automatically repeat itself without the use of any playback devices.

Each first year language student will be required to visit the laboratory for 20 minutes, three times a week. The booth time will be in addition to three hours of lecture. The labs are designed to help the students gain the benefits of private study.

The recordings will consist almost entirely of questions and answers spoken in the foreign language. A pause after each question will enable the students to answer the questions themselves and check their answer with the record for accuracy.

A variety of voices and accents will appear on the records made by members of the language department and native-speaking people. Students will listen to the same recordings for one week and then the recording will be changed. The recordings are based on textbook material studied in class. A five dollar laboratory fee will be charged.

Dr. Hartbook said, "as many practical phrases as possible will be incorporated into the recording to give students the context, idioms, vocabulary and verb forms that they will use most."

legalized prostitution bill failed by an overwhelming majority in both the House and the Senate; in fact, it was not even on the official agenda, but came up from an individual on the floor of the assembly. The bill to delete all laws preventing intermarriage of races, introduced by Duke University and debated for several hours, was an effort by the students not either to condemn or condone but to protect the civil liberties of the individual. The obscenity bill denied the unwise censorship rights of sheriffs in the individual counties to determine arbitrarily what was obscene and did not abolish all obscenity laws in the State, an impression which many people received.

It is a shame that much of the good done by the students who conducted themselves responsibly has been lost in the shuffle of an unjustified controversy. SSL condemned Governor Fausbush for his flaunting of the court order and his disregard for the law of the land and thus became one of the few official voices in the South to speak out for the people of Little Rock who elected their Board of Education and sided with the judge.

It is our hope that the people of North Carolina understand that the sensationalism surrounding the State Student Legislature is unjustified and is a product of newspaper irresponsibility. There is nothing to be ashamed of when students conduct themselves sensibly and with conviction, believing in the freedom of expression for which this University and the State have always stood.

Lenoir-Rhyne Plans
Long-range Program
To Enlarge College

HICKORY, N. C. (I.P.)—An ambitious plan for a long-range development program for Lenoir Rhyne College, which extends through 1970 entailing nearly nine million dollars, has been approved by the Board of Trustees and the North Carolina Synod of the United Lutheran Church in America.

The proposed development program is to be divided into three phases: 1956-60; 1961-65; and 1966-70. The master plan has been devised under the direction of Dr. Orville Dahl, Educational Consultant. Dr. Dahl has been making an extensive study of the facilities here since early 1956.

He pointed out that Lenoir Rhyne has experienced an enrollment increase of 100 per cent during the last decade, as compared with the national gain of about 50 per cent. The expert also figured that the local campus would have approximately 1,500 students by 1970.

Estimated costs of the total program is $8,888,000. This figure can be broken down into first phase, $3,117,000; second phase, $2,416,000; third phase, $2,355,000; and endowment fund increase, 1,000,000.

According to Dr. Dahl, the purpose of the survey was to "obtain a careful but imaginative analysis of the physical plant and its disposition on the

To the Editor:

For your outstanding work in publishing the first printed newspaper in the history of Wilmington College, I congratulate you!

This is not only a sign of our progress during the past eleven years, but also a sign that through the joint efforts of our students, we will continue to progress to a point that Wilmington College will not be surpassed by any college in this state. Our history is not as colorful or as long as that of other schools; however, as we grow, our school will grow. Through the SEAHAWK, I know that this school's prestige will gain in the community, state, and nation.

May the cooperation of the faculty, students, and community be yours throughout the year.

Texas University
Likes TV Chem

AUSTIN, Texas (I.P.)—Both students and instructors have given the experimental use of televised chemistry laboratories a passing grade at the University of Texas, according to a report released here. During the past year, students in selected laboratory sections of a general chemistry course viewed demonstrations through TV sets, thus having a front-row seat for every experiment.

Students in the TV sections progressed faster on experiments requiring manipulations of any sort. For laboratory lectures involving exposition of facts, they found little difference in the progress of the students in the televised and regular sections.

The students, by and large, preferred the television method of instruction to the regular classrooms. The new teaching method presents a real challenge to the instructors, who said they felt the advantage of showing minute details to a large classroom outweighed technical problems and other obstacles encountered. The drawbacks include a tremendous amount of preparation for the television sections and the inability to observe student reaction.

"The camera eye is very impersonal and the only way to judge how the lecture is going over with the students is from past teaching experience," Dr. Shaw observed. "And part of the advance preparation involves double-checking for materials required in the experiment, because it is very embarrassing to discover you have forgotten a beaker that you need."

The report forecasts wider use of classroom TV in the future, envisioning possibilities of coupling the television camera with a microscope or telescope, or teaching a slide-rule course. "Our feeling is that in no sense will television replace the conventional classroom, but TV can be used very efficiently to supplement regular lectures," the faculty members indicated in their report.

campus property, the integration of new principles into the design and function of existing and contemplated buildings, the relationship of these facilities and the curriculum and program developments."

Sports Chatter

By Dick Feagin

A'Ho'y there mates, welcome to our first issue of the SEAHAWK. We'll do our best to give you the best coverage of the sports both on the local and the national scenes. I would like to say here and now, if anyone is interested in writing a good sports column, please get in touch with me as soon as possible.

According to the reports that I have received from Bill Brooks, our cage mentor, we should have a good squad on the hardwoods this season. Probably most of you have seen several of these strangers jolling around the hall of our fine institution. Some of the games that we have on the schedule for this year may seem a little rough, but I think if we can get more school spirit and really be a third team for the boys on the squad, we will go places.

I have found that behind any successful team in any sport there is a lot of consideration and team spirit. Here at WC we have lost some of this zeal, but this year I am certain that this is going to be revolutionized and the greatest per cent of the student body will really be behind our school team as they represent US, YOU and ME. The only way that this can be accomplished is for each of us to make the resolution to do our best to push with every ounce of energy to see that they are backed "to the hilt." Do you know who will benefit? It comes right back to you and me, the students. Help us put this college on the popular side all over the eastern coast. Let's show people we are here and driving hard.

Seahawk Tennis Coach Announces Tennis Ladder For 1958 Season

A tennis ladder has been set up by Tanky Meier, the coach of the college team last year. The Seahawks won four and lost only two matches during last year's season, the two losses being to the championship team of Campbell College who didn't lose a single match last year. The ladder shown below will give a general idea of who the top players are at the college. The ladder so far is as follows:

1. Jerry Taylor
2. Ray Hock
3. Charles Hunnicutt
4. Ray Hoar
5. Duke Purnell
6. Frank Thompson

Anyone who thinks he can beat the number six man can challenge him, and if he is beaten, can take his place in the number six spot. No one can challenge any higher than the man above him; therefore, no one can reach the top five without beating the number six man. Anyone in the top five can challenge the player above him. If a player is challenged and agrees on a certain time and doesn't show up, he automatically forfeits his position on the ladder.

The tennis season will start in the spring. A notice will be placed on the bulletin board before practice begins. Taylor was the outstanding player last year, having been defeated only by Dick Makepiece, one of the best players in the state. Charles Hunnicutt had the highest average of .800, losing only one match to Doug Perry of Campbell.

All students interested in tennis are urged to participate in this sport in order that Wilmington College might maintain its fine record.

BROOKS COACHING 6TH YEAR

Coach Bill Brooks led his Wilmington College Seahawks against Presbyterian College at Maxton last Tuesday night. Now in his sixth year as basketball coach at the college, Coach Brooks is looking forward to a good season with a taller team and eight returning veterans.

Seven Students Picked To Lead Cheering At Cage Games

Cheerleaders for the 1957-58 school year were chosen in the Wilmington College auditorium recently. Student Council President, Gene Trondsen, presided over the meeting in which seven students, six girls and one boy, were selected to lead Seahawk fans at all athletic activities. Students selected by the judges were James Robertson (Head Cheerleader), Judy Rhodes, Phyllis Roper, Frances Creech, Jean Jones, Maurine Scott, and Barbara McSwain.

Ability, poise, appearance, and personality were the main points on which the students were judged. President Trondsen asked that each participant explain why they desired to become cheerleaders. Although the answers varied slightly, each one pointed out an interest in school spirit and sportsmanship.

Seventeen students took part in the contest in which five of these were eliminated in the round. Of the remaining twelve, four were chosen unanimously. After more observation, the other three were chosen.

Each cheerleader expressed excitement and joy at being given the chance to represent the college. One new cheerleader "cooed" that she "was just tickled to death."

A subsequent meeting was held in the auditorium, this one for the purpose of choosing uniforms and being measured for them. White, long sleeve, ribbed-neck sweaters with white and green pleated skirts and green tights were decided upon.

A description of each of the cheerleaders may be helpful for those not acquainted with the individuals:

black hair, is 5'9" tall, and has green eyes. Judy Rhodes, a sophomore, is majoring in language. Her hair and eyes are brown, and she stands 5'6" tall. Phyllis Roper, another sophomore, has black hair, blue eyes, is 5'3", and is studying business. Barbara McSwain is a freshman studying secondary education. Barbara has dark brown hair, blue eyes, and is 5'7".

Maurine Scott is a freshman studying business. She is 5'3", has blonde hair and blue eyes. Jean Jones, a sophomore, is also taking a business course. Her hair and eyes are light brown. She stands 5'3". Frances Creech, another freshman, plans to teach. With blueish-gray eyes, brown hair, and a height of 5'4", Frances completes the cheering squad.

Members of the squad have urged that each student and every possible fan be present and ready to help support the school's athletic program this year.

Guard Jerry Taylor traveled to Maxton last Tuesday night with his Seahawk teammates to play against Presbyterian College. Taylor is 5'9" and is playing his second year with the Wilmington College quintet.

Wilcol Pre-clinical Students Acknowledged Student Nurses

Twenty-five pre-clinical women students attending classes at Wilmington College have been acknowledged as student nurses at James Walker Memorial Hospital this quarter.

Recognition came as a result of their having completed the required classroom work at the college and hospital. The student nurses attend classes five days each week. On Saturday they practice administering care to the sick in the hospital. They begin by rising at 8:30 a.m. and go on duty at 9:00 a.m. They continue their routine work until 11:00 a.m.

Each Saturday at 10:00 a.m. is considered the "big" hour. The students are then able to go home for the weekend-end to see their families and friends.

Student nurses come from all walks of life and places. The 25 student nurses are listed as follows: Shirley Barnhill, Wilmington; Elizabeth Best, Goldsboro; Martha Bledsoe, New Bern; Ann Collins, Jacksonville, Florida; Bessie Cooper, Goldsboro; Patricia Cox, Tabor City; Sarah Cuthrell, Aurora; Sandra Grice, Calypso; Francis Harrison, Burgaw.

Kathy Heath, Richlands; Jeanette Herring, Clinton; Judy Herring, Richlands; Anna Hobbs, Lake Waccamaw; Linda Haffner, Tabor City; Marjorie Hampton, Richlands; Nancy Jackson, Delco; Betty Larkins, Acme; Maryanna Paul, New Bern; Juanita Pierce, Mayville; Gwen Ray, Princeton; Sue Ravenhark, Wallace; Priscilla Russ, Southport; Carole Stevens, Tabor City; Dora Willis, Atlantic; and Virginia Raines, Wilmington.

pus, judge yourselves by the curve, compare yourselves to your fellows... you will be insufferable strutting egotists," he said. "If the only vision you have this day is a ranch house with a two car garage and security in your old age, you are grading on the curve," he continued, "and that curve is always eventually downward."

Living "on the curve" should be replaced with the humility of working for "the unattainable standard" through the ethics of love and aspiration, he concluded.

Yale Prof Warns Against "Curve"

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (I.P.) — Speaking about standards of excellence by which students, citizens or nations may judge themselves, Rev. Brynne Barr of the Yale Divinity School recently warned against values set by comparison with others when he equated with grading examinations on a "curve."

Quoting from the 12th chapter of 1 Corinthians, "...and yet show I unto you a more excellent way," he stressed his theme of attempting to live by a higher standard of excellence than merely doing slightly better than others.

If "scholars, prize-winners, honorsgraduates, VIP's or cam-

Iowa State Works On Honor System

AMES, Ia. (I.P.) — Until an honor system can be worked out that would be satisfactory, Dr. Ray Kottman, associate dean of agriculture at Iowa State College, suggests several things that instructors here can do to eliminate cheating in their classes.

1. Alternate tests for alternate weeks.

2. One or more monitors in the room at all times during the test—these monitors to actually patrol the room and not read a newspaper while the exam is held.

3. Old exams available to all students in classes so that all students will have equal opportunity to study old tests.

4. Departmental committees to review tests before they are given so as to make sure that questions cover the principles involved, not mere trivia.

Another aid urged by Dr. Kottman is that all organized residences keep an up-to-date file of used tests. He noted that there are several ways of learning the principles involved in a course, and that sometimes studying old tests is one of the easiest.

Upperclassmen At Brown Assist Freshmen Students

PROVIDENCE, R. I. (I.P.) — A unique experimental student teaching project is underway at Brown University this year, where 20 senior engineering students have been assigned to counsel and assist in the teaching of the 100 freshmen entering the engineering division.

Each student teacher supervises the work of a group of five freshmen, giving one hour a week to a special class for discussion of the basic course, attending lectures with the new students and giving each freshman a half-hour personal conference each week. They will also grade homework and go over the students' papers with them. They will be paid $600 for the year's work.

Date To Be Set

Exact date for the election has not been set by the County Commissioners, but it is expected that they will decide on the date at their meeting Monday of next week.

SCHOOL SONG NOW COMPLETE

For the first time in the history of Wilmington College a school song has been completed. The song is an Alma Mater written by Charles Hunnicutt and set to music by Loyd Hudson.

Before the Alma Mater was accepted it was approved by the office and student council. The student body must now vote to accept or reject this presentation.

Here are the words of the song:
Hail, We proudly sing to thee who guides our green and gold.

Through future years may part us, fond memories we shall hold. (Chorus)

Here we stand as one together, voices raised in song.
Our loyal hearts will praise thee as God thou lead us on.

(Chorus)
For our hearts will cherish,
All your service done,
Hail to thee Alma Mater,
Praise to Wilmington.

NEWS BRIEFS

The annual Christmas party of the Wilmington College faculty was held in the "Pub" last week. Gifts were exchanged and refreshments were served. Bridge and Canasta served as entertainment for the group.

Miss Cathrine Noyes, Duncan Randall, and George Roundtree served as decoration committee for the event. The planning committee included Mrs. Helena Cheek and George Roundtree.

Results of today's elections of Senior Superlatives will be announced at the Annual Christmas Dance to be held in the Cape Fear Ballroom on December 20, 1957.

The categories being considered are: best all around, most dependable, most likely to succeed, most athletic, most intellectual, best personality and others.

Plans for the Freshman Class project have been postponed until after Christmas holidays. The admission at the dances after each home game is going to be used for the purchase of new furniture for the first floor lobby of the college.

Tentative plans are being formulated to hold a dance each Saturday night in the "Pub." These dances will also be sponsored by the Freshman Class.

Recently the Student Telephone Directories were distributed to the students. This directory was under the sponsorship of the Circle K Club of Wilmington College.

Under the capable leadership of Paul Ruark, the typist and proofreaders were James Lanier, Donald Lennon and David Barefoot.

Copies of the directory are available in the office to all students. If you have not received yours as yet please do so at your earliest convenience.

Holidays begin December 20, classes will resume January 2, 1958!

These Wilmington College Cheerleaders cheered the Seahawks to victory Tuesday, December 17 — see page three.

Bond Issue Discussed At Faculty Meeting

ENGINEERS NEED SOCIAL STUDIES

BOSTON, Mass. (I.P.) — Changes have been made in the curricula of engineering students at Northeastern University to allow them to penetrate more deeply into phases of liberal arts studies in which they are interested, according to Dr. William C. White, president.

The new arrangement, approved after a long study by the faculty, will insure that all engineers have a more intensified introduction to certain fundamental fields of humanistic-social studies, which will comprise about a fifth of their courses, Dr. White said.

However, the freshman schedule will remain unchanged, he added. Engineers will have the opportunity to elect a three-term sequence in one of four fields: philosophy and ethics, literature, fine arts or music.

Context and sequence of courses in upper class years have been altered to meet the changing needs of professional education in the field of engineering, Dr. White explained.

The amount of time given to mathematics and physics has been increased. In addition to courses in classical physics, engineering students will be given an introduction to nuclear science and to other aspects of modern physics.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS

Engineers Club meets third Monday of each month at 6:30 p.m., Famous Club Restaurant.

Romance Language Club meets every other Thursday, 8:30 p.m.; college.

Circle K Club meet first and third Wednesday, 6:30 p.m.; Famous Club Restaurant.

Pen Pushers Club meets each Tuesday, 2:30 p.m.; Room 202; college.

Christmas Dance
December 20, Cape Fear Hotel Ballroom, 8:00 p.m.
Adult Education Banquet,
January 15.

The forthcoming bond issue was discussed recently at a faculty meeting here at the college.

Dr. Randall related that the Board of Education appeared before the County Commissioners to urge them to set a date for the bond issue vote as the bill stipulates that each college must qualify as a community college before June 30, 1958.

It is now the understanding of the Board that this matter will be taken care of at the next meeting of the County Commissioners. A series of meetings and articles have been planned to publicize and explain the bond issue and its relation to Wilmington College.

Dr. Randall explained further that even though this bill is for a two year community college, legislation may be urged at a later date to amend the bill so that we may become a four year college if the taxpayers are willing to support a four year college. He also asked that the faculty help make the public aware of the vote, in essence, is to transfer the control of Wilmington College from the Board of Education to a Board of Trustees.

The tax is not being increased but — a tax that already exists is being transferred.

In case that this bill is not passed by the voters, the College will revert to the status quo.

Engineers Club Plan Tours

Preliminary plans to tour several local industries were made at a recent meeting of the Wilmington College Engineers Club.

The meeting was attended by several members of the Wilmington Engineers Club who were interested in assisting the college organization in its activities.

Among places the engineer students are planning to visit are the Louis V. Sutton Steam Generating Plant at Mt. Hiler, the Babcock and Wilcox Boiler Plant, and the Sunny Point Ammunition Terminal.

The meeting was held at the Famous Club.

Yearbook Plans Show Progress

Christmas Dance To Be Held Tomorrow Night

The annual Christmas Dance for the students of Wilmington College will be held tomorrow evening in the Cape Fear Hotel Ballroom.

Ray Spencer and his combo will provide the music for the event, along with some special entertainment not yet announced.

Many of the students have been working hard to help make this affair a success. Some of these people are: Sandra Pluta, Iris Britt, Linda Hines, Jay Cardy, Pat Waddell and Marty Land, with Louise Floyd as chairman.

Tickets are now on sale for 1.50 in the college Pub and also at Payne's Men's Shop, downtown. Festivities will get underway at 8:00 P.M. and conclude at midnight.

Johnson Chosen Personality of Month

The college faculty personality chosen for this issue of the Seahawk is a lady who has dedicated her entire life to the education of the youth of our state. Miss Mildred Johnson, small and graying, has been head of the Social Studies Department of Wilmington College since it first opened its doors in 1947 and has been teaching school since she began teaching in the Baptist Orphanage as a young girl.

Miss Johnson was born and grew up on a farm in Northampton County, North Carolina. She received her A. B. degree at Atlantic Christian College and her masters degree at East Carolina College. She also did postgraduate work at Peabody College and studied in Europe in 1953 under the supervision of Chicago University.

Before coming to Wilmington College, she taught, among other places, at East Carolina summer school and was the head of the Social Studies Department at New Hanover High School.

One of the personal philosophies of teaching which has gained Miss Johnson the admiration and respect of her students is the belief that for a student to do his best he must be perfectly at ease in the classroom. She also attempts to gain the students' interest in the subject by telling experiences and sidelights to the subjects which are not covered in the textbook. In this way the historical figures become true living people instead of just names in a history book.

Among the subjects which Miss Johnson instructs are European history, ancient history, modern world history, North Carolina history and government.

Editor of the Fledgling, Bob Shaffer, has announced that individual pictures will be taken of the student body the early part of January by a representative of Delmar Publishing Company.

Previewing the 1958 annual, Shaffer added that the book will have many and varied changes than those of previous years. The cover, which has already been chosen and ordered, is distinctively modern in design. This change is carried on throughout the entire book in balancing and planning the pages.

He estimated that the new yearbook will contain approximately 100 pages and that only 150 copies will be ordered. He suggested that all those interested in purchasing an annual should order one as soon as possible. The subscriptions cost $4.00 — with a deposit of $2.00 and the balance upon receipt of the book.

Shaffer also said that he is highly pleased with the cooperation he is receiving from his staff. Members of his staff are: Larry Knowles, business manager; Peggy Aldridge, secretary; Sheila Robinson, Gehring Spencer, and Charles King, assistants.

LYONS HEADS POLIO DRIVE

GEORGE LYONS

George Lyons, assistant professor of social sciences at Wilmington College, will head the 1958 March of Dimes drive for New Hanover County. This drive will begin the first of January and continue throughout the month.

Lyons, a South Carolinian by birth, began teaching at Wilmington College in 1956 after working in Washington, D. C., for several years. He has a B.S. degree in social sciences and an M. A. degree in educational administration, both of which he received from East Carolina College.

Assisting in this drive will be the Circle K Club of Wilmington College. Earl Allen, president of the club, reports that the club will help with the "mile of dimes" portion of the drive.

Attempts Made To Improve Engineers' English

EAST LANSING, Mich. (I.P.) — Michigan State University's pioneer practice of attempting to improve written and spoken English among engineering students is now in its sixth year. In September 1952, M.S.U. organized an All-College Committee on English to study measures to improve language usage by students.

Evidences of Dr. Charles O. Harris, head of the department of applied mechanics and chairman of the committee, work are very apparent in his department. Student tests have been changed from the long, comprehensive problem type to a test in which a student is given an opportunity to express himself. Ten questions are included in the new tests and are usually evenly divided between problem and essays.

During each course three or four one-hour tests of 10 questions each are given in addition to a final examination of 20 questions and two hours in length. The old tests consisted of two or three problems which were involved and carried the student from one step to another.

The department also keeps track of each question that is asked, the number of times it is asked and the grade average each student makes. By this method they are able to check the validity of each question and the performance of student, class and instructor.

Not only do the tests encourage more writing, but as Prof. Harris points out, they are fairer for the student and cover the material better. "The students write more, we're surer of their grade and they seem to like it," Dr. Harris summed up. "The first tests usually have some spelling and grammatical errors, but when the students find out we are checking them, there is a big improvement."

December

December is, perhaps, the most loved month of the year because of the Christmas holiday. December 25, which is a reverent and joyous occasion.

December is a word that is derived from the Latin word decem which means ten. This month was once the tenth month of the year, but now is the twelfth and last month.

In New England, Forefathers' Day is observed on December 21 to honor the Pilgrims who landed and settled at Plymouth in 1620.

An event that has changed our world so much in the last 50 years happened here, in the (Continued on Page 4, Col. 4)

From The Editor's Desk

Congratulations!

You, the students and the faculty members of Wilmington College who have sacrificed your time to the founding of all the different clubs around school, deserve hearty congratulations.

Wilmington College, being a relatively young college, has devoted more of its time to the acquiring of qualified professors during the past ten years rather than to the developing of clubs and student activities. It's up to us, the students, to initiate and support the clubs in which we're interested. We have a faculty here who is willing to work with us, but they are limited as to what they can do alone.

Extra curricular activities should play an important role in every student's college life. Sure, we're all busy and have other responsibilities, but what difference could a few hours a month make? Let's all support our newly formed clubs!

Let's Pause

"For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

All this shall be a sign unto you: ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger."

Luke 2:11-12

These few verses from the book of life, remind us once again of the story of Christ's birth, which, although decades old, will always be of great significance for Christians throughout the world.

In a few days most of you will be on your separate ways to reunite with your families and loved ones for the holidays. Before returning to classes on January 2, let's ask ourselves an important question, "Are we making the very best out of our college years?" Since the new year is a traditional time for making resolutions, let's strive to complete the last two quarters in this school year in such a way that in future years we will be proud to say that we attended Wilmington College.

On behalf of the faculty and the Seahawk staff, we wish you the students of Wilmington College a very Merry Christmas and an "educational" New Year!

News Briefs From U. N. C.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (I.P.) — Dean of Student Affairs Fred Weaver at the University of North Carolina recently solicited the cooperation of student government "in the study of why it is that student fail?" One problem now plaguing the administration, he said, is that only 45 per cent of those who enter the University graduate.

He pointed out that the new representation scheme which includes top student government leaders in the Chancellor's Cabinet for the first time has already made advances on the student parking problem and has investigated the problems concerning construction of a new student union building.

Student Body President Sonny Evans has called attendance at the Chancellor's Cabinet meetings "a new era in administrative and student government relations," here. He said the student body "owes an im-

Christmas Customs Around The World

By Linda Voss

Christmas is the only one of the world's holidays that is common to all lands. Even though it is celebrated differently in many lands, its true meaning is "peace and goodwill."

Through Great Britain, Christmas is the great time of the year. It is the season when scattered families are reunited and when friend greets friend in cheery friendliness. Because of an old British tradition, the families go to a religious service followed by a quiet family reunion.

To Germany we owe the Christmas tree and the maintenance of the best of the old customs. The tree is the central object in the German home. On Christmas day at 6 P.M. the door of the Christmas room flies open, and the tree is revealed to the impatient, admiring family.

Christmas in Holland is of particular interest. In all towns and villages at midnight on Christmas Eve, the men, in varied costumes, meet in the principal squares, chanting the "Gloria in Excelsis." A large star, symbolical of the star that guided the wise men of the East, is mounted on a pole. The scene is deeply impressive.

Christmas in Italy centers around the church. Mothers gather and urge their little ones to recite their hymns of praise to the Madonna and Child. There are generally no gifts, and there is no Santa Claus in Italy. These come at Epiphany, January 6, commemorating the visit of the wise men of the East to the infant Christ.

In France, as in Italy, Christmas has not the same status as in other lands. The sweet custom of making gifts for the poor is carried out. The children all receive Christmas boxes. There is the custom of blessing the Christmas log, which is placed upon the fireplace before the table where the family will dine.

In Belgium a beautiful spectacle may be seen on Christmas Eve. Children of all ages, each dressed in a distinctive hue—white, blue, pink, or yellow, form part of a lovely pageant which moves through the streets to the music of sweet orchestral harmony and chanting of Christmas carols.

No matter when or how Christmas is celebrated, it brings joy and good tidings everywhere. The Christmas holiday is always a source of joy to those who have home centers in which to radiate, while it casts the genial glow of its happiness and warmth upon those who are the peculiar product of shattered homes.

measurable debt of thanks to both Dean Weaver and newly-installed Chancellor William Aycock.

Although student government on this campus has changed a great deal in the past twenty years, Dean Weaver believes that the basic philosophic values have remained the same. He said that the expansion of the university has called for new councils and functions of student government.

Dean Weaver said that each generation has its problems which have been met by a "great many advances in the form, structure, and procedure of student government."

Honor System Adopted

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (I.P.) — All examinations, term papers, reports, laboratory work, and all homework are included in the newly-installed honor system, according to a report by the Gettysburg College Honor Commission.

Fraternity files will now include only past examinations. The faculty has been instructed to inform the students if they feel cooperative work is in order as in laboratory work or mathematics problems.

The faculty will not proctor any tests unless it is necessary as in the case of laboratory practicals, language orals, and other tests requiring their presence. Professors will make themselves available for any questions at the beginning of the exams and then inform the class where they can be contacted during the exam for questioning.

The committee suggests the professor retire to his office. If the office is in another building, he may remain in the testing room with permission of the class. The student under the honor system is obligated to be honorable himself and to report any student he notices abusing the code.

Although passed last spring in a record turnout of 1,102 voters in an enrollment of 1,355 students, a surprisingly large figure of 267 added comments to their ballots.

The faculty received considerable attention. One comment requested that "pepping," "jap test," and other unfair practices be eliminated . . . get rid of the "curve" system of grading.

Cuban Student Delighted With U. S. Freedoms

By Bill Hurst

Claiming Cuba as his home country, Humberto Prieto, a student of Wilmington College, says he came with family to the United States order to gain the privilege of a free country.

Prieto was born in Havana, Cuba, May 18, 1936. He began his education at the age of five and one of his early studies was elementary English. Before he could attend high school, he was required by the government to take an entrance examination. After one year of private school, he came to North Carolina and attended Belmont University, a Catholic school in Charlotte, for three years.

When he returned to Havana he took with him his Betsy Knox, from Gastonia, N. C. He worked for two years in Havana as a salesman, and during this time made critical observations comparing his country with what he had known in the United States. He was not long before he moved back to the States with the intention of furthering his education in the field of engineering. Prieto entered Wilmington College in the fall of 1953. When he finishes here, he plans to go to N. C. State College for a course in chemical engineering.

In March of this year, his daughter was born to the Prietos.

Humberto will be ready for citizenship next year. When asked how he felt about this, he said, "American people should be glad that early in life they do not have to face the various injustices, malice, and the way of a crooked government." He further said that "Cuban youth are so oppressed that their only choice is to migrate to other places or to lead a crooked life. This is because of the lack of opportunity and the inability of the older generation to see the wants and needs of youth."

The government of Cuba, according to Prieto, is made up of three major political parties: the Socialists, the Democrats, and the Liberals. The Socialist party, he says, is made up largely of Communists, possibly a percent.

He said: "I moved to this country in order to give my family the privileges of a free country. Freedom is one of the basic urges of all men. Many times while I was in Havana I felt sick at the sight of the situation often taken by the Cuban police. I would like to see democratic way of life here and I would like to see us among the Cuban people for the good of all."

He concluded by saying, "I think every American should cherish the freedoms this country was founded upon."

Sports Chatter

By Dick Feagin

It has been brought to our attention that many of the students here at Wilmington College would like to know more about the players that represent us in sports.

A seasoned veteran is Danny Parham, who towers 6'4", and holds the starting position of center on the squad. Parham claims Wilmington as his hometown. He attended New Hanover High School prior to coming to our institution. He is majoring in physical education with the intention of coaching in the future.

Another returning letterman is Jerry Taylor, the shortest player on the squad at 5'9". Taylor is a sophomore here at Wilcol, and is also a local boy having graduated from New Hanover High with the Class of 1956. He has held the starting position of guard in the games played so far, and has shown ability in that spot. Taylor plans on a career in business administration with the hope of furthering his studies at Florida Southern in Lakeland, Florida, next year.

"Wild Bill" Elliott stands less than six feet at 5'10", but to no disadvantage on the court. He is quick and shifty on the hardwood. Elliott has yet to land a berth on the starting team this season, but shows great potential. A good Yankee from Ridgefield, Connecticut, he is studying business administration and will probably attend the University of Connecticut at Storrs, Conn., upon the completion of his requirements here. He attended high school at Ridgefield, Conn., and graduated with the Class of 1952, after which he served in the armed forces. In 1955 he entered the University of Bridgeport (Prep School) where he remained until transferring to Wilmington College.

Seahawks Lose To Oak Ridge

The small auditorium at Oakridge Military Institute was the scene of the first defeat of the Wilcol Seahawks this season. The "Cadets" topped the local quintet by the score of 74 to 66. Coach Bill Brooks carried 14 players to this annual classic.

The Seahawks have yet to win a game in seven years of competition with the little soldiers. When asked, Brooks said, "I don't know what we have to do to win a game up here." The Seahawks looked good earlier against Presbyterian Junior College, and it was believed that the game with Oakridge should have kept us in the ranks of the undefeated.

The Seahawks had height on the floor and depth on the bench but failed to come up with a winning combination.

On the lighter side, Denny Lutz of the locals seemed to be the only one of the team that could find the hole in that basket. Lutz hit for 26 points to be the to scorer.

Coach Brooks' boys outplayed the Cadets throughout most of the game, except for rebounds. Our local quintet, although domineering in height, did not maintain control over the board on either end of the court. Most of the players did not hit as well as in the past in practice or as at FJC.

LUTZ LEADING SCORER THUS FAR IN SEASON

Thus far in the season, the leading scorer for the local quintet is Denny Lutz with a total of 83 points for the four games played.

Following Lutz is Paladini with an aggregate of 62 for the same number of frays. Running a close third is Danny Parham with 58 points. These three players have a grand total of 203 points for the four games played.

Tarbabies Defeat Wilcol Seahawks

The first snow of the season and the second defeat of the Seahawks came on the same evening. The Tar Babies of the University of North Carolina invaded the ranks of the local quintet to end them by the score of 85 to 68, before an estimated crowd of 800 in Brogden Hall.

It seems that the Tar Babies have learned something from their big brothers who are the defending national champions this year. The UNC Freshmen dominated the game for the most part.

Several of the locals looked good in portions of the game. Stacy Wells, coming into the fray a little late, showed exceptional skill in finding the combination to the hole in the hoop.

The Seahawks began to rally late in the game, but time ran out. There seemed to be some trouble in getting and keeping control of the ball long enough to score. The rebound board was dominated by the boys from Chapel Hill for the greater part of the contest.

High scorer for the local squad was Denny Lutz with 18 points. "The shooting percentages have been somewhat better," was the reply given by Coach Brooks, who is still looking for a winning combination on the hardwood.

Brooks Attends Conference Meet

Head Coach Bill Brooks of Wilmington College recently attended a conference meeting held in Sanford, North Carolina, for the coaches and officials of our basketball conference.

Brooks mentioned to the members in attendance of the laxity of the rules of the constitution. It has been evident that some of the schools have been playing athletes that are ineligible according to Mr. Brooks.

After arriving back in Wilmington from the regional meeting Coach Brooks related that the association might as well be disbanded if the various schools are not going to abide by the regulations as set forth in the constitution. Our school has always maintained very rigid standards for the players to be eligible. "Even if our school only went by the local rules we would be far ahead of the other institutions in this conference," related Brooks when interviewed.

Poor officiating at recent games was also discussed at length.

The Seahawks of Wilmington College bruised their way to victory over Louisburg College in what looked like a soccer contest in the last half. As the final buzzer sounded the score on the board read 96 to 84.

The first quarter of the fray went quite well as the scorers saw-sawed back and forth. Only a slight margin prevailed in the first half between the two squads.

As the clock began for the second half of the game the Seahawks speeded up the pace and went ahead and remained there for the rest of the contest.

The small lad from Indiana Denny Lutz, again showed his skill in finding the basket for a total of 25 points. The high scorer for the Hurricanes was Fine with 20 points.

MUSIC CURRICULUM REVISED AT WOMAN'S COLLEGE

GREENSBORO, N. C. (I.P.)—A completely revised music curriculum will go into effect this year at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina. The new curriculum allows music majors 35 to 50 hours of elective outside the music department, as well as electives within the department. The old curriculum did not provide for music electives, and allowed only six hours of electives outside the department.

The revised curriculum now offers three types of A. B. degrees: Applied Music, Music Literature, and Theory. Dean Welton Marquis of the School of Music pointed out that the A.B. degree now will enable the girl who is not planning to study for performance or teaching to get training in music as background for church work or other work where some musical training is required. Basic liberal arts requirements for the A.B. degree are the same as those for all liberal arts majors.

In addition to the B.M. degree with a major in any instrument, voice, or music education, three new majors are now offered in the B.M. degree. Within the new curriculum it will be possible to gain a B.M. degree with a major in music history and literature, a composition major, and a voice major with opera and oratorio concentration. "The major in music history and literature is actually undergraduate preparation for research in music," Dean Marquis pointed out.

Some changes have been made in the basic language requirements for the B.M. degree. In all B.M. sequences except voice and music history, the basic requirement of two years of foreign language has been removed.

Voice majors will still be required to take the basic foreign languages, and opera and oratorio majors German, French, and Italian. French and German are required for the music history and literature majors.

Student Affairs Office Of UNC Issues Statement

CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (I.P.)—Interest and numerous questions concerning the new Cobb Dormitory counselling experiment at the University of North Carolina this year brought forth a prepared statement by the Office of Student Affairs here.

Concerning the program which provides specialized counselling supervised study periods and other assistance in academic areas for the 445 students living in the dormitory, the statement indicated that:

"The program is designed as an initial attempt to generally improve dormitory life on the University campus. No student must live in the dormitory, if he wishes not to participate in the program."

The program will act as a model and proving center for undergraduate social and academic life. The plan provides four counselors, one for each floor, who will be available for individual help or group instruction in mathematics, the sciences and other projects.

"No rules or regulations will be created at this time for Cobb residents. This task will be assumed by the residents of the Dormitory in consultation with their counselors. It is anticipated that regular Inter-Dormitory Council rules will apply, however, until Cobb residents determine their own."

The statement indicated that the counselors will be available in the dormitory for approximately 30 hours per week.

In addition, the Athletic Association will provide another counselor "who will give special attention to athletes living in the dormitory." His primary concern will be with academic and training matters. Athletes will not be segregated in any particular section of the dorm.

MAY QUEEN AND COURT ARE CHOSEN

By Scarlett Ennis

Elections were held recently for the annual May Queen and her Court. Here are a few facts about the Queen and her royal party.

Susan Parsons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Parsons, of Henderson, received the honor this year. Susan was born in Athens, Georgia, but came to Wilmington in 1952 and attended New Hanover High School where she participated in many activities.

Miss Parsons will graduate in June and will marry Ronald Davis, a senior at The Citadel.

decided where she will complete her instruction.

Louise Floyd, a Wilmingtonian, was elected Maid of Honor. Miss Floyd is entering the liberal arts curriculum at Wake Forest upon completion of her instruction here at Wilmington College. She graduated from New Hanover High School with the class of 1957.

One of the sophomore attendants is Linda Davis, a native of Chattanooga, Tennessee. She attended Polk County High School in Benton, Tennessee. Miss Davis has attended Wilmington College for two years and is majoring in business, with the hope of becoming a secretary. Her activities have been varied while in attendance here.

The second sophomore attendant is Jean Jones, a native of Rocky Mount, and a 1956 graduate of New Hanover High School. Miss Jones has attended Wilmington College for two years and is majoring in secretarial science.

Elected attendants from the Freshman Class were Linda Blossom and Virginia Raines.

Miss Blossom, residing in Rocky Point, graduated from Burgaw High School. She is a liberal arts major here at Wilmington College, but has not

STUDENTS RALLYING TO GET STATE FUNDS

Community College Act Significant Step For W. C.

Passage of the Community College Act by the last session of the General Assembly has been noted as "the most significant step in the field of state-supported colleges since the formation of the Consolidated University in 1931," according to a legislative issue of POPULAR GOVERNMENT magazine, published by the Institute of Government, in Chapel Hill, North Carolina.

This act is the result of many years of careful ground work, not only by our county, but by the two other counties where community colleges are located — Mecklenburg and Buncombe. The first move in this direction was made in 1953, when a bill was introduced into the General Assembly providing for official recognition of the three community colleges by the State Board of Education, but this bill was defeated.

The next move was made in 1955, when the three counties joined forces again to work for state aid, urging that these municipal colleges relieved the demands for dormitories and teachers at the regular four-year institutions, and that small grants-in-aid to these community colleges would accomplish the same results as larger appropriations for the regular state colleges. At that time the state gave each of these colleges—Charlotte, Asheville and Wilmington—$5,550. This amount was not as much as Wilmington College had hoped for, but it carried the promise of larger appropriations in the future.

In 1957 the three counties again worked together in pushing for more substantial aid from the state. Many of New Hanover's leading citizens went to Raleigh for the hearings on the Community College Act being considered and worked for its passage. The Wilmington Chamber of Commerce, the City Council, the County Commissioners, and the Board of Education, all made public endorsement of this bill, realizing the tremendous possibilities it would have for Wilmington College.

The Community College Act is a plan of organization and operation for community colleges throughout the State, and provides financial support of these colleges. In coming under this act, Wilmington College will have vast opportunities for development and enlargement.

Romance Language Club meets every other Thursday, 8:30 p.m.; college.

Circle K Club meets first and third Wednesday, 6:30 p.m.; Famous Club Restaurant.

Pen Pushers Club meets each Tuesday, 2:30 p.m.; Room 202; college.

Community College Act vote to be taken Feb. 15.

Exams will be given March 3, 4, 5. Winter quarter ends 10:30 p.m., March 5. Registration for spring quarter, March 10.

Students of Wilmington College are rallying to help their college obtain state aid by pushing passage of the two matters to be decided soon by vote of the people of New Hanover County.

The first matter, to be decided on February 15, is in regard to bringing Wilmington College under the Community College Act, which will enable the college to receive from the state about $50,000 to $60,000 each year for operating expenses.

The Community College Act is a plan of organization and operation for community colleges throughout the state, and provides for financial support of these colleges. This act was passed by the last session of the General Assembly as a result of the efforts of New Hanover, Mecklenburg, and Buncombe Counties, where the three community colleges are located.

Coming under the Community College Act will mean that the control of the college will be transferred from the County Board of Education to a board of twelve trustees of Wilmington College. Four of these trustees are to be appointed by the New Hanover County Board of Education, two by the County Commissioners, two by the City Council, and four by the Governor. Of the four to be appointed by the Governor, two can come from counties adjoining New Hanover, but the other two must come from New Hanover. This assures a board of trustees made up of local people.

Also to be transferred is an existing tax of five cents per hundred dollar valuation which was voted by the people of New Hanover County for the support of the college when it was founded in 1947. This is no new tax. This tax will continue whether the vote for or against bringing the college under the act.

Coming under the act, however, will enable the college to receive between $50,000 to $60,000 each year from the state for operating the college. This figure is based on a grant of $3 per student-quarter-hour of instruction.

The second matter in regard to Wilmington College will be decided at the May 31 Primary, and concerns a bond issue matching State funds appropriated for erecting and equipping buildings and for the purchase of land. The state has set up a fund of $1,500,000, and has given the three community colleges —Charlotte, Asheville and Wilmington — the privilege of matching up to 40 percent of this amount, or $60,000. But Wilmington College must, of course, first be brought under the Community College Act in order to qualify for this privilege.

Successful Launching

Students Experiment With Rocket At Fort Fisher

"Ten-nine-eight-seven" and on down to 0. A push of a switch, a jet of flame and smoke, and another rocket leaps into the air higher and higher until it disappears into the blue. Scenes like this are occurring all over the United States since the launching of Russia's Sputniks. All types of rockets, from small foot-long ones to five-foot ones carrying live mice, are being thrown up into the air by hopeful high school and college students.

Not to be outdone, three students here at Wilmington College have organized themselves into an experimental rocket group. Jackie Breazeale, James Lanier, and Charlie King, all chemistry majors, became interested in rockets and launched two of their own designs during the Christmas holidays after a month of planning and designing rockets and experimenting with various types of fuels.

Their first rocket was a three-foot long, two-stage job; however, only the second stage was launched since this firing was the first one and the results were not to be known until after the launching. The rocket, fired at an angle on a flat wind-swept stretch of Fort Fisher, reached an altitude of 300 feet and landed about 1000 feet from the launching site. Even though this was no record, it was quite an accomplishment, for it proved that the rockets could be fired successfully.

The second rocket, however, followed the common trend of rockets at that time and burned out on its launching platform, being transformed into a complete loss in a few seconds. The mechanical defects were determined and the trio is now positive that a rocket can be launched with more power and a greater altitude, due to better rocket bodies and fuel mixture. Plans are in process for a five-foot rocket, complete with three stages, which is to be on exhibition during the Science Fair at Wilmington College on March 11. In the meantime, more smaller rockets are in the various stages of construction and will be launched in the near future from time to time.

The group has no plans for launching a rocket carrying live animals as they see no possible way in which this could benefit science or research.

All safety precautions are taken for the safety of the launchers and the property on which it is fired, reducing risks to a minimum.

Overcrowded Colleges

Our already over-crowded colleges in the state will be bombarded by double the number of applications for admission within five or six years, it has been predicted. Educators are at a loss to know how to deal with this situation, which has become a national as well as a local problem. Rapidly increasing population since World War II is cited as the cause.

The enlargement of higher institutions of learning has not been able to keep pace with the increasing demands made upon them. Many well-qualified students will be denied admission to the college of their choice. Only students with top grades can get into our larger colleges, and they can stay there only if they maintain a certain average. Colleges are having to limit their admissions either by stiff entrance examinations or by geographical boundaries.

North Carolina's way of meeting this situation is through its Community College Act, which was passed by the last session of the General Assembly. This plan was devised to relieve the overload in its state-supported colleges and universities by giving support to community colleges throughout the state.

Wilmington College will come under the benefit of this act if the people of New Hanover County vote affirmatively at the polls on February 15.

Commerce School Urges Clarity Of Speech

New York University's School of Commerce, Accounts, and Finance, a "major effort" is under way to help students write and speak more clearly, according to an annual report released by Dean Thomas L. Norton. The School has doubled its degree requirement in writing, introduced a required course in speaking, and expanded a required literature course.

Dean Norton points out that it is time to substitute action for words in dealing with the serious problem of student inadequacies in written and oral communication.

Freshman students must now take a four-credit course in "Fundamentals of Effective English," which deals with the mechanics of both written and oral expression. Sophomores must enroll in a class devoted to business writing, with emphasis on psychology and rhetorical techniques, and in a four-credit course on "The Great Western Literary Heritage."

The new major is one of thirty hours, eighteen of which are required: European Ideas and Institutions, American Ideas and Institutions, a course in the history of Russia, and Research Topics. Twelve additional hours

DR. CHANG NATIVE OF PEIPING, CHINA

Dr. John Wan Yun Chang, associate professor in physical sciences at Wilmington College, first came to this country in the autumn of 1946. At the time his home was in Peiping, China, where he had a DVM degree from the Army Veterinary College there. He came to the United States as a visitor to the agricultural colleges and veterinary schools of this country under the mission of the Chinese government.

In 1947 Dr. Chang studied as a special student at Berea College and in the meantime completed the visiting data he obtained in 1946 and the spring of 1947.

Being unable to go home because of Communist upheavals in China, Dr. Chang entered Virginia Polytechnic Institute in 1948 as a graduate student and received an M.S. degree in 1948. Then, he entered Alabama Polytechnic Institute in 1950, from which he received an M.S. degree. In 1951 he entered Texas A. and M. College and in 1955 received a Ph.D. degree. Dr. Chang also did research in Maryland before coming to Wilmington in 1956.

When asked what he thought of the United States, Dr. Chang stated, "Students are the future corner stones of the country; schools are the buildings in which the stones are trimmed for use; and Christianity is the everlasting rock where the house is built. According to my ten years' observation, I comprehend, as long as the fine education system and the Christianity are prevailing as they are in the schools and colleges, the United States will be prosperous and promising as it is."

Dr. John Chang

Committee Chosen To Study Colleges

CARLISLE, PA. (I.P. — A study project to determine the characteristics of a good college has been set up by the Dickinson College chapter of the American Association of University Professors.

The study was prompted by an article by Chesley Manly in the Chicago Tribune last spring, in which were listed the forty best institutions of higher learning in the United States, in Manly's opinion. The AAUP, searching for a project for the good of the college, decided to investigate the reasons for choosing these colleges and to determine why Dickinson did not rank among the ten best coeducation-

Dr. Chang further stated that education, as many other things, should be done out of a heart of love. He also said that the way to love his students was to try to know thoroughly the character and the shortcomings of the individual students and to try to assist them. Dr. Chang said every teacher should examine himself so that he may correct his own faults, improve his teaching, and hold fast to that which is good as long as he teaches.

In telling of his personal life Dr. Chang stated that before 1941, when he was baptized, that he lived a life of pride and self-righteousness but that now he considered it was nothing but a shame.

He stated further, "Since then, I have lived a life of prayer. Though I have been frequently spiritually ill, most of the time I do inwardly feel joyful. I do not know the future, but I pray, 'May God's will be done.' Trying to improve a spiritual and moral life, I keep on praying, studying the Bible and writing my diary. My hobby is to practice fifteen minutes daily a kind of boxing-like exercise. Besides, I like to see basketball games and cowboy movies."

Student Government Revises Articles

A proposed revision of the Articles of Student Government which, if adopted, would revamp the George Washington University's entire Student Council system, has been submitted to the Council by a committee. The proposals would replace the present Student Council with a two-house Student Congress, patterned much like the legislative branch of the federal government.

In order to be adopted, the new system must receive the approval of the Council, the Student Life Committee, a majority of the student body, the President of the University and the board of trustees.

The present Student Council consists of a president, vice-president, secretary, comptroller, advocate, activities director, program director, publicity director, freshman director, Student Union chairman and member-at-large, all elected by the entire student body, and a representative from each school and college in the University, elected by the students he specifically represents.

Under the new set-up, one branch, the Student House of representatives, would be composed of an elected delegate from every recognized student organization on campus, with the exception of social fraternities and sororities, who would be represented by delegates from the Panhellenic and Interfraternity Councils.

The other student government branch, the Student Senate, would be composed of a president, vice president, secretary, comptroller, advocate, and three members-at-large, all elected by the entire student body; representatives from the Schools of Law and Medicine, elected by the students they specifically represent; and a publicity director, freshman director, activities director, program director and Student Union chairman, all five selected by a two-thirds majority vote of the Student House.

From The Editor's Desk

"I'm a 'Kisa,'" seems to have been a popular phrase around the school for the last week. It seems as if several of the girls have started their own sorority the "Kisa Epsilon." I'm vowed to secrecy so I can't interpret these words for you, but I'm sure if any of you (girls only) are interested, Linda Hines, president of the club, will be glad to give you all the necessary information.

I've noticed that the sale of annuals is not progressing very well. Many of you are probably like myself and stay broke about three-fourths of the time, but seriously, the cost of this year's book is nothing compared to the long hours and effort that Bob and his staff have put forth. From what I've observed, the "forward look," the theme of the Fledgling, is certainly going to revolutionize any past publications here at the College. Not many annuals have been ordered, so you're taking a chance if you wait till the last minute.

Although basketball season is nearing its end, the "Seahawks" have certainly given a performance that we should be proud of. Having a perfect season pointwise is not the only goal which a team can achieve. The experiences of playing under pressure have seemed to prevail this season with so many neck-and-neck games. Games such as these are almost a requirement, for a coach as well as a team, to have a winning number in the future. We're all proud of your record, fellows, and we're looking forward to seeing many of you, as well as some new faces, on the baseball field this spring.

Appearing on the front page of this issue are several write-ups on the forth coming bond issue. I hope all of you who are eligible to vote realize the importance of this vote which will be taken next week and will exercise your rights to do so. Bill Hurst has done a lot of work preparing the reports on page one to give you a better insight on the bond issue. Bill also helped prepare the script for a program on T. V. urging the citizens to get out and vote for this issue which will affect all the citizens of this community.

Until next issue, remember this: The best way to exercise your vocal cords with something worthwhile, is to see how loud you can yell when our cheerleaders are trying to boost our team's spirit!

The College Student

There in apartments small and damp,

The candidate for college prizes

Sits poring by the midnight lamp;

Goes late to bed, yet early rises.

He surely well deserves to gain them,

With all the honours of his college,

Who, striving hardly to attain them,

Thus seeks unprofitable knowledge:

Who sacrifices hour of rest

To scan precisely metres attic;

Or agitates his anxious breast

In solving problems mathematical;

Renouncing every pleasing page

From authors of historic use;

Preferring to the letters sage

The square of the hypotenuse.

Sports Chatter

By Dick Feagin

The Seahawks have been quite busy in the past five weeks, to sum up what they have done wouldn't take much time or space, however.

The local quintet often reminds me of an Oldsmobile that I once owned, it would outrun anything on the road, except when it would run out of gas. It seems that our basketballers have this problem of running low on fuel. I am referring to the recent games played at Chowan College and at Campbell College. At Chowan, I was quite confident that our lads would come from behind, but in the first overtime period this seemed to fizzle out. In the second overtime period they played good control ball, but to no advantage as the Braves scored in the last few seconds.

On the following night at Campbell College, they ran up against the same problem, lack of something which can keep the team together and functioning properly. Even the presence of a bus load of supporters from Wilcol failed to pep up the squad. Coach Brooks instructed the team to play control basketball, but later found out that this wasn't the answer. The officiating seemed to be a little strange for this game, but the Camels journeyed to Brogden Hall a week later to again stomp the local team by a close margin.

I can't seem to come up with a good reason why the fellows aren't playing ball the best that they can. I have traveled with the team on the away games and spent a great deal of time among the players. They may cut-up an awful lot at night, and several of them still have their baby habits, but when the time comes to play ball they are, for the most part, serious and have their minds on the game at hand. I think, personally, that they could be disciplined more and requested to have a higher outlook on the contest itself. If one has a desire to play for love of the game, you may not have a championship team, but all of the players would play together. The biggest reason that I see for the losses that we have had so far this year is fatal mistakes, that cannot be predicted in advance. Inability to cope with a situation when it arises until it is too late.

While this typewriter is on the move, I would like also to say that I have heard many remarks made about the cheerleaders. Not only from college students, but also from outsiders that have been in attendance at our games. A look at some of the other teams' cheerleaders in the conference will show you what I mean. I hope that you do better in the future, girls. These boys on the squad need more activity from you and the student body. Whether or not you get any support from the students, let it look like the few of you have more pep and spirit, after all that is what a cheerleader is for. Nuf said?

Seahawks Upset U.S.C. Baby Roosters

The Seahawks of Wilmington College pulled a minor upset recently when they defeated the Baby Roosters of the University of South Carolina by the score of 85 to 70.

The field house at USC was the scene of the fray. The rumor about this area was that the Gamecocks were in a building campaign and that the freshman squad would be hard to overcome this year. However, the Green and Gold of 'ole Wilcol showed them that this could be done.

Ronnie Paladini, the spark from Indiana, led the scoring for the locals with 34 points. The fifteen points that was the margin for the final score increased the percentages of the Wilmington squad. Following the game Coach Brooks replied, "The boys have been shooting better and our percentage now is somewhere in the vicinity of 20.4 percent, which we consider very good." The question was then placed to Brooks as to what ignited the quintet in the last period. To this question he answered, "They began to play together and they looked better than any other time this year."

Seahawks End Season Tonight Against Chowan College Braves

DUKE FROSH TEAM TOPS LOCAL FIVE

Duke University showed the fans of Wilmington their future power as the highly-polished freshman team outclassed the local squad of Wilcol by the score of 83 to 60.

For most part the story can be told of the accurate hitting from the floor and swiftness of handling the ball on either end of the court. The Imps were somewhat domineering in height and all of these facts added up to the defeat. The Duke frosh were the third ACC team that the Seahawks faced this year.

The lads from the Durham institute led all the way from the three-minute mark. They maintained a tight defense and this caused the Hawks to try shots that were difficult. Center Fred Kast of the Imps led the scoring with 17 points and for the local quintet it was again the "hoosier hotshot" Denny Lutz with a total of 16.

STATE FROSH ROLLS OVER LOCAL SQUAD

The State College Frosh wheeled over the Seahawks of Wilmington College by a score of 97 to 79 in a fray held at the Coliseum in Raleigh.

This was another non-conference game that was used by the quintet from Wilcol for the purpose of gaining some experience from playing these big schools.

Percentage-wise the Wolflets had a 72.5 percent from the foul line as compared to 63 percent for the Seahawks. At the half the State team led the locals by the score of 43 to 35, but came back in the second half strong and really poured it on to end the contest with a margin of 18 points.

Coach Brooks was very well satisfied with the boys and felt that these games with the freshmen teams of the "Big Four" would prove invaluable in conference play this year.

Hawks Glide To Victory Over U.S.C. Freshmen

In preparation for the last game of the 1958 season tonight the Seahawks of Wilmington College breezed by the Baby Roosters of the University of South Carolina by the score of 79 to 70. The locals held the visitors scoreless for two minutes and ten seconds when Blemmins hit a jump shot from outside. A little spark became ignited in the person of Jere Taylor, who had the top billing in the points division with 21.

The Baby Roosters called time out with fifteen minutes and ten seconds left in the first half, in order to solve the solution of the fast break of Taylor and the accurate shooting of Paladini and Lutz.

At the end of the first quarter the score was 27 to 12 in favor of the Seahawks, but the quintet from Columbia, South Carolina, closed the gap to within nine points as the half time arrived. From here on out the Seahawks held the lead with the exception of twice when the score was tied. The visiting team never had the privilege of being ahead.

As the Seahawks face the Chowan Braves tonight in the last game of the season a large crowd is expected to be on hand to bid farewell to several of the seniors on the squad.

Campbell Camels Defeat Seahawks

The high-riding Camels of Buie's Creek stole a pair of games from the Seahawks this season. In the first fray at Campbell College the locals were defeated by the score of 76 to 68. In the return contest the lads from the Baptist school again toppled the quintet from the port city by the score of 83 to 78.

Both games were very close and hard fought. It appeared that the players on both sides found the combination to the basket in the first half, however, in the final period the scoring became slower. James Perry led the Camel with 27 points, while Parham contributed 25 for the Brooksmen. In the foul area both teams looked even, as Wilcol committed 17 persons against 18 by the visitors.

Art Professor Labors 3 Months To Complete Mosaic

Claude Howell, art professor at Wilmington College, has completed a mosaic entitled "Sorting Fish." It is the result of three months of tedious work and can be seen in the art room at Wilmington College.

Mr. Howell, having graduated from New Hanover High School, is a native of Wilmington. He studied with private teachers and in summer groups at Rockport, Massachusetts, and Woodstock, New York. In 1948 a Rosendwald fellowship gave him the opportunity to spend two years in study and travel in New York and Europe. He has received numerous prizes and recognitions, among them a Carnegie purchase prize at the Corcoran, two purchase awards in the North Carolina State Competitions, and first prize at the 1947 North Carolina-Virginia Show in Norfolk.

He has had one-man shows in many regional galleries and is included in regional and nation-group exhibitions. His paintings are now in the collections of IBM; the High Museum in Atlanta, Georgia; North Carolina Museum of Art; the Children's Room in the library at Winston-Salem, North Carolina; and many private collections, among them those of Charles Laughlin and Paul Gregory. He is listed in Who's Who in American Art.

Future plans of this talented artist include presenting a one-man art show at Catawba, Queens, and Converse Colleges. This tour will be made during January, February, and March. At the present, Howell is drawing the illustrations for a forthcoming book written by Ben Dixon MacNeil, entitled The Hatterasman. This latest effort of MacNeil's will appear some time this spring.

"Desperate Hours" Stars Two Wilcol Students had little theater experience, except participating in community and high school productions in her native city of Woonsocket, Rhode Island. In this play she portrays the part of a twenty year old daughter, afraid of nothing.

Gene is a sophomore majoring in Spanish. Although Gene has had no dramatic experience, he is doing an excellent job as the youngest of three criminals who meet a justified end. Gene is a native of Wilmington and has spent three years of service as a paratrooper in the United States Army. Much credit should be given to Gene for his having the scholastic aptitude to attend college, because he didn't complete high school, only the 9th grade. He made excellent grades on tests given him by the army and rated as a first year college student.

"The Desperate Hours" deals with three police-hunted criminals, invading a happy home. Suspense is found throughout the play and the ability of psychopathic criminals of the underworld to ruin and upset the lives of innocent people is revealed. This play was made into a movie which starred Humphrey Bogart, Frederick March, and Mary Murphy.

The Thalian Association is the oldest existing theater group in this country and it claims a membership of over 500 people. Everyone is encouraged to take part in any of the four plays produced each year. This is a fine opportunity to become acquainted with the theater and to make new friends. For this performance, the Thaliens are proud to have as their director Dolores Abrahams of the University of North Carolina.

Registrar Reports Enrollment Increase

Enrollment has increased by 39 students this quarter. During our Winter Quarter the enrollment increased by 376 students. This rapid increase in enrollment is proof that Wilmington College is growing. During the Spring Quarter of last year the enrollment of new students increased to 363.

College Registrar, J. M. Crews, stated that there have been 635 different students attending Wilmington College this year. He also disclosed that two foreign students had come in this quarter. One student is from Mexico, and the other one is from South America. Students from Thailand and Korea came to our college last quarter.

Enrollment by counties is as follows: Beaufort—2, Brunswick—21, Alamance—2, Cabarrus—1, Carteret—3, Columbus—18, Craven—3, Cumberland—4, Davidson—1, Dare—1, Duplin—9, Forsyth—1, Gaston—3, Greene—1, Guilford—1, Johnson—1, Lenoir—1, Lee—1, Mecklenburg—1, Nash—3, Onslow—12, Pasquotank—1, Pender—25, New Hanover—228, Rowan—1, Sampson—3, Vance—1, Wayne—6, Yadkin—1.

The students which enrolled from different States this quarter include the following: Pennsylvania—3, Colorado—1, Texas—2, South Carolina—3, Virginia—3, Massachusetts—2, Michigan—1, California—1, West Virginia—1, Mexico—1, New Jersey—2, New York—1, Tennessee—2, Connecticut—1, Florida—1, South America—1.

The enrollment statistics this quarter show improvement, and it looks as though Wilmington College will have many progressive years ahead of it.

NEWS BRIEFS

It has been announced by Dean Marshall Crews that an electrical engineering laboratory will be constructed sometime during the summer.

The laboratory will be constructed in one end of the Pub. There will be a partition separating the two rooms. The space needed for the laboratory will be relatively small as there will be only five or six students taking the course.

The first term of summer school has been scheduled to begin with registration on June 6. Classes begin on June 9, with June 11 being the last day for registration without penalty.

Courses will be offered in chemistry, physics, English, social science, biology, and math. The only course being offered in business is Beginning Accounting.

About one hundred students who are now attending Wilmington College have put in their requests for courses in the summer sessions. A total of about one hundred and fifty is expected after those from other schools have registered.

The second term will begin with registration on July 19.

Newly Elected Board Of Trustees Meet

WILMINGTON COLLEGE'S AZALEA FLOAT

Hoggard, Chairman Randall, President Crews, Dean

The first meeting of the new Board of Trustees of Wilmington College was held recently at the New Hanover County Courthouse.

Dr. John T. Hoggard, retired physician, Chairman of the New Hanover County Board of Education, and President of Wilmington College, since its founding in 1847, was elected Chairman of the Board of Trustees.

Mr. Champion M. Davis, retired President of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad, and a Director of the Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Company, was elected Vice-President of the Board.

Other members of the new board are:

Mr. E. L. White, founder of White's Ice Cream & Milk Company, former mayor of the City of Wilmington, and a member of the State Highway Commission.

Mr. Howard S. Penton, affiliated with Springer Coal & Oil Company, and a Director of Wachovia Bank & Trust Company.

Mr. Fred Graham, Vice-President of the Wilmington Savings & Trust Company, and Chairman of the Chamber of Commerce's Committee on Education.

Mr. Eugene B. Tomlinson, Mayor of Southport, and Post Engineer at Sunny Point Terminal.

Mr. Harry Payne, Wilmington merchant, and a member of the Chamber of Commerce's Committee on Education.

Mr. Wilbur Doshier, retired Postmaster, and former Representative to the State Legislature.

Mr. Fred Rippy, President of Coastal Motors, Inc., and former Assistant City Manager.

Mr. Bernard Schwartz, Wilmington furniture merchant, and member of the Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Bradford Tillery, Wilmington attorney, and Deputy Judge of Recorder's Court.

In action taken by the new board, Dr. William M. Randall, Dean of the college, was named President of the college.

Mr. J. Marshall Crews, Registrar and Assistant Dean, was named Dean of the college.

Selection of a secretary and treasurer of the Board of Trustees will be decided at a later meeting.

The Trustees directed that the college continue to function on its present basis until July 1, 1958, the beginning of the new fiscal year.

Future meetings of the Board of Trustees will be held at the college.

LOAN OFFERED BY LOCAL N. C. SOROSIS CLUB

Miss Margaret S. Morton, Head of the English Department and Dean of Women, has announced that a loan has been set up for some deserving girl to attend Wilmington College. The loan has been instituted by the North Carolina Sorosis Club of Wilmington.

Giving further details of the loan, Miss Morton also stated that no interest would be charged on the loan and the repayment terms will be set up to the receiver's convenience. The loan will be available to either a girl who is presently enrolled at Wilmington College or one who plans to attend Wilmington College next year.

Those interested in this loan should contact Miss Morton either personally or by letter sent in care of Wilmington College as soon as possible for further details.

BOB WEEKS LONG WAY FROM HOME

One of our foreign students, Bob Weeks, comes to us from our southern neighbor, Mexico. Weeks was born in Mexico City. His mother, who is a nationalized Mexican, is of Scottish-Prussian descent, and his father, an executive in the cement industry, is English.

When Bob left Mexico for Canada, he was a junior in high school; but the standards in Canada set him back to the ninth grade.

Before transferring to McGill University in Quebec, Weeks finished his freshman year at Ridley College. From Ridley he transferred to Wilmington College with plans for going to North Carolina State College next year. Weeks is studying for a degree in Chemical Engineering.

Among his hobbies, Weeks includes all sports. Playing on the college tennis team, he says that tennis is his favorite, but he plays the game of Squash best.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE STUDENTS ENTER FLOAT IN PARADE

Annual Sale Above Expectations, Few Remain

Now is the time for all good students to buy their annuals. The sales so far have surpassed all expectations and of the original 150 copies ordered there are but 10 remaining. It is recommended that if any student has not bought his subscription and is desirous of an annual that he do so without delay. There will not be any extras ordered.

The staff is confident that this year's FLEDGLING is worth every cent of the price asked and that it is an improvement over past publications. The subscriptions, which are on sale at the counter in the Pub, sell at $4.00, $2.00 down and $2.00 when the books are received.

The photographs will be put on display on the bulletin board on the main floor as soon as they are returned from the printers along with a list of prices and sizes so that any student desiring additional prints may order them through the annual office.

Mr. C. L. Doss, with the capable assistance of Jack Braezeale, Tommy Bancroft, Gene Tronsden, and Humberto Prieto, constructed the float of which everyone was proud who saw the parade.

The float, bearing Wilcox's school colors of green and gold, was actually incomplete until the students representing the College boarded it. The four major departments of the school (Liberal Arts, Engineering, Science, and Business) were represented on the float.

Final approval of the float was given by the thousands who witnessed the colorful parade. Quoting the Star-News review, "Wilmington College entered one of the most interesting and original floats of the entire parade."

Two weeks prior to the Azalea Festival, the Student Council of Wilmington College was well under way with plans for the float which was entered in the big parade. The design for this well-planned entry was the product of much debate and well-spent time.

Gene Tronsden, president of the student body, stated, "Most of the hard work involved was the getting of equipment that we could use." The trailer for the float was loaned to the school by Mr. R. F. Hall, the John Deere dealer here in Wilmington. The main deck was borrowed from the Student Government of New Hanover High School and was bolted to the trailer by Mr. Wolf and his department. The only remaining problem of where to build the float was solved by Mr. W. H. Braezeale, manager of Queen City Trailways, who consented the use of the bus garage.

A NEW ERA

Wilmington College is on the threshold of a new era. Probably the most significant step forward since the founding of our college was taken in the February election when the college was brought under the State's Community College Act. Under this Act, the college receives operating expenses from the State, and a chance to match funds for the purchase of additional land and the erection of new buildings. We have a Board of Trustees composed of outstanding and capable local men to direct its affairs.

Our college is a model college in the State of North Carolina, and the way it functions will determine whether or not colleges like our own will be established in other communities.

The students have a large part to play in the success of the college's undertakings. Our attitude, our cooperation with the new administration, our support, our spirit, are vitally important in the new venture.

Thus, the college can go on to become an essential educational center in this part of the State. Its future possibilities are unlimited, determined only by the amount of effort its students and local citizens are willing to make in its behalf.

Food For Thought

By R. L. Feagin

As the Spring quarter nears the mid-point many of us are looking ahead to what we might think are greener fields. Be not deceived! You have been given only a tiny bit of knowledge in the last two years, and I seem to recall a statement from high school days, "The reason that there is so much knowledge in college is because the freshmen bring so much in and the Seniors leave so much behind". As a senior (sophomore) here at Wilcox, maybe you will leave your share of wit in these sacred halls.

It has been said that a little bit of education is a dangerous thing. There are many higher goals that lie ahead. It should be the desire of all of us to want to attain these goals. Whatever your choice of vocation, wherever you travel, or whoever you are there will be great decisions in the next few years that may mould your entire life. May I urge each of you to seek divine guidance in making these decisions, and place your best into whatever you attempt.

I would like to leave with you a little scriptural thought: "All things work to the good for those that love God." Use this thought in your everyday life as it knows no boundaries as to a particular religion, or denomination.

FACULTY PERSONALITYDEAN OF WOMEN,
HEAD OF ENGLISH DEPT.

Miss Margaret S. Morton, head of the English Department and Dean of Women at Wilmington College devotes much of her time outside of the classroom to educational organizations of local, state, national and international scope. She is reported to be very active in the North Carolina English Teachers Association of which she has twice officiated as chairman of the central committee, and the Delta Cappa Gamma, an honorary international organization for women teachers, twice serving as chapter president and she is at present the chairman of the state scholarship committee. Miss Morton has also served actively in such distinguished organizations as the A. A. U. W. (Association of American University Women) and the North Carolina Sorosis. She is also a member of St. Andrews Covenant Presbyterian Church in Wilmington.

During a recent interview Miss Morton explained that she was the first person to staff the English department when this college opened in 1947 and, as head of that department, has watched it grow to a staff of four members.

Miss Morton further related that she was born in Clarks-ville, Virginia, a small town in the southern portion of that state. She is a graduate of Longwood College in Farmville, Virginia and the George Peabody College in Nashville, Tennessee. Her graduate study was done at the University of North Carolina and the Breadloaf School of English in Vermont.

In relating facts about her career Miss Morton stated that before coming to Wilmington she taught in various high schools in Virginia and North Carolina. (Our Dean of Women explained that she would exchange nothing for the experience gained from high school teaching because, "I feel that experience in high school teaching gave me a better insight into a student's capabilities and potentialities when he does come to college".)

HONOLULU

HONOLULU, Hawaii (I.P.)—University of Hawaii students have ranked at the top, according to a five-year survey of 425 transfers to the mainland. Of 296 that completed their work for degrees, 165 were above average, and 93 average; 10 were below average, and 28 were not accounted for.

According to information released by Edward T. White, registrar, thirty students, earned doctorate degrees; among them were seven Ph.D.'s, nine D.D.S.'s, ten M.D.'s, two LL.D.'s, and two O.D.'s. Among the other degrees received were 82 Master's degrees and 71 Bachelor of Arts degrees.

Most of the transfers went to California, Illinois, and New York; many went to Oregon, Michigan, and Oklahoma.

In Sympathy

The faculty and student body of Wilmington College wish to extend their deepest sympathy to Mrs. Pearl Smith and Mrs. Anne Barksdale on the recent passing of their mothers.

After stating that she had a great interest in writing groups and in the Pen Pushers Club of this college, Miss Morton confessed that she had little time for outside hobbies except for keeping house, cooking and sewing when time permits. She also does a great deal of reading as well as keeping up with drama and television.

Among the courses taught by this distinguished lady are English grammar, public speaking, drama, and American literature.

TAKE TIME FOR THESE THINGS

Take time to work — it is the price of success.

Take time to think — it is the source of power.

Take time to play — it is the secret of youth.

Take time to read — it is the foundation of knowledge.

Take time to worship — it is the highway of reverence and washes away the dust of earth from our eyes.

Take time to help and enjoy friends — it is the source of happiness.

Take time to love — it is the one sacrament of life.

Take time to dream — it hitches the soul to the stars.

Take time to laugh — it is the singing that helps with life's loads.

Take time to plan — it is the secret of being able to have time to take time for the first nine things. — Author Unknown

European Tour Planned

ROCKFORD, Ill. (I.P.) — A leisurely 52 day tour of Europe, (with an additional 18 days at sea) designed to give the participants genuine contact with the past, and a fast moving 39 day air tour of nine European countries to study modern education methods are included in the 1958 Rockford Colleges summer session. Each tour is limited to 20 persons and will be preceded by a series of ten orientation sessions on campus during the spring semester.

Led by Professor Philip B. Dedrick, Chairman of Arts Division, a study tour in European History of Art has been prepared to give the participants a varied and rich experience in the quiet villages and great cities of England, Holland, Belgium, France, Switzerland, Italy, and Germany.

The leisurely pace is essential, according to Professor Dedrick, to allow the tour members to assimilate the character and quality of the past. About one-half of the time allotted to each place visited will be unscheduled to allow the tour members an opportunity to revisit monuments and museums and to make personal discoveries.

The course will survey the arts of Medieval and Renaissance Europe. All major museums will be visited as well as many other points of historical interest. Tour members may earn six semester hours of undergraduate credit by completing before departure a research paper and by attending the orientation sessions. Previous completion of at least one course in European art history may be substituted for the orientation sessions.

Christians Pause To Remember

Throughout the world, Christians have paused to remember the moment in the life of Jesus Christ that forms the very basis of their belief. It has been said that the ascension of Christ meant not impoverishment, but enrichment. His followers had to lose Him in the visible form in order to have Him in a spiritual presence forever.

In this world of today, amid the threats of war and possibly total destruction with an ICBM or satellite, the only security seems to lie in the church. With all the frustrations of daily living there is little time left to be serious about our relationship with our maker. So many other things come before the church in our lives and the devil himself has reason to be concerned.

The challenge comes to young people today to return to God and have a little more concern for their position toward the Almighty. As the Lord arose from the grave He presented the last conquest that faced His earthly existence, that of death itself. Before He ascended into the heavens He assured His followers that the Holy Ghost would come upon them, and after that they would be given amazing powers. This power transformed Christ's early weaknesses from weaklings to mighty heralds of amazing effectiveness. This same power as given to the Apostles is universally available today.

On the basis of the availability of this power, Jesus made the sweeping affirmation, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father" (John 14:12).

The Master also stated that when He went He would send a comforter, hence we are not left to uncertain groping. The Spirit lends a hand and enters our helplessness to give strength to our prayers. On the threshold of His departure, Christ said, "And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, I will do it" (John 14:13-14).

No dizzy, daily disturbances can rob us of His wonderful presence, if we have accepted Him as our Saviour. A wise Christian Layman once stated, "I do not know what the future holds, but I know Him who holds it".

From The Editor's Desk

After the unusually busy weekends that the Azalea Festival and Easter Vacation presented, it seems a trudge to be back in the swing of school and typical Wilmington life, doesn't it? But, here we are again with another issue of the Seahawk giving you the latest news and items of interest here at Wilmington College.

The change in the positions held by the newspaper staff members has been made this issue in order that those people who will remain at Wilcox next year to work on the newspaper will have adequate experience to do his job efficiently. Anyone interested in doing any type of work on the Seahawk staff next year should contact me within the next month. Experience is not necessary but will be beneficial.

"Old Man Weather" appears to be the Seahawks' toughest opponent so far this season. Rain and bad weather have caused the post-ponement of five games within the last two weeks. These games will probably be scheduled at a later date so let's all try to be at the games and give our team some support.

The Registrar's report shows an increase in enrollment this quarter which indicates the presence of a number of new faces. On behalf of the faculty and student body, we welcome you to Wilmington College.

Just a word of advice to those students transferring to other colleges next fall, now is the time to get your registration blanks filled out and mailed to the college you're heading for. Transcripts can be obtained from the office now or at the end of the quarter. Many colleges already have quite a housing problem at present so in order to insure your acceptance, now is the time to act.

New Courses Offered

NEW ORLEANS, LA. (I.P.)—The College of Business Administration at Loyola University is introducing two new combined courses this year, business-and-journalism and business-and-mathematics, according to an announcement by Dean Henry J. Engler.

The courses are designed to give students basic study in business and electives in either math or journalism as a field of concentration, with business courses supplying a knowledge of economics and accounting and the electives serving as preparations for careers in those fields.

Writing market quotations and covering local business events for newspapers will be included in the business-and-journalism study. Business-and-math will offer market research and electronic accounting and a background for planning, direction and control, according to Dean Engler.

Sports
Chatter

BY J. BREAZEALE

The fans at the Seahawk-Wesleyan game last Monday afternoon were surprised by the double action in Legion Stadium. In addition to the ball game, the fans were also seeing a horse race with two-way traffic.

After it seemed evident that the horses were not going to field to the sandlot game, the fans and teams began to show their dislike of this strange doubleheader. Along with a sound of boo's there was also paper and sticks finding their way on to the playing surface and onto the racing track.

In talking to the owners of the "trotters" it was learned that this heavy work-out was due to the continual downpour of rain, making it practically impossible for the horses to be run on the wet track.

Coach Brooks and Coach Norman Daniels of Wesleyan College were concerned for the safety of their players. It was possible for one of the catchers to run on the track in an attempt to receive a foul fly. There was also the possibility of a foul tip hitting one of the horses. A trainer and owner of one of these "trotters" has a great deal of money tied up in a horse and rider and any injury could mean a loss to them. Some correlation should be worked out by the city fathers so that this occurrence won't happen again.

It was almost 3:30 P.M. before the horses and riders cleared the track. City Manager, James R. Benson said, "It was an unfortunate circumstance, and it may never happen again".

This may be of interest to some of the readers. The Circle K Club and Kisa Epsilon are competing in a little contest to see which can sell the most season tickets to the Seahawks Baseball games. The winner will be announced later. Please lend each of these organizations your cooperation.

SEAHAWK NETTERS DEFEAT
GENEVA COLLEGE, 6-3

The tennis team of Wilmington College won its first match of the season, 6-3, over Geneva College, a four year school. This was the last match for Geneva in their southern tour. They have played such teams as East Carolina and College of Charleston.

In the singles, the Seahawks split with Geneva, 3-3. Wilmington swept the doubles from Geneva, 3-0.

Jere Taylor, number one man for the Seahawks, won over the visitor's top player, Rex Downey, 6-1, 6-1. Taylor had control of both sets, losing only one game in each.

The closest match was played between Gary Preston of the Seahawks and Dave Douglas of Geneva. Preston, after winning the first set 6-4, lost the last two to Douglas 6-5, 6-4.

Bob Weeks ran into serious trouble when he met Bob Thare of Geneva. Weeks lost two sets 6-3, 6-4.

Also losing two sets was George Langston. Langston lost to Bob Risinger 6-1, 6-2 in hard smashing sets.

Wilmington scored another point when Ray Hock defeated Williamson 6-4, 6-3.

In the doubles Taylor and Hock teamed up to defeat Downey and Thare 6-1, 6-2.

Although Weeks and Preston found the going a little difficult, they defeated Douglas and Risinger after they lost the first set. The sets went 4-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Singles

Jere Taylor (WC) defeated Rex Downey 6-1, 6-1.

Dave Douglas (G) defeated Gary Preston 4-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Bob Thare (G) defeated Bob Weeks 6-2, 6-4.

Bob Risinger (G) defeated George Langston 6-1, 6-2.

Ray Hock (WC) defeated Glenn Williamson 6-4, 6-3.

Charles Hunnicutt (WC) won by default.

Doubles

Taylor-Hock defeated Downey-Thare 6-1, 6-2.

Preston-Weeks defeated Douglas-Risinger 4-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Langston-Hunnicutt won by default.

SOUTH RISES TO DEFEAT
CONN. YANKS

The Seahawks have done a job that proved too tough for the University of Miami, the University of Michigan, and for the Cadets at West Point. Wesleyan University was lowered a few notches when they met the Hawks. The final score was 6-4.

Tying the Cardinal's hands was Gibson who gave up only four hits while striking out ten men. Norman Daniels, the Wesleyan Coach, gave high praise to Gibson when he said, "That boy gave us more trouble than any one at Miami."

YOUNTS CLOUTS FIRST HOMER OF SEASON AGAINST P.J.C.

The Seahawks played their way to an easy victory over Presbyterian Junior College by clubbing a total of sixteen hits. With four triples and a home run by Younts the Seahawks won the game 16-7.

On a triple by Groomes and a line single to center field by Wooten the Hawks scored two runs in the top of the first inning. In the last of the first PJC went ahead with three runs.

These runs resulted from two walks, a single, and a double.

Elliot started the second inning by getting a walk. The Seahawks tied the score when Elliott tallied on a single to right field by Cauble.

In the third, the Hawks totaled five runs to make the score 8-3. Easom, who walked, was driven in by Wooten's triple to center field. Odham drove in Pittman and Moore with a triple. He then scored on an error by the PJC shortstop.

The Scots of PJC scored two runs during their half of the third. The Seahawks controlled the game from there out.

During the rest of the game the Hawks brought an additional eight runs across the plate compared to two runs for the Scots.

The Presbyterians played a total of four pitchers against the Hawks in the rout. DeBruhl relieved Odham in the fourth after he gave up five walks, struck out one, and allowed five runs to score. DeBruhl the winning pitcher gave up two runs, two bases on balls, and struck out four.

WINGATE SQUAD ISSUES
SEAHAWKS' FIRST DEFEAT

The Seahawks lost their first baseball game of the season to Wingate by the score of 3-1. Morrow, pitching for Wingate, held the Seahawks to only four hits.

After Wooten errored allowing Carpenter to gain first, Wilmington ended Wingate's hopes in the first inning on a quick double-play by Easom to Groomes to Wells.

In the second inning, Wells led off with a double. Odham moved Wells to third on an error by the Wingate shortstop. Wells came in to score the only Seahawk run when Moore hit a long fly ball to center field. Odham was left stranded on third.

Until the seventh Wingate was held scoreless. Gibson walked McSwain who was fol-

After being rained-out of the PJC game this week, the SEAHAWKS resume their play this coming Saturday as the Braves of Chowan College journey from Murfreesboro to this historical port city.

Coach Brooks stated that "Ike" Davis will be mastering the visitors. As far as the strength of the Baptist school, only the record can be used, as our scouts have yet to see them in action. According to the information available, the lads from "up north" will enter the game Saturday with a 1 and 3 conference record.

In a recent interview with Brooks, it is believed that the three top schools in the conference so far are Louisburg, Wilmington and Campbell, with the first two in close contention for the lead slot. If the SEAHAWKS gain a victory over the Braves this weekend they will be fighting Louisburg for first place next Tuesday.

The starting line-up for the locals will be almost the same, with Billy DeBruhl on the hill and Moore behind the plate. The infield, which hasn't changed so far, will remain the same. The outfield positions of left and right will not be determined until just before game time, as these spots are dependent upon whether the visitors use a right or left handed hurler.

Another interesting item, just received, is that the Cadets of Oak Ridge Military Institute have not entered a team in league competition this year.

The SEAHAWKS' tennis and golf squads will play one of their postponed meets today as they are host to Wingate College. This is the first opportunity for the lads with the "irons and woods" to show Wilco's strength on the fairways and greens.

As for the tennis team, they have an exceptionally impressive win over Geneva College 8-3. It is expected that Taylor will again pace the netters to a win over the visitors from Wingate.

lowed by Evans, who was safe on an error by Groomes. One run scored when Carpenter hit a single to rightfield, but Evans trying also to score was out on a fine throw by Pittman.

Wingate scored two more runs, one in the eighth and one in the ninth.

In the last of the ninth, Wells singled to right field. Allen came in to run for Wells. Younts, who came in to hit for Pittman, hit a long fly ball to right field to end the game.

FOUNDATION PROJECT OF ECC BRINGS OUTSIDE ADVICE

GREENVILLE, N. C. (I.P.) — During the academic year, 1957-58, East Carolina College reports, fourteen lecture-consultants will have been brought to this campus as a part of a Danforth Foundation Project. In 1956, President John D. Messick announced that the Danforth Foundation had granted $19,500 to pursue a planned program to help the individual student "as a citizen, a parent, a parent-to-be, and . . . a person of faith."

In line with this objective, a faculty committee set up the following Project objectives: (1) to aid the general education program, (2) to help students think in terms of large problems "which defy in their ramification the artificial boundaries of departments," (3) to bring the students into immediate and direct "contact with individuals from beyond this section," (4) to sharpen the student's understanding of his complex role as a citizen in the modern and future world.

The program will continue through a three year period. The first year lecture-consultants will discuss "The Student and His Environment." This topic will relate the student to his responsibilities and opportunities in his community, region and nation. The third year Danforth Project guests will explore "The World — No Man is an Island."

Present plans anticipate 10 to 12 consultants next year to spend from three days to a week on the campus. The program is organized by a director in co-operation with faculty and student committees.

Board Of House Presidents Adopts New Social Code

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (I.P.) — The new Wesleyan University Social Code, which was adopted by the Board of House Presidents last year, has met with the approval of the Administration Committee.

Some members of the committee stated that they would have preferred certain provisions and emphasis on a few points, but all, nevertheless, approved the code and thought it was a fine statement of attitude and intent of social responsibility by the undergraduates.

Although the code was passed unaltered, the committee recommended that it remain effective until after the Junior Prom in March of 1958. At that time, the committee suggests, the code should be reviewed by a joint meeting of the Board of House Presidents and the Administration Committee and such changes as deemed necessary after a year's practice be made.

The Social Code created a mild furor when first presented to the student body, because of an "Open-Door Clause." The clause was later revised to read: "no locked doors." Both the Board of House Presidents and the Administration Committee feel that this controversial issue should not subordinate the other important expressions of student responsibility as contained in the code.

EMORY UNIVERSITY PLANS SUMMER SCHOOL IMPROVEMENT

ATLANTA, GA. (I.P.) — Action for the improvement of the summer school program at Emory University is already under way, according to an announcement by Dr. William Jones, recently appointed to the newly created post of director of Emory's summer school.

The University, according to Dr. Jones, has told each department to offer a greater number of courses next summer and in many cases to retain another member for the summer school staff. In addition, salaries for the summer quarter have been increased by 25 per cent.

Dr. S. Walter Martin, Emory president, said, "The effort to strengthen our whole structure of education will mean that more teachers will be attending summer schools. Also, an anticipated rise in undergraduate enrollment will mean more college students will attend the summer sessions." He added, "We need to make the Emory summer quarter a more significant part of the school term."

In previous years a number of high school teachers have attended Emory's teaching workshop during the first part of the summer. This year, remarked Dr. Jones, there will be emphasis not only on how to teach, but on the subject matter to be taught. Teachers taking courses in their special fields will receive graduate credit.

Plans Made For Construction At New Site

By SHIRLEY SELLERS
Managing Editor

The Wilmington College Board of Trustees has approved Route 132 near Oleander Drive as the site for the new campus.

The Buildings and Grounds Committee was directed to proceed with this acquisition at a meeting on Sept. 18. The committee will begin leveling, draining, and clearing in the near future.

Leslie N. Boney, Ballard and McKim, local architects, were appointed to design the buildings at a special meeting of the board on Sept. 22. The board selected Dr. William Randall, Wilmington College president, as the general liaison.

The architects are proceeding to make a topographic survey of the land. From this survey, they will collaborate to draw up the master plan for the new college. These plans will include a detailed design of the two main units.

Actual construction on the college is scheduled to begin in early spring when final plans should be completed. Occupancy of the buildings is set for the fall quarter of 1960.

The board has approximately $1,000,000 to start construction on the college. With this fund, the architects hope to build classrooms, a lab, a library, and an administration building. Together, these buildings will span approximately 72,900 square feet.

Route 132, the site of the new college, is commonly known as Monkey Junction Road. The site is located 4 1/10 of a mile north of Oleander Drive. This tract of land runs 3000 feet along the highway, and 6000 feet east of it. The other corner is 1 1/10 miles long.

These lots were purchased from Ralford Trask and the International Paper Company. Options are drawn on two other adjacent plots which are about 80 acres in size. Negotiations are underway for their purchase.

The basic plan for the other buildings consists of a gymnasium-auditorium, to be built specifically for physical education (both sexes) but for no spectator sports. The plan also includes a science building and other classrooms.

Future enrollment in the college is estimated at 2500 by 1969.

Wolfe Elected President Of Frosh Class

Tommy Wolfe won the presidency of the freshman class in elections held last month.

Other officers installed were Jim Fountain, vice-president; Kay Sholar, secretary; and representatives Gene Ballard and Sonny Lanier.

Wolfe, a recent graduate of New Hanover, was an active member of several clubs while in high school. He is an avid sportsman, and places swimming and water skiing at the top of his recreational list.

While in high school, New Hanover graduate Fountain also participated in various clubs and served on many committees. He was president of the Esquires. His main interests include skin diving and chess.

Miss Sholar, another graduate of New Hanover, held club offices throughout her high school years. She was homeroom chairman in her sophomore year. Her first year in college keeps her busy, not only in the position of secretary, but as a member of the annual staff. Kay delights in keeping a scrapbook of her high school and college memories.

Doctor Among Faculty Additions To College

Four new teachers were added to the Wilmington College faculty this fall.

Doctor JoAnn Corbett joined the English department, Thomas Lupton and Thomas Brown became members of the math department, and David Collins gained a position in the engineering section.

Two of the new faculty additions are native South Carolinians. Dr. Corbett is from McBee, S. C., and Collins hails from Columbia.

All four newcomers graduated from college in the Carolinas. Lupton graduated from East Carolina College, Brown from the University of North Carolina, Dr. Corbett from Coker College (S.C.), and Collins from the University of South Carolina.

The credentials of Dr. Corbett rival those of nearly any member of the faculty. She has studied at universities in four countries other than the United States.

After graduating from McBee High School, she entered Coker

College, where she received her A.B. degree.

Dr. Corbett then embarked on her foreign studies. She attended the University of Mexico for a while, and then moved to the University of Montreal. On her 28th birthday, the young scholar received a Ph. D. degree from Montreal.

After studying at the University of Paris, Mrs. Corbett attended Oxford University before returning to the United States.

The newly acquired English professor is an accomplished pianist and violinist. Lupton, a professor of physics and calculus, attended high school in Greenville, N. C. He graduated from East Carolina in 1954.

After receiving his bachelor's degree, Lupton served three years in the Air Force as a pilot.

He is still working toward his master's degree, taking weekend courses at ECC.

Collins, an electrical engineering instructor, is a World War II Navy veteran.

The war interrupted his studies at Clemson, but he returned to college afterwards and graduated from South Carolina.

Soon after graduation, Collins moved to Washington, D. C., with the Corps of Engineers. He is still a member of the Corps at the Customs House in Wilmington.

Collins taught at a trade school in the Port City before coming to Wilmington College. He is a lover of sports, and is a member of the Wilmington Chess Club.

Brown is the only native Wilmingtonian of the new acquisitions. He teaches math at New Hanover and algebra for the college.

A graduate of New Hanover, Brown is a former business manager of James Walker Hospital. He taught for nine years before joining James Walker, and returned to his chosen profession after five years at the hospital.

He graduated from North Carolina, where he majored in mathematics and French.

College Has Increase In Enrollment

Evidence that the college is growing by leaps and bounds is found in the 1958 College Autumn Enrollment Report. A total of 199 freshman men and 85 freshman women are registered this year. This is the largest freshman class in the history of the college.

Sophomore men total 145, and sophomore women number 42. Nurses add up to 48, making a total enrollment of 519 students.

New Hanover County registers 326 students, with Brunswick placing second with 31.

Pender County is represented by 21 students. Columbus and Onslow occupy fourth and fifth places, 19 and 14 students, respectively. Of North Carolina's 100 counties, 36 are represented at Wilmington College.

Fourteen of the 48 states sent WC students, the most distant being Michigan.

Cuba and Jordan each have one student here.

Enrolled in the adult education courses are 30 Air Force Reserves. The engineering refresher course has 27 students.

At the Williston branch, freshmen and nurses total 68, the freshman men leading all classes with 24, and the nurses taking second place with 18.

Mixed Chorus Preparing For Winter Events

The Wilmington College Mixed Chorus is making plans for a banner year of entertainment for lovers of good music.

The chorus, which meets on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 11:30 a.m. in the high school music room, is directed by Loyd Hudson.

This year the chorus consists of 22 members. Hudson hopes it will continue to grow.

In the chorus this year are four sopranos, eight altos, three tenors, six bases, and a competent piano player, Mary Kay Thompkins.

Hudson has a list of presentations already planned for the chorus. For Christmas it will present a program for the Rotary Club, which will feature Tommy Teague and Guy Willets as soloists. In the future, around February, Hudson hopes to present a musical production for the public.

Might Without Imagination

A vast portion of the civilized world, especially the United States, is gradually transforming into a mechanized giant with little depth and virtually no imagination. Life itself has become merely an endless race for industrial and scientific superiority.

Since the Second World War, parents and teachers have been working to convince America's youth that the future of this country depends upon how much technical and scientific knowledge can be stockpiled. This technological impetus has been spurred by the nuclear arms race with Russia and the drive for outer space penetration.

The campaign for scientific progress has born fruit in recent years. Students of high school and college age have heard so much about those all-important necessities of modern existence that they mold their education, reading habits and extra-curricular activities around the constant search for technical knowledge.

More and more engineering schools are sprouting up in the national educational scene. Math departments are being enlarged, scientific labs are being modernized, observatories and experimentation facilities are growing out of universities and colleges throughout the country. Potential high salaries of engineers, scientists, researchers and technicians beckon like Eldorado the young high school graduate who is at the crossroads of decision.

But one question remains unanswered: Where, in this frenzied scramble for technical perfection, do the arts belong?

Apparently, they have been lost, or at least partially obscured. The ponderousness of the sciences proved the victorious element—the delicate arts didn't have a chance.

Once the pupil learned English, composition, literature, arts and music appreciation, philosophy, and one or more foreign languages. Now he (or she) monopolizes his educational probings with such insensitive subjects as calculus, algebra, chemistry, trigonometry and special technical courses.

The recent college graduate who is adept in even the fundamentals of the English language is a rare find indeed. Even rarer is the professional person who has the vaguest knowledge of the philosophy of Bertrand Russell or the symbolism in "Moby Dick."

Ours is a unique society. We consider ourselves the most intelligent and advanced people in the world, yet the average college graduate here would be lost in a cultural conversation with an educated European. So long as the U.S. "expert" associates with people in his own profession, he is eloquent, entertaining, compatible. But what does he discuss in conversation with acquaintances who know little or nothing about his line of work? The average engineer, for instance, may become a confused wallflower if a discussion swerves toward Milton or the theory of pragmatism.

Training in the humanities gives the student knowledge and experience not obtainable in any other field of study. The student of the arts doesn't learn a profession or trade. He doesn't learn how to be an expert in a job that will gain for him a huge salary. He doesn't learn the intricacies of building a complicated rocket, or the mysterious formula for liberating the atom, or even the comparatively simple procedure of drafting a house plan. He gains knowledge of a subject that many technical experts consider inconsequential—the study of his fellow man.

Granted, if the U.S. is to retain its position as the dominant world power, its youth must continue to strive for the secrets that will uncover the mysteries of outer space and nuclear might. We must also constantly surge forward in economic and industrial areas.

But we must not stifle our imagination and understanding of cultural problems in this scientific progression. The strongest nation in the world cannot long endure if its inhabitants are mechanized "robots," brilliant technicians with no versatility or creativeness.

CLUB CORNER

By GAIL BALDWIN

The Engineering Club, which meets the last Monday of each month, has held two meetings since the start of school. The first meeting was held at the college and the second at the Famous Club.

For this year the club has planned many activities, including tours to various places such as Babcock and Wilcox and Sunny Point. During the year other tours will be conducted to interesting places in the Wilmington area. A major project is to place the club emblem in the "Pub."

Officers of the Engineering Club this year are: Lee Barefoot, president; John Courtright, vice-president; Shella Robinson, secretary; Donald Barefoot, treasurer.

CIRCLE-K CLUB

The Circle-K Club, sponsored by the local Kiwanis Club, meets every other Wednesday night at 7:30 in the Friendly Cafeteria. This year the club has a total membership of 19, nine of whom are new members.

Officers are: Jackie Brazeale, president; Tom McKee, vice-president; Jim Hudson, treasurer; and Tommy MacCallum, secretary. The directors are Jack Yow and David Surrat, and the faculty advisor is Mr. Lupton.

This summer a national convention was held at the Sam Houston State Teachers College in Huntsville, Texas. Three members from Wilmington attended the three-day convention. They were Brazeale, Hudson and Surrat. Brain-storming sessions were held in which members of different clubs assembled and discussed their individual club projects of the past year. The members who attended feel that their experience will help them in the club activities this year.

During the summer the members painted the "Pub" and also donated a large floor fan for the comfort of the students and faculty. Another project was putting faculty signs up in the parking lot. Additional projects are being discussed for the coming year.

DRAMATICS CLUB

The Dramatics Club at Wilmington College was formed on September 23. A constitution was drawn up by the officers, and it is now an official club of Wilmington College.

College Gains First Monthly Newspaper

The progress of THE SEAHAWK is keeping pace with the unflinching growth of Wilmington College.

In 1947, its first year of existence, Wilmington College had no such thing as a regular student newspaper. Mimeographed tabloids were issued intermittently during those early years, but not until 1957 did the student body try to produce a bona fide college periodical.

Seven editions of THE SEAHAWK were published last year. These were the first Wilmington College newspapers printed—not mimeographed.

Throughout this school year, WC students will be free subscribers to the school's first monthly newspaper—a four-page publication replete with up-to-date news, features, sports, pictures, cartoons and social items.

THE SEAHAWK will be circulated at the end of each month. Copies will be stacked in the main lobby, the library, the Pub, and the hallways.

A feature of the newspaper will be a monthly column written by Shirleh Sellers, managing editor of THE SEAHAWK. Miss Sellers will write on the major topics of interest to WC students, selecting her topics from people, happenings and the light side of the news.

Another regular item will be Rexford Piner's faculty column. Piner, an English instructor, will report on teachers' news and social slants.

Gary Darden, sports editor of THE SEAHAWK, will keep WC students informed of athletic news and will write a monthly column with emphasis on the "inside story." Darden has been active in Port City athletics for many years, and will use this experience to report thoroughly all games and feature items about the Seahawks.

A regular column of club news, written by Gail Baldwin, will also be a feature of this year's paper. Miss Baldwin will keep informed of all activities and meetings of the various college clubs in order to keep her column as complete and accurate as possible.

The WC publications board selected the executive editor and business manager of THE SEAHAWK in a meeting shortly after the opening of school last month. Dan Greene was awarded the editorship and JoAnn Davis was installed as business manager.

Greene, an English major at WC, has been a professional journalist for five years. He is from Washington, D. C.

Miss Sellers, editor-in-chief of the New Hanover High School newspaper last year, is the managing editor of THE SEAHAWK. While attending NHHS, she was also a school Senator, a member of the Executive Committee, a delegate to the Southern Interscholastic Press Assn., and a delegate to the North Carolina Student Congress Convention.

Also a 1958 graduate of NHHS, Miss Davis has the job of selling advertisement and handling other business matters pertinent to the publication of the newspaper. Last year she was an assistant feature editor of the high school paper, a member of the school's House Of Representatives and an R.O.T.C. sponsor.

Sportswriter Darden also graduated from New Hanover, after which he served four years in the Navy. He is a business administration major in his sophomore year.

Reporters are Miss Baldwin, Bob Olsen, Frances Creech, Linda Creech, Tommy Landen, Margaret Shackelford, Brenda Liles and Judy Murray.

Olsen is a former public relations officer for the Army. He will cover the college administration beat and will also write features.

Misses Baldwin, Creech, Shackelford, Liles and Murray are all recent graduates of New Hanover, as is Landen.

Jimmy Russ, former staff photographer for the Wilmington Star-News, is chief photographer for the college paper this year. A 1953 graduate of New Hanover High, Russ served two years with the Army in Germany.

Churches Of Many Denominations Here

By BRENDA LILES

Staff Writer

For the college student, Wilmington has much to offer in the way of religious facilities.

There are many churches near the college in which one may take an active part in the religious activities.

Baptists are doubly fortunate for there are two churches nearby—Temple Baptist in the 1800 block of Market Street and First Baptist at 5th and Market.

Presbyterians have St. Andrews Covenant, only a block away from the college on Market Street.

Methodists need only to cross the street.

St. Andrews Episcopal is only two blocks distant, and a Lutheran church is about five blocks.

Morning services at all of these churches start at 11:00 a.m. Evening services are at 7:30 p.m.

Saint Mary's Catholic Church, at 5th and Orange, has two early masses at 8 and 9 a.m., and another at 11 a.m.

Vacation is not too long away . . . two weekends and five whole days. November 21-30 classes will not be held. For some it will mean travel and visiting. For others it will mean a lot of good food, and just plain sleep. Joe Wooten plans to spend his vacation a bit differently. He will go home to have his tonsils removed . . . No turkey for Joe.

Students were very enthused recently when a teacher-friend of ours, Mrs. Pauline Smith, found her car stuck in the faculty parking lot. A crowd cheered and roared with laughter as Mrs. Smith changed gears, rocked back and forth, but still remained stuck. Wilbur Brown then took over the wheel, started the car and immediately pulled Mrs. Smith out of her dilemma.

For the past several weeks, girls have been limping around school as if they were crippled for life. They have hobbled up steps, crept into desks, and moaned and groaned about their aching bones. The whole trouble is cheerleader tryouts. Last year's cheerleaders have been practicing with a large group of girls every day at designated hours, trying to teach cheers that the girls will use when they try out for the team November 3. Barbara Jones, Norma Brazeale, Katherine Woodcock, De Ann Estes, and Jean Willard are just a few of the many girls who hope to be elected cheerleaders for the Seahawk team this year.

Student nurses at Wilmington College don't learn only anatomy. Sometimes this class gets a little mischievous. Recently when the girls were dissecting rats and pigs, one of the girls cut off a rat's tail, and attached it to the back of a girl-friend's dress. As the victim walked down the hall, laughter was heard as far as the office. Has anyone seen the lost rat tail?

SEAHAWK CAGERS PRIMING FOR HOME OPENER

Report On Sports

By Gary Darden

In the past eleven years Wilmington College has progressed tremendously in sports. Today this school of 520 students is recognized as one of the outstanding junior colleges in the state in sports activities. The records of previous years clearly substantiate this prominence.

DARDEN

This rapid advancement has been unnoticed by the majority of local sports fans. They still think of the college as they would think of a child before starting to walk. After the child walks, people take notice, but before this splendid accomplishment, he is just another cute baby.

Wilmington College has been out of the crib for some time, and it's high time the local sports people realized it.

The average fan still thinks of sports in this area strictly on the high school level. It's hard for him to awaken to the fact that we now have athletics on the college level also.

This year's basketball squad has more potential than any team in the school's history. Barring serious injuries, the Seahawks should go a long way in junior college competition.

The tennis team won the junior college state championship last year and will be out to defend that crown again next season.

The golf and baseball teams also had impressive records last year. The latter won the junior college baseball championship of the Carolinas.

All these teams deserve support and appreciation. This appeal is not in the first person alone. It is an appeal from the whole student body to all local fans and those who are new to Wilmington.

Even the students cannot fully appreciate the athletic activities unless first the native Wilmington fans show that they are proud of this school and its teams by their attendance at home games. This attendance will have a big effect on the development of future sports at the new college, which will be built in the near future.

Help make Seahawk teams the best by your appreciative support!

There are lot of factors that go into making a great basketball team. Most important of all is height. No matter how skillful a club is, there must be height to make that club one of championship caliber.

Basketball is like a wheel. The spokes in the wheel are speed, deception, desire to win, poise, stamina, bench strength, ball-handling and shooting accuracy. In the middle of this wheel is a hub. The spokes fasten to the hub and form one complete unit. This unit is strong because there is a central power to control it. If the hub were to break, the spokes would begin to crook, bend and finally become separate units, each of no value to the other.

Height is this hub. A basketball team is built around its height. The lack of height does not ruin a team physically, as in the case of the wheel, but it certainly does hamper its chances for a winning season.

The tall boys must control that ball if their team is to work plays and score.

This year's Seahawk team has the hub and the making of the spokes. If these parts can be blended into a strong wheel, opponents are warned to beware.

Towering Freshmen Place Varsity In Position Of Major Challenger

Basketball breaks into the spotlight at Wilmington College Nov. 21.

The 1958 edition of the Seahawk basketball team makes its debut against Fredericks Junior College of Portsmouth, Va. The game will be played in Brodgen Hall starting at 8 p.m.

Pete Meadows, former coach of Edwards Military Institute, is in charge of the Fredericks team.

Coach Bill Brooks has only one man returning from the 1957-58 squad, Joel Gibson of Gastonia, S. C., better known for his pitching feats with the baseball club, was a reserve forward last winter but is a strong candidate for a regular berth on this year's team.

With Ron Paladini, Danny Parham and Denny Lutz pouring in points and Bill Mathias and Jerry Taylor setting-up plays, the Seahawks last season raced to second place in the North Carolina Junior College basketball tournament at Campbell College. It was the first time a Wilmington College cage team had ever reached the championship finals.

Two recruits from Indiana — Paladini and Lutz — were the big reasons for the Hawks' success last year. They were the high scorers and formed a feared combination of rugged back-board work and deadly scoring.

Lutz was voted the "most outstanding player" of the state tournament.

All five regular 1957-58 starters are missing from this year's roster. Lutz received a scholarship to North Carolina State, Paladini transferred to Missouri State Teachers College, Parham married and is now working in Wilmington, and Taylor and Mathias are both in the Coast Guard.

The Seahawks suffered through many lean years before springing into prominence last winter. But that runner-up unit seems to have been the start of a steady rise to power for the local cagers, who should be a major challenger for the title again this season.

Brooks is rebuilding his basketball force, but he's not exactly worried. He has brought in a glittering array of talent from six states other than North Carolina, and the height offered by the recruits promises to make this the tallest WC squad in history.

Three players over 6-3 are listed among the newcomers, and most of the others measure at least 6-1. The tallest recruit, Dick Brennan of New York City, towers at a lofty 6-8.

Just two inches shorter is lanky Ted Williams, who is a shade over 6-6. Williams hails from Stroudsburg, Pa.

Brennan, one of the tallest players ever to wear a Seahawk uniform, was selected for four city newspaper all-star teams while in high school and was an honorable mention choice on the All-New York City squad.

Three 1958 graduates of New Hanover are fighting for starting roles on the WC squad. Jackie Bullard and Ronnie White were both Wildcat starters last year and Jimmy Helms was a reserve who saw considerable action for the state champs.

Bullard, a solid 6-3 forward, made the honorable mention list of the all-state team and was the high scorer of the state AAA tournament at Greensboro.

Two of the most promising recruits are Larry Lindsey of Youngsville, N. C., and Jerry Fritz of Singac, N. J. Lindsey, a 6-1 ball-handling artist, was a member of the N. C. State frosh unit last year. Fritz, also 6-1, played for the powerful Camp Lejeune team before entering Wilmington College.

Another newcomer with impressive credentials is Bob McLoughlin of Jersey City, N. J., a former high school All-American.

Joe Wooten, who helped to make the Seahawk infield one of the sturdiest in the conference last baseball season, is bidding for one of the basketball positions. He averaged 20 points per game while playing for Dallas High School.

Other varsity candidates are Chuck Fearn of Danbury, Conn., an all-state high school selection; Ed Miastkowski of Long Island, N. Y., who averaged 22 points per game in high school; and Jerry Richardson, an all-district player while at Kingsport High (Tenn.).

Members of the 1957-58 cage team who won't be back this winter are Lutz, Paladini, Parham, Mathias, Taylor, Harry Odham, Bill Elliot, Stacy Wells and John Durner.

WILMINGTON GRADUATES IN UNIFORM
L. to R.: Bill Mathias, Jerry Taylor

Former Hawks Now In U. S. Coast Guard

Two former Wilmington College basketball stars, Jerry Taylor and Bill Mathias, are currently serving in the U. S. Coast Guard. Taylor and Mathias, both Wilmington natives, enlisted together for six months of active duty in the Coast Guard Reserve after graduating last June.

The ex-Seahawks completed 13 weeks of basic training at the U. S. Coast Guard Receiving Center, Cape May, N. J., last month.

Seaman Apprentice Taylor was assigned to advanced small-arms training. He will receive advanced training in seamanship aboard the U. S. Coast Guard Cutter UNIMAK and at the U. S. Coast Guard Training Station, Groton, Conn.

Seaman Apprentice Mathias was also assigned to the Cutter UNIMAK at Groton.

Both men will be released in time to return to college for the start of the February semester. Taylor will enter the University of Maryland on a tennis scholarship.

Mathias and Taylor were instrumental in the Seahawks' spectacular comeback to win the runner-up trophy in the North Carolina Junior College Basketball Tournament last winter.

Net Coach Needs Varsity Candidates

A call-out has been issued by coach Tanky Meier for all students interested in playing on the varsity tennis team.

Meier has not yet set a date for the start of practice, but he plans to hold light workouts in the near future. Candidates are asked to register with Bill Brooks, head athletic coach.

Wilmington College won the junior college tennis championship last season, but a whole new group will defend the title this time. The entire championship unit of George Langston, Charles Hunnicutt, Jerry Taylor, Frank Purnell and Bob Weeks is gone.

Meier faces a large rebuilding job this year, but he has a good nucleus of promising prospects.

ABRAHAM BEDWAN
Student From Jordan

New Student Is Native Of Jordan

BY TOMMY LANDEN
Staff Writer

"I thank teachers and students for their help and for everything they have done to make me happy here. I wish all the American people a happy life."

The speaker was Abraham Ali Bedwan, a young Wilmington College student from Beitein, Jordan, a village ten miles from Jerusalem.

Bedwan's early education consisted of twelve years at Ibrahimy College in Jerusalem. While there, he was a member of the school soccer team.

Abraham left his home at the age of 19 to come to North Carolina. He lives here with his father, Ali Bedwan, and two brothers, Zuhier and Munier Ali Bedwan.

Studying at his own expense, by working in a wholesale business with his uncle, Ahmed Mohammed, Abraham is working to improve his English, which is good considering the short period of time he has been in this country.

After this year he plans to take mechanical engineering in a four-year college or university.

Abraham hopes to stay in the United States and attain his citizenship either through military service or the five-year Immigration Law.

Bedwan comes from a land with customs far different from those of the U.S. One difference he notes is that the men and women in Jordan attend separate schools.

The students there, however, are becoming Americanized, he reports. They wear American clothes and enjoy many of our recreations. The traditional national clothing is still worn by the older people, however, and by everyone on special occasions as reminders of the old Jordan.

Mohr, Hansley Picked For Roles In Play

"The Boy With the Cart," a play by Christopher Fry, will be presented by the college Dramatics Club in December.

Annel Mohr and Ray Hansley will be in the lead roles.

Tryouts were held in the college auditorium on October 28, with many students turning out for the castings. Mrs. Doug Swink chose the following students: Sandra Horrel as Tawn's daughter, and Sandra Pluta as Mrs. Pipp. The remaining characters had not been named at press time.

Mexico Is Land Of 'Ahorita' To Teachers of Spanish Language

(Mr. and Mrs. Cheek, with their two sons, spent a month of their summer vacation driving through Mexico. Cheek is principal of Hemenway Elementary School and teaches a Spanish class in the college. His wife teaches Spanish and French here.)

BY LAWRENCE CHEEK JR.
Spain is called the land of "manana," because most things are done tomorrow—and tomorrow is "manana" in Spanish.

Mexico is the land of "ahorita," because when you ask for service, they always say, "Ahorita," which means "Right away," although things are usually done "manana" instead.

Yet for another reason Mexico was the land of "ahorita" to my family last summer, whereas Spain still remains the land of "manana." We have yet to go to Spain. But last summer we did go to Mexico—by car.

Four thousand miles south of the border we covered, driving on roads that range from a series of holes tied together with irregular links of asphalt to roads that are sheer marvels of engineering — stupendous, colossal achievements, incredible in their very existence.

There are roads that get you across wide gorges and bottomless, spell-binding canyons — even though you go ten miles to net two. There are roads that carry you breathless ever upward, through gaps between grandiose, volcanic, snow-covered peaks, towering 17,000 feet or more across the sky. There are roads that plunge you into a perilous, ear-cracking descent with literally 100 or more hairpin turns and not a sign of a barrier to break your fall should you go over the edge.

Then there are roads through deserts with mesquite, scrub palms, prickly pear, barrel and organ cactus and maguey; or roads through coffee and banana trees in a lush tropical setting.

There are roads by lovely lakes and roads through fertile valleys. There are roads where coconut-laden palms wave over rocky cliffs at the white and turquoise Pacific, or roads where first fields of sugar cane and then sisal, between the rare hurricanes, look upon the placid Gulf of Mexico.

And too, there are roads where asphalt yields to cobblestone as they meander deceptively through small siesta-infected villages.

Four thousand miles of these roads we traveled from Nuevo Laredo to Monterrey, Saltillo, San Luis Potosi, Guadalajara, Uruapan, Morelia, Toluca, Taxco, Acapulco, Cuernavaca, Oaxaca, Puebla, Orizaba, Vera Cruz, Mexico City, Tamazunchale, Valles, Victoria, and Matamoros.

A hundred times everywhere we sent the filet mignons, which were surprisingly inexpensive, back to the kitchen for more cooking only to find them still bleeding—rare when returned.

Our car was filled with gasol-mexalina at 30c a gallon when we could get it, and spluttered on super mexalina at 25c a gallon when we couldn't. We wondered what would happen if we were forced to fill with mexalina at 20c a gallon.

Dodging peons, females bedecked with jars, yoked oxen, wood-laden burros, and occasional rock-slides, we looked often at snow-capped Popocatepetl, Ixtaccihuatl and Otizaba; stared in disbelief at the giant tree of Tule, 160 feet in diameter; managed to see the Zapotec ruins at Mitla and the Aztec Pyramids and Temples at San Juan Teotihuacan.

We bought silver in Taxco and sarapes in Oaxaca only to find we could buy them for twice the price in Sanbourns in Mexico City. And in Mexico City we saw a skyscraper seven times higher than the Empire State Building, because it starts at 7,000 feet above sea level.

Occasionally repelling, sometimes bewildering, but usually intriguing, Mexico is truly a travelope of enchantment, a land of fascinating, stirring contrasts.

Zeb's Cure-All

Profs In The News

Everybody's a doctor . . . Professor George "Uncle Zeb" Zebrowski has a remedy he claims will cure almost everything but a broken heart. It's synthetic oil of wintergreen, which he says is effective treatment for acne and insect bites. Don't get it in your eyes though, or you'll go blind; he's tried it on rats.

Passing out cigars . . . Calvin Doss, instructor in engineering, is the proud father of a newborn son, John Smith by name. If you'll plead with him, he may allow you to see several snapshots of Mommy and Daddy with the new offspring. John Davis, associate professor of engineering, has also added to his family — a son named Robert Christopher. These engineers!

Hustling for ECC . . . One of East Carolina's staunchest supporters is George Lyons, assistant professor of social sciences. Lyons was instrumental in organizing an East Carolina Boosters Club here this fall and recently led a group of loyal alumni to East Carolina's Homecoming celebration where they watched the Pirates run over the Catamounts of Western Carolina. Lyons is a very active member of the Wilmington Exchange Club which sponsored the football game between the freshman teams of East Carolina and The Citadel here this fall behind his leadership.

"Your Voice Is Your Fortune" . . . This is the title of an article that appears in the October issue of the North Carolina English Teacher. Written by Miss Catherine Noyes, associate professor of English, is the result of inspiration she received while attending the Summer Conference of the North Carolina English Teachers Association which convened at the University of North Carolina.

Smile for a smile . . . Heard a professor use this one: " . . . like trying to round up a herd of fleas into a snuff box."

Alumni seen . . . Members of the faculty who travel to East Carolina for graduate study frequently run into former Wilmington College students who transferred there. We are very proud of our students who are doing so well at other colleges. Recently seen on the ECC campus were Linda Hines, Charles King, James Lanier, and Donald Lennon.

Hi-Fi Fan . . . Not only has John Davis added a new member to his family, but he has added a study to his house and purchased a hi-fi set. He and Dean Marshall Crews purchased a large quantity of records from a local radio station for a couple of bucks, then Davis invested in the hi-fi set so he could play the records. The study was built so he could get away from it all.

PINER

Pen-Pushers Hold Meetings Each Week

Regular meetings of the Pen-Pushers Club are being held in Room 202 every Friday at 12:30, under the supervision of Miss Shannon Morton.

At the first meeting, officers were elected. Carlton Rhodes was elected president, Shirleah Sellers vice-president and program chairman, Peggy Aldridge secretary-treasurer, and Louise Floyd editor of the Pen Pushers' annual publication, "With Pen in Hand." Sandra Pluta was appointed social chairman.

Two Plays Scheduled By Dramatics Group

Comedy Slated For Dec. 15 Showing Here

Two plays will be presented this quarter by the college Dramatics Club.

The first, "Poor Aubrey," will be given on Dec. 15, and the second, "The Boy with a Cart," will be offered the latter part of January.

Directed by Mrs. Doug Swink, "The Boy with a Cart" is a religious play written by Christopher Fry.

"Poor Aubrey," a domestic comedy by George Kelly, will be presented at a morning assembly in the auditorium. A three-act version of this play titled "Show Off" enjoyed a long run on Broadway.

The play has a setting in the early 1920's. Included in the cast are Jean Williard as "Amy," Betty Hall as "Mrs. Fisher," Margaret Shackelford as "Mrs. Cole" and Criss Koum-parakis as "Aubrey."

The entire student body and faculty are invited to attend this initial dramatic presentation.

A large cast has been selected for the January production, which has Ray Hansley in the starring role as "Cuthman."

Others in the cast are Louise Floyd as "Bess," Barbara Jones as "Mildred," Annell Mohr as the mother, Bill McCall as "Matt," Tommy Wallace as "Alfred" and "Tib," Tommy Landen as "Tawn," Sandra Horrell as the daughter, and Jimmy Smith as the son-in-law. Sandra Pluta will portray "Mrs. Fipps" and Gilbert Tillett has the part of "Demiwolf."

The mowers will be Margaret Shackelford, Jean Williard and Betty Hall, and the neighbors are Linda Crech, Fran Crech, Sybil McGinnis and Brenda Liles.

No admission will be charged for this play, and the public is invited.

Yearbook Is Molding Into Shape

Wilmington's annual, the Fledgling, is gradually molding into shape, according to the yearbook staff.

And if evidence available at the present time can be taken as an indication, this annual will be the most distinctive in the history of the college.

Two major reasons are given for its potential superiority over former yearbooks: It will contain more pages of a better quality—yet will sell at a lower price than previously.

A big feature will be colored pages. This will be one of the few editions of the Fledgling (Continued on Page 4, Col. 4)

Five Coeds Selected As College Beauties

By LINDA CREECH
Staff Writer

Who are the most beautiful females in Wilmington College?

The male student body answered this question by ballot last month. According to the men (who should know), the five fairest beauties are Judy Horne, Annell Mohr, Sandra Horrell, Sheila Robinson and Jo Ann Davis.

This stunning quintet was selected to adorn the college yearbook as the "Fledgling Beauties."

Only one blonde, Miss Mohr, was selected. Three of the beauties are brunettes and Miss Davis has auburn hair.

A native of Whiteville, Miss Horne stands 5-5 and has dark brown hair which matches her eyes. She plans to graduate from Wilmington before moving to New York, where she will enter the Barbizon Modeling School.

After succeeding in my career," Miss Horne plans to marry fellow student Jim Fountain and live on a boat.

Miss Mohr, a radiant blonde with hazel eyes, is also 5-5. A transfer student from Wingate College, where she was feature editor of the annual, Annell is expected to continue her education at East Carolina College next year, where she will study advertising and merchandising.

She has the female lead in "The Boy with a Cart," the Dramatics Club's scheduled presentation for January.

While at Wingate, Miss Mohr was president of Delta Psi Omega, a national honorary dramatics society, and was a Recitation Award winner.

Another member of the Dramatics Club who was singled out for her beauty is Miss Horrell, a native of Atkinson who stands 5-4. She also plans to enter ECC, as an education major.

In addition to her dramatics efforts here, Sandra is the business manager of the Fledgling. A brunette with black hair and brown eyes, she hopes to teach the fifth grade in elementary school after receiving her degree.

Noted for her warm smile and pleasing personality, Miss Robinson is the smallest of the beauties at 5-2. She has dark brown hair and blue eyes.

Although completely feminine in appearance, Sheila is studying to enter a profession that has been dominated by men—mechanical engineering. She plans to transfer to North Carolina State next year to work toward her degree.

Miss Robinson is editor of the annual and secretary of the Engineers Club.

Fair-haired Jo Ann Davis is the tallest member of the glamorous group at 5-7. She has auburn hair and hazel eyes.

Engineers Study New School Site

An engineering team surveying the land at the new Wilmington College campus site was expected to report on its findings this week.

The survey team, under the supervision of local engineer M. H. Lander, has been studying the topography of the site on Route 132 near Oleander Drive. The surveyors are charged with the task of determining which section possesses the best advantages for drainage and leveling.

A topographic report must be submitted to the architectural firms of Leslie N. Boney and Ballard & McKim before plans can be started. Then the architects will analyze the survey report and draw up a preliminary program which they will present to the Buildings and Grounds Committee for recommendations.

Students Organize WC Dance Band

Wilmington College now has an official dance band.

The 13-piece band was organized by Tommy Wallace at the start of the school year. It is directed by William Adcock.

Specializing in arrangements by Art Dietrick, Stan Kenton and Glenn Miller, the band was an instant success at the dance following the Seahawks' first basketball game Nov. 21.

Musicians in the group include Wallace, Wayne Lanier, Ronnie Piner, Gene Murray, Gilbert Tillett, Maurice Canady, Bernard Wilson, Jack Breazeale, Wesley Piner, Jack Burnish and Lynn Fales.

The band consists of three trumpets, three trombones, two tenor saxophones, two alto saxophones, a baritone sax, a bass and drums.

According to Leslie N. Boney Jr., the project is now in the "area development stage." He reported last week that the two collaborating architectural firms will be in a position to start work on the preliminary plans sometime this month.

Tentative plans call for construction to begin before next summer. The new college is expected to be open for the September 1960 term.

Route 132, site of the new college, is commonly known as Monkey Junction Road. The school will be located on a tract of land approximately 4/10 of a mile north of Oleander Drive.

Tentative plans have been proposed for an instructional building and an administration building.

The instructional building which would be 37,600 square feet, would house 24 class rooms, ten laboratories, 25 faculty offices, four equipment rooms and two lecture rooms. Approximate cost of this building would be $451,200.

Classrooms would be assigned to the following departments: Art, Biology (2), Business, Chemistry (2), Engineering (2), English (4), Health, Mathematics (4), Merchandising, Modern Languages (2), Physics, and Social Sciences (3). Laboratory facilities would be furnished for art, biology, business, chemistry, engineering and physics.

A preliminary proposal calls for the administration building to span 27,900 square feet. It would cost $334,800.

This building would have six administrative offices, a reading room, a work room, two conference rooms, a librarian's office, and a book storage room. It would also hold a large room for recreation, a student store, and an auditorium.

Lab Instructor Plans Yule Vacation In West

A North Carolinian's impression of Christmas is one with suggestions of holly, evergreens, indoor parties and possibly a trace of snow.

One instructor at Wilmington College has an entirely different idea of the winter holidays, however. His name is Frank Allen, and he is a real roper and ridin' cowboy from Nevada.

None of this "yuletide before the hearth" for Allen. He's heading west—for the open plains, the mountains, the ranges.

Allen, a biology lab instructor at the college and assistant principal of Tileston Junior High School, plans to spend his two-week Christmas vacation in Las Vegas, Nevada.

What will he and his family do during the holiday? The same things other cowboys do, naturally.

Allen reports his four sons are looking forward to prospecting, digging for arrowheads and camping out in the open. Of course, he will accompany them on these adventures, but he and his wife also expect to take advantage of the night life in Las Vegas.

A former Brigham Young University (Provo, Utah) student, Allen did graduate work at North Carolina State and East Carolina College.

He was raised on a ranch, and is familiar with all phases of range life. While living in Nevada, he raised horses and cattle, and sold polo ponies to the "prune-pickers" or Californians.

Allen has lived in Wilmington seven years.

Degrees Cost Too Much

Preservation of democratic ideals depends upon education—not only of the wealthy and bourgeoisie, but of everyone who is willing to accept it. This is a truth so obvious that it could not have been ignored these past 171 years since the adoption of the Constitution. Yet, even now, education above the high school level is out of reach of thousands who cannot pay the high price our society has placed on a "commodity" that should be offered free.

The importance of education for all citizens, even those unable to meet the financial cost, was recognized as early as 1784 by Thomas Jefferson. "By that part of our plan which prescribes the selection of the youths of genius from among the classes of the poor," wrote Jefferson, "we hope to avail the State of those talents which nature has sown as liberally among the poor as the rich, but which perish without use, if not sought for and cultivated."

When these words were written, Jefferson was campaigning for a free public school system. His plan was revolutionary in a period when reading and writing were generally reserved for the rich. But it eventually blossomed into the vast system of public schooling that is today such a valuable part of our democratic life.

In most states now, children are entitled to free schooling through the twelfth grade. The amount of knowledge that can be acquired in 12 years was more than enough to meet the requirements of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. Before the advent of the utilitarian atom, the Sputnik and the hydrogen bomb, life was not so complicated that a college education was necessary in order to obtain the full advantage of our society.

But this is a new age—one of complicated problems, of ever-increasing threats to humanity itself, of campaigns to uncover all the mysteries still tempting man's curiosity. This is an age in which our cherished national philosophy is being challenged. It's an age that echoes with the question: Will democracy be able to withstand the rising tide of communism?

In this insecure age, the very roots of the American way of life are crying for strength—strength in the form of increased knowledge. If such sustenance is not provided, communism or some other freedom-hating social system might be the dominant power in the world before the end of the century.

The problem is this: In the United States—the so-called leader of economic and industrial progress—the cost of continuing one's education after high school is much too great.

A male high school graduate is ordinarily faced with three alternatives: to enter college, join a military service or go to work. The services offer adventure, travel and sometimes the opportunity to learn a trade. A job offers money, which in turn can furnish many of the material things a young man craves. To the unsettled youngster, college offers little except four years of mental exertion, sacrifice and boredom, for which he or his parents must pay a considerable amount of money.

The immature mind does not usually need a great deal of time to make a decision. And the depressing results are illustrated in the huge number of potential scientists, chemists, teachers, doctors and political leaders which are lost each year to the more inviting military and commercial fields.

Children of wealthy parents are seldom associated with this problem. To them, paying a tuition fee ranging from $70 a quarter to $500 a semester does not restrict to any great extent the amount they spend on entertainment, food and clothing. They are usually unaware that some of their fellow students have cut down from three to two meals a day in order to pay the same fees.

The young man (or woman) with meager assets simply cannot afford the price of a four-year college education unless some form of financial aid is furnished him. If no other assistance is obtainable, the student must work after school hours, which usually results in lower grades and overexertion.

And we continue to sit back and watch "the talents which nature has sown as liberally among the poor as the rich" wither without use.

Defenders of our high-priced college system point out the availability of scholarships and other forms of financial aid. Granted, there are numerous scholarships available. But the student of average intelligence—unless he is an exceptional athlete—is not encouraged to apply for them. Restrictions for academic scholarships are so tight that none but high school valedictorians and honor roll members are courageous enough to fill out the application blanks.

Athletic grants are easier to obtain. Recognizing this fact, the realistic father assures his son a free college education by molding him into a potential All-American.

What is the solution? Russia has put one into effect. By providing qualified students with as much free education as they desire, the United States' major military rival has progressed to such an extent that it is blazing the trail in space penetration and is making tremendous gains in economic development.

An educational system entirely under control of government has its disadvantages, however. Usually there is little freedom of selection for the pupil, and he is often shackled to the government for many years after completing his training.

An ideal situation would be a happy medium between a strict government-operated school system and our present costly state system. Some states have made strides in this direction by eliminating tuition fees for state residents. But the majority of states still claim that their colleges cannot be maintained without the income obtained through tuition and various other fees that come out of the student's pocket.

This is a problem that must be met by the states and federal government together. If this nation is to hold its own in the race for further knowledge, we must find a way to ease the financial burden of the young men and women in whose hands our future depends.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor:

The Wilmington College Student Council wishes to express sincere congratulations on the first edition of THE SEAHAWK.

Speaking for the entire student body, we feel that THE SEAHAWK was of superior quality and we are indeed proud of our college paper.

We realize the extensive time and effort each of you has devoted to THE SEAHAWK, for it is quite evident in the paper. We indeed appreciate it.

MARTY LAND, Secretary
Student Body
Wilmington College

Dear Editor:

I should like to congratulate you and your entire staff on the first issue of THE SEAHAWK.

In my opinion the paper is excellent, both in form and in content. Its advent is another major step in the forward progress of Wilmington College.

Let me repeat my congratulations to you and the staff, and wish you continued success with this fine undertaking. THE SEAHAWK is truly a pride to the college.

ARTIST RECOUNTS TRIP

Howell Found Beauty, Danger In Yugoslavia

(Mr. Howell, head of the Wilmington College Art Department, toured Europe last summer. He wrote this account of one phase of his extensive trip exclusively for THE SEAHAWK.)

By CLAUDE HOWELL

The compartment in the second-class carriage from Trieste to Rijeka held, other than me, three diamond miners returning to Yugoslavia after 21 years of prospecting in South Africa. They were unshaven, their clothes were wrinkled, and only one of the three spoke any English at all.

The compartment was bulging with their valises, tightly nailed wooden boxes, packages wrapped in newspapers from many countries, and odds and ends of cheese, fruit, and bread on which we had been munching for the past several hours. My one small overnight bag and camera case were squeezed in at one end of the rack above my head.

Outside our train window the landscape had suddenly changed from lush Mediterranean foliage to a bleak and forbidding countryside. The black mountains in the distance were in Yugoslavia.

We would be crossing the border at any moment.

The three miners were beginning to show signs of nervousness, and I, too, felt a long way from security. The miners undoubtedly had reason to be nervous. I had none, for I was going into Tito's country for one purpose only, and that was to examine first-hand the obscure and little-known frescoes found in the Byzantine monasteries in that part of Yugoslavia which was formerly known as Serbia and Montenegro.

Still, one is never sure just exactly what will happen when one crosses a border. Once before in Liechtenstein I had been forcibly taken from the train, stripped and searched, and memories of that unpleasant adventure were vividly in my mind.

We stopped. I poked my head out of the window and saw the Yugoslavian soldiers guarding the frontier, looking as if they meant business.

One miner told me in broken English to act as if I did not know them. I was only too glad to acquiesce.

The customs officer entered with the usual unsmiling official look. And he gave those three men a thorough going over.

I have often wondered since then exactly what did happen to them.

I knew my turn was coming. But when he saw an American passport, he gruffly said something in Serbian, completely unintelligible to me, and stalked out of the compartment.

Is a few minutes he was back and motioned me to follow him. I thought, "Claude, you've had it again," and wondered who I knew in Yugoslavia if worse came to worse.

But when we reached the corridor, the grim expression on the face of the official turned into a broad grin. He slapped me on the back and said something which must have been roughly this: "Buddy, you've passed the border. You are in Yugoslavia now, so let's have a drink."

Naturally I joined him, and thought that if Yugoslavia was like this, it must not be such a frightening country after all.

And it wasn't. For many weeks I wandered down the Dalmatian Coast, among the fabulously beautiful islands in the Adriatic Sea, over the mountains to Mostar and to Sarajevo where Archduke Ferdinand was assassinated, thus precipitating the First World War.

I sat on oriental rugs drinking coffee with Moslems, and took off my shoes to enter exquisite mosques built by the Turks in the 16th and 17th centuries.

I shopped in the bazaars which were much more eastern than western. And many of the scenes were reminiscent of the Arabian Nights.

I drove in a funny little French Citroen which looked so much like a bug that we named it Gregor after Kafka's bug hero of the same name.

We climbed mountains so high that the snow was still in purple patches among the alpine flowers.

FRITZ NAMED PLAYER OF MONTH

"It's quite an honor to be chosen Seahawk Player of the Month. I think we will have a good team if the players continue their hustle and keep their spirit."

The speaker was Jerry Fritz, starting guard for the Wilmington College basketball team. The strapping former Marine had just learned that he had been singled out by THE SEAHAWK sports staff as the outstanding player of the opening game against Fredericks College.

Fritz, although one of the shorter Seahawk cagers at 6-2, was the sparkplug of the local team's attack in its initial triumph. Playing only half the game, he accumulated 17 points and constantly kept the opposition off guard with his brilliant play-making and defensive efforts.

The Singac, N. J., athlete gained most of his considerable experience playing on the Camp Lejeune cage team last winter. He was the No. 6 man on the powerful Lejeune quint that met many four-year college teams, including North Carolina State.

While stationed at the area Marine base, Fritz also played golf and football.

Before joining the Marine Corps, the Wilmington newcomer was an outstanding high school athlete in Singac. He was a star for the school basketball, football and golf teams and was selected for two all-state squads.

A number of college scouts tried to obtain his services, but Uncle Sam got to him first.

Though he is an accomplished player in most sports, Fritz prefers football and basketball.

Jerry attributes his basketball poise to the seasoning he acquired as a Marine athlete. "I think the service ball environment helped me," he remarked.

The youngest of seven children, Fritz is studying to be an athletic coach. After graduating from Wilmington, he plans to continue his education, preferably at Duke.

Few will be surprised if the Seahawk sharpshooter becomes an ACC star next winter.

Varsity Report

By Gary Darden

There is one thing certain: The spectators attending the game between the Seahawks and Fredericks Junior College were well-pleased with the outcome. The Hawks' victory was the main reason, of course, but not the only one.

DARDEN

A lot of people made comments on the amazing potential of this team. They were awakened to the fact that this was more than just another junior college basketball team. Only last year its components were spread out in six different states. When they met here in September, they had only one thing in common—their ability to play basketball.

The players have learned the game in different regions, so naturally they have different playing tendencies. This reason alone would make it hard for a team to blend successfully.

It's hard for a basketball player to change his playing habits, but it can be done. Usually, the player that succeeds is a "natural" anyway. A different basketball environment has little to do with his individual ability.

Most of the players on the Seahawk squad are of this "natural" class. It was clearly evident that the win over Fredericks was a team effort. Each player contributed his share and no one player tried to be a "glory hound."

The Hawks are so well stocked with talent, that the loss of one player would not seriously harm the team as a whole. This is a fact that each player knows only too well.

So long as a player has this competitive feeling, he will continue to hustle and do his best. He realizes that the team is not built around him—that he is only a part of it.

This competitiveness should stand out as the season progresses. It should lead the Hawks to their first North Carolina Junior College Championship.

The Seahawks, in the game with Fredericks, scored almost at will. Some of the plays were executed with perfection. Sometimes the boys, concentrating on the offense to such an extent, left their defense open. It wasn't enough to cause real damage in this particular contest, but it could do so in future games. This is one of the kinks that the Seahawks worked on during the holidays.

Overall, the game was a success. The spirit of fans and students showed improvement. The attendance wasn't bad considering opening game. Maybe people are recognizing a good brand of basketball when they see it.

There is a good chance that Wilmington will be the site of the 1959 N. C. Junior College Tournament to be held in February. As of yet, it is not official, but plans are now in the making to bring this tournament to the Port City.

It stands to reason that Wilmington is the most logical choice. It is the largest city in the conference. Also, Brogden Hall is one of the finest basketball gymnasiums in the state.

George Lyons, a member of the Exchange Club, is working very hard to obtain the tournament for Wilmington.

Lyons, a social sciences instructor here, was instrumental in bringing the East Carolina-Citadel freshman football game here. Let's hope this will be another "first" for George.

Cagers Meet Duke's Blue Imps Saturday

Fresh from victories over Fredericks Junior College and Cherry Point, the Wilmington Seahawks will be hosts to the Duke Freshmen Saturday night at Brogden Hall.

The Blue Imps, one of the three Big Four freshman teams slated to face the locals this year, are expected to give the Hawks their first real test of the season.

Last year the Durham cagers convincingly beat the locals in two encounters. However, the Hawks are much more experienced this year and have considerably more height and speed.

With two victories behind them and four impressive scrimmages with the Camp Lejeune and Cherry Point Marines, the Hawks are expected to be at full strength against the Imps.

The scrimmages with the Marines gave valuable experience to the Hawks. These games uncovered the flaws which are a natural part of a team just beginning its season.

Coach Bill Brooks and his boys worked hard over the holidays sharpening up their defense.

"We still have a lot of practice to do and some more things to learn," stated Brooks last week.

The Duke freshmen, with only three North Carolina boys listed on the roster, could start a team that would average a shade over 6-4. The tallest player is 6-5 Dale Wintner of Scarsdale, N. Y. Four players are 6-3 and two measure 6-4.

The only player familiar to local fans is Bob Rankin, who played for the Durham High Bulldogs last year.

The Seahawks were very impressive in their 89-76 win over Fredericks. Coach Brooks kept the game interesting by substituting frequently.

The first unit—composed of Bob McLoughlin and Jerry Fritz at guards, Dick Brennan at center, and Ted Williams and Jackie Bullard at forwards—started the game. This unit, sparked by the rebounding of Williams and Brennan, got off to a fast start. At the end of ten minutes the locals led, 24-14.

Coach Brooks substituted his second unit at this point. This unit was composed of Larry Lindsey, Ronnie White, Chuck Fearn, Ed Miastkowski and Joel Gibson.

The second unit did almost as well with the aggressiveness of White and Lindsey and the rebounding of Gibson and Fearn.

Inexperienced Players Invited To Tennis Tryouts By Varsity Coach

Coach Tanky Meier has issued a call for prospective tennis players.

"If the boys show enough interest by trying out, we will try to make players out of them," Meier said last week. "A boy doesn't need much previous experience — only a certain amount of aptitude for learning is required."

The local tennis team faces a major rebuilding problem this year. Only Gary Preston, No. 2 player last year, and Bob Coleman are returning. Coleman was a member of last year's second unit.

Gone from the undefeated championship team are Jerry Taylor, Charles Hunnicutt, Bob Weeks, George Langston and Frank Purnell. Taylor, the No. 1 player last year, has received a tennis scholarship to the University of Maryland. He is now in the Coast Guard.

The newcomer with the best credentials is Chad Farris, runner-up last year in the North Carolina High School Championship Tournament. He attended New Hanover High last year and, according to Meier, "is easily one of the top four players in the state."

Farris and Preston are expected to be the top two players. But nothing is certain yet.

"Maybe we will get some transfers," Meier remarked hopefully.

Howell Found Adventure On European Trip

And in the midst of this magnificent but rugged land I found the small monasteries nestled in inaccessible spots, safe from the ravages of marauding armies. They were filled with frescoes and treasures beyond one's wildest hope.

Many of the churches had long since become only empty shells of their former glory, but in several I saw the long bearded monks going through the elaborate services of the Eastern Orthodox Church, and I was taken out of this present day world and transported to a time when the church was the dominant factor in the life of Europe.

There were dangers in Yugoslavia, to be sure. But they were dangers I had not anticipated.

I felt little anxiety the day I saw Tito and Nasser during their historic meeting in Dubrovnik.

But I did feel anxiety the night a group of wildly hilarious Montenegrins insisted that I join them in the public room of a small and remote mountain inn. When they would jump up on the table, cross their arms, and kick their feet like the Russian Cossacks, I felt like a stranger in a far strange land.

And that same night, when one of them threw a bottle at the oil lamp on the wall, smashing it into a thousand pieces and setting the wall on fire, and the man sitting next to me fired a pistol three times at the ceiling while the entire assembled group broke into cheers, then I admit I felt some nervousness.

However, I soon realized that this was only the ultimate in friendliness.

Formal Dance Honors WC 'Superlatives'

By LINDA CREECH
Staff Writer

Wilmington College held its first formal dance of the school year December 11, at which the 1958-59 "superlatives" were honored.

Coebs in flowing evening gowns with tuxedo-clad escorts were forced to brave the sleet and snow of one of the coldest nights of the year to attend the Christmas Dance at the Cape Fear Country Club.

After dancing to the music of Don Cone's orchestra, the couples settled down at their tables as the formalities began.

Jim Robbins, president of the student council, opened the program by making a few announcements. He then turned the program over to Jack Kirkland, who announced the winners of the recent yearbook-sponsored voting for "superlatives."

The "superlatives" are: Jim Robbins and Louise Floyd, "most dependable"; Jack Kirkland and Marty Land, "best all around"; Jack Yow and Linda Ticken, "best dressed"; Bryan Padrick and Mary Kay Tompkins, "best looking"; Alvin White and Eve Rossen, "most original"; Jim Russ and Annell Mohr, "most talented"; Tom McKee and Barbara McSwain, "most school spirit"; Howard Chestnut and Linda Blossom, "most flirtatious"; Donald Barefoot and Shelia Robinson, "most likely to succeed"; Jackie Breazeale and Sandy Pluta, "most intellectual"; Robert Everett and Sandra Horrell, "most friendly"; Jim Hudson and Betty Hall, "wittiest"; Joel Gibson and Peggy Olsen, "most athletic."

Then Jackie Breazeale, president of the Circle-K Club, announced that Marty Land had been selected as his society's "sweetheart." He presented Miss Land with a bouquet of red roses.

Tommy Wolfe, Louise Floyd and Mary Kay Tompkins decorated the country club for the dance. Their most outstanding work was the beautifully decorated Christmas tree.

Judy Horne was in charge of refreshments, which consisted of punch, sandwiches and cookies.

COURT CHOSEN Louise Floyd Will Reign As Queen

Louise Floyd will reign as the May Queen of Wilmington College next spring.

The attractive brunette was selected by the student body last week. A graduate of New Hanover High School, she is studying liberal arts here, and plans to transfer to Wake Forest after graduating.

Miss Floyd is secretary of both the Pen-Pushers Club and the Dramatics Club. She was a member of the May Court last year.

Members of the 1959 May Court are Jo Ann Davis, Marty Land, Mary Kay Tompkins, Judy Murray and Joanne Summerlin. Sophomore attendant Marty Land is secretary of the student government and a library assistant. A brunette, she plans to continue her education in elementary education.

Miss Land's fellow attendant from the sophomore class is red-headed Miss Tompkins, who is studying business here.

Selected to serve as maid of honor was Miss Davis, a shapely freshman and recent graduate of New Hanover. Since entering WC, she has been active as business manager of THE SEAHAWK and as a cheerleader. She was also chosen to be a "Fledgling Beauty."

Freshman attendants are Miss Summerlin and Miss Murray.

An attractive blonde, Miss Murray is a 1958 graduate of NHHS and plans to continue her education at North Carolina.

Brunette Joanne is from Warsaw, and came to WC to study pre-nursing.

CHEERLEADERS GREET SANTA—Three Wilmington College cheerleaders give Santa Claus a real Seahawk welcome, hoping that he will reward them by giving the basketball team its eighth straight victory tomorrow night. PUB WILL ACQUIRE NEW LOOK FOR 1959

A "new look" in the Pub will greet Wilmington College students when they return from the Christmas holidays.

The area in the student activities room which now holds the lunch counter and kitchen has been leased by J. Frank Collier, a Carolina Beach resident who operates his own restaurant at the Union Bus Terminal.

Collier will renovate the lunch counter and open it on an improved level Jan. 5.

For the past few years, the Pub's lunch counter has been operated by the college itself. It was originally opened for the dual purpose of furnishing snacks and drinks for WC students and gaining revenue for the Student Activities Fund.

It has consistently operated at a financial loss, however, so the decision was made to lease it to a commercial restaurateur.

The recreation area of the Pub will remain under the supervision of the college.

The rental income, reported to be $1,000 per year, will go into the Student Activities Fund. This will supply the SAF with a pre-arranged budget, making it possible to expand the activity program.

According to a college official, there will be no increase in prices when the new management takes over. All prices will be approved by the college.

All employees who have been working at the lunch counter will be retained, according to Collier. These include six students who work there part-time.

"This is not a big money-making project," Collier emphasized this week. "We just want to brighten up that spot for the students so they will want to come there regularly."

Collier explained that he will begin work in the Pub Saturday. He expects to be ready to open the day school resumes, January 5.

All the present facilities will be torn out, including the counter and shelves. In their place, a new, modern counter and soda fountain will be installed. New soda-fountain shelves will also be added.

An expanded line of snack and soda items will be offered by the remodeled lunch counter, including ice cream, milk shakes, sodas, sandwiches, and soft drinks.

Both hot and cold beverages will be sold.

School supplies and some toilet articles will also be available. Collier reported that a full line of paper, notebooks, pencils and miscellaneous school items will be sold at minimum prices.

All the vending machines will be removed. The articles provided by these machines will be sold at the soda counter.

Thespians Stage First Play Here

By MARGARET SHACKLEFORD
Staff Writer

"Poor Aubrey," the Dramatics Club's initial presentation, was staged during an assembly program here Tuesday morning.

The cast consisted of Chris Koumprakas as "Aubrey," Jean Willard as "Amy," Margaret Shackleford as "Mrs. Cole" and Betty Hall as "Mrs. Fisher."

A domestic comedy, "Poor Aubrey" was taken from the three-act Broadway play titled "Show-Off."

Aubrey is the big show-off. Throughout the play, he tried to convince people that he was loaded with money, and in doing so, he made a complete fool of himself.

One of the most impressive scenes was the one in which Mrs. Cole, an old friend of Aubrey's wife Amy, came to visit Amy. Aubrey told her a lot of nonsense about owning big cars and buying a larger house.

The truth was discovered when Mrs. Cole was left alone with Mrs. Fisher, Amy's mother who disliked Aubrey.

Topping off the hilarity, Aubrey lost his toupee while stooping to pick up Mrs. Cole's glove. He later realized that he had made a ridiculous spectacle of himself in front of his wife's friend.

The play was directed by Mrs. Doug Swink. Brenda Liles and Tommy Landin worked on the props, and Gilbert Tillett helped with the production.

Mrs. Swink announced a few days ago that "A Boy With a Cart" had been cancelled. This religious play had been scheduled for the latter part of January.

Freshman Completes Portrait of Hoggard

Freshman Robbié Nurnberger has completed an oil painting of Doctor John T. Hoggard, first president of Wilmington College.

The 3-foot by 5-foot portrait will be presented to the college when the paint has dried thoroughly, according to Nurnberger. It will then be hung in a prominent place in the present building.

The portrait will adorn a wall of the administration building when the new college is opened.

Nurnberger, a fine arts major from Richmond, Va., has demonstrated artistic talent most of his life. He has studied at the Hans Hoffman School of Fine Arts at Cape Cod, and under prominent artists in Greensboro and Richmond.

He plans to attend the Richmond Professional Institute of William and Mary College.

The portrait of Dr. Hoggard was painted by the 21-year-old artist on weekends. It is presently hanging in the living room of his grandmother's home in Wilmington, his temporary residence while attending Wilmington College.

Christians For A Month

For some inexplicable reason, this season seems a little less in popularity during the latter part of December than it was throughout the rest of the year. In government, in the realm of "Christian brotherhood" during the period, has something more than a qualification, a conviction in the acceptance of a common brotherhood.

Christmas is a festive season usually celebrated from the end of December to mid-November. It is a time when the world is in a state of peace and harmony, and the spirit of Christmas is in the air. Wives Organize Hold Party Here

The newly organized Faculty Wives Club held a Christmas party at West official project room at Saturday night.

The first regular meeting of the club was held last month at the home of Mrs. Mary Landon, who is the club's first president.

Officers were chosen as follows: Mrs. Betty Landon, president; Mrs. George Landon, vice-president; and Mrs. Mary Landon, secretary and treasurer.

At the meeting, plans for the Christmas party were made.

General chairman for the party was Mrs. Duncan Randall. Mrs. George Landon, chairman of the entertainment committee, planned the games, and the Christmas tree and other decorations were supplied by Mrs. Calvin Doff.

Mrs. Tom Brown was in charge of the refreshments.

Unscheduled Holidays

First rain, then snow, then a little sun, and then a little more snow. It was what we had last Friday. School was dismissed at 3:30 p.m. Thursday due to the inclement weather, and wasn't resumed until Monday morning.

Although it was cold and uncomfortable, the students at WC enjoyed the unexpected holidays and the long weekend.

Come, What May... namely snow and more snow, the annual Christmas Dance was still held at the Cape Fear Country Club last week.

Unlucky people from the beaches, Burgaw, Rocky Point and Leland could not make it into town, but approximately 125 students did brave the arctic weather to spin to Don Cowie's music.

Long-awaited List... The list of "superlatives" was announced at the Christmas Dance. Master of ceremonies Jack Kirkland called out the names, and the honored people came to the end of the ballroom to stand in front of the decorated Christmas tree. Twenty names were called out, but some of the selectees were not present.

Circle-K Sweetheart... The Circle-K Club of WC decided to bestow an honor this year that had never before been given to a girl student of this school. Jackie Bransford made the announcement at the dance that Marty Land had been chosen as the 1958-59 Circle-K Sweetheart. A surprised and happy Marty received a dozen red roses from Bransford.

More Holidays Begin... Christmas vacation officially begins at 10:30 p.m. Friday. Students and faculty members will enjoy 17 days of recess. No more classes until January 5, 1960.

"Poor Aubrey"... The Dramatics Club's first play was presented Tuesday morning at an assembly. You can still purchase your copy of the "Fiddling" by making a down payment on it now. The total cost is just $3.00.

Varsity Report

By Gary Darden

Making a speech when no one hears or tries to understand it is a lonely endeavor — especially when that speech has been prepared so precisely that it is difficult to detect any errors.

DARDEN

The speaker has a feeling of great pride in his work—not selfish pride, but pride that grows from creating something of worthy appraisal. He thinks it is good enough to be shared with everyone. Even if it doesn't please all, he is certain that it will be accepted by the majority.

What reasons would motivate his thoughts so as to form this opinion? The most pertinent one is that he has worked, practiced and drilled until even the most minute defects are eradicated. Another reason: hard work always brings confidence and self-satisfaction within. He feels that even a person with a split personality will enjoy this one. But this is not the case, as fortune does not always heed those who deserve it the most.

The success of his speech depends entirely upon the listeners and their attitude at the moment.

This is an illustration of what the Wilmington College cheerleaders have been experiencing in past home games.

Spectators watching the games feel that the cheerleaders are not spirited enough. How can they be?

It is like trying to dance the tango without a partner. Everyone is familiar with the saying, "It takes two to tango." Well, the cheerleaders are going to need vocal support to be successful.

The girls, although few in number, have done a marvelous job so far. They have shouted, screamed, and stomped, but the only satisfaction they receive is knowing that they are still in tune.

If this last statement sounds exaggerated, just do this: Listen to them when they are practicing in the old gym at the college. Compare the intensity of the same shouts at home games. The two are inseparable.

It appears that no one desires to sit down in the student bleacher section. All the students seem to prefer the upper balcony section. How can the cheerleaders possibly get support and spirit like this? For successful support, a change has to be made. Whether the cheerleaders go to the balcony or the students to the bleachers is immaterial. But the two factions should get together.

At the past few games only a few loyal girls and boys have had gumption enough to support the cheerleaders.

This discouraging fact puzzles the out-of-town student. He cannot understand this placid response. He is familiar with great school spirit at athletic contests.

This is not meant to be a skeptical analysis of student participation. It is written primarily for the student to realize that the cheerleaders' job is not to cheer for him, but with him—to lead those cheers in such a manner that the boys on the court will benefit. Good support can really lift a team at crucial moments. Showing enthusiasm by exercising the vocal cords doesn't make one a "loud mouth."

The attendance of local fans is increasing. These fans have to pay. They are not fortunate in having free passes either. And yet at the past few ball games the fans have displayed more spirit than the students.

How long can the fans continue this spirit when they see the poor student spirit that is demonstrated right in front of them?

Surely the students of Wilmington College do not want to leave fans and out-of-town students with this bad opinion of our school spirit.

Friday night the Seahawks are hosts to Presbyterian Junior College. It will be their first conference home game. Let's not only attend the game, but let's sit in the student section. Back the cheerleaders and the team with spirit! They deserve it.

To the faculty, student body, and the janitorial staff, a very Merry Christmas and a prosperous New Year.

TO BATTLE PJC

Undeclared Seahawks Will Go After Eighth Straight Victory Friday Night

By GARY DARDEN
Sports Editor

The soaring Seahawks will go after victory No. 8 Friday night when Presbyterian Junior College invades Brodgen Hall.

Still undefeated after seven games, the Wilmington College cagers will be gunning for their third conference victory when they play host to PJC.

The Citadel freshman team became the Hawks' seventh straight victim here Tuesday night. Before defeating the Bullpups, WC had overpowered Duke's frosh, Louisburg, Chowan, Cherry Point and Fredericks College twice.

PJC will be trying to break a losing streak against the Seahawks. Wilmington won both times the conference rivals met last winter.

This will be the first conference skirmish on the locals' home floor and their last outing until after the Christmas holidays.

WC 88, DUKE FROSH 67

The Seahawks pulled the upset of the young season when they toppled the highly touted Duke freshmen in Brodgen Hall on December 6. Two days later, the Blue Imps defeated the Wake Forest frosh, which was rated as the top yearling club in the ACC.

To the delight of a large home audience, the Hawks handled the Imps with ease. Sponsored by the local Elks Club, the game started off fast, with the Hawks trailing through most of the first half.

But two great plays by Larry Lindsey and Bob McLoughlin deadlocked the score, 29-29, at the half.

With McLoughlin and Lindsey making like race horses, the locals pulled away minutes after the second half started, and the pattern was set. From then on, it was only a question of how many points the Hawks could score.

Late in the final period, WC led by as many as 24 points.

Although he did not start, Lindsey paced the local attack with 19 points. Ed Miastkowski followed with 17, and McLoughlin had 14.

WC 83, LOUISBURG 78

This was the start of an all-victorious three-game road trip that began December 9. It was the Seahawks' fourth straight victory and their first conference triumph.

Victory was not achieved easily, however. Excellent work at the foul line proved the margin of victory for the locals, who were pressed all the way. They hit on 25 of 30 foul tosses.

Louisburg played possession basketball, and the Hawks committed numerous fouls trying to get the ball. Although WC was found guilty of 22 misdeeds, no local player fouled out.

McLoughlin led the WC attack with 22 points, which was the individual high mark of the season. Tall Ted Williams, deadly under either basket, rebounded superbly and bagged 17 points.

WC 78, FREDERICKS 71

Victory No. 5 was registered at Portsmouth, Va., where the Hawks beat Fredericks College for the second time in three weeks. But again, the locals had to come from behind to win.

A barrage of baskets in the early part of the second half spelled the difference in favor of WC. Dick Brennan, Jerry Fritz and Lindsey were the stars of this outburst.

The score at halftime was 42-42, but there was little question about which team was the master in the second half. At one point in the second half, Bill Brooks' lads enjoyed an 18-point margin.

Lanky Williams, a 6-7 forward, paced WC with 19 points. McLoughlin added 14, and Brennan accounted for 13.

WC 70, CHOWAN 66

Wilmington's come-from-behind cagers made it six in a row at Chowan College. After trailing by seven points at the half, the Hawks tied the score with 1:12 left in the game, and went on to win.

Lindsey knotted the count with a free toss, and then Ronnie White took over, hitting on a jump shot and two foul throws to ice the victory.

This was the second conference win for Brooks' unit.

Jackie Bullard, playing his best game of the season, led the Seahawks with 16 points. McLoughlin was once again second high with 14.

McLoughlin Named Player Of The Month

By BUBBA SMITH
Staff Writer

"We will definitely go all the way in the conference."

Such is the opinion of Bob McLoughlin, selected by THE SEAHAWK as the "Player of the Month."

McLoughlin, a recruit from Jersey City, N. J., was chosen for this month's award because of his outstanding play in four Seahawk victories. He averaged 16 points a game in leading his team over the Duke Freshmen, Fredericks College, Louisburg and Chowan.

Yet these performances were only repeats of his first two efforts, against Fredericks and Cherry Point.

In the first six games, McLoughlin collected a total of 103 points for a highly respectable average of 17.2.

The handsome 170-pounder came to Wilmington this fall with impressive basketball credentials. He had been selected for the Steve Allen All-America High School Team after a brilliant season with St. Joseph's High School in West New York. He averaged 30 points a game with St. Joseph's.

McLoughlin's father, who played basketball at Holy Cross, contributed to his early development.

Bob McLoughlin Holds Varsity Scoring Lead

Bob McLoughlin, the "Seahawk of the Month," was leading WC in scoring with a lofty 17.2 average after six games.

The durable McLoughlin scorched the nets for 44 field goals and 15 foul tosses for 103 points.

His best performances were against Louisburg and Fredericks. He scored 22 in each of these games.

Following McLoughlin in the scoring column was Jerry Fritz. The husky ex-Marine amassed 71 points on 26 field goals and 19 from the foul line.

Ronnie White and Ted Williams trailed Fritz with 61 points each.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE, WILMINGTON, N. C.

January 30, 1959

First Wilmington Homecoming Tomorrow

The first Homecoming in Wilmington College history will be held tomorrow, featuring a parade, pep rally, basketball game and dance.

Sponsored by the Circle-K Club, Homecoming festivities will start with a parade through downtown Wilmington at 3 p.m. They will end with the Homecoming Dance in the college auditorium after the game.

Circle-K members sold boxed candy to help pay for the day-long production.

Five college organizations were represented in the voting for the Homecoming Queen. The Pen Pushers, Student Council, Engineers Club, cheerleaders, and Circle-K each nominated a candidate, and the entire student body voted on them Tuesday.

Eve Rossen won in a runoff ballot Wednesday after four of the nominees tied. The other candidates were Marty Land, Mary Kay Tompkins, Phyllis Edwards, Judy Horne and Judy Gullede.

Jackie Breazeale, president of the Circle-K, will crown the queen during halftime ceremonies in Brogden Hall tomorrow night.

All college organizations will participate in the motor parade which officially opens Homecoming Day tomorrow afternoon. Cars will assemble at Front and Dock Streets.

Following the parade, a pep rally will be held on the steps of City Hall. All members of the team will be present, and cheers will be led by the WC cheerleading staff.

Highlight of the affair will be the Wilmington - EMI game, which starts at 8 p.m. in Brogden Hall.

Following the game, the queen and team members will be guests of honor at the first Homecoming Dance. Music will be furnished by the Jetty Jumpers.

Researchers Finish Study At Wilmington

By SHIRLEH SELLERS
Managing Editor

A two-man team from the University of Texas just completed a research study of Wilmington College.

John R. Shepherd and Leonard Massey, doctoral candidates at Texas, had been interviewing and gathering research data here since December. Their study was officially closed yesterday.

Wilmington College was one of only 12 junior colleges in the country selected for the Department of Education study. This school was chosen because of its high quality of academic and community service programs, according to Shepherd.

The study is aimed at determining the influence junior colleges have on their communities.

The research team collected data on the nature of the college's community service program, how well the program meets the needs of the community, and which factors of the college and the community aid and hinder the program.

Service to the community, the researchers explained, involves a variety of factors. It includes the use of the college's physical facilities, such as the auditorium; the adult education program; cultural activities, such as performances by college music groups, and services performed by student organizations.

During their study, the two visitors interviewed approximately 140 people, including faculty members, students, executive directors of other adult service agencies, and citizens from all walks of life.

WC Music Groups Plan Presentations

Wilmington College's two music groups are planning performances for February.

The College Dance Band will play next at the Tournament Queen Coronation on Feb. 19.

Plans are being made for a February musical program by the College Chorus, but a date has not yet been announced.

Both groups entertained for the Kiwanis Club Ladies Night on Jan. 14, at the Cape Fear Country Club.

QUEEN TRIES ON CROWN—Jackie Breazeale, president of the Circle-K Club, places a crown on the head of Eve Rossen, chosen Wednesday to reign as Wilmington College's first Homecoming Queen. COUNTER MODERNIZED

Renovated Pub Has New Look

By RIP MEADOWS
Staff Writer

The Pub underwent a gentle face-lifting last month.

The operation was performed by Frank Collier, a Carolina Beach restaurant who operates his own restaurant at the Union Bus Terminal. Collier renovated the lunch counter during the Christmas holidays, and opened it on an improved level Jan. 5.

To the average student who frequents WC's lunching area, a more relaxed atmosphere is at once apparent. Subtle colors of gray and green adorn the walls, and the new counter adds a modern touch with its natural wood grains and glistening top.

A person is fairly safe coming into the Pub now. One doesn't have to hazard plowing into an array of cigarette and candy machines.

First and foremost in the grizzled coffee-drinker's mind is the elimination of "Ye Olde Coffee Racke." When asked about this, Collier replied: "Back in '46, when I was in the University, there were certain things that were more or less sacred, just as I imagine your coffee rack was. For that reason, I felt I was doing you a

"But please let it be known that the decision wasn't mine. It was decided by the Health Department.

"You see, when the Pub was organized and run by the college as a non-profit organization, the regulations were pretty lax. But when it was taken over as a private enterprise, these regulations had to be enforced, and the coffee rack was one of the things that had to go."

Among the renovations Collier made was the installation of non-glare fluorescent lights. He also increased the line of lunch items and refreshments offered by the soda fountain.

"I now have things pretty much as I want them," Collier stated a few days ago. "In the future, I plan to add a glass-front showcase on the end extension of the soda fountain, and place for sale such items as sun tan oil, facial powders, and shaving lotions."

Another addition to the Pub is the huge bulletin board contributed by the Engineers Club. The colorful board, bearing the insignia of the club, keeps members up to date on club activities and dates of meetings.

HOGGARD'S PORTRAIT DISPLAYED

A life-size portrait of Dr. John T. Hoggard, former president of Wilmington College, was hung in the main lobby of the school last week.

The oil painting was done by Robbie Nurnberger, 21-year-old WC freshman. Nurnberger painted the huge portrait from a photograph of Dr. Hoggard.

Completed in December, the painting was not unveiled until Jan. 15, during a tea given in Dr. Hoggard's honor in the college auditorium. Later that day, the local Kiwanis Club presented the 82-year-old educator an award for being selected as the "outstanding Kiwanian of 1958."

Dr. Hoggard is chairman of the Board of Trustees, and presided over a board meeting just before the tea.

The portrait will remain in the lobby, across from the book store, until the buildings are completed at the new campus site. Then it will be hung permanently in the main lobby of the new administration building.

The young fine arts major plans to attend the Richmond Institute of William & Mary College after graduating from Wilmington.

Seahawk New ACP Member

THE SEAHAWK has joined the Associated Collegiate Press of Minneapolis, the largest press conference of its kind in the country.

The ACP boasts a membership of 650 colleges in 47 states, Mexico and Canada.

Among the many services the ACP offers is a bi-monthly feature service, which includes a bulletin of campus news, timely features, occasional campus surveys on significant events, and a collection of college editors' opinions on current events.

On the business side, THE SEAHAWK will receive a monthly advertising bulletin. The business manager will receive tips on business procedures, promotion campaigns, selling advertisement and various ideas from other college papers.

Twice a month, THE SEAHAWK will receive a poll of student opinions—a report of what college people think and do. This regular release is compiled from interviews conducted on more than 50 representative campuses.

The ACP conducts an annual Short Course in April, at which newspaper editors meet with press experts to discuss various phases of the Fourth Estate.

Another service of the ACP is a critical analysis of its member papers. The first three editions of THE SEAHAWK have already been sent to Minneapolis so they can be examined and rated.

Newspapers are criticized twice a year by experts in all fields of journalism. This service enables the newspaper staffs to benefit through unbiased, professional criticisms and suggestions.

Jimmy Russ, SEAHAWK staff photographer, received honorable-mention recognition in the annual journalistic competition sponsored by the North Carolina Press Assn.

Russ, a former photographer for the Wilmington Star-News, was honored for outstanding work in news-photography. He received his award for a photograph of the front-end of a car with a single child's skate dangling from the bumper.

The car had just struck and killed the child on Third Street in Wilmington.

VARSITY REPORT

By Gary Darden

When the Seahawks suffered their first defeat of the season January 6 at Raleigh, few followers were surprised. Although disappointed, the fans were not dispirited. They displayed their spirit the following night at Brogden Hall with a good attendance for the Louisburg game. The fans realized the potential championship caliber of the Hawks. Their subconscious feelings told them also that even championship ball clubs are beaten.

DARDEN

There are few teams that can go through a season with an unblemished record. Unbeaten basketball teams are practically obsolete in this progressive era of continued athletic improvement. The tough schedules, plus the intense competitive spirit of the teams, substantiate this statement. An unbeaten team cannot be "up" for every game, although its opponents are likely to be.

With the initial defeat comes the loss of something else — pressure. Pressure which is accumulated from continual winning changes into more desire and determination after defeat.

The Seahawks were no exceptions to this unwritten rule. The locals had played nine games of outstanding basketball. Most of the mistakes had been made by their victims and not by the Hawks.

Then the Brooksmen took their turn. And against a team such as the State Freshmen, mistakes can mean the difference between victory and defeat.

The margin of victory by the State club was misleading. State was enjoying its best night of the season, while the Hawks were suffering their worst. When two teams play under such conditions, no matter how equal they are, one usually wins decisively.

There is no argument against the suggestion that State had the superior team that particular night. However, many believe that the Port City crew could beat the Wolflets in a return engagement. Unfortunately, this opinion will not be tested this season. The Hawks do not get a chance for revenge until next year.

AFTER THE HAWKS dropped their 3rd game of the season, January 17 at Durham, a question instinctively arose in the minds of many local followers: What happens to the Hawks when they play away from home? This question is not easily answered.

The Seahawks, while enjoying an outstanding season, have not displayed their basketball prowess on many enemy courts. All their defeats have been suffered on foreign soil, and all but one of their extremely close wins have been away.

However, it is natural for a team to exhibit better basketball at home than on the road. The familiarity of the court, home-fan support, and the absence of strain from traveling tend to aid the home team. The Seahawks have been following this pattern. They have demonstrated to local fans a powerful offense, yet this same offense has had difficulty finding itself on the road.

The two Duke contests illustrate this point. The first skirmish at Brogden Hall resulted in an easy win for the Brooksmen. The Duke Freshmen played good ball that night, but the locals overpowered them with a blistering scoring spree. In the return game at Durham, however, the Imps emerged victorious. The vaunted Hawk offense never got started in the latter encounter.

Coach Bill Brooks gave the most logical explanation of the Seahawks' road-game difficulties when he remarked after the Duke game: "We fumbled the ball, made bad passes, and kept throwing it away."

If this is the dent in their otherwise sturdy armor, the locals should experience little difficulty in correcting it and demonstrating to out-of-town fans the brand of basketball they are capable of playing.

Larry Lindsey Was Month's Top Seahawk

Larry Lindsey has been selected by the staff of THE SEAHAWK to be honored as January's "Player of the Month."

Lindsey, noted for his constant good humor, has been the sparkplug of the Seahawks' attack in their last eleven games. He has been the "hustler" of the club with his fine play-making, passing and shooting.

Three times, the 6-1 guard led the Wilmington scoring attack. He is second only to Bob McLoughlin in the Seahawks' point parade.

Larry averaged 30 points a game at Youngsville High School under Coach Al Deporter, now assistant to Bones McKinney at Wake Forest. His was the highest average in the state in high school scoring, and he played on the West team in the annual East-West basketball all-star game.

He played for the North Carolina State frosh last winter, and transferred to WC to make up quality points. The native Tar Heel plans to major in physical education, but his favorite subject is English under Mr. Piner.

Conference Tourney Scheduled

Wilmington will play host to the 1959 North Carolina-Virginia Junior College Conference basketball tournament Feb. 19-21.

The three-day event, featuring all eight teams in the conference, is being sponsored by the Exchange Club, in conjunction with Wilmington College. George Lyons, WC social sciences instructor, has been named chairman of the tournament.

Four games are scheduled for Thursday, Feb. 19. Two will be held in the afternoon, and two in the evening.

The four winners of the opening-round games will then play Friday night to decide the finalists. On Saturday night, the championship game will be held, following a consolation contest between Friday's two losers.

Lyons represented the Exchange Club at a conference meeting in Sanford, and presented the club's offer to sponsor the tourney. His proposal was unanimously approved by the committee.

Edwards, Hawks To Tangle Here

By GARY DARDEN
Sports Editor

The Seahawks, basketball leaders of the North Carolina-Virginia Junior College Conference, will be honored tomorrow night at Wilmington's first Homecoming.

Highlight of the day-long Homecoming festivities will be the conference basketball game between the Seahawks and Edwards Military Institute. Game time is set for 8 p.m. in Brogden Hall.

Against EMI, the Seahawks will be gunning for their 12th straight conference victory. Their over-all record is 16-3.

Wilmington's cagers added two more victories to their record this week with decisions over EMI and Campbell College.

Here is a rundown of games played since Dec. 19:

WC 100, PJC 56

The Seahawks played host to Presbyterian Junior College on Dec. 19, and racked up a ridiculously easy victory for their eighth straight triumph. It was their fifth consecutive conference win.

Ronnie White, slender New Hanover High graduate, connected with a lunging two-hand shot from mid-court with seven seconds remaining in the game for the two points that sent WC to the century mark.

Jerry Fritz collected 16 points in the first half and ran his total to 19 in the second half to tie for scoring honors with Bob McLoughlin.

WC 82, CHARLOTTE 42

The charges of Coach Bill Brooks started the new year off with a roar Jan. 3 at Charlotte by drubbing the shorter club for their ninth straight victory. The lopsided win was little more than a practice session for the Seahawks.

Five players shared the scoring spotlight, with Larry Lindsey leading the parade with 14 points, Jackie Bullard and Dick Brennan garnered 13 apiece, followed by Chuck Fearn and Ronnie White, with 12 and 10, respectively.

WC 53, STATE FROSH 79

The Seahawks' tour turned into a purr three nights later at Raleigh, when the North Carolina State freshmen put WC into the loss column for the first time this season. The Wolflets bounced the Hawks in a game of mistakes, 79-53.

State took the lead early in the first half, and from then on was never headed. The Seahawks tried vainly to get back in the ball game in the second half, but poor shooting and bad passing soon erased any doubt about the outcome. The Wolflets' phenomenal shooting accuracy (54.2 per cent) did little to encourage the locals' ego.

Leading scorer for the Hawks was Brennan with 18 points. Lindsey scored nine.

WC 93, LOUISBURG 72

The next night, the Seahawks returned to the win column with their tenth victory. The locals encountered resistance in the first half from the stubborn Louisburg outfit, and led by the narrow margin of 41-34 at half-time. It was WC's second win over Louisburg this season. Fritz was the high scorer with 14 points, followed by McLoughlin with 13.

WC 57, USC FROSH 56

The Hawks launched a two-day road trip to South Carolina with a one-point decision over the University of South Carolina yearlings. The hard-fought contest was decided in the last few seconds when McLoughlin dropped in two foul shots to send the locals into the lead.

WC trailed the hosts at the half by two points, but knotted the count ten minutes after the third quarter started, and took the lead three minutes before the game ended.

McLoughlin registered the highest individual point total of the season with 27 points. Twice before he had hit 22.

WC 70, CITADEL FROSH 73

The second half of the road trip wasn't as successful as the first part. At The Citadel, the Hawks were stopped by the revenge-hungry Bullpups, who had fallen in the first meeting between the two clubs at Brogden Hall.

Personal fouls hampered the Hawks from the outset, and Brennan was ousted on miscues in the fourth period.

McLoughlin and Lindsey paced the local attack with 17 apiece.

WC 65, DUKE FROSH 74

For the first time this season, WC suffered two losses in a row. The Duke Blue Imps, another group that had been defeated by the Hawks earlier in the season, also gained revenge with a lopsided verdict at Durham.

The locals had a creditable 37 per cent shooting average from the floor, but bad passing proved their downfall. The Blue Imps took an early lead, and stayed ahead of the visitors all the way.

Lindsey was the top WC scorer with 15 points, but McLoughlin was not far behind with 14. It was the Hawks' third loss on the road.

WC 71, STATE ALL-STARS 67

Charlotte, originally scheduled to meet the Hawks on Jan. 23, withdrew from the conference and forfeited all its games. As a replacement, the State College All-Stars came to Wilmington to meet the local cagers, and pulled in the largest crowd of the season.

Whitey Bell and Ron Shavlik, former North Carolina State basketball stars, led a second-half outburst that almost ruined the Hawks' lead. But McLoughlin's timely shooting in the final minutes saved the day for WC, and the Seahawks racked up victory No. 13 (counting the Charlotte forfeit).

McLoughlin was high man for the Hawks with 24 points, and Shavlik, a former All-American, led the All-Stars with 23.

WC 84, PJC 79

Presbyterian Junior College was again added to the Seahawks' growing list of victims the next night. It was the second time WC had defeated PJC, and it was the locals' ninth straight conference win and their 14th victory of the season.

Using the two-plateau system throughout, WC was in control all the way. Ed Miastkowski enjoyed his best night of the season with 20 points. Bullard followed with 14.

WC 108, CAMPBELL 67

Wilmington had no trouble at all in the game with their closest challenger, Campbell College. Bob McLoughlin hit his season high with 32 points.

2nd Jordanian Is Studying Here

By SHIRLEH MANNING
Managing Editor

Wilmington College greeted its second student from Jordan last quarter.

Raji K. Juma joined fellow-Jordanian Abraham Bedwan here in December. Bedwan entered WC in September.

Juma, a transfer student from the University of Illinois, has been in the United States since the summer of 1956. He is free to stay in this country so long as he remains a student.

After completing two semesters as a business administration major at Illinois, Juma transferred to WC because "the weather here is better." Another reason for his coming to the Port City is the fact that he has friends here.

Juma thinks he made a wise choice in selecting WC. "I have met many people here," he remarked, "and I can say that all of them are friendly."

The black-headed Jordanian is high in praise of North Carolina. And he can be rated as an authority on the advantages of different states and countries since he has traveled widely.

He has been through Italy, France, Spain, Palestine, Syria and Lebanon, as well as the U.S. states of Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, Tennessee, Kentucky, New York and South Carolina.

"All these states are beautiful and the inhabitants are wonderful," declared Juma, "especially right here in the South."

Juma is reluctant to speak about the present turmoil in his native land. His relatives are still in Jordan, and one wrong statement could result in harm to them.

He did speak of the general beliefs of his people, however. He explained that all Jordanians believe their country is a part of the Arab World, which stretches from the Atlantic Ocean to the Arabian Sea.

"We have been struggling for our freedom since we have been ruled by Turkey," Juma (Continued on Page 2, Col. 3)

Easter Recess To Interrupt Spring Term

The spring quarter began last Tuesday with approximately 400 students registered.

This quarter will be interrupted the last week of March for Easter holidays. Recess begins at 10:30 p.m. on March 25, and classes resume at 8:30 a.m. on March 31.

Examinations for the spring quarter are scheduled for May 19, 20 and 21. Graduation exercises are set for May 25 at 8 p.m., following the baccalaureate on May 24 at 4 p.m.

Registration totals for the winter quarter were recently released by the dean's office. Total enrollment last quarter was 455, of which 293 students were New Hanover County residents.

A total of 180 freshman men and 68 freshman women were enrolled. In the sophomore class, there were 131 men and 33 women.

Nurses studying here totaled 43.

Twelve states were represented here last quarter from as far away as Texas. There were also two students from Jordan.

Forty-six students listed Pender or Brunswick as their home county.

Howell Shows Works At Artists' Gallery

Claude Howell, head of the college art department, held a one-man showing at the Artists' Gallery last month.

The exhibit lasted from Feb. 15 through Feb. 28. It featured 14 oil paintings and a number of drawings.

Included were paintings inspired by Howell's trip to Europe last summer. Other works were of local scenes.

Serious Drama Performed By College Group

Wilmington College's amateur thespians presented their second play in the school auditorium this morning.

The one-act drama, "Ile" by Eugene O'Neill, was performed before the student body during an official assembly. It was scheduled for only one performance.

Directed by Mrs. Doug Swink, the play starred Annell Mohr and Ray Hansely. In supporting roles were Bill McKall, Tommy Landen, Tommy Wallace and Forrest Piver. Sandra Pluta served as stage manager.

The play is one of O'Neill's most famous short productions. Its setting is a whaling vessel in the Arctic Seas.

To give a more realistic effect to the play, it was performed at the rear of the auditorium instead of on the stage so that the archways there could add to the suggestion of a ship.

Hansely portrayed Capt. Keeney as a stubbornly proud seaman who put his whaling reputation before all other values. As the captain's wife, Miss Mohr played a sensitive lady who couldn't adjust to the rigors and oppression of sea life.

The entire story unraveled on the whaling ship, which had spent the last year in a discouraging search for whales. Captain Keeney, despite his wife's pleading, refused to return to port before filling his quota of whale oil.

When it became apparent that his wife's health was threatened, Capt. Keeney finally decided to return home with an unfilled quota. But he changed his mind when whales were sighted.

Disillusioned, sick at heart and in mind, Mrs. Keeney cracked under the strain. Her mind gone, the pathetic woman went to her organ and played a mournful stream of music that seemed to suggest her dark, empty world.

The name was taken from the New England whalers' pronunciation of "oil," which was obtained from whale blubber.

McKall played the role of "Ben," Landen portrayed the steward, Wallace played the first mate, and Piver was "Joe."

Before the presentation of her second play, Mrs. Swink commented on the attitude of Wilmington College audiences. "I hope the students will be ready for a serious drama," she remarked. "This will be a complete departure from the comedy flavor of our first play."

According to Mrs. Swink, a third play will be staged by the Wilmington Theatre on April 11. It will be David Hanig's "Give Us Time To Sing," and will be entered in the Festival of Plays, sponsored by the Carolina Dramatics Association.

A "story of gentle people," the one-act human comedy will be judged by the CDA, and may be selected to take part in the state festival at Chapel Hill on April 25.

Cheerleaders Fete Tournament Queens

A banquet for the Virginia-Carolina Athletic Conference basketball tournament queens was held in the auditorium on Feb. 19.

The banquet was sponsored by the Wilmington College cheerleaders, and was under the direction of George Rountree. Between 20 and 25 people attended the affair.

President Expects Buildings To Open By 1960

By DAN GREENE
Executive Editor

Wilmington College may move into its new home on College Road in September of 1960, according to Dr. William M. Randall.

President Randall expressed this opinion in an interview with a reporter from THE SEAHAWK recently. He explained that initial plans call for the new buildings to be opened for the fall quarter of 1960, and that a two-year curriculum will be offered.

He also expressed a belief that the curriculum will be expanded to meet the needs of a four-year school some time in the future.

These comments were made in answers to questions which were put to the president. Following is a summary of the exclusive interview ("Q" for question, "A" for answer):

Q—When will the new buildings be opened for occupancy?

A—We hope they will be opened in September of 1960.

Q—What will the buildings look like?

A—We don't know for sure yet, but I believe they will be of contemporary architecture.

The architects have looked at various other colleges, including Atlantic Christian, but no definite decision has been made.

Q—How many buildings will be constructed?

A—We plan to construct three buildings for the present.

Q—What will be the school's name when it is opened?

A—As far as I know, it will be Wilmington College.

Q—Will dormitories be built?

A—We will not have dormitories to begin with.

Q—Will the new campus have a gymnasium for varsity games?

A—No. The state provides no money for gymnasiums or dormitories.

Q—How will the athletic program be expanded?

A—It will definitely be expanded, but details haven't been worked out yet.

Q—Will football be added to the varsity program?

A—Nothing has been said about that.

Q—Will the same college officials be kept?

A—We hope so.

Q—How many new teachers will be added?

A—We will add three for the next school year. By the time we move into the new buildings, we may add some more, but that's purely a guess.

Q—Will any one course be emphasized?

A—No.

Q—Will engineer degrees be awarded?

A—Yes, the same degree as we now award. Engineering students will be able to get background work here, as they do now. But they will have to take their advanced courses at a school that specializes in that field.

Q—How many additional students will be accommodated in the new facilities?

A—We'll have space for about 1,000.

Q—Are any tuition changes planned?

A—We don't contemplate any.

Q—What modern conveniences will be offered in the new buildings?

A—One of the biggest attractions will be our new library. It will be much larger and better equipped than the present one. We may also have air conditioning, which will make summer school much more pleasant. (Continued on Page 4, Col. 1)

Mississippi Hate Campaign

"The best way to uncolor the Negro is to give the white man a white heart." To some, these words of Nikita Panin carry a penetrating message. To others, like the more influential citizens of Mississippi, they are nothing more than meaningless prattle.

White Mississippians are a proud lot. They boast a fine heritage, and they protect it with the diligence of a bulldog. They are proud of their history, traditions and moral codes. One of their more cherished practices is hating "niggers," and they refuse to taint this grand old custom with any of these modern ideas about social amalgamation.

These perfect specimens of 100 per cent pure white Christian Americans guard their color against any race that threatens to stain it. Apparently, the most direct threat comes from the Negro race, whose members comprise no insignificant portion of the state's population. So fearful are Mississippians of the Negro's corrupting influence, that they refuse to associate with him under any circumstances.

The rulers of this segregation stronghold won't desert their principles for anything—not even national fame. The staunchness of their convictions (or prejudices) was prominently displayed recently when they refused to allow the basketball team of Mississippi State to accept an invitation to the National Collegiate Athletic Association's championship tournament. To the state's leaders, the respect of the world and a chance for Mississippi to become the basketball capital of the nation seemed meager compensation for watching their pure-white athletes brush elbows with players of a different color.

Before this season, Mississippi State had never been known as a basketball power. So most observers were astonished this winter when the Maroons staggered foe after foe to compile the best record in the Southeastern Conference, territory of such powerhouses as Kentucky and Auburn. Winning the conference title automatically made the Maroons eligible to compete in the post-season NCAA tournament, whose victor is generally regarded as the basketball champion of the United States.

Then the segregation controversy erupted. A Mississippi team had never played against a team with Negro players, and if the Maroons qualified for the NCAA playoffs they would surely meet racially-mixed clubs. It was indeed a serious problem: Should the Maroons risk being contaminated by playing on the same floor with Negroes? Or should they pass up the chance for the national championship and award their NCAA berth to Kentucky?

The students at Mississippi State voted overwhelmingly to accept the invitation, regardless of who their team would have to play. But Governor J. P. Coleman, whose popularity in that area stems from his uncompromising intolerance of other races; and the Mississippi newspapers, one of which devoted an entire editorial page to the "shocking report" of "integration illegitimacy," firmly suggested that the students were not mature enough to decide such a grave problem. Other members of the state's old guard joined in the hate campaign, and soon newspapers throughout the country were heralding a momentous decree: Mississippi "is unalterably opposed to integration of the races, whatever may be the guise."

The older citizens are now satisfied that they saved the poor innocents of Mississippi State's basketball team from a fate worse than living outside Dixie. The players themselves, however, probably feel nothing more than a bitter sense of disappointment for having accomplished a marvelous feat only to learn they cannot accept the reward.

But as an exponent of racial hatred, Mississippi does not stand alone. Few southern states, including North Carolina, have completely abolished their traditions of prejudice and intolerance.

Wilmington itself is in no position to criticize the leaders who prevented Mississippi State from entering the NCAA tournament. Influential citizens of this city uphold a similar policy. For an illustration, one needs only to examine the athletic program here.

Camp Lejeune and Cherry Point annually produce strong teams made up of former college players, some of whom are Negroes. These teams are usually listed on the schedules of many colleges and other military installations. Wilmington College squads sometimes visit these two Marine bases to play non-conference games. In view of these facts, the question naturally arises: Why don't the Seahawks ever play the Marines in Brogden Hall?

Some sections hide it better than others, but the fact remains that hate and prejudice are still dominant forces in the South. And thus it will remain as long as the color of the white man's heart is the same as the Negro's skin.

said. "Algeria is the last Arab state struggling for her freedom against the imperialists.

"We like to be friendly to everybody. We don't want to be allies with any power against another power; we want to be neutral.

"President Nasser of the United Arab Republic is carrying this torch, and I do believe he speaks for 99 per cent of all the Arabs in this world."

Juma wouldn't offer an opinion on the 1958 conflict in the Mid-East which sent thousands of U.S. troops into Lebanon and British soldiers into Jordan as protective measures.

Teachers Should Encourage Free Thought In Classes

By JIMMY CONNELL

The basic quality of a good teacher is initiative.

To continue teaching, he (or she) needs incentive. If he is interested in what he is doing, and wants positively to create in others an interest in his field, the teacher needs enthusiasm. If he thinks far enough ahead and contemplates the product of his labors, he will see the need of a high code of morals for himself as well as a positive attitude toward the presentation of his facts.

To be a really good teacher he should use a little psychology, and to provide a broader background from which to draw, a brush of philosophy would help.

Finally, a teacher should be imbued with a genuine creative impulse, the satisfaction of which should be his payment and his monument.

In the past, under the olive trees, the teacher was a worldly person—one whose words were worth listening to. The primary subject he taught was a hazy, all-embracing one which left a great deal for the student to ponder over. That subject, philosophy, covered all the sciences which are today so exact and specialized that they are completely divorced from their parent.

To reach a position of security these days, the student must devote so much of his time and energy to the "exact sciences" that the social sciences of art, history, literature and music are all but ignored. He is taught the manipulation of facts and figures to gain a predetermined end. But is he taught a basis upon which to build, to improve to create?

His studies carry him farther and farther from the nebulous world of speculation. He may never learn to think.

Our educators should strive to teach these students to accept facts and to so arrange them, mentally, that they can produce an original thought based on the past, propounded for the future.

I do not advocate moving Wilmington College out under the pines. Our weather is too damp, the flies are bothersome, and it wouldn't help anyway. What should be done, however, is impress upon the individual student the importance of the study of the humanities and the importance of gaining the ability to make logical decisions, whether they be in daily life or in the "exact sciences."

The instructor should strive for a level of acceptance between himself and his students. He should encourage discussion, and respect the thoughts, ideas, and opinions of his classes. His major consideration should be the stimulation of interest if the teacher succeeds in this endeavor, the student will be able to carry on alone.

The teaching class of any country is the one that most safeguards the future of that country. It is this group that contributes more than any other to the make-up of the next generation.

Teachers are our protection, because they shape the minds of the people who will someday assume control of this concited nation of ours. Therefore, our educators should be injecting the high ideals upon which our country was founded into every tender young mind with which they come in contact.

If the teachers fail, they will be crowning a bunch of fools, and twisting the others to fit into a slot in our society without regard for our heritage of truth or our legacy of freedom. And they will surely fail unless they teach international awareness, world-wide respect and universal tolerance.

Ignorance is not bliss. It is a blind, grasping, choking, capricious giant that withholds enjoyment, expression and freedom. Our only protection against this monster is knowledge.

Without knowledge, we are lost. With it, we are everything.

Annual Ready For Printers

Wilmington College's 1958-59 "Fledgling" is about to go to the printer.

Final group pictures were taken recently. The yearbook will be available about May 1.

This year the annual will feature the colors green and gold. Twenty of the 100 pages will have some color.

Complete picture coverage of all dances and other activities will highlight the yearbook. Another point of interest will be the layout on the Fledgling Beauties.

SEAHAWKS WIN CAGE TOURNAMENT

The Wilmington College Seahawks tasted championship glory for the first time Feb. 21 at Brogden Hall before a cheering and jubilant throng of 3,000 spectators.

The red-hot Hawks were crowned tournament champions after blasting Frederick, 75-53. Joel Gibson, veteran forward and only member of last year's team, received the championship trophy from Conference Commissioner Frank Murray of Raleigh.

The trophy was a fitting reward for a Seahawk team that had constantly proven its worth during the regular season. It marked the first time that a Seahawk team won the tournament title, and it could not have been bestowed upon a more worthy club.

The hustling Hawks blazed through the regular season with 21 victories and 5 defeats. The only conference team able to solve the Hawks' attack was Campbell. The Camels upset the locals in an overtime game at Buies Creek.

The Market Street five established another record by compiling 15 straight victories on the home court without a defeat.

In winning the three-day event, the Hawks defeated Chowan and Louisburg to gain the finals. They encountered little resistance in the Chowan game, winning by a big margin. Such was not the case in the Louisburg affair, however. The Hawk hotshots really had to show their form in defeating a surprisingly tough Louisburg five.

In the championship game against Frederick, the Hawks left no doubt in the minds of fans as to which was the superior team. Behind the superb shooting and rebounding of Jerry Fritz, the locals led all the way. The former Marine's performance overshadowed the sterling play of Jack Connolly, Joe Jeffers and Jerry Ellis of Frederick.

As the game ended, jubilant fans rushed out on the court hoisting several Seahawk players on their shoulders and carrying them off the court. Never had such enthusiasm been exhibited toward a local basketball team.

In addition to winning the three-day event, the Hawks placed guard Bob McLoughlin and center Dick Brennan on the all-tournament team. Aubrey Strother of Louisburg, Jack Connolly of Frederick, and Jim Wiles of Campbell rounded out the dream team.

When these selections were made, Jerry Fritz, another Seahawk standout, looked somewhat disappointed. But his gloom was only temporary. Fritz won the most coveted trophy of all, as the tournament's most valuable player.

The husky Hawk attained this honor by his steady play throughout the tournament. The jumping-jack guard was a terror under both boards. He also scored 45 points in the tournament—high for the Hawks.

The tournament, sponsored by the Exchange Club, was an overwhelming success. It was the most successful, attendance-wise, in the history of the conference.

All competing teams displayed outstanding sportsmanship, and the fans enjoyed every thrill-packed minute.

In the consolation finals, Campbell and Louisburg hooked up in one of the highest scoring games viewed this year at Brogden Hall, with the Camels gaining a 99-90 win to take third-place honors.

VARSIITY REPORT

By Gary Darden

Now that the Seahawks have completed their most successful basketball season and old man winter is disappearing behind his frigid coat of ice and snow, another duo eagerly waits to replace them.

One member of this duo is spring, with its delightful sunshine, warm air and wholesome atmosphere of gay laughter and happiness. This is the time of year when man's most serious burdens are overshadowed by his optimistic outlook that all things are not so bad as they appear.

The other member of the duo, which is probably more eager to display its wares than spring, is the Wilmington College baseball team.

The Hawks, like other baseball teams throughout the country, create part of the spirit that flows wild and abundantly during spring. Perhaps this is why baseball is known as our national pastime and spring as our most welcomed season. The two form a combination that is difficult to beat in any league.

Think about the joys of spring, and automatically a vision of baseball will appear. Baseball, with its blatant crowds, bitter rivalry and ninth-inning rallies. These terms may seem insignificant to some, but to the baseball fan they are the fuel that feeds his rabid spirit. He enjoys and supports a winning team.

The fan with this philosophy of mind will be happy to know that this year's Seahawk baseball team is fully capable of duplicating the performances of last year's club.

Six lettermen are returning to greet Coach Bill Brooks, plus a crop of rookies that could make the Port City crew the class of the conference.

The Seahawks posted an envious 13-3 record last year while going unbeaten in conference play. It was only the second season the Market Street school had fielded a baseball club. They defeated Spartanburg, S. C., in a playoff game at Legion Stadium last year to capture the Carolinas championship. Pretty good for a beginner, huh?

The Hawks' attack was led by the hitting of Joe Wooten and Neil Easom. Rudy Groomes, Berry Cauble, and Earl Allen provided the defensive spark, while Joel Gibson, Billy DeBruhl and Ed Carroll constituted a mound staff second to none in the league.

Last year Gibson was unbeaten in compiling a 6-0 record. His superb control and steady firing made him the ace of the Hawk staff. Gibson, along with Carroll and DeBruhl, will be back again this season to help defend the Hawks' title. In addition, Bobby Connor, ex-New Hanover High star, will take his turn on the slab.

Connor, one of the best pitching prospects in this area, was an all-state pitcher with the Wildcats last year. His pitching arm carried Riegel to the Cape Fear League championship last summer.

The Hawks' infield lists two returnees along with a group of newcomers that could strengthen hopes of another championship. Veterans Groomes and Billy Sullivan are back. And ready to assist these two glue-fingered infielders are former Wildcats Cam Morgan and Buddy Tilden. Jerry Richardson, one of the best American Legion players in Tennessee last year, and Buddy Presnell round out the infield roster.

The Hawks' outer pasture appears stable with Jerome Pittman, Berry Cauble, and Tom Heath returning. Jerry Fritz, Larry Lindsey and Ted Williams are other candidates competing for the outer garden positions.

At present, this year's catching strength seems to be Coach Brooks' biggest problem. Nathan Bedford of Goldsboro and Wren Williams are prospective candidates.

Northern Duo Honored As Month's Stars

By RUBBA SMITH
Staff Writer

For their consistent good play throughout the basketball season, Ted Williams and Dick Brennan have been selected by THE SEAHAWK to share the "player of the month" honor.

These two towering freshmen gave the Seahawks the finest rebounding team in the junior college conference last season. Most of the Hawks' opponents found it virtually impossible to jump against 6-8 Brennan and 6-6 Williams.

Brennan was also the local team's biggest gun during the last part of the season. He finished the campaign as the club's No. 4 scorer with a 10.4 average.

Brennan, an all-conference and all-tournament selection, graduated from Long Island City High School in New York, where he averaged 18 points a game. He received 20 scholarship offers, and elected to go to Muhlenberg of the East Coast Conference, where he averaged 12 points a game as a freshman. He transferred to Wilmington to pick up quality points.

Williams, a Stroudsburg, Pa., athlete who led the Lehigh Valley Conference in scoring with a 24-point average, holds the scoring record of his high school. He was chosen for the conference all-star team, and was sent to Wilmington by a North Carolina State scout so that he could gain more experience.

Ted's major outside interest is golf, and he intends to major in law or engineering.

Basketball Team Ends Best Season In History

The Seahawks climaxed the most successful basketball season in the school's history by thumping the University of South Carolina freshmen, 74-59, in Brogden Hall.

The ragged contest, played before 1,000 spectators, ended the regular season for the Wilmington team, and pushed its home-game victory streak to 12 games.

The Gamecocks managed to narrow the gap at times, but the sputtering Hawk offense regained its composure long enough to halt the efforts of the Columbia lads.

It was the 21st victory of the year for the locals against five reverses. In accumulating this outstanding record, they amassed a total of 2,025 points for an average of 81 a game.

Bob McLoughlin finished as the top scorer with a 15.3 average. Larry Lindsey was second with an 11.2 mark, followed by Jerry Fritz with 11.0. Dick Brennan went on a scoring spree in the last nine games to close in on the leaders with a 10.4 average.

Brennan, Fritz and Williams led the squad in rebounding, while Lindsey, McLoughlin and Jackie Bullard were outstanding throughout the season in play-making. Ed Miaszkowski was another key player, but he was slowed down in the latter part of the season with injuries.

Following is a summary of the past month's action:

WC 81, EMI 58
The Seahawks bagged their 12th straight conference victory

at Brogden Hall by defeating a scrappy Edwards Military Institute club, 81-58. The win, gained before a huge Homecoming audience, was the second in three days over the Cadets from Salemburg.

The locals started off slow, and EMI, led by the sharpshooting of Frank Winfree, played on equal terms with the Hawks in the first half.

McLoughlin cooled off Winfree in the second half, and the locals slowly pulled away from their shorter foes.

Brennan led the WC attack with 22 points.

WC 69, OAK RIDGE 54
Wilmington became the regular season champion three nights later by outpointing Oak Ridge, 69-54.

In an effort to smother the locals' offense, Oak Ridge played a deliberate game. The Hawks couldn't be stopped, however, and they led by seven points at the half.

Brennan once again paced the Market Street cagers, this time with 18 points. He was followed by Fritz with 16.

UNC 99, WC 85
A tall University of North Carolina freshman club handed the Hawks their fourth defeat of the year at Chapel Hill. Don Walsh led the Tar Babies' attack.

The locals had trouble getting started, and trailed at the half, 53-37. They narrowed the gap to seven points in the third quarter, but the Tar Babies caught fire and raced to the lopsided victory.

Miaszkowski, playing his best game of the season, led the local attack with 22 points.

WC 70, Chowan 46
Behind the sterling play of Jerry Fritz, the Hawks rebounded from their defeat at Chapel Hill to humble the Chowan Braves, 70-46 in Brogden Hall. WC raced to a 34-28 halftime lead, and put the game on ice in the second half when two of the Braves' starters fouled out. Chowan scored 18 points in the second half.

Fritz, Brennan and Ted Williams paced the Wilmington attack.

WC 108, Oak Ridge 66
The Hawks broke the century mark for the third time when they mauled the Oak Ridge Cadets in Brogden Hall. The only satisfaction Oak Ridge received was Tom Truitt leading all scorers with 19 points.

Should United States Educators Use Russian System As Model?

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) The rush toward conquest of space is beginning to cause a reevaluation of American educational standards. Controversies have been raging over the question of whether or not American educational institutions are properly preparing students for scientific competition.

American college students are caught in the midst of the controversy. In some the Soviet system, others wonder what is going on behind the Iron Curtain. They are torn between the desire to know whether or not American students are doing as well as Russian students. Associated Press writer, the following questions are discussed.

relative cross-section of students in American colleges and Universities:

"Some people feel we Americans must imitate the Russian educational system in order to advance in the race for scientific knowledge. Would you agree or disagree with this feeling?"

More than three out of four of the students interviewed answered with an unequivocal "disagree." Only about one in six expressed agreement. Six per cent of the total hadn't made up its mind.

Proportionately more coeds than men disagreed with the notion that we should imitate Russia. Their lead was small — 51 per cent of the coeds disagreed against 37 per cent of the men, but the direction of the lead is clear.

It is not possible to speculate on the reason for this, but one of the reasons might be the general feeling that the Russian system is too rigid and too authoritarian. It is also possible that the students are aware of the fact that the Russian system is not as well known as it is often portrayed.

There were about equal numbers of men and women who had not made up their mind.

A senior coed from Mount St. Mary's College in Los Angeles who is now studying for the degree in education, said that she thought the Russian system was too rigid and too authoritarian. She said that she thought the American system was more flexible and more democratic.

Hawks Close Best Season

SEAHAWKS WIN CAGE TOURNAMENT

The Wilmington College Seahawks tasted championship glory for the first time Feb. 21 at Brogden Hall before a cheering and jubilant throng of 3,000 spectators.

The red-hot Hawks were crowned tournament champions after blasting Frederick, 75-53. Joel Gibson, veteran forward and only member of last year's team, received the championship trophy from Conference Commissioner Frank Murray of Raleigh.

The trophy was a fitting reward for a Seahawk team that had constantly proven its worth during the regular season. It marked the first time that a Seahawk team won the tournament title, and it could not have been bestowed upon a more worthy club.

The hustling Hawks blazed through the regular season with 21 victories and 5 defeats. The only conference team able to solve the Hawks' attack was Campbell. The Camels upset the locals in an overtime game at Buies Creek.

The Market Street five established another record by compiling 15 straight victories on the home court without a defeat.

In winning the three-day event, the Hawks defeated Chowan and Louisburg to gain the finals. They encountered little resistance in the Chowan game, winning by a big margin.

Such was not the case in the Louisburg affair, however. The Hawk hotshots really had to show their form in defeating a surprisingly tough Louisburg five.

In the championship game against Frederick, the Hawks left no doubt in the minds of fans as to which was the superior team. Behind the superb shooting and rebounding of Jerry Fritz, the locals led all the way. The former Marine's performance overshadowed the sterling play of Jack Connolly, Joe Jeffers and Jerry Ellis of Frederick.

As the game ended, jubilant fans rushed out on the court hoisting several Seahawk players on their shoulders and carrying them off the court. Never had such enthusiasm been exhibited toward a local basketball team.

In addition to winning the three-day event, the Hawks placed guard Bob McLoughlin and center Dick Brennan on the all-tournament team. Aubrey Strother of Louisburg, Jack Connolly of Frederick, and Jim Wiles of Campbell rounded out the dream team.

When these selections were made, Jerry Fritz, another Seahawk standout, looked somewhat disappointed. But his gloom was only temporary. Fritz won the most coveted trophy of all, as the tournament's most valuable player.

The husky Hawk attained this honor by his steady play

throughout the tournament. The jumping-jack guard was a terror under both boards. He also scored 45 points in the tournament—high for the Hawks.

The tournament, sponsored by the Exchange Club, was an overwhelming success. It was the most successful, attendance-wise, in the history of the conference.

All competing teams displayed outstanding sportsmanship, and the fans enjoyed every thrill-packed minute.

In the consolation finals, Campbell and Louisburg hooked up in one of the highest scoring games viewed this year at Brogden Hall, with the Camels gaining a 99-90 win to take third-place honors.

VARSITY REPORT

By Gary Darden

Now that the Seahawks have completed their most successful basketball season and old man winter is disappearing behind its frigid coat of ice and snow, another duo eagerly waits to replace them.

One member of this duo is spring, with its delightful sunshine, warm air and wholesome atmosphere of gay laughter and happiness. This is the time of year when man's most serious burdens are overshadowed by his optimistic outlook that all things are not so bad as they appear.

DARDEN

The other member of the duo, which is probably more eager to display its wares than spring, is the Wilmington College baseball team.

The Hawks, like other baseball teams throughout the country, create part of the spirit that flows wild and abundantly during spring. Perhaps this is why baseball is known as our national pastime and spring as our most welcomed season. The two form a combination that is difficult to beat in any league.

Think about the joys of spring, and automatically a vision of baseball will appear. Baseball, with its blatant crowds, bitter rivalry and ninth-inning rallies. These terms may seem insignificant to some, but to the baseball fan they are the fuel that feeds his rabid spirit. He enjoys and supports a winning team.

The fan with this philosophy of mind will be happy to know that this year's Seahawk baseball team is fully capable of duplicating the performances of last year's club.

Six lettermen are returning to greet Coach Bill Brooks, plus a crop of rookies that could make the team's future very bright. The quality of the set, the quantity of the set, the make-up and costumes; and 55 per cent for acting (voice, characterization, contrast, timing).

LITERARY BOOKLET TO BE PUBLISHED BY 'PEN PUSHERS'

"With Pen In Hand," the annual Pen Pushers' Club publication.

His superb control and steady firing made him the ace of the Hawk staff, Gibson, along with Carroll and DeBruhl, will be back again this season to help defend the Hawks' title. In addition, Bobby Connor, ex-New Hanover High star, will take his turn on the slab.

Connor, one of the best pitching prospects in this area, was an all-state pitcher with the Wildcats last year. His pitching arm carried Riegel to the Cape Fear League championship last summer.

The Hawks' infield lists two returnees along with a group of newcomers that could strengthen hopes of another championship. Veterans Groomes and Billy Sullivan are back. And ready to assist these two glue-fingered infielders are former Wildcats Cam Morgan and Buddy Tilden. Jerry Richardson, one of the best American Legion players in Tennessee last year, and Buddy Prennell round out the infield roster.

The Hawks' outer pasture appears stable with Jerome Pittman, Berry Cauble, and Tom Heath returning. Jerry Fritz, Larry Lindsey and Ted Williams are other candidates competing for the outer garden positions.

At present, this year's catching strength seems to be Coach Brooks' biggest problem. Nathan Bedford of Goldsboro and Wren Williams are prospective candidates.

Northern Duo Honored As Month's Stars

By BUBBA SMITH
Staff Writer

For their consistent good play throughout the basketball season, Ted Williams and Dick Brennan have been selected by THE SEAHAWK to share the "player of the month" honor.

These two towering freshmen gave the Seahawks the finest rebounding team in the junior college conference last season. Most of the Hawks' opponents found it virtually impossible to jump against 6-8 Brennan and 6-6 Williams.

Brennan was also the local team's biggest gun during the last part of the season. He finished the campaign as the club's No. 4 scorer with a 10.4 average.

Brennan, an all-conference and all-tournament selection, graduated from Long Island City High School in New York, where he averaged 18 points a game. He received 20 scholarship offers, and elected to go to Muhlenberg of the East Coast Conference, where he averaged 12 points a game as a freshman. He transferred to Wilmington to pick up quality points.

Williams, a Stroudsburg, Pa., athlete who led the Lehigh Valley Conference in scoring with a 24-point average, holds the scoring record of his high school. He was chosen for the conference all-star team, and was sent to Wilmington by a North Carolina State scout so that he could gain more experience.

Ted's major outside interest is golf, and he intends to major in law or engineering.

Basketball Team Ends Best Season In History

The Seahawks climaxed the most successful basketball season in the school's history by thumping the University of South Carolina freshmen, 74-59, in Brogden Hall.

The ragged contest, played before 1,000 spectators, ended the regular season for the Wilmington team, and pushed its home-game victory streak to 12 games.

The Gamecocks managed to narrow the gap at times, but the sputtering Hawk offense regained its composure long enough to halt the efforts of the Columbia lads.

It was the 21st victory of the year for the locals against five reverses. In accumulating this outstanding record, they amassed a total of 2,025 points for an average of 81 a game.

Bob McLoughlin finished as the top scorer with a 15.3 average. Larry Lindsey was second with an 11.2 mark, followed by Jerry Fritz with 11.0. Dick Brennan went on a scoring spree in the last nine games to close in on the leaders with a 10.4 average.

Brennan, Fritz and Williams led the squad in rebounding, while Lindsey, McLoughlin and Jackie Bullard were outstanding throughout the season in play-making. Ed Miastkowski was another key player, but he was slowed down in the latter part of the season with injuries.

Following is a summary of the past month's action:

WC 81, EMI 58
The Seahawks bagged their 12th straight conference victory

at Brogden Hall by defeating a scrappy Edwards Military Institute club, 81-58. The win, gained before a huge Homecoming audience, was the second in three days over the Cadets from Salem.

The locals started off slow, and EMI, led by the sharpshooting of Frank Winfree, played on equal terms with the Hawks in the first half.

McLoughlin cooled off Winfree in the second half, and the locals slowly pulled away from their shorter foes.

Brennan led the WC attack with 22 points.

WC 69, OAK RIDGE 54
Wilmington reclaimed the regular season champion three nights later by outpointing Oak Ridge, 69-54.

In an effort to smother the locals' offense, Oak Ridge played a deliberate game. The Hawks couldn't be stopped, however, and they led by seven points at the half.

Brennan once again paced the Market Street cagers, this time with 18 points. He was followed by Fritz with 16.

UNC 99, WC 85
A tall University, of North Carolina freshman club handed the Hawks their fourth defeat of the year at Chapel Hill. Don Walsh led the Tar Babies' attack.

The locals had trouble getting started, and trailed at the half, 37-57. They narrowed the gap to seven points in the third quarter, but the Tar Babies caught fire and raced to the lopsided victory.

Miastkowski, playing his best game of the season, led the local attack with 22 points.

WC 70, Chowan 46
Behind the sterling play of Jerry Fritz, the Hawks rebounded from their defeat at Chapel Hill to humble the Chowan Braves, 70-46 in Brogden Hall.

WC raced to a 34-28 halftime lead, and put the game on ice in the second half when two of the Braves' starters fouled out. Chowan scored 18 points in the second half.

Fritz, Brennan and Ted Williams paced the Wilmington attack.

WC 108, Oak Ridge 66
The Hawks broke the century mark for the third time when they mauled the Oak Ridge Cadets in Brogden Hall. The only satisfaction Oak Ridge received was Tom Truitt leading all scorers with 19 points.

Dean Interviews

Profs In The News

By Gene Piner

Takes Trip . . . Miss Shannon Morton, dean of women and head of the English Department, went to Chapel Hill recently where she took part in the interviewing of candidates for the Delta Kappa Gamma scholarship. The organization is an international honorary society for women educators. Miss Morton serves as chairman of the state committee on scholarships which provides a scholarship for graduate work to a member of the society.

Gets License . . . Calvin Doss, instructor in engineering and a professional bus driver, was recently awarded a back-seat driver's license by an unidentified colleague who, we believe, picked it up on a trip to New York.

Mental Health . . . The New Hanover County Association for Mental Health has recently received recognition from Duke University, which means better mental health services for Wilmington. Miss Catherine Noyes, associate professor of English, is president of the local group. The Duke Department of Psychology has asked permission to use Wilmington as a field laboratory for its post-doctoral students in clinical psychology. The work will be financed by the National Institute of Mental Health in Bethesda, Maryland.

Q—What new courses will be added?

A—We plan to add a course in oceanography, which will deal with currents, sea life and other ocean phenomena of a local nature. Our music and drama departments will also be enlarged.

Q—Will a cafeteria be built?

A—We haven't planned one.

Q—Will the business offices and class rooms be in the same building?

A—One building will probably have all the business offices and the library. Class rooms will be in another building.

Q—Will entrance requirements change?

A—They will remain the same.

Q—Do you believe that Wilmington College will become a four-year college in the near future?

A—I believe that this area needs a four-year college. It seems possible that Wilmington College may so develop. If it does so develop, it is my opinion that we should keep all that we now have at the junior college level, and add the two senior years of a liberal arts program with an emphasis on elementary school teacher training, to satisfy the needs of the area.

Should United States Educators Use Russian System As Model?

MINNEAPOLIS (ACP)—The rush toward conquest of space is beginning to cause a re-evaluation of American educational standards. Controversies have been raging over the question of whether or not American educational institutions are properly preparing students for scientific competition.

American college students are caught in the midst of the controversy. In effect, the speculation centers around what is going to happen to them. To discover their feelings on whether or not America should undertake to imitate Russia in educating its students, Associated Collegiate Press asked the following question of a representative cross-section of students in American colleges and Universities:

"Some people feel we Americans must imitate the Russian educational system in order to advance in the race for scientific knowledge. Would you agree or disagree with this feeling?"

More than three out of four of the students interviewed answered with an unequivocal "disagree." Only about one in six expressed agreement. Six per cent of the total hadn't made up its mind.

Proportionately more coeds than men disagreed with the notion that we should imitate Russia. Their lead was small — 81 per cent of the coeds disagreeing against 77 per cent of the men — but the direction of the lead is clear.

It is only possible to speculate on the reason for this, but one of the reasons might be the general trend for more men than women to be enrolled in scientific or technological courses.

There were about equal numbers of men and women undecided on the issue.

A senior coed from Mount St. Mary College in Los Angeles offers as her reason for disagreeing that "Russians force specialized education. I think education should be for all — not forced."

An East Coast coed—from the University of Vermont — also disagrees and supports her stand by saying, "Everyone isn't adapted to that kind of education. The persons who are best adapted to it will get it anyway."

A senior man from Northwestern University in Evanston, Illinois, answered the question by disagreeing, then added another question as his reason: "How do we know theirs is the best?"

Election Can Help Or Hinder

Before the end of this month, Wilmington College freshmen will be called upon to put into motion an instrument that has shaped the very foundation of democracy. A simple device, it is not as heavy as a shovel nor as complex as a nuclear reactor. Yet it has done more for the American way of life than even these standards of our progress from colonial times to the brilliant Atomic Age. This instrument is the secret ballot.

But such an instrument is only powerful when it is in motion. When unused for a long period, like an idle automobile it loses its generating power.

It is also a dumb thing which thinks only through the person utilizing it. Like a horse, it goes only where its rider directs; and like a pistol, it fires only where someone aims it. But riders sometimes take the wrong road and good people are often killed by misguided firearms.

The person who uses this instrument takes upon himself a serious responsibility. He and his fellow voters can unleash a mighty blow to an unpopular administration, or can retain indefinitely a governing body that is satisfying their needs and desires. But in casting their votes, if too many make the wrong decision, the whole future of their society may suffer.

Above all, the voter must realize the seriousness of his task. He must remember that his vote, as insignificant as it appears, can become a potent weapon when joined by others. And he must also remember that this weapon can be turned against him if the wrong man is put into office.

This election should not be taken lightly. It can help to further the progress of Wilmington College, or slow its advancement.

In the past, the Student Council and class officers have been given little responsibility here. Much of their energy has been devoted to planning and directing student activities, which have included little more than a few annual dances. The college has never possessed anything closely resembling a student government.

But WC is growing, and soon it will move into modern buildings on College Road. There has also been talk concerning the possibility of the school eventually becoming a four-year college.

To keep pace with this physical progress, the student body should begin to take steps toward the future. Definite plans should be made to give WC a move convincing college atmosphere. Officers should be installed who are willing and able to establish a broader student council system. A program should be drawn up to guide the future officers' efforts toward an established goal.

When elected, the new officers should not be satisfied to merely assume the limited responsibilities willed to them by their predecessors. They should accept the challenge to give Wilmington College its first real governmental body.

Next year's Student Council need not devote most of its time to the planning of dances. The need for a broader activities program here is glaringly evident, and the deficiency will remain until a zealous group takes the lead to eliminate it. This is a task for the Student Council.

The student's college life outside the class room could be enriched considerably by positive actions taken by student officers. How much fuller would be the student's education if he was given the opportunity to hear guest speakers throughout the year, to participate in panel discussions and debate competitions, to hear concerts and recitals, even to hear occasional lectures on popular subjects by selected professors of the college.

Few colleges can satisfy the desires of all its students, but if just one or two intellectual additions were made to the WC activities calendar, the resulting benefits would not go unnoticed.

This is the time for decision. The choice is up to the freshmen. Their votes will elect the men and women who will represent the student body throughout the 1959-60 school year.

But next fall, the new officers will be the ones faced with a major decision. They will have to decide whether to make a tangible contribution to the progress of their school, or to just settle down to the traditional task of making plans for the yearly dances.

STUDENTS' ART SHOW TO OPEN

Wilmington College's first annual art show will open in the Artists' Gallery, No. 3 Post Office Ave., next Monday.

Under the direction of Claude Howell, WC art instructor, the exhibit will feature 15 paintings and a few drawings. All the works have been done by students of the college.

The exhibit will last "one or two weeks," according to Howell. The gallery will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. every day except Sunday.

A private showing and reception is scheduled for Saturday from 8 to 10 p.m. Painters, faculty members and patrons of the Artists' Gallery are invited to attend the reception.

The best 15 paintings are to be selected from the WC art classes to be displayed in the showing. A few of the better drawings are also to be picked.

Howell and another local painter are to select this week the works which will be shown.

Howell plans to make this an annual event for WC. "We want to show the people of Wilmington what type of work our art students are doing here," he explained.

WC Yearbook Is Expected Next Month

The 1959 "Fledgling" is expected to be distributed here shortly before the end of the spring quarter.

English instructor Rexford Piner, faculty adviser of the yearbook, offered this opinion last week. He reported that the annual was originally scheduled to come out about the first of May, but that the staff was late in delivering the copy to the printers.

Piner added that he hoped the "Fledgling" would be available by the second week of May.

Disciples Of 'Beat' Doctrine Conform To Nonconformism

By Jimmy Connell

I have been asked to express my views on the current popularity of the so-called "Beat Generation."

The Beats began to rise in the public's eyes after the publication of "On the Road," an autobiographical novel by Jack Kerouac. According to the press and the "people in the know," this is the Beatniks' bible.

I read the book, and it didn't show me much in the way of expressing the philosophies of this group. My only qualification for criticism is that I lived in a Beatnik colony last summer.

China Town points a smelly finger up Russian Hill from the heart of San Francisco. Topping the hill is Coit Tower, the city's landmark. Between the tower and China Town lies the kingdom of the Beat. This area, not too well defined, is called North Beach. It's a mile from the nearest water.

The cable-drawn trolley cars drop tourists off in China Town. They wander around buying carvings of wood and ivory, and they hold their noses at the smell of drying squid, octopus and shark tail. At night, they walk up the hill to look at us.

The tourists go to "The Place" or "The Bagel Shop" and watch the "antics" of people so foreign that they may be speaking another language. Then they go home to criticize the peculiar actions of the few they observed, and a reputation is born.

The Beats cry, "Why don't they leave us alone?" But this is impossible so long as there remains a spark of difference.

A Beatnik is a person who conforms to a group of nonconformists. He struggles in a world of hardship. He strives never to lose sight of reality. He thrives on emotion.

Most Beatniks are conspicuous because of the strange clothes they choose to wear.

Because of the Beat's sudden rise in popularity, his ranks have been invaded by another type of person. Some are lazy bums; some are erotic bums. They live on North Beach because there they can shirk responsibility, loosen their morals, and just "go to hell" in general.

The true Beat is expected to have some quirks in his character, and for this he is exploited.

I once met a man in a China Town bar who professed an interest in the Beatniks. I, naive as usual, invited him to a poetry reading that night.

Mid bongos and verse and wine he strutted for every female in the place. Finally he was invited to leave.

This episode is indicative of the general public's feeling. They think that every Beat together is an orgy. Perhaps this belief stems from the fact that in living in undiluted reality, these men and women form a mutual understanding, and sometimes their frankness and unpretentiousness is misunderstood by others.

The Grayline Tourist Company put in a special bus tour through Beatnikdom, and the Beats considered this insult the last straw.

Forming themselves fifty strong, armed with the ever-present wine jugs, they marched on San Francisco. They toured the best hotels, the best bars, the best nightclubs—to stare at the fools.

Somewhere along the way, they met a group of fraternity boys on a spree. Since the police stopped the riot before it was really started, the two groups decided to wage a series of contests. The Beats won them all—a beer-drinking contest, a skiing contest, a baseball game. They also solved a problem in nuclear physics and another in psychological symbolism.

The people of whom I speak are, to be sure, extremists. But their counterparts, in lesser degrees, can be found in every part of every major country in the world today.

People today talk a great deal about moral, ethical and religious responsibility, and it seems to me that they may be trying to rationalize their way into more physical freedom and less spiritual ties.

Frankly, I think we are all a little beat.

Thailand Health Worker Studies Psychology Here

By BOB OLSEN
Staff Writer

Chaon Rodpotong, public health nursing supervisor from Thailand, is very much impressed by the vast distances and huge population of the United States as compared to her country.

Mrs. Rodpotong is studying educational psychology at Wilmington College, and presently is getting field experience with the New Hanover County Board of Health. Last summer, she took a course in public health nursing at the University of North Carolina.

Chaon, married and the mother of three girls, aged 10, 12 and 15, is employed by the national government of Thailand and was sent to the United States to learn our methods of public health technique. She has been here 16 months and will return to her country in May.

Mrs. Rodpotong says that although she will not be a full-time teacher when she returns to her country, much of her work will involve teaching health measures to adults and children. She feels that the course in educational psychology will be of value in giving her a better understanding of learning processes.

When asked about customs in her country, she said, "In my country the young people do not mix socially at such an early age as in this country. The boys and girls are separated in schools through secondary or high school, and they do not attend school together until the university."

Chaon's hometown is Bangkok, the capital city of Thailand. There, the people wear western dress to work but wear traditional clothing of their country on special occasions, such as New Year.

Thailand, or Siam as it is sometimes called, is a small country of about 200,000 square miles on the Indo-China peninsula. It has a population of about 14 1/2 million.

The principle economy is agriculture, with rice and corn as the leading grains cultivated.

Until 27 years ago, Siam was an absolute monarchy. Now it has a constitution which provides for a legislative body, one half of which is nominated by the king and the other half by the people for a period of four years.

Hawks Seek 6th Consecutive League Victory

SEAHAWK BASEBALL PLAYERS OF THE MONTH

Baseball Trio Honored As Month's Stars

Three varsity baseball players have been selected by THE SEAHAWK to reign as "Seahawks of the Month."

Honored for their outstanding efforts on the diamond during the past four weeks are catcher Nate Bedford, first baseman Roger Coon and pitcher Billy DeBruhl.

Bedford, a native of Goldsboro, caught for Fort McPherson (Ga.), Third Army champion, for the past two years. He batted .333 his first year with the Army club, but his average fell the second season because of an injury.

Nate is used to a winning team. The Third Army champs boasted a phenomenal 99-12 record during the two seasons he played for them.

After his discharge from the Army, Bedford was offered a scholarship to North Carolina State College. He plans to accept it after another season with the Seahawks.

Coon, a 6-3, 195-pounder, was an all-state baseball star while playing for Gastonia High. Last year this team beat the Wildcats of New Hanover for the state AAA championship.

The Hawks' new first sacker was an outfielder in high school, but has completely adjusted to his present job. He is one of the most consistent hitters on the team, and has supplied the power slugging that coach Bill Brooks was afraid he lacked at the first of the season.

The Gastonian is interested in radio and television, but would consider furthering his baseball career if it proved beneficial.

DeBruhl, who has been the Hawks' big man on the mound so far this season, is a native of Camden, S. C., where he established an enviable pitching reputation by leading his high school team to the state baseball championship two years in a row.

One of Billy's many victories in high school was a no-hitter, a remarkable feat in any league.

DeBruhl is a business administration major, and is interested in going into professional baseball.

VARSIY REPORT

By Gary Darden

The Wilmington College pitching staff, considered by many to be the best in the conference, had no alternative than to play second fiddle on the Hawks' recent three-game road swing. The pitching of course contributed to the team's success, but the brightest aspect of the tour was the heavy artillery unloaded by the local batmen.

In three games the local stickmen battered opposing pitching for 43 hits, including one homer, four triples and three doubles. The Hawks left a trail of hits from Louisburg, N. C., to Portsmouth, Va., and back to Murfreesboro, N. C., in their big offensive conquest. And to add frosting to the cake, these teams on which the Hawks fattened their batting averages were conference members.

The unfortunate clubs on the receiving end of the Hawk bombs were Louisburg, Frederick and Chowan. These opponents threw their best moundmen at the Hawks to no avail. It wasn't a question of WC's offensive power because each team scored enough runs against local pitching to win.

It's quite an oddity that the three opposing teams averaged nearly seven runs a contest and still came out on the short end of the scores.

It was a relentless bunch of Hawks who were accustomed to winning and frowned on the idea of defeat which spelled misery for these ball clubs. In one of the games the Market Street crew was down three runs but came back to win easily.

In the first five games, pitching seemed to be the force behind the Hawks' success. Then their batting attack blossomed in an 18-hit barrage against P.J.C. in Wilmington. This offensive spurt, somewhat unnoticed because of the Azalea parade the same day, was the beginning of the Hawks' assault on opposing pitching.

The spirit that flowed that day might have been wholesome and joyous so far as the parade was concerned, but it could not have been more deadly than on the P.J.C. bench.

No one can say what spirit enveloped the locals that day, but whatever it was they certainly have not lost it, as their road game success testified.

Last year's team, although highly successful, could not boast of such achievements as these so early in the season.

Perhaps the pitchers did encounter trouble on the road, but don't consider this difficulty permanent. The Hawk staff would fulfill any junior college coach's dream. Bobby Conner, Joel Gibson, Ed Carroll and Billy DeBruhl are all capable of going the full nine. And the most remarkable aspect is that they are all of equal ability.

Also, the Hawks in the last few games have uncovered two more players capable of hitting the long ball, in the persons of Nate Bedford and Rudy Groomes. Before, Roger Coon had capably shouldered that responsibility alone.

If the past three-game road trip is an indication, opposing pitchers have a lot of fireworks in store for them, and opposing coaches are going to have nightmares trying to devise suitable methods of quelling the Hawks' bombardment.

Golf Team Victorious

Wilmington's golf team picked up two conference victories last week at Chowan College.

The "Golfhawks" whipped the Braves in a two-match series, 14½ to 3½ and 18 to 0. They opened the 1959 season last month with an impressive 16½ to 1½ decision over Wingate. Before the Chowan trip, the locals beat Louisburg, 13½ to 4½. David Clark was low for Wilmington with a 71.

Next month, the local club will play host to the Virginia-Carolina Athletic Conference championship tournament. This will mark the first time the conference golf tourney has been held here.

Meet Louisburg Here Tonight

Flying high with a four-game victory streak, the Seahawks were scheduled to go after win No. 8 here Wednesday night against Louisburg at Legion Stadium.

With over half the baseball season logged in the record book, the Seahawks are leading the Virginia-Carolina Athletic Conference with five straight league victories. In ten games, they have lost only twice and have been tied once.

Wilmington's only defeats were administered by Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute of Troy, N. Y., and Cornell University of the Ivy League. Both of these clubs represented four-year colleges.

After entertaining Louisburg Wednesday, the local club is scheduled to play host to Chowan on Saturday. Next Monday, the locals will visit the University of North Carolina to play the Tar Babies.

The UNC freshmen will return the visit May 9 for the Hawks' final game of the season.

Nine more contests remain on the Hawks' schedule. All but the two with Carolina are conference games.

Following is a rundown of games played during the past four weeks:

WC 1, PJC 0

The Wilmington Seahawks opened defense of their conference baseball championship with an 11-inning 1-0 victory over Presbyterian Junior College. Billy DeBruhl pitched nine brilliant innings of shutout ball for the Hawks, and Joel Gibson did a fine job in relief for Ed Carroll to pick up the first win of the season.

Smoky Woods, a tireless right-hander, pitched an excellent game for the losers.

The Seahawks were led at the plate by Jerry Richardson, Rudy Groomes, Nate Bedford and Berry Cauble. Bedford drove in Roger Coon with the winning run in the top of the eleventh inning.

RENSSELAER 10, WC 8

The locals suffered their first loss of the season to touring Rensselaer of Troy, N. Y. Rookie right-hander Bobby Conner started for the Hawks, but gave way to Gibson in the fifth.

Gibson yielded to Carroll in the eighth, and was charged with the loss.

Wilmington's hitting was led by Coon's towering, 340-foot home run over the left field barrier of Legion Stadium. Coon, Harold Robinson and Billy Sullivan had two hits apiece, and Coon drove in four runs.

WC 3, WINGATE 1

Wilmington took advantage of some loose Wingate fielding and tight pitching by DeBruhl to hang up its second victory in the first half of a doubleheader. DeBruhl allowed four hits in earning his first decision of the year.

Robinson and Richardson paced the Hawks' batting attack, while the whole infield played air-tight defensive ball behind DeBruhl's deadly slants.

WC 12, WINGATE 3

In the second half of the doubleheader the Seahawks smashed Wingate's pitching for 12 base hits for a lopsided victory. Richardson, Coon, Robinson and Cam Morgan sprayed hits all over the park, and Coon drove in four big runs.

Carroll pitched seven-hit ball in going the route for his first win.

CORNELL 3, WC 2

The Big Red of Cornell University edged the Seahawks, 3-2, in the first game of a doubleheader at the 13th and Ann Street field. Gibson and Jake Williams both pitched complete games, with each turning in a fine performance.

Jerome Pittman, Bedford and Coon led the Hawks' batting attack, with Coon driving in the only two WC runs with a long double to right-centerfield.

CORNELL 5, WC 5

The second game of the doubleheader was called because of darkness with the score tied at five runs each in the top of the seventh. Errors plagued both teams, with each committing four.

DeBruhl and Carroll did the pitching for WC, and Tom Heath led at the plate.

WC 19, PJC 7

The Hawks enjoyed a field day by blasting four Presbyterian Junior College pitchers for 18 hits to win a landslide decision here. It was the locals' second conference victory of the season.

Bedford paced the Hawks with four hits in as many trips to the plate, including a three-run homer over the rightfield fence. Robinson collected three hits and batted in four runs for the Port City forces, as Conner went the full nine innings on the mound to gain his first win of the year.

WC 12, LOUISBURG 7

In the first stop of a three-game road trip last week, the Hawks registered conference win No. 3 with an easy triumph over Louisburg. Although out-hit, the visitors capitalized on loose enemy fielding to take a comfortable 9-1 lead after two and one-half innings.

The Hurricanes fought back with a six-run rally in the third, but then big Ed Carroll's fast ball began to talk and Louisburg's hopes were lost. It was Carroll's second win.

Coon, Cauble, Pittman and Richardson paced the hitting attack with two apiece.

WC 11, FREDERICK 5

The next day WC's roaming athletes dropped in on Frederick College at Portsmouth, Va., and left with their fourth straight conference victory. They trailed by three runs going into the third inning, but Groomes whacked a two-run homer to spark a six-run outburst in the top of the third.

DeBruhl started on the mound but Conner relieved him in the second and remained for the rest of the game to gain credit for the win, his second of the year. Coon and Bedford contributed three hits apiece.

WC 13, CHOWAN 8

On their return home, the Hawks visited Murfreesboro, where they claimed their fifth conference scalp by blasting the Chowan Braves, 13-8. Gibson went the route to nail down his second win, but he was pounded for 12 hits, including two homers, and issued ten walks.

But Gibson's mates gave him solid backing with 17 base knocks. Robinson, Pittman and Groomes each hit a triple.

Art Show

Profs In The News

By Gene Piner

Contribute to Festival . . . Wilmington College students contributed in many ways to the success of the recent Azalea Festival, but in no other event did they play such an important role as they did in the Cottage Lane Art Show. Sponsored by the Wilmington Art Association, the Cottage Lane Art Show was one of the outstanding features of the Festival.

A large number of Wilmington College students exhibited their work this year. Among them were Dianne Blake, Robbie Nurnberger, Mrs. Margaret Davis, Tommy Landen, Josephine Hinton, June Underwood, Eva Rossen, Carl Wilson, Pearl Boone, Louis Grainger, Carolyn Greer, Mrs. Bernice Bixler, Louise Lanier, Catherine Brown, and William Lloyd.

Claude Howell, instructor in art at the College and one of the founders of the Cottage Lane Art Show, was a featured exhibitor.

Not only did these people spend untold hours setting their work ready for exhibition, but many of them helped set up the show itself by collecting and receiving the paintings as artists brought them to Cottage Lane, by serving as hostesses, and by assisting with the colorful decorations. Some of those not already listed were Paula Divine, Ronald Camps, Paul Meadows, and Lee Merritt.

That the show was a big success is attested to by the fact that approximately 60,000 people visited the exhibit during the Festival to see nearly 400 works of art including oils, etchings, water colors, photographs, pastels, and sculpture.

Slide Collection . . . Claude Howell reports that the Art Department now has a collection of nearly 1000 color slides which are available for use by other departments of the College. The collection includes reproductions of works of art from prehistoric times to the present and is being added to from time to time.

Spring Showing . . . The First Annual Spring Showing of Wilmington College Art students will be held at the Artists' Gallery on Post Office Avenue, Saturday, April 18. The show will include about 15 of the best works completed this year by the students.

Delegates . . . George Lyons and Duncan Randall, members of the Department of Social Sciences at the College, were in Philadelphia last week and as delegates of the College to the annual meeting of the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

395 Students Enrolled For Spring Term

Wilmington College had 395 students enrolled at the start of the spring quarter, according to statistics released by the Dean's Office.

The enrollment total indicated a loss of 13 students from the winter quarter enrollment. Over 500 were enrolled for the autumn quarter.

Comprising the 395-member student body are 155 freshman men, 81 freshman women, 140 sophomore men, and 39 sophomores women. Sixty-six are veterans.

Now Hanover leads in county representation with 268. Brunswick and Pender each have 21 students enrolled here, and Columbus has nine.

There are also three foreign students here, two from Jordan and one from Thailand.

Tennis Team Fares Poorly

While the baseball and golf teams were enjoying success on the road, the local tennis team did not fare as well.

The netmen were the only Hawk athletes to suffer defeat on the trip, losing to Louisville last Wednesday and dropping a decision to Chowan on Friday.

Sophomores Await Graduation Exercises

ACP RATES NEWSPAPER EXCELLENT

By DAN GREENE
Executive Editor

In its first year of full-time operation, THE SEAHAWK has received a First Class rating in the semi-annual evaluation of college newspapers by the Associated Collegiate Press.

Newspapers published during the first half of the 1958-59 school year were rated by the ACP, a national organization of which THE SEAHAWK became a member this year. Each member newspaper was analyzed and rated in its own classification.

Four different ratings were distributed to the 469 college newspapers that were evaluated. Each paper was rated either All-American (superior), First Class (excellent), Second Class (good) or Third Class (fair).

76 RIVALS

THE SEAHAWK was rated in competition with 26 monthly junior college newspapers. Three received All-American recognition and nine were rated First Class.

In the entire junior college classification, 76 papers were analyzed. Of this total, 21 are weekly papers, 29 are bi-monthly, and 26 are monthly.

Judges of the college publications were Gareth D. Hiebert, columnist and former assistant city editor of the St. Paul Dispatch; Duane Andrews, a member of the Minneapolis Honeywell public relations staff; Marjorie Benson, Continuous Service critic and former editor of the Minnesota Daily; Joe McQuaid, copy desk editor of the Minneapolis Tribune; and Dick Kobak, assistant to the editor of the Minneapolis Sunday Tribune.

McQuaid, a former rewrite man of the Boston American, judged THE SEAHAWK.

To receive an All-American rating, a paper must compile a minimum of 3,600 points. This paper gained 3,270 points.

In eight of the 23 categories, THE SEAHAWK was awarded the maximum number of points. It was rated Excellent in the writing of news stories, style of news stories, sports writing, front page make-up, nameplate, editorial page make-up, inside news pages make-up, and headline schedule.

NO BAD MARKS

The ACP rated each paper in comparison with those produced by other colleges of approximately the same general enrollment with similar methods of publication and with the same frequency of publication per semester. They were not judged according to some mythical "perfect" paper, nor in comparison with metropolitan publications whose purposes and techniques differ from college papers.

LOOKING TO THE FUTURE—The three top academic students of the graduating class consider the future as they await the day when they are to bid farewell to Wilmington College. At the end of last quarter Eve Rosson (right) had a 3.9 academic average, Carl Fales had a 3.72 average, and Sandra Pluta had a 3.71 mark. (Staff Photo By Jim Russ)

Students Express Views In WC Teacher's Poll

A research project by a Wilmington College teacher has brought to light a number of interesting views about various aspects of local junior college life.

John B. Davis, Jr., associate professor of engineering, conducted the poll as an assignment for a course he is taking at East Carolina College. He drew up a list of 36 questions pertaining to issues that have been topics of conversation here.

Davis introduced his questionnaire with the following explanation:

"Wilmington College is in the process of a building and expansion program. This questionnaire has been prepared to ascertain the students' thinking regarding certain issues in which they have a direct interest."

Copies of the questionnaire were distributed to various classes in the College. Participation in the poll was entirely voluntary, and the students who answered the questions were not required to sign the forms.

For each of the 36 questions, these answers were offered: Yes, No, No opinion.

The answers were tabulated and a percentage of the total number of students who were polled was found for each answer. The findings were released last week.

Most of the findings were not unexpected. But some were rather startling.

Surprisingly, 58% of all participating students answered yes to the question, "Should we have a bell system." And 60% answered negatively to the question, "Should we have unlimited cuts?"

WC Yearbook Is Expected

This year's green-covered annual went on sale in the Pub today.

Although the price of three dollars is cheaper than that of last year, the yearbook is improved in both quality and quantity. To quote faculty advisor Eugene Finer, "It has more color, more pictures, more pages, more quality."

Editor Sheila Robinson and Business Manager Sandra Horrell rate a word of praise for their efforts in getting out this bigger and better publication.

Sandra says, "Students are urged to buy early because a limited supply, based on advance orders, was printed."

The students were almost equally divided as to whether or not smoking should be allowed in classrooms. To this question, 48% answered yes and 46% answered no.

Another surprise was the overwhelming majority that answered affirmatively to the question, "Should we have dormitories?"

Over 90% were against students calling faculty members by their first names, but 50% thought teachers should call students by their first names.

Informality is condoned by the majority of the students, according to the poll. Over half voted to allow students to wear beards, 60% thought Bermuda shorts are proper attire, and 38% were in favor of the faculty dressing informally (24% answered negatively and 18% were noncommittal).

Following are the complete results of the poll:

Should we have a physical education program so as to have a strong athletic team? (Yes, 78%; No, 12%; No opinion, 10%)

Should we have compulsory assembly? (Yes, 36%; No, 52%; No opinion, 12%)

80 To Get AA Degrees Monday Night

Eighty students are expected to bid farewell to Wilmington College in graduation exercises at Brogren Hall Monday evening.

The commencement program is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. Monday, following the baccalaureate service which is set for 4 p.m. Sunday at St. Andrews-Covenant Presbyterian Church. The President's Reception will be held in the College auditorium right after the graduation exercises.

The graduation list includes 63 men and 17 women. All will receive associate of arts degrees.

Dr. Frank Hall, pastor of Pearsall Memorial Presbyterian Church, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon. He will be assisted by Edward G. Connette Jr., pastor of St. Andrews-Covenant Church.

Monday is the day the College sophomores have been awaiting for two years. Wearing the traditional blue caps and gowns, the graduating students will file into the high school auditorium at approximately 8 p.m.

GUEST SPEAKER

The commencement address will be delivered by L. P. McLendon, vice-chairman of the State Board of Higher Education. Mortimer Glover, pastor of St. James Episcopal Church, will give the invocation.

Immediately after the commencement address, Dr. William Randall, president of Wilmington College, will present the Hoggard Medal of Achievement to a graduating sophomore who has shown outstanding achievement in academic and service work.

ORGAN MUSIC

Ralph Carl Sydow, minister of music at St. Andrews-Covenant, will play the organ at both the baccalaureate and commencement exercises.

Following is the official graduation list:

Carl Lynwood Fales Jr., Myrtis Louise Floyd, Harry Lee FormyDuval, Robert James Galphin, Louis Leonard Geneva, William Joel Gibson, Edgar Allen Gideons Jr., Robert Warren Gray, Betty Lou Hall, Rebecca Angelyn Holland, Sandra Rae

HERE'S A PLAN

Don't Let Costs Defeat You

The continuous rise of college tuition fees has forced no few students to cut short their education throughout the nation. But one imperturbable gentleman, Todd White of the University of Minnesota, has toughened himself to such problems. Here is his plan to counteract the rising cost of education:

I don't mind it a bit. In fact, I'm delighted they're going to raise my tuition $25. It will solve all my problems in one fell swoop.

You see, I am a University parking lot attendant and must manage on a budget of $100 a quarter. With tuition presently at about $75 per quarter, I am left to struggle along with $25. It's nearly impossible to get room, board and something to wear on only $25, and I have found it exceedingly trying.

Now my problem is solved. The University is going to take the whole hundred dollars, and I won't have to rack my brains trying to figure out how to get along on $25. Instead, I can devote all my time to existing on nothing by fully utilizing the facilities of the University.

Until I can think of something better, I'll cultivate a hangnail and take up residence at the Health Service. When that heals, I'll tell them I did it on purpose, and they'll send me over to the psycho ward, and that'll take care of another few days' lodging.

The second week I'll volunteer for a nutrition experiment at the home economics department and a sleep experiment at the psychology department. Monday morning of the third week I should be in good shape from all the food and sleep, so I'll go to the University hospitals and sell a pint of blood to finance the third week.

The fourth week I'll steal algae and agar from the botany department. I understand both are palatable if you're hungry enough. I'll hide under the cushions of a couch in the men's lounge at the Union and spend the nights there.

Fifth week is midquarter time and I won't have any appetite nor a desire to sleep. The sixth week I'll be getting my midquarters back, and I'll be so numb I won't need nourishment or a place to lie down. Maybe I'll have a nervous collapse and get to go back to the Health Service. Even if they don't admit me, I'll get several hours of sleep waiting in the lobby.

The last three weeks of the quarter I haven't figured out yet, but I'm not worried. The atrocious fuschia flowers they plant in the campus flower boxes may be nutritious, for all I know. (Reprinted from the University of Minnesota "Daily." —ACP)

Ballard Elected Council President

In school-wide elections held here last month, Gene Ballard was selected to serve as president of the Student Council and Sherrill Strickland was named president of the Sophomore Class.

Ballard received 130 of an estimated 150 votes cast, according to Jim Robbins, retiring Student Council president. Tommy Wolfe won the vice-presidential post and Kay Sholar was named secretary of the Council.

Serving under Strickland will be Ronald Lisk, vice-president; Helen Galloway, secretary; and Judy Horne and Jim Fountain, representatives.

Wolfe, Fountain, Ballard and Miss Sholar were all Freshman Class officers. Wolfe, the new Student Council V.P., has just ended his term as frosh president.

Occupation By Russians Recalled By WC Student

By BOB OLSEN
Staff Writer

Otto Schwartz, Wilmington College freshman, was six years old when he left his native Czechoslovakia. But he still recalls vivid details of events in his home land.

He lived with his parents, five brothers and two sisters in a village called Bruck An Dir Donau, "brook on the Danube" in English. The country was beautiful rolling plains. His family lived in a farmhouse which was new to that area, having been built in 1942.

Otto remembers the occupation by Nazi and Soviet troops. Under the Nazis, there were no complaints because the occupation forces considered those who lived in the area as Germans since they all spoke the language. They were considered "liberty Germans."

Under the Soviets, things were different. Otto tells of a visit by Russian soldiers on a "chow scrounging" expedition. They were hungry and raided the Schwartz farm yard for chickens. When Otto's mother offered to pluck and clean the chickens

Changes Made In Faculty For 1959-60

The Wilmington College faculty will have three new teachers for the 1959-60 school year.

Two of them, James M. Clifton and Loyd H. Hudson, have already been added to the teaching staff. Clifton will be an assistant professor in the Social Sciences Department, and Hudson will teach music and English.

The other two faculty members who won't return next fall are Pauline Smith, assistant professor of English, and Duncan P. Randall, associate professor of social sciences.

Randall will take a year's leave of absence to complete the residence work required for a Ph.D. at the University of North Carolina. Professor Smith will spend the summer touring Europe.

DUKE GRADUATE

Clifton, Randall's replacement, will come to Wilmington after two years of teaching at Campbell College. A native of Kelly, N. C., he received his B.A. from Wake Forest in 1952 and an A.M. from Duke University in 1957.

Clifton will teach American and European history.

Hudson will join the faculty as a full-time teacher after serving two years as a part-time music instructor and leader of the College Chorus.

A graduate of Drake and Indiana University, Hudson will take over Mrs. Smith's English courses besides his own music classes.

Another change in the faculty will put Dr. Joanne Corbett, assistant professor of English, on a full-time basis after a year of part-time teaching here.

ALLEN RETURNING

Franklin H. Allen, assistant professor of biological sciences, will also assume full-time duties. He served as a part-time biology lab instructor throughout the 1958-1959 school year.

Social Sciences Professor Mildred Johnson will replace Lyons as dean of the evening college.

for them, they told her they would eat them as they were.

On the other side of the fence, Otto tells of the time some Russian troops were billeted in their farm house. "They would give us kids candy, so they can't be bad," he comments.

The blow came in 1945 when Russian authorities, without warning, gave them ten minutes to pack what they could carry and move out. The family moved on foot to the Aus-

Few Changes In Building Since Kids Studied Here

By JIMMY CONNELL

Sitting in the Pub, I often find myself staring through my coffee to the day of my first sojourn to Wilmington College, but then it wasn't called Wilmington College.

A few years ago all the boys in Isaac Bear Grammar School were forced during the recess periods to play in the front half of the school yard—the girls had the backyard. Over in the corner where the diagonal sidewalk cuts through the wall (it didn't then) the boys would stage a big free-for-all every day. Many a time I carried a bloody, smelly little nose home with me to face punishment for my evil, degenerate ways.

Summer Theatre May Be Organized

A summer experimental drama theatre may be organized by Wilmington College students.

No definite plans have been made yet, but a number of students have expressed an interest in the project. Tommy Landen, a member of the Wilmington College Theatre, is behind the plan to keep active the drama movement here.

Mr. and Mrs. Doug Swink, local drama teachers, have agreed to offer supervisory help if the summer group is organized. Mrs. Swink served as director of the WC Theatre, and under her guidance the College thespians won a berth in the State Drama Festival at the University of North Carolina last month.

The Wilmington group received an Honorable Mention rating in the Festival for its presentation of "Give Us Time to Sing," a one-act play by David Hanig. The set designed by Robbie Nurnberger, art director of the WC Theatre, was also awarded Honorable Mention recognition.

Mrs. Swink said recently that she would encourage the organization of a summer theatre on an experimental basis. The group would work in different phases of drama and do what the name implies—experiment.

She commented that the group would not have to be made up strictly of college students. Membership would be open to all interested persons.

mental 3's. This I mastered, but since my return I have wondered many times about the progress (?) I've made.

I had a very nice teacher. I wore short pants and sat in the rear seat next to the window.

Even now, when I sit near that spot—the scene of my early student days—I am reminded of one of my most outstanding failures. Once when Momma Nature was bellerin'er-brains-out, I was too embarrassed to raise my hand and be excused. (I stuttered, and because of this I didn't like to talk at all. I didn't like to walk out through the class because when I came back I knew they would know what I had done.)

I don't know who mopped the floor, but I do remember catching the chickens at home.

In later years I wondered what that nice little old teacher thought and how she must have checked the seating arrangement the next day. Mathematics wasn't exactly a dry subject for me.

Now that I've returned to the scene of my youthful escapades, I find that everything has changed. Mrs. Dorsey has taken over the cloakroom, and someone has hidden the scene of my "crime" with a bookshelf.

The books are bigger and heavier now than they used to be, and the desks are no longer bolted to the floor. I understand they have also done away with the eraser-dusting committee, the traffic boys, and the report cards.

Some things, though, are the same, and they always will be. The floors still creak, the radiators clang, and some of the facilities are still designed for little people.

Our college atmosphere is apparent in that the chess players in the rear of the Pub have replaced the little brutes in the corner of the yard. This closely-knit little group matches wits on the red and black boards just as we used to on the ground.

But there is also another group, one for which we have no grammar school comparison. These devotees gather every Wednesday afternoon at 5 p.m. to witness the antics of one of the most versatile characters on T. V. —Huckleberry Hound. (Woe be upon you if you buy a milkshake between 5:00 and 5:30 on Wednesdays.)

Even though we grow more mature every day of our lives, and someday we will be full-blown adults, it seems as though we just get longer as we play the same old game with a new set of rules.

other kids and I speak German with Mother and Dad," explained Schwartz.

Of the future, Otto is a bit vague. He says, "If the money is available I'll go to State or Duke but I may join the Navy and see some more of the world."

He is studying to be a physicist, but he is definitely interested in farming.

One thing is certain. With all his varied talents, interests, and his natural curiosity, whatever Otto takes up, he'll be a success.

SEAHAWK PLAYERS OF THE MONTH

VARSITY REPORT

By Gary Darden

What are the qualifications needed for a good baseball team? Certainly, outstanding pitching, hitting, speed, and bench strength would be considered the most pertinent factors. And to some enthusiasts, these assets would be sufficient to make a championship club. But these fans forget one thing when they evaluate these terms: A nice-sounding group of words cannot be transplanted into a good group of ballplayers. It takes more than the name in print to produce runs across the plate.

DARDEN

At times even the ballplayers seem confused as to the ending of print and the beginning of play. This is not a rare problem. It has been displayed numerous times by major league ball clubs, who enjoyed the sound of publicity so much that they forgot to realize, until most of the season had expired, that their position in the league was far from satisfactory.

The underlying qualifications are the ones that fertilize the above-named ones. Confidence, determination, mental and physical stamina, spirit and cooperation are a few. These venerable words not only are applied to baseball, but to anything worthy of success in our environment.

REWARD: NATIONAL RECOGNITION

THE SUCCESS of the Seahawks this season is due largely to their ability to blend these qualifications together. In compiling an outstanding record the Hawks have practiced long and hard. The result: a shot at the national junior college crown at Grand Junction, Colo., and a big boost in athletic prestige to the surrounding area.

Several times the locals have come from behind this year to win. They have emerged victorious in all their extra-inning games.

These accomplishments verify the determination and spirit of the club. In the second game of the Southern Regionals at Camden, S. C., the locals, staring elimination in the face because of a one-run deficit, exploded in the last inning for three runs and victory.

Two of the Hawks' five defeats have been administered by four-year schools, the rest by junior college teams. Brewton-Parker College had been beaten only once before losing to Wilmington in the Regionals.

Regardless of the outcome in the national tournament, the Hawks deserve praise.

GREAT YEAR FOR SEAHAWKS

IN FACT, the whole athletic year at Wilmington College has been successful and worthy of praise. Never in the history of the College has a team been able to dull the glitter of high school sports long enough to be noticed until this year. The local fan no longer views the College as an institute of athletic decay, but rather as a school of continued promise. His jests and indifference have turned into respect and support. This was proved by his great support at the basketball games.

In the past 12 years Wilmington College has risen to a prominent perch on the athletic globe. By their fine showing the past two years in basketball and baseball, the local teams have built up fear and respect throughout the conference. Opposing teams no longer regard the Hawks as just another team.

Even the major college freshman ball clubs realize the power that the locals possess. Over the past two years these teams have fallen victim to the Market Street crew on numerous occasions. And the way talent is emerging from the school, there is no indication that the victories over ACC clubs will cease.

Actually, the winning habits of the Hawks this season have limited this writer's experience in explaining defeats. Let's hope my successor is as fortunate.

3 Veterans Selected As Month's Stars

Three sophomore veterans have been selected by THE SEAHAWK as "players of the month."

The trio—Ed Carroll, Rudy Grooms and Berry Cauble—was chosen for outstanding play during the last month of the regular baseball season.

Carroll, nicknamed "Blazer" for his fast ball, was an all-star in 1957 as a pitcher with the state champions of New Hanover High School.

The burly 200-pounder hurled for the Hawks last year, posting a 2-1 record. This year his 4-0 record is one of the top pitching marks on the team. In the last month his brilliant chucking has established him as the ace of the staff. In 51 innings of pitching this year, Carroll has allowed but eleven earned runs for a remarkable 1.93 earned-run average.

Ed, a business administration major, is planning to make the University of North Carolina his choice for further learning. Cauble, the team's leading hitter for most of the season, is a native of Gastonia, N. C.

Up until this year Berry was considered a defensive player, but then his bat began to bark consistently. His .357 batting average is one of the two highest on the team and has established him as a threat to opposing pitching.

Seahawks Bid For U.S. Title This Weekend

By GARY DARDEN
Sports Editor

The Wilmington College Seahawks left Sunday morning for Grand Junction, Colorado, to compete in the National Junior College Athletic Association baseball tournament finals which are scheduled to begin tomorrow.

The winner of the double-elimination affair will be crowned champion of all junior colleges in the country.

The eight-team field lists the top junior college teams in the country. They earned the right by emerging victorious in their respective regional play-offs.

All teams will play the first day, with the winners advancing into the quarterfinals on Friday.

The Hawks were expected to arrive in Grand Junction today.

Two of the top entrants in the four-day tourney are Mesa (Colorado), the host team, and Northeast Oklahoma.

The Hawks earned the right to participate in this select group by defeating Ferrum Junior College of Virginia in sectional play and Brewton-Parker Junior College of Georgia in regional play. The regional win established the locals as the top junior college team in the South.

The sectional series with Ferrum was won handily by the Hawks, by scores of 5-3 and 9-3. This series was played at Legion Stadium in Wilmington.

Berry is not sure yet what college he will attend next fall.

Grooms, the well-built veteran infielder, hails from Winstonsboro, S. C. Rudy played four years of high school sports, a feat seldom accomplished in this day. He batted over 400 each year as a third-baseman and was outstanding in basketball, football and track.

The likeable Grooms, considered one of the team's best defensive players, has a .280 average, including a home run.

Grooms is a physical education major and plans on coaching after college.

But such was not the case in the Brewton-Parker series, played on a neutral field in Camden, S. C. After losing to Tracy Rivers the first night, the locals displayed courage by even showing up for the second contest. Rivers, a big righthander, had the Hawks goggle-eyed with a fine array of curves and a wicked fast ball.

He allowed the Brooksmen just one hit and struck out nine, winning the game 6-1.

Joel "Bones" Gibson almost equaled Rivers' performance. The lanky righthander struck out 12 men, six in the first two innings, but timely hits and shabby support caused his downfall.

After the first-game loss, the Hawks became a determined group of ballplayers. The next afternoon the locals won 4-2 to force the series into a third game.

This game was the climax of all come-from-behind games the Hawks have won this year. Trailing in the ninth, 2-1, and held to four hits by Brewton's W. P. Hall, the locals rallied for three runs and victory. Bill DeBruhl, pitching in his home town, allowed seven hits in going the route.

But the majority of the credit must be bestowed upon the 6-2 frame of Roger Coon. The Hawks' first-baseman slammed four of the six Seahawk hits, including his third home run, a 330-foot drive over the left-field wall.

In the last-inning rally, Roger batted in the tying run and scored the winning one on a wild throw.

Ed "Big Blazer" Carroll wrapped up the series for the Brooksmen in the night game. The calm righthander threw a five-hitter at the Barons from Mount Vernon, Ga., to win 4-3. He also got one of the six Hawk hits.

The locals gave Carroll a cushion to work on by a three-run outburst in the first inning. They scored what proved to be the winning run in the third.

REPEATS AS CHAMPS

Baseball Club Wins League Crown

The Seahawks wrapped up their second straight Virginia-Carolina Athletic Conference baseball championship Saturday with a forfeit victory over Frederick Junior College of Virginia.

The win, No. 10 in conference play against two setbacks, was anti-climactic to the excitement of winning the Southern Regional playoff at Camden, S. C., last week. It gave the Hawks a psychological lift for their debut in the national finals this week.

Following is a rundown of league action during the last four weeks:

WC 5, UNC FROSH 2
On April 20 the Hawks were extended 12 innings before emerging victorious over the Tar Babies of Chapel Hill.

The locals scored three runs in that inning, the important one coming on Berry Cauble's double.

Joel "Bones" Gibson, hurling superlative ball over the final seven innings, got credit for the victory.

Gibson had relieved Ed Carroll to start the sixth in a pregame plan by Coach Bill Brooks to split up the assignment.

WC 11, EDWARDS 6

The next day at Salemburg, the Brooksmen ran their win streak to seven by defeating Edwards Military Institute.

Wilmington collected 15 hits off three Edwards' pitchers and the Seahawks sent the starter to the showers in the fifth inning.

Bobby Conner worked the first five innings and got credit for the win, his third. He gave up but four hits and finished up by setting down nine batters in a row.

WC 3, CAMPBELL 1

Behind the 14-strikeout pitching of Gibson, the locals dumped Campbell on May 1. It was Gibson's fifth win of the season.

Berry Cauble, the slender outfielder, scored what proved to be the winning run in the seventh after smashing his third straight single.

WC 15, EDWARDS 1

Two nights later the locals unleashed a 17-hit barrage against three EMI pitchers for their ninth conference win.

Big Ed Carroll pitched superb two-hit ball, cutting down 12 men via the strikeout route.

Roger Coon and Berry Cauble led the Hawks with three hits each.

WC 3, CAMPBELL 10

The Seahawks suffered their second loss in conference play at Buies Creek. The extra-base blows by the Camels proved too much in the decisive win.

Poor fielding, rarely damaging to the Hawks this year, played a big part in the Camels' win.

Bob Conner was charged with the loss, his first against three wins. Carroll relieved Conner in the fifth.

Roger Coon belted his second homer of the season in the first inning with Rudy Grooms aboard.

Faculty Wives

Profs In The News

By Gene Piner

New Officers Mrs. Ruth Doss has been elected president of the Faculty Wives Club of the College. Serving with her next year will be Mrs. Margaret Crews, vice-president; Mrs. Mae Randall, secretary-treasurer; and Mrs. Betty Collins, historian. These new officers were chosen at a recent meeting at the home of Mrs. William Randall. Members of the club also completed plans for the annual reception which will be held in conjunction with the commencement exercises next Monday evening.

Attend Conference Five representatives from the College attended a conference on engineering at N. C. State College Monday. They were Dr. William Randall, Dean Marshall Crews, John Davis, associate professor of engineering; Calvin Doss, assistant professor of engineering; and R. E. Piner, instructor in English. This was the second conference recently for Crews and Davis who had attended previously a conference in engineering at Gaston Technical Institute in Gastonia.

Received Degrees Two members of the Wilmington College faculty complete work this week for their master of arts degrees in mathematics at East Carolina College. They are John Davis, associate professor of engineering, and Thomas Lupton, instructor in physical sciences. Davis will receive his degree at graduate exercises in Greenville on May 24. Lupton will not be at East Carolina for the exercises, but will receive his degree in absentia, having already committed himself to meet Miss Mary Kay Tompkins on May 25 for the purpose of changing her last name. Davis and Lupton are two of three graduates who will receive the masters degree in mathematics, the first awarded in the history of East Carolina College.

Stag Party Thirteen members of the College faculty were present at Faircloth's Restaurant Saturday evening for a stag party honoring Tommy Lupton. There, after much prodding on his part, he was able to accept reluctant advice from well informed and more experienced members of the faculty.

Flags Presented New American flags were presented by the Woodmen of the World to the College and the Circle K Club at an assembly in the College auditorium last Thursday morning.

Receiving the flags on behalf of the College and the Circle K Club were Dr. William Randall, president of the College, and Jack Breazeale, president of the Circle K Club.

Photographs Will Be Made October 1-2

Individual photographs of all Wilmington College students will be made Thursday and Friday, October 1 and 2, according to an announcement by Kay Sholar, editor of the Fledgling.

Arrangements for appointments will be made by members of the Fledgling staff prior to those dates. There will be no charge for having these photographs made, the editor reports.

Men students will have their pictures made in tuxedo coats and black bow ties. Women students will be draped. Men students are requested to wear white dress shirts. The coats, ties, and draping material will be provided by the staff, Miss Sholar says.

This year for the first time in the history of the College each student who pays the activity fee all three quarters will receive a copy of the yearbook at no further cost.

Plans for the 1960 Fledgling have proceeded rapidly since the beginning of classes early this month. Members of the staff have already decided upon the color and basic design of the book, which is expected to be the best in size and quality that the College has had.

Ten Students Picked To Get Tuition Grants

The Scholarship Committee of Wilmington College met on Monday, September 21, for the purpose of awarding a limited number of full tuition scholarships to deserving students. The scholarships, authorized by the Board of Trustees of the College, were awarded on the basis of promise of academic success and future service to the community.

The awards were made to the following students: Mrs. Jean Creech, Elbert Hodges, Mrs. Norma Horrell, Jack A. Jacobs, Horace D. Murray, Albert L. Simon, Otto Schwartz, Robert J. Steljes, Thomas T. Teague, and Ross F. Trawick, Jr.

The committee also accepted a $250 scholarship from the Wrightsville Beach Lions Club which was designated for John H. Minor. A $300 scholarship was accepted from the Wilmington Bridge Unit who designated Ed Miastkowski as the recipient.

Freshmen Schedule Country Club Dance

The annual Freshman Dance will be held on Friday night, October 16, at 8:30 in the Cape Fear Country Club ballroom. At that time the newly elected officers of the Freshman Class will be announced.

Jim Fountain is chairman of the committee in charge of music for the occasion. Kay Sholar and her committee will plan the refreshments.

Student Registers

507 Enroll for Fall Term As College Classes Begin

A total of 507 students has enrolled for the autumn quarter at Wilmington College, according to Mrs. Dorothy Marshall, registrar. Of these, 271 are freshmen and 169 are sophomores. Of these numbers there are 337 men and 103 women enrolled. Other students include 26 freshman nurses, 19 sophomore nurses, eight graduate students, and 14 special students.

The Registrar's list shows that a breakdown of this number by counties is as follows: Beaufort, 4; Bladen, 9; Brunswick, 19; Carteret, 2; Columbus, 9; Craven, 4; Cumberland, 1; Currituck, 1; Dare, 1; Duplin, 6; Forsyth, 2; Gaston, 2; Guilford, 1; Halifax, 1; Harnett, 1; Hoke, 1; Jones, 1; Johnson, 1.

Lee County has 2, Lenoir, 4; Mecklenburg, 1; Nash, 1; New Hanover, 359; Onslow, 17; Pender, 17; Perquimans, 1; Randolph, 1; Richmond, 4; Sampson, 4; Stanly, 4; Vance, 1; Wayne, 3; and Wilson, 2.

Students from other states number 24. The breakdown on this number is as follows: Alabama, 1; Connecticut, 2; Hawaii, 1; Idaho, 1; Indiana, 1; Kentucky, 1; Massachusetts, 1; Michigan, 1; New Jersey, 1; New York, 4; Ohio, 1; Pennsylvania, 1; South Carolina, 4; Tennessee, 2; Virginia, 1; West Virginia, 1.

The fall quarter started September 1, when freshmen attended the annual Orientation Day exercises. Dr. B. Frank Hall, pastor of the Pearsall Memorial Presbyterian Church of this city, delivered the invocation and urged students to make the best of this year and to get as much as possible out of the courses of study open to them.

Dr. William M. Randall, president of Wilmington College, then welcomed the freshmen in an address which he concluded by introducing several student leaders and faculty members who explained the academic and extra-curricular activities of the College.

After taking entrance examinations on September 1, freshmen met with faculty advisors the next day to plan their programs for the fall quarter.

Risers Arrive

Four sections of new risers to be used by the College Chorus arrived recently, according to an announcement by Loyd Hudson, director. Two more sections have been ordered and are expected to arrive soon, he said.

The three-tiered risers are made with aluminum treads and steel supports.

Students Hear Plans For College Buildings

Plans for new Wilmington College buildings to be constructed at the site on Highway 132 between the Winter Park area and Market Street Road were described to students of the College at an assembly last Thursday morning. Speaking for the Board of Trustees of the College, Frederick B. Graham, chairman of the Building and Grounds Committee, told the students of the Trustees' high hopes for the future.

Within 90-120 days, Graham said, ground will be broken for the construction of three buildings that will provide 60,000 square feet of floor space. The architecture will be a modified Georgian type that is in keeping with the historical background of the community and which has stood the test of time, he said.

Largest of the three buildings will be a 40,000-square-foot classroom building which will include 23 classrooms, four science laboratories, 20 faculty offices, and two or three large lecture areas.

Student Building

A student services building will provide for a wide variety of activities for future Wilmington College students. In this building will be located a choral room, offices for student publications and student government, the book store, fountain and lunch facilities, and large areas for assemblies, socials, and exhibitions.

The third building will be a library and administration building with large reading rooms, exhibition areas, and work rooms.

All of these buildings, the speaker said, would be equipped with the most modern furnishings that are going to provide for expansion in all phases of College life here.

In glowing terms, Graham described the faculty and students of Wilmington College and expressed pride in their achievement.

While physical expansion is important to us, he stated, the "most important assets of the College are its people—its faculty and students."

In answer to questions following his talk, Graham said it will take 10-11 months to complete the buildings, once construction gets under way. As far as a four-year college is concerned, he said, "We have hopes and dreams of making Wilmington College a four-year college," but that will depend upon the General Assembly and State politics.

Freshmen To Choose Leaders For Class In 2-Day Elections

The Freshman Class of Wilmington College will hold a two-day election on Monday and Tuesday, October 12 and 13, to choose class officers and two representatives. Offices to be filled include those of president, vice-president, and secretary.

The actual voting will mark the end of over a week of preliminary activities. Next Thursday and Friday, October 1 and 2, have been designated by the Student Council as nomination days. Registration will follow on Monday and Tuesday, October 5 and 6. No student may vote unless his name is registered during this time.

October 8 has been chosen as campaign day. On this Thursday, an assembly will be held in the College auditorium for the purpose of hearing the speeches of the candidates for each office.

Members of the Student Council in charge of counting votes will keep the returns of the election secret until Friday night, October 16, when they will make the announcement at the annual Freshman Dance.

NEW FACULTY MEMBERS TEACHING AT WILCOL

The beginning of any school year is bound to bring changes not only to the students but to the faculty. This year has brought several changes in the form of addition of new members.

A new face has been added to the biology department this year. Franklin H. Allen, assistant professor of biological sciences, now teaches in this department. Allen has B.S. and M.S. degrees from Brigham Young University in Salt Lake City.

Mr. Carl Gay is a new member of the social sciences department. Instructor in social sciences, he has been in Wilmington several years teaching history and English at Tileston Jr. High School.

Now new for this year but permanent for the first time are Mrs. Joanne Corbett, assistant professor in English; Loyd Hudson, assistant professor in music and English, and James M. Clifton, assistant professor in social sciences.

Mrs. Corbett attended Coker College where she received her A.B. and the University of Montreal where she earned her M.A. and Ph.D.

Clifton attended Wake Forest College and Duke University.

Loyd Hudson attended Drake University and Indiana University. After he received his M.M., he sang with several musical organizations. During the past four years Hudson taught at New Hanover High School in this city.

Miss Shannon Morton, daughter of a venerable, has been selected as a member of the yearbook committee.

VARSIY REPORT

By Charles Dillon

A friendly welcome goes out to all the freshmen from the sports staff of the Seahawk, and we certainly hope that you will enjoy your two years here at Wilmington College. This year, we believe that the Seahawks will give you the type of basketball that you will enjoy. There are several new players added to the roster, both from out of state and from Wilmington. This year may prove the best that the Seahawks have ever had, but they cannot do it alone. Their wins and losses depend on the support they get from us, the students. So when the season starts let's all get out and support the best junior college basketball in the state.

Looking back on the past baseball season, we find that the Seahawks finished in grand style and went on to the grand finals in Grand Junction, Colorado, to compete in the National Junior College Tournament.

The top two entrants were Mesa Junior College (Colorado), the host team, and Northeast College, Oklahoma.

The first game in which the Seahawks participated was called in the fifth inning because of rain with the score tied, 0-0. On the following day Phoenix College defeated the 'Hawks 4-0. That night the Seahawks won a close one over Trinidad College, 8-7. At this point the fighting 'Hawks were still in the running with only one defeat in this double elimination tournament.

In the fourth game Billy DeBruhl pitched a no-hitter against Carbon College, giving the Wilmington club a 5 to 0 win.

On the fourth day Coach Brooks' batsmen bowed to Phoenix 8 to 3, but they did not come back without bringing something with them. Jerry Richardson was elected to the Junior College All-American second team. Hearty congratulations to the Wilmington College Seahawks and to Coach Brooks. May this year be better than the last.

Here is news for all chess fans at Wilmington College. The sports staff of the Seahawk is sponsoring a chess tournament to begin sometime in October. Watch for further information in the October issue of the Seahawk. Prizes will be awarded to the top three players. All chess players who wish to participate are urged to contact the sports staff as soon as possible.

SPORTS CELEBS

By LLOYD ROBUCK

Hi, sports fans. As you know, this is the beginning of a new college year, and also the beginning of another sports year at Wilmington College. Let us hope that this year will be as good as, if not better than, last year.

Because Wilmington College does not support a football team, we shall turn our thoughts toward the future basketball team. Here is a list of the new prospects and the returning lettermen given to me by Coach Brooks. This list is probably not complete, but it will give you an idea of what to expect from our team.

Name	Class	Hometown	Height
Larry Edens	Fr.	Wilmington, N. C.	6'1"
Billy Galantai	Fr.	Brooklyn, N. Y.	6'5"
John Jones	Fr.	Waverly, Ohio	6'0"

Denotes Lettermen

Let me remind you that this list is not the complete team roster but only a list of prospects that Coach Brooks knows about. So if there are any good basketball players whose names do not appear on this list they are encouraged to participate in the tryouts.

This year we should have another great basketball team. We have lost a little height, but maybe this loss will be overcome by the shooting ability the new prospects possess.

NEW SEAHAWKS STRENGTHEN CHANCES

Seahawks Open Basketball Drills With Top Prospects To Raise Hopes

Basketball breaks into the limelight at Wilmington College next month as the Seahawks open drills for the approaching 1959-60 season in Brogden Hall.

Weakened by the loss of the players who brought the first conference championship to Wilmington College last year, Coach Bill Brooks has a number of bright prospects imported from all over the East Coast who offer promise of continuing the winning ways of the Port City Seahawks.

From the New York area have come Billy Galantai, 6'5", from Brooklyn; Kenny McIntyre, 6'2", from Bayside in Queens, N. Y.; and Jim Lawlor, 6'0", from the Bronx.

Others are John Jones, 6'0", from Waverly, Ohio; Hershel Witten, 6'2", from Louisville, Ky.; Dennis Manochi, 6'2", from Danbury, Conn.; John Prichard, 6'3", from Sellersburg, Ind.; LaMoyné Mix, 6'0", from Rupert, Idaho; and Larry Edens, 6'1", from Wilmington, N. C.

Top Credentials

All of these men bring outstanding credentials with them to Wilmington College. In three years of high school varsity basketball, Jim Lawlor scored 870 points for an average of 24 points per game. In his senior year he was elected to the All-City, and All-Catholic teams in New York City. For two years in succession, Lawlor was voted the Most Valuable Player in the Bronx.

Coach Brooks is pinning much of his hopes on Billy Galantai, who is his "big boy" this year. The tallest man on the squad, Galantai may well be the deciding factor in the Seahawk successes as play gets under way. Playing at James Madison High School in Brooklyn, Galantai was the first in his school to make the All-City, All-State, and All-American teams in a single year.

His achievements also include: his school's record for scoring the most foul shots in a row; the highest scoring total in one season, 420 points; most rebounds in career, 620; most points in conference games, averaging 22 points per game; and the most points in a single game, 37.

Kenny McIntyre, playing for Bayside High School in another section of New York City, has an enviable record that includes election to the All-Queens team, the All-City first team, the All-State top 15 team, and the All-American fourth team. He averaged 23 points per game at Bayside and was chosen Most Valuable Player in the New York City All-Star game.

Two from Indiana

Witten and Prichard both played for Silver Creek High School in Sellersburg, Ind. Witten played three years of varsity ball and averaged 30.2 points per game his last year there. Following graduation, he played on an Army basketball team and averaged 25 points per game over a period of three years. In his high school he owned the individual high-scoring record of 40 points in one game.

Prichard holds his high school's scoring record with 1,145 points. At Sellersburg, he played four years of varsity ball, was on the All-County team, the Sectional team for three years, and was awarded the Sportsmanship trophy.

Dennis Manochi starred at Henry Abbott Tech where he played varsity for three years, averaging 22 points per game.

He broke the school's records for the most points scored in a season and the most points scored in one game, 56. Manochi was on the All-Tournament team one year, was on the All-State team for two years, and made the All-American fourth team. He also was voted the Most Valuable Player in the Triple A conference in which he played.

LaMoyné Mix has played for Rupert High School in Rupert, Idaho, and has had one year's experience at Ricks College, Idaho. He is also an ex-service-man, having been in the Army for 24 months.

John Jones was a star player at Waverly High School where he played four years of basketball. His last year there he scored 350 points for an average of 18.5 per game, which was enough to win him berths on the All-Conference, All-County, and All-Star teams. He was also awarded the Newsmen's Trophy.

Strongest prospect from the Wilmington area is ex-New Hanover High star Larry Edens. Standing 6'1", the former Wildcat was elected to the All-Conference and All-State teams and was a starter in the East-West All-Star game. Last year at New Hanover, Edens was the top scorer on the team.

Seven Lettermen

Returning this year to the Seahawk basketball team are seven lettermen: Ronnie White, Chuck Fearn, Jerry Richardson, Jimmy Helms, Harold Robinson, Jackie Bullard, and Eddie Miaszkowski. These men should be a great help to Coach Brooks to get the Seahawks off to a fighting start.

State Bond Election May Effect College

"Shall the State of North Carolina contract a new debt on behalf of the State by the issuance of $1,500,000 Community College Capital Improvement Bonds of the State of North Carolina for grants-in-aid for community college capital improvements?" This is one of nine questions which will be put to voters on October 27, 1959, during a special bond election of the State of North Carolina.

Just how this election will effect the growth of Wilmington College has been explained by Dr. William M. Randall, president of the College. "The money, which is $1,500,000, will be divided among the three Community Colleges on a matching-fund basis," he said. He went on to explain that this means that the sum of money offered by Wilmington College will be matched by the same amount of money which will be taken from this fund.

The other colleges in the Community College group are Charlotte College, Charlotte, N. C.; and Asheville-Biltmore College, Asheville, N. C.

Committee Allots

The Library Committee met last week for the purpose of appropriating funds to the various departments at Wilmington College to be used by those departments in buying books for the library.

Mrs. Mildred Dorsey, librarian, hopes to have the books ordered by October 20. She explained that the money available for the purchase of books is divided among departments on the basis of the needs of the departments for new books and the number of students enrolled in each section.

Pick Leaders

The Engineers' Club met on Wednesday night, September 23, for the purpose of electing officers for this year. At that time, Nick Gieschen was chosen president and David Ramseur was elected vice-president. Sheila Robinson is secretary and Tommy Teague is treasurer.

Other officers are Charles Dillon, publicity chairman, and Tommy Sanderlin, assistant.

Members of the board of directors which were chosen at the meeting are Roger Johnson and Charles Dillon.

ous record extends from his three years of high school basketball at New Hanover. He was selected for the All-Tournament team, and was high scorer in the N. C. State Tournament with a total of 51 points in the three games. His high school average was 14 points per game.

Chuck Fearn, from Danbury, Conn., stands 6'4" and plays the forward position. He played four years of high school basketball and played in the state high school tournament all four years. His high school career included one year on the All-State team and one year on the All-Tournament team. He had an average of 18 points per game. Fearn saw action during the championship tournament for the Seahawks last season.

Jerry Richardson, a 5'10" guard from Kingsport, Texas, played three years of varsity basketball in high school. He had a three-year average of 12 points per game. His high school career included All-Conference in two conferences both his junior and senior years, and All-District I in his senior year. In his senior year his teammates elected him as the Most Valuable Player, and his junior and senior years he led in assists and scoring.

Jimmy Helms stands 5'10" and plays guard. His previous experience includes three years of high school ball at New Hanover and one year on the Wilmington College team.

Eddie Miaszkowski, 6'3", from Floral Park, Long Island, N. Y., and Jackie Bullard, 6'3", ex-New Hanover High star were two of the top players for the Seahawks last year in their championship drive. They are expected to contribute their full share to the total strength of Coach Brook's new team.

Robinson, 6'1" guard, played three years in Camden, S. C., before coming to Wilmington College last year.

Heading March Of Dimes

Shown here discussing plans for the 1960 March of Dimes Drive are leaders of the New Hanover County Polio Foundation. They are (L. to R.) W. K. Dorsey, president; Jack E. McGee, Eastern North Carolina representative for the National Foundation; Mrs. Dorothy Marshall, secretary-treasurer; and Mrs. Helena Cheek, director of the March of Dimes. All but McGee are members of the Wilmington College faculty.

Polio Leaders Selected

Three members of the Wilmington College faculty have been selected as new officers in the New Hanover County Polio Foundation.

W. K. Dorsey, instructor in tailing, has been elected president of the foundation. He succeeds Mrs. T. M. Herritage who served in this position last year.

Mrs. Helena Cheek, assistant professor of modern languages, has been elected by the foundation to succeed George Lyons who was director of the 1959 March of Dimes.

Mrs. Dorothy Marshall, Wilmington College registrar, was selected to fill the position of secretary-treasurer. Last year, George Rountree, instructor in business, held this post.

One of the many notable projects carried on during the year by the New Hanover County Polio Foundation is helping with the treatments of former polio patients. During this year, the foundation spent $7,000 on treatment for seven former cases of polio. Two new cases have recently been reported to the committee.

Dorsey has announced that the chief project of the 1960 year will be to promote vaccination against polio.

ADULT EDUCATION

Wilco Sponsors Lecture Classes

Wilmington College is, at this time, in the process of presenting a program of lectures and classes for the adults of this community. The departments of art, business, engineering, English, language, music and science are taking part in this educational program.

A brief survey of The Art of the World in Words and Pictures is being presented by the art department under the instruction of Claude Howell, assistant professor of art. Three series of six lectures each are being presented during this quarter. The main topics of study are The Ancient World, The Missile Ages and the Renaissance, and The Modern

A series of non-technical lectures for the general public, The Universe and Mankind is being presented by the science department. These lectures deal with such topics as The World of the Atom, The Problems of Space Travel, and God and the Atom.

Music Appreciation
The music department is presenting a course in Music Appreciation. This course is designed to give those who are interested in music the skill with which to appreciate this art form. A discussion of the lives and contributions of the major composers is included in this series. Listening to records played on the College's new stereo machine, along with group discussions, constitutes each evening's meetings.

A ten-hour course for business owners, managers, and supervisors, Human Relations is being given by the business department. The 4-step Method is used in solving of human relations problems. Discussions are also held on how a supervisor may meet his responsibilities in dealing with people.

A series of six one-hour lectures, American Novelists of the Twentieth Century, will begin in January. Each week the work of one novelist will be presented and discussed by a member of the Wilmington College English Department or by a visiting lecturer. Henry James, Sinclair Lewis, Willa Cather, William Faulkner, Ernest Hemingway, and Robert Penn Warren will be discussed.

Public Speaking
The English department is also sponsoring a series of lessons devoted to public speaking. This series is divided into lecture and practice periods with frequent use of the tape record-

Ten sessions of conversational Spanish are being planned by the Wilmington College Modern Language Department for February. The course is being designed to teach practical, everyday, Spanish, particularly slanted to meet the needs of travelers to Spanish-speaking countries.

A 30-hour course to be offered by the Business Education department of Wilmington College in January will be designed to enable the small business operator to keep a complete set of books, to help him prepare income statements, and to give an introduction to various taxes the small business operator has to pay.

These educational lecture classes have very small registration fees and are open to the general public. The main purpose of offering the courses is to acquaint the adults of the community with educational topics about which they wish or need to be familiar.

College May Benefit From Bond Election

A special bond election was held throughout the State of North Carolina on Tuesday, October 27. Of the nine questions which was put to voters at this time, one could have a great deal of significance as far as the growth of Wilmington College is concerned.

This question was whether or not the State of North Carolina should contract a new debt by the issuance of $1,500,000 Community Capital Improvement Bonds for grants-in-aid to be used for community college capital improvements.

Thespians To Present Season's First Play

The Dramatics Association of Wilmington College will present its first play of the season, The Silver Whistle, on Friday and Saturday nights, November 6 and 7, at 8 o'clock in the College Auditorium.

The play, written by Robert E. McEnroe, is a three-act comedy which has as its setting an old-folks home and tell the story of how a man brings happiness to the people who work and live at the "Home"—even though he is a liar and a farce.

Mr. Erwerter comes to the "Home" because he is a tramp and feels that he needs lodging and food for a few days. He finds that the old people are hopeless and tired and desperately in need of attention and fun. The sees that the nurse, Miss Tripp, has no happiness in her daily life.

As he gets to know the people at the "Home," Mr. Erwerter comes to feel that he must help them in some way and eventually comes upon the idea of giving a Church Bazaar. He succeeds in making all of them feel and act younger and happier. He makes them feel cared for and he grows to love them as they love him.

When he is finally caught and proves a farce, he makes them realize that the important thing is not that he was a liar or a cheat, but that they all feel better and that he has given them something definite to live for.

Ralph Kornegay plays the part of Oliver Erwerter, who amazes the old people with his false tales of travel and fame. Miss Tripp, played by Linda Schulken, is the nurse in the "Home" who helps to complicate the plot with her reluctant attitude and, finally, her two engagements.

Perl Zemen plays the brassy Mrs. Hammer, Bernard Wilson plays the part of Mr. Bebe, and Jack Mathis is Reverend Watson.

Betty Buck, Brenda Liles, and Kathryn Davis play the parts of Miss Hoadly, Mrs. Sampler, and Mrs. Gross — three old women who live at the "Home."

Others in the supporting cast are Gilbert Tillitt as Mr. Cherry, Pete Camak as Emmett, Robert Brock playing the part of Father Shay, Tommy Wallace as Mr. Beach, Danny Muir as Mr. Reddy, and Gene Hendley as the policeman.

The Silver Whistle is under the direction of Mrs. Douglas Swink. Prompters are Barbara Jones and Caroline Walton. Lighting, costume, make-up, and scenery are being handled by the Dramatics Club and the College Art Department.

POLITICAL RACE CONCLUDES WITH FRESHMAN DANCE

Friday night, October 16, brought about a climax in the two-week campaign and election of the Freshman Class officers for the 1959-60 term at Wilmington College. This conclusion of many very busy days of sign-painting and speech-making came in the form of the annual Freshman Dance which was held at 8:30 in the Cape Fear Country Club Ballroom. At this time, the newly elected officers were announced and presented to the members of the student body.

Pistolis Is President

"Who!" was the method in which John Pistolis, 1959 graduate of New Hanover High School, chose to express himself when he was announced as the newly-elected president of the Freshman Class. "I want to thank all the people who voted for me and all who worked with me during the campaign," he said later.

For Pistolis, who did no student congress work in high school, being the leader of a class is a new experience. "I'll try—I'll really try—to do the best job that I possibly can," he promised.

The new president will have plenty of help this year in handling the affairs of the Freshman Class. David Ward, also a New Hanover High School graduate, was chosen vice-president and will serve during this year as Pistolis' right-hand man. Ward served for two years at high school in the House of Representatives. He was also on the House Social Affairs Committee. Secretary of the Freshman

Paper Gets First Class Honor Rate

The Seahawk, published by the students of Wilmington College, has received a First Class Honor Rating from the Associated Collegiate Press of which it is a member.

The ACP analyzes and rates each member newspaper twice a year. These papers are judged in comparison with those produced by other colleges of approximately similar enrollment, who use a similar method of publication, and with the same frequency of issue per semester.

The rating received was the result of an evaluation of the newspapers published during the second half of last year. At that time, Dan Greene was the editor of the Seahawk and JoAnn Davis was business manager.

The Seahawk also received a First Class rating in the spring of last year. This award was based on an evaluation of the newspapers published during the first semester of 1958-59.

FLEDGLING TO BE BIGGER, BETTER, MORE COLORFUL

The staff of the Fledgling has begun planning the material which will go into the yearbook this year. With color and design decided, work is expected to go rapidly until December when the book will be sent to be printed.

Individual photographs were made for the Fledgling on October 1 and 2. Kay Schlar, editor of the yearbook, has announced that a total of 267 had their pictures taken at that time. Of these, 87 were sophomores, 139 were freshmen, 23 were student nurses, and 18 were members of the faculty, Miss Schlar said.

Those who did not have their pictures made may have their pictures in the annual, Miss Schlar says, if they will submit a glossy print to the staff in the near future.

This year, the price of the Fledgling has been included in the activities fee, and all students who have paid this fee for all three quarters will receive their yearbook, with no extra charge.

EDITORIAL

PARKING—A PROBLEM

All colleges are bound to have annoyances—little disturbances which are not important enough to spend too much valuable money and time on but which are also impossible to be left alone. We here at Wilmington College have one such problem. Our parking lot is too small for the number of cars which need to be parked. Each year, for several years, the situation has become worse, for as the enrollment increases, parking space seems to decrease. Each month the problem becomes just a little more annoying—and just a little harder to solve.

It has been said that the best way to save a smoothly-run organization of any kind—be it school, hospital, church, or shop—is to have for every defect in the organization an asset to balance that defect as far as possible. We here at Wilmington College have a very definite asset in the work which is being done by the Circle K Club to improve our parking facilities.

The Circle K Club is one of the most valuable clubs here at Wilmington College. Throughout the year, it performs many notable services for the students and for the College. This year, the members of Circle K have begun their work by re-organizing the parking lot and by reinforcing of parking rules.

With the help of the Engineers' Club, they have painted new lines on the pavement and re-zoned spaces for easier and safer parking. Members of the Circle K have been authorized by the Student Council to give tickets to drivers of improperly parked cars or of cars not bearing the College tags. Recipients of tickets must report to Dean Crews within three days for a conference concerning the matter.

The Circle K Club cannot solve the problem of the parking situation alone. That is why they are asking you to support them in their project. Park your car carefully and correctly; buy a College tag and put it on your car. Help persuade your classmates to follow your example. If you do this, a nagging little problem may be put to death. The more problems of this nature that we solve, the more mature we become in the eyes of the world, and the more Wilmington College shines in the light of our maturity to become a symbol in this city of progress and knowledge.

Other colleges seem to have parking problems also. The problems of parking cars on campus have made page one news at Lehigh University this month. Police in Bethlehem, Pa., home of Lehigh, had posted "No Parking" signs near campus without a "Bethlehem, Pa., Police Department" signature.

The head of the psychology department, Dr. Josef Brozek, suggested that students whose cars were ticketed under the "unauthorized" signs ask for a court hearing.

Dr. Brozek later said he has not declared "war" on the police, but he hopes the incident will point out the need for more care in marking "No Parking" areas.

In The Pub

In between classes in the Pub,
There is nothing but a big hubbub.

A great deal of laughter and chatter,
Is nothing but a lot of senseless matter.

Then the class begins,
And the noise grows very dim.
Chess players study their games very hard,

While checker players stay on their guard.

The smell of smoke is very near,
And W.K.L.M. comes in loud and clear.

With snacks and goodies of all kind,

Makes the Pub very fine.

The long green tables closer than fore,

Chairs sitting all around on the floor.

People walking in and out,
Like no one was in doubt,

This goes on hour after hour,
And no one seems to sour.

The Pub is closed at the end of the day,

The place lies silent come what may.

CLUB CORNER

By BETSY CURRIN
Circle K Club

The Circle K Club has begun the year with much worthwhile activity. The first of their projects during this quarter has already been completed. With the help of the Engineers' Club, members of the Circle K have worked to improve conditions in the parking lot. Members of the Engineers Club marked new parking spaces and Circle K members have now taken over the project.

They will give tickets to all students whose cars are found to be parked improperly and to those students whose cars do not bear Wilmington College license plates. Any student receiving a ticket will be asked to report to Dean Crews within three days for a conference concerning the matter.

The Circle K Club is now in the process of making plans for the 1959-60 Wilmington College Telephone Directory, which contains names, addresses and phone numbers of faculty members and students.

Leroy Smith is chairman of the committee in charge of compiling lists. His assistant is Henry Chason. Gene Ballard is chairman of the advertising committee, with Cecil Poole and Ronald Lisk as his assistants. The club plans to have the telephone directories ready for distribution in about a month.

Dramatics Club

The Dramatics Club held its first meeting recently in the College auditorium. The 28 members present elected officers at this time. They are: president, Tommy Wallace; vice-president, Judy Horne; secretary-treasurer, Barbara Jones.

The Dramatics Club is planning a masquerade ball for Halloween night, October 31. The Ball, which is to be held in the Wilmington College auditorium from 8 to 12 o'clock, will be open to all students at Wilmington College and their dates.

Tickets for the occasion are now on sale. They can be purchased from any member of the Dramatics Club. The admission is fifty cents per couple; no stags will be admitted. Everyone must come masqueraded, and prizes will be given to the person wearing the most original costume. There will also be awards given for the prettiest costume and for the funniest costume.

From a mother of a student at Wilmington College, to her son's friends and classmates:

When new grass covers raw earthen mounds that settle softly back into the ground—there will be aching hearts that still remember—that mourn and never cease to mourn for their lost ones. Nothing grows to provide cover for their wounds. Within them is an eternal emptiness. They cannot see a shapely head with a crisp crew-cut—the lanky form of a young man—the quirk of an eyebrow—without remembering their own lost son. He might have been so many things. He was being molded for a career. Someday he would have married—he would have brought into their twilight years the little children who would have called them "Grandma"—and "Grandpa." They would have raided cookie jars, and pulled wagons and doll carriages down the walk—and oh! the Christmases—with everyone gathered at home—under one roof—for the holidays. Potential bid for eternity—our children—all we can ever hope for them is a better life than the one we, ourselves, have known.

You are "Grown-ups" now—or very nearly so. Because you are, we do not tell you often enough that we love you. We may try to show you in little material ways that you mean a lot—that we care a lot. But we don't come right out and say it very often: I love you, son. I love you, daughter. But we do. We do. When the news—the terrible news—of a fatal accident is splashed in scary black headlines of the daily newspaper—and the victims of that accident were attending your son's school—were in your son's classes—then you suffer for the dead boy's parents. It is so close to you. It could be you. You think, then, of Mary at the foot of the cross, watching her Son die, ever so cruelly, before her very eyes. You wonder how the dead boys' parents can.

Do this, then, if you will: for the sake of those who love you—for the generation of today and for the generation yet unborn—be disciples of safety. Let this be the goal of every student at Wilmington College. Don't cheat yourselves out of the joy of living. Don't be a human sacrifice on the altar of recklessness. Grief is no substitute for life. No matter, now, who was at fault. The loss is here, and now, and will be forever.

Cry for your friend. Cry for a stranger. Cry, and then be determined to drive to live, not to rush into the same endless void of eternity. Be a better driver, as a monument to their memory.

Nineteen is too young to die—and so is twenty—the tip toe age. The eager lilted heart should not be stilled when so much lies ahead. Their dreams, like bubbles—shattered—leaving out a trace upon the threshold of life—a filmy, broken circle doors through which they'll never stride and rooms eternally empty. I cry for you, young stranger.

WITH CAROL HEWETT

Through The Halls

Last week everyone was busy collecting items such as paper bags, masks, hats, and old clothes for the Masquerade Ball which was held on October 31.

At the Freshman Dance last month, everyone seemed to enjoy dancing to the music of Jesse Shaw and his band. Jim Fountain was in charge of the music for the occasion, and we are of the opinion that he did a fine job. The refreshments, another complement to an enjoyable evening, were planned by Kay Sholar, who served as chairman of this committee.

This year's cheerleaders will possibly be wearing new uniforms. Their skirts will be green wool and white taffeta. Their sweaters will be white with green letters. They have chosen black-and-white saddle shoes.

All their pom-poms will be white with the exception of the head cheerleader who will have green mixed with the white. The first game will be November 24—a date which they are all looking forward to.

This year, Wilmington College has a quartet, The Seantones. Richard Garrish, Doug Hunt, Harvey Radcliffe, and Jerry Ely make up the quartet which has already had several engagements, including T.V. appearances, the Ann Landers' program, and the Kiwanis Minstrel. They are looking forward to having even more to do as the year progresses.

It seems as if Buddy Tilden, a member of the Sophomore class here at Wilmington College, is still on the radio. Keep tuned to WGNI and you'll probably enjoy some good music. We admire Buddy for all the fine work he is doing in the radio field.

Elections for the Fledgling Beauties were held last week in the pub. These are girls who are elected by the student body to represent and to be presented in the Wilmington College yearbook, The Fledgling.

Doctor Randall has made the announcement that in all probability, ground will be broken at the new building site about the middle of December. He said that a gift of $500 from the Riegel Paper Company was received recently and has been deposited in the Special Gifts Building Fund, which now contains around $50,000.

U. S. College Poetry Society To Publish New Anthology

The American College Poetry Society has recently announced that it plans to published its second anthology of the outstanding college poetry of the United States this winter. All contributions must be the original work of the student, who will retain literary rights to the material.

Submitted poems, which may deal with any subject and may be written in any form of versification, may not exceed 48 lines. A student may not submit more than five poems to the society. Entries which are not accepted for publication will be returned to the authors if they are accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope. All entries must be postmarked not later than midnight, December 1, 1959, if they are to be considered for publication.

Miss Hewett, a 1959 graduate of Burgaw High School, Burgaw, North Carolina, was active in the student government during all three years there. Smith, who has never worked in student government, will be doing this sort of work for the first time. He is already active at Wilmington College as business manager of the Seahawk.

it has the option of advancing one or two squares. On any subsequent move of that Pawn, it can only move one square. The Pawn captures by moving diagonally forward on adjoining squares, except on the fifth file, when it may capture sideways.

You win a game of chess by attacking the hostile King in such a way that no matter what your opponent does, his King cannot escape capture.

When either King is attacked, he is said to be in check. When the attack of the King is one against which there is no defense, the King is said to be checkmated: the game is over.

The King is never actually captured. Merely trapping a King without leaving him any chance of escape ends the game at once. The King may never play into a square which is within the capturing range of enemy forces.

The following table is accepted as standard values of chessmen: Queen, nine points; Rook, five points; Bishop, three points; Knight, three points; and Pawn, one point.

Student Wins Art Award

A painting by Carolyn Greer, sophomore art major at Wilmington College, has recently placed second in the art division of the Annapolund County Fair in Annapolis, Maryland.

Because the painting, an oil entitled "Still Life," was entered in the fair by the artist's aunt, Miss Greer had no idea that her work was in competition. "I was really surprised when I heard," she admitted.

The judges for the occasion were from the Maryland Institute, Baltimore, Maryland.

During her high school days, Miss Greer took art under the instruction of Miss Emma Lossen, artist and instructor at New Hanover High School. She used her artistic talent on the annual Christmas scenes, as make-up artist in the Thespian plays, and in the decorations for the school dances.

Miss Greer was also a member of several clubs and was assistant exchange editor of the school paper, The Wildcat.

Last year, Miss Greer entered paintings in the College Art Show and in the Cottage Lane Art Show. "If the College has another show this year," she said brightly, "I'll show my work in it."

She enjoys painting and looks forward to the opportunity of showing her work and comparing it with work produced by other young artists.

Marines Land

During this month posters, booklets, and even a personal representative of the United States Marine Corps visited Wilmington College.

During the "Join the Marines" campaign, several students enlisted and others, although they did not sign up, listened to the policy of the Marine Corps and heard of the great opportunity a United States Marine has.

Women as well as men were approached during this campaign, but no women enlisted.

Katherine Counts Is 4-H Health Queen

Miss Katherine Counts of 4928 Wrightsville Avenue, a freshman at Wilmington College, has recently been elected to serve as the 1959 North Carolina State 4-H Health Queen, Miss Counts, who has long been a member of 4-H, will attend the annual National 4-H Convention and National Club Congress which will be held in Chicago, November 29 - December 3.

Miss Counts, who entered Wilmington College this quarter under one of the colleges Art Scholarship, plans to become a Home Economics Extension Agent.

She attended New Hanover High School where she served in several worthwhile activities. When she was a sophomore, she joined the arts and crafts club at NHHS and studied under Miss Emma Lossen, instructor and artist. She has continued in her art work, and at this time, is busy working with the Dramatics Club in preparing the scenery for The Silver Whistle.

Also while she was in high school, Miss Counts became interested in home economics. She joined the Future Homemakers of America and took home ec during all of her three years there. It was from this experience that she decided that home economics was to be her life's work.

She was a member of the Girls Glee Club at New Hanover, but she did not join the College Chorus this fall. "I thought I'd better stick to painting."

Being elected to the high honor of 4-H Health Queen is a good reward for all the work Miss Counts has done in this organization. While thinking about her planned trip to Chicago, she could only say, "I'm happy and excited about it all."

COMMITTEE CONSIDERS FORESTRY PROGRAMS

A special committee met at Wilmington College early in this month to discuss the possibility of offering at the college a 2-year forestry technology program.

Dr. William M. Randall, President of the College, said that the college may consider the program if there is reason to believe that the training is needed in this area. Other points of consideration, he said, would be whether or not the college could give the type of training necessary and whether or not graduates of the course would be able to find employment in this area.

The Committee, in discussing the question, formed the conclusion that a 2-year man can be used to good advantage in forestry technology.

The committee decided, in closing their discussion, that a complete study of forestry programs should be made and that a survey of the forestry technology industry should be conducted in order to determine the type of training required to satisfy their job openings.

Those present at the meeting, in addition to Dr. Randall, were Mr. John B. Davis, Jr., Associate Professor of Engineering; Mr. J. S. Barker, Jr., Corbett Lumber Company; Mr. O. H. Johnson, Jr., Agronomist with the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers; Mr. J. B. Lateay, Riegel-Carolina Paper Corporation; Mr. O. G. Traczewitz, International Paper Company; and Mr. Louis Adcock and Mr. R. E. Piner, of the Wilmington College faculty.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE, WILMINGTON, N. C.

December 17, 1959

Standing in the Cape Fear Country Club Ballroom are the newly elected Sophomore Superlatives. They are (l. to r.) Barbara Jones, Gene Ballard, Judy Collier, DeAnn Estes, Bob Boxley, Cecil Poole, Bob Sibbett, Kitty Loud, Jim Fountain, Helen Galloway, Peggy Aldridge, Chuck Fearn, Tommy Teague, and Kay Sholar.

New Adult Classes Planned by College

Two classes in adult education will begin in January at Wilmington College, and one is planned to begin in February. The classes are a part of the Adult Education Program of the College—the main purpose of which is to acquaint the adults of the community with educational topics about which they wish or need to become familiar.

Beginning on January 21, a 30-hour course will be offered by the Business Education Department of Wilmington College. The title of this course is Record-Keeping for Small Businesses. Classes will be held one night a week for 15 weeks, 2 hours each night.

The organizational meeting of this course will be held on Thursday, January 14, at 7:30 P.M. in Room 310 at Wilmington College. The first class meeting will be held on Thursday, January 21. The registration fee for the course is $5.00.

Record-Keeping for Small Businesses is designed to enable the small business operator to keep a complete set of books, to help him prepare income statements, and to give an introduction to various taxes which the small business operator has to pay.

A series of six one-hour lectures entitled American Novelists of the Twentieth Century will be presented for the adults of the community by the Wilmington College English Department. Each week, the work of one novelist will be presented and discussed by a member of the faculty of the College or by a visiting lecturer.

The schedule for classes in this series are as follows: January 19, Henry James; January 26, Sinclair Lewis; February 2, Willa Cather; February 9, William Faulkner; February 16, Ernest Hemingway; February 23, Robert Penn Warren.

Planned for February, March, and April is a course entitled Conversational Spanish which will consist of 10 class sessions of an hour and a quarter each. The course is designed to teach practical, everyday Spanish particularly slanted to meet the needs of travelers to Spanish-speaking countries.

The organizational date for this class is February 8; the registration fee is $5.00.

The class schedule is as follows: February 16 and 23; March 1, 8, 15, 22, and 29; and April 5, 12, and 19.

Enrollment Decreases For Winter Quarter

Enrollment for winter quarter at Wilmington College is 509—59 less than last quarter. During registration which was held on November 30, 39 new students enrolled and signed up for classes. Ninety-eight fall quarter students failed to enroll.

Now enrolled at Wilmington College are 174 freshmen men, 52 freshmen women, 118 sophomore men, 34 sophomore women, 24 freshmen nurses, 19 sophomore nurses, and 11 special nurses. The other students enrolled are graduate students, special students, and night students.

Wilmington College students represent 33 of the 100 counties in North Carolina, and 15 additional States in the Union. Two students are from Jordan.

24 Sophomore Superlatives Chosen By Students At Wilmington College

Sophomore superlatives! To voters at Wilmington College last week, those were the two most important words in conversation; for the couples present at the Christmas dance last Friday night, the words became personified.

The sophomore superlatives—those among that class who have been voted "tops" and who will be honored by us in the Fledgling—are as follows: Best looking, Judy Horne and Jimmy Collier; Friendliest, Barbara Jones and Larry Powell; Wittiest, Norma Breazeale and Bob Boxley; Most Intellectual, Helen Galloway and Otto Schwartz; Most Original, Carolyn Greer and Cecil Poole; Most Talented, DeAnn Estes and Ronnie Lipsius.

Most Athletic are Bunny Patelos and Chuck Fearn; Most Likely To Succeed, Mary Margaret Ginn and Tommy Teague; Most Flirtatious, Kitty Loud and Bob Sibbett; Most School Spirit, Peggy Aldridge and Nick Gieschen; Best Dressed, Roxanna Barefoot and Jim Fountain; and Best All Around, Kay Sholar and Gene Ballard.

Good looks is an attribute that has been Judy Horne's for as long as any of her friends can remember. Now, at Wilmington College, they have again played a part in her life. Judy is a class representative and is vice president of the Dramatics Club. She has recently been elected one of the Fledgling Beauties and has been chosen to serve as an attendant in the May Court. She is also a sophomore class representative and vice-president of the Dramatics Club.

Jimmy Collier, who was chosen Best Looking by his fellow students, is an assistant behind the counter in the Pub.

Barbara Jones, who now bears the title Friendliest, is a cheerleader, secretary of the Dramatics Club, and a member of the Wilmington College Chorus. She has recently been elected a Fledgling Beauty and a May Court Attendant.

Larry Powell, also Friendliest, is an active member of the Circle K Club and serves on the Telephone Directory Committee.

Norma Breazeale and Bob Boxley are Wittiest. Miss Breazeale is assistant to the Head Cheerleader, a member of the Fledgling staff and a lab assistant. Boxley is a member of the Circle K Club.

Most Flirtatious are Kitty Loud and Bob Sibbett. Miss Loud is an office assistant and a member of the Dramatics Club. Sibbett is Chairman of Elections and a member of the Circle K Club.

Peggy Aldridge and Nick Gieschen have been voted "Mr. and Miss" Most School Spirit. Miss Aldridge is an office assistant, and Gieschen is president of the Engineer's Club.

Best Dressed are Roxanna Barefoot and Jim Fountain. Miss Barefoot was one of the education students to teach in a junior high school last month. Fountain is a sophomore class representative and is on the Board of Directors of the Circle K Club.

Most Intellectual are Helen Galloway and Otto Schwartz. Miss Galloway is Sophomore Class Secretary, a library assistant, and a member of the Fledgling staff. Schwartz, a straight-Dean's-List student, was also voted Most Intellectual during his senior year at New Hanover High School.

Carolyn Greer and Cecil Poole have been chosen Most Original. Miss Greer is well known at Wilmington College for her attractive paintings. She recently won a second place award for a painting entitled "Still Life." Poole, also an artist, is treasurer of the Circle K Club and is a member of the Dramatics Club.

DeAnn Estes and Ronnie Lipsius have been voted Most Talented. DeAnn, a math major, is a cheerleader; Ronnie is a member of the Wilmington College Dance Band.

Bunny Patelos, a lab assistant, and Chuck Fearn, two year basketball player for the Seahawks, have been chosen Most Athletic.

Most Likely to Succeed are Mary Margaret Ginn and Tommy Teague. Miss Ginn is a library assistant, a member of the Fledgling staff, and editor of With Pen in Hand—the annual publication of the Pen Pusher's Club. Teague is treasurer of the Engineer's Club.

Best All Around are Kay Sholar and Gene Ballard. Miss Sholar is Head Cheerleader, secretary of the Student Council, editor of the Fledgling, a member of the College Chorus, a Pub assistant, one of the six Fledgling Beauties, and May Queen.

Ballard is Student Council President and chairman of the Board of Directors of the Circle K Club.

Crews Announces First Dean's List

The Dean's List for the fall quarter at Wilmington College, which ended on November 20, has been announced by James M. Crews, Dean of Students. Thirty-nine students were included in this listing.

The Dean's List contains the names of students who have demonstrated superior achievements during a given quarter of college work. To have his name appear on the list, a student must have a point average of at least 3.0 for the quarter with no single grade below a C.

Names appearing on this first Dean's List of the 1959-60 academic year are Mary E. Adams, Marlon E. Anderson, Glenn A. Bailly, Roxanna Barefoot, Patricia H. Black, Kay Brackenbury, Peter D. Buis, Louis Coleman, Jr., Jean P. Creech, Thomas L. Cromartie, Nicholas H. Geischen, Mary M. Ginn, Nancy W. Herring, and Mary A. Ittner—all of Wilmington.

Also from the Port City are Robert Stuart McGee, Grace L. Merritt, William A. Mitchell, William R. Oates, Delton Oxedine, James W. Peoples, William H. Radcliff, Carl B. Steljes, Walter T. Stephen-

Scholarships On Health Available

Wilmington College has received application forms for the 1960 Health Scholarships offered by the National Foundation.

W. Kendall Dorsey, who is chairman of the local county chapter, and a member of the Wilmington College faculty, has announced that each scholarship—supported by funds from the new March of Dimes campaign against diseases of birth defects—will be worth $500.

This makes a total of $2,000, he said, for four years training in one of the five key health professions of medicine, nursing, physical therapy, occupational therapy, and medical social work.

There are a total of 515 scholarships which will be offered to all 50 States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and the Canal Zone.

The final selection of winning candidates will be made next summer by State committees of leading professionals in their fields, Dorsey said.

College students interested in information concerning the awards should contact or request applications from the Dean of Students, J. M. Crews, or from Mr. Dorsey. Students also may contact the Wilmington Chapter of the National Foundation.

N. C. Colleges Show Enrollment Increase

RALEIGH — Higher education enrollment in North Carolina is up by more than 9 per cent over last year in state-supported colleges and by about 6 per cent in private and state-supported institutions.

The figures were revealed at a meeting of the State Board of Higher Education. Some 32,697 students were attending state colleges and the consolidated university this fall.

About 62,000 were enrolled in all colleges and universities in North Carolina as against 58,634 last year.

EDITORIALS

We Wish You . . .

... a Merry Christmas.

Christmas can mean a lot of things. It can mean a much needed vacation from classes and quizzes and club meetings. It can mean a chance to see old friends who have left Wilmington to attend other colleges, to work at other jobs. Christmas can mean spending time with your family—something that college work often forces you to neglect. Christmas can mean making the people you love happy and some everyday kindnesses really important.

Christmas can also mean nothing. It can mean getting cross about shopping and planning and wrapping packages. It can mean missing the wonderful glow of happiness because it has been hidden under the bustle of preparing for visitors and house-cleaning. It can mean only a week of trouble, a week when you look forward to taking down all the decorations and putting them away until next year.

Christmas can mean almost as many things as there are people to feel these things. Everyone sees Christmas in a different light.

But, for all of us, the approaching holidays can mean something very moving and very profound. They can mean looking at the world with dignified reverence and realizing that each of us is a part — a young, moving part — of it all. Christmas can be a time of right self-appraisal. A time when each of us can look quietly at ourselves and evaluate ourselves.

When summing the family tree or wrapping presents for the ones we love while smiling at our dance partner at a Christmas party or listening to Christmas carols on the radio, we can—each of us—experience a moment and smile and think to ourselves, "Here I am; I am a part of life. Christmas is here; and because I am life, I am a part of Christmas too. I am a young, moving part of Christmas."

The Seahawk staff wishes you a merry Christmas. May it be a moving experience for you. May it be a holiday you will never forget—a season of finding yourself and becoming a part of it all. What good is Christmas if the true spirit isn't in us?

Planning a New Year

What plans do you have for 1960? Do you have any? Do you want to make of yourself a new and different individual? Or do you want to continue? You're testing a deep and ever-fresh subject. Someone has said that in the great seeking boiling-pot of life, an individual's hopes, ambitions and fears are intermixed.

As college students, our futures will be determined largely by other people and our reactions to them. They will be determined by what family, teachers, and friends require of us and by how well we meet these requirements. Can we rise to the standards of others? Or do we remain—heads bowed—with our feet on the ladders of success, but without the energy to rise?

Also, our futures will be determined by what we require of ourselves. Do we meet up to our own standards? Do we even know what our standards are?

Our destinies also depend on how determined we are to reach our goals in life. Do we sit back, afraid? Or are we inspired? Do we charge ahead—doing what we must, accomplishing what we can?

As important as any of these (and a part of them all) is another important factor. How well do we use time? Do we waste minutes and days, months and even years? Do we know the importance of time and use it now? Do we realize the importance of planning our futures and working to achieve our goals now?

Streaked clay under straining fingertips
Warms to the pounding of ponderous hands.
Reluctantly, it becomes palpable.
As yet, the striving of my soul molds naught
But anonymity.

Formless, a thing without face, my future
Cries out helplessly, hovering between Realization and desolation.
The lump hardens. If not now, then never
To shape a destiny.

The pricelessness of time becomes too apparent. For each freshman and sophomore, time is quickly passing; with it go childhood and home ties. Our lives are our own; but we must begin now.

We Apologize

The Seahawk staff wishes to apologize for a very careless mistake in our last issue—in an editorial concerning the parking situation here at college, we gave the whole credit for the improvements to the Circle K Club. This mistake was wholly unintentional. In reality, the Engineers' Club was equally responsible for the work which had been done on the lot.

The Engineers marked off new parking spaces and planned the new appearance of the lot. The Seahawk staff wishes to thank you for your interest and for bringing to our attention the mistake which we made.

CLUB CORNER

By Betsy Currin

ENGINEERS CLUB

The Engineers' Club has made many interesting plans for the coming months. Their next meeting will be held in January. They plan to have a specialist from the International Nickle Company who will present a movie, pamphlets, samples of work, and a speech on the effect of sea water on different metals.

There are proposed plans for a tour of the International Nickle Company and Regal Paper Corporation after the Christmas holidays.

The new members of the club for this quarter were presented to the group at the last meeting which was held at the Crystal Restaurant on December 3. The new members are: Joe Riddick, Robert Wayne Frederes, William Howard Wood, Jr., Shannon Abbott, David Millner, Elbert Hodges, Bobby Raynor, Tommy Cromartie, Eugene Odell Evans, Jr., Charles Lee Mathis, and Furman Lee Galloway, Jr.

DRAMATICS CLUB

The Dramatics Club has recently recorded a radio play, Christmas Carol by Dickens, which will be presented over the radio during the Christmas Holidays. The cast is as follows: Ebenezer Scrooge, Dennis Carney; Marley, Forest Lee Piver; Cratchet, Victor Horrell; Mrs. Cratchet, Lucy James; Martha, Kitty Loud; Tiny Tim, Barbara Stallings; Boy, Ann Fields; Peter, Cecil Poole. Sound effects are by Tommy Wallace and Buddy Tilden.

The Dramatics Club has begun preparations for the Dramatics Festival at the University of North Carolina which will be held early next year.

CIRCLE K CLUB

The Circle K Club chose Jayne Underwood as the Circle K Sweetheart. She was chosen at the last meeting and was presented at the Christmas Dance.

Plans are being made for the Homecoming Game, January 22, with Louisville College. There will be a pep rally, a parade, and a dance. Each Wilmington College Club will sponsor a girl for Homecoming Queen.

PEN PUSHERS' CLUB

The Pen Pushers' Club meets every Monday afternoon at 5:30. This week, the club held its Christmas social after a business meeting which was held at the home of Miss Shannon Morton, advisor.

The club has begun the work of choosing and assorting material to be published in their annual magazine, With Pen in Hand, an anthology of the best writing done by Wilmington College students during the year.

Chess Tournament

The chess tournament has received enthusiasm from several of the students. There were 20 names on the list and all but nine of them had been eliminated as the deadline for the Seahawk drew near. These nine names are now on the bulletin board. A chart will be put up on the board on the opening day of school next year, on this chart the remaining players will be paired up and the winner of each game will write his name in the appropriate blank space after he has played the person in the first block.

The members of the sports staff wish to thank the students of Wilmington College for their interest in this "intramural" sport.

Theodor Uppman Presents First Community Concert

Theodor Uppman, Metropolitan Opera star, gave a community concert on Monday night, December 7, in Brodgen Hall.

Uppman, also widely known to TV and radio audiences, has made frequent appearances on the Voice of Firestone, the Bell Telephone Hour, and on the Omnibus productions of "The Merry Widow" and "La Perichole."

Uppman, who has sung in every State in the union, was for two seasons a soloist with the Gershwin Orchestra and was later the baritone in sold-out tours by the Bel Canto Trio. He has sung with the Philadelphia Orchestra, the San Francisco Symphony, and the Los Angeles Philharmonic.

Letter

To the Editor

Dear Editor:

I have read with deep appreciation the letter of October 1, published in your November edition.

While the identity of the writer was not revealed, it is clear that she has seen much of life and death. She obviously understands something of the reason for living as well as the tragedy of seeing a young life so quickly taken. The gamete of human existence is simply and dramatically unfolded in this brief letter.

Her first sentence is truly the expression of those who have loved and lost. The feeling of emptiness is well expressed in the sentence that "he might have been so many things."

I also feel that young people live dangerously because there is an urge to hit the raw, young strength of their bodies against the unknown pitfalls and hardships of life. Clearly, too many misinterpret this dynamic age for a reckless one, and they spend themselves unnecessarily in dealing with the trivial and extraneous factors of everyday existence. Advice born of wisdom was recorded by the writer of this letter, wherein she writes as follows: "Don't cheat yourselves out of the joy of living. Don't be a human sacrifice on the altar of recklessness. Grief is no substitute for life."

The writer of this letter has given something of herself to the students of Wilmington College. You are to be commended for publishing it.

P. M. Camak.

Through The Halls

Everyone really went out for Halloween this year, especially our college students who participated in the Masquerade Ball held by the Dramatics Club on October 31. The high-light of the evening came when the judges, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Swink, selected four couples as the costume winners from among the many elaborate costumes. The winners were: Most Original, Roxana Barefoot and Alvin White; Most Comical, Julia Rochelle and Roy Mathews; Best Looking, Linda Schulken and Billy Bordeaux; silliest, Sue Gould and Tommy Wolfe.

Records for the occasion were spun by the Master of Ceremonies, Bill Weathers of WGN Radio. Tommy Wallace, Wilmington College sophomore, also entertained. The annual Wilmington College Christmas Dance was held on Friday night, December 11, in the Cape Fear Country Club Ballroom. The dance was semi-formal. Several committees were in charge of the occasion. John Pistolis and his committee saw to the refreshments;

Summers gave him an opportunity to use another facet of his talent, when he appears in summer festivals of light opera. A typical two-week period finds him singing an all Gershwin program in Honolulu, two performances of the Merry Widow in Milwaukee, Cole Porter Night at the Hollywood Bowl, and a solo recital at Williams Bay, Wisconsin.

Probably the one success more than any other that started Theodor Uppman on the road to fame was his appearance in the title role of the world premiere of Benjamin Britten's opera, "Billy Budd." That in Convent Garden, was the highlight of the London 1954-55 season, with the ultra-conservative London Times observing: "The Billy Budd of the American baritone, Mr. Theodor Uppman, was a most convincing materialization of Melville's half-drawn character and his great monologue in the form of a broadside ballad was sung with a noble strength and tenderness."

Uppman won a scholarship to Philadelphia's Curtis Institute of Music, then returned to his home state of California to study music and drama at Stanford University and at the University of Southern California. He served two years during the war, and then won the Atwater-Kent Auditions which carried with it a $2,000 cash prize, and the Gainsborough Foundation Award.

Petition Posted

Posted on the bulletin board in the past few weeks has been a copy of a petition which was designed by the students to protest the use of Georgian architecture in the proposed college buildings. The petition, which has been signed by a surprising number of students, states that it is the students' belief that a more suitable design for the new buildings could be employed. The petition recommends the use of Modern or Contemporary Architecture.

Also on the list were Sandra E. Gustafson of Southport, Johnny H. Minor of Surf City, Charles C. Moore of Hoffman, William E. Moore of Acme, Ethel D. Phelps of Leland, Edna C. Regester of Row Hill, Robert J. Salmonson of Walnut and Otto Schwartz of Carle Hall.

and Kay Schlar, Larry Smith, Brenda Crump, and Betsy Lockamy were in charge of decorations. Harry Thomas and his band furnished music for the event.

The Wilmington College Dance Band under the direction of Bill Adecock, played their first engagement of the year at a dance after the Wilmington College-Carolina Freshman basketball game on December 5 in the College gym.

Members of the band are: Wesley Piner and Jack Burnish, tenor sax; Jimmy Cook, baritone sax; Tommy Marshburn, alto sax; Bernard Wilson, Dilbert Tilt, Buster Burney, and Henry Chason, trombone; Ronnie Lipsius and Tommy Wallace, trumpet; Tommy Landen, bass; and Richard Gersh, piano.

Congratulations should go to Helen Galloway, Mary Margaret Ginn, Rob McGee, and Elizabeth Pierce for the fine work they did last quarter as library assistants and for their returning this quarter to their old familiar places in the library.

SEAHAWKS BEGIN '59 SEASON WITH 5 WINS AND 2 LOSSES

How to . . .

Because our column "How to . . ." was so popular and because the chess tournament is still in the process, Sports Celebs thought that a follow-up with a few more pointers for beginners might be in order.

In view of the King's all-important character, you will not be surprised that there are more things to be learned about this vital piece. These details are easy to grasp and fit usefully into the pattern of an ordinary game.

For one thing, in chess there is an excellent way to make the King's life healthier and longer.

This method is known as casting, and it has many curious features. The most important one is that it is the only move in the game in which you are allowed to move two pieces. This double move counts for only one move. Now let us see how this unique move is made. The two pieces which execute casting are the King and either Rook. (The Rook is also called the Castle by some people.)

The mechanism is simple enough: (a) move the King next to the Rook, (b) move the King Rook from the King's right to the King's left.

The inexperienced player does well to castle early on the King-side almost as a matter of course. In this way he will quickly shield his King from heavy attack and will also bring the King Rook into the game.

Castling on the Queen side is a trifle more complex; for, here, there are three squares between the King and Queen Rook.

Now for the special rules about casting. You cannot castle when your King is in check, your King has moved previously, the Rook which you wish to use for casting has moved previously, a hostile piece commands the square to which the King is to move in cast-

Seahawks Roll Over EMI

The Seahawks of Wilmington College opened the curtain on new season by defeating the Edwards Military Institute Rams 114-81. The Seahawks never trailed once from the opening jump. Their largest point spread was the 33 points at the end of the game. The half-time score was 50-40 with Ed Miaszkowski spurring the 'Hawks by starting an eleven point scoring binge that the Rams never overcame.

Leading the locals in the scoring was Miaszkowski with 22 points, followed by Billy Galantai and John Pritchard each with 17 and Larry Edens, Chuck Fearn, and Ronnie White hitting in the double figures.

The EMI Club was led by Bill Schellenger and Ronnie Miller, each with 18 points.

With their appetites whetted after the win over EMI, the Seahawks went after Charlotte College.

Charlotte College Beaten 114-57

Once again the Wilmington College Seahawks flew to another victory by thoroughly trouncing the Owls of Charlotte College by the score of 114-57 in another thriller. The Owls controlled the opening tipoff, and the two teams went scoreless for about a minute before the 'Hawks scored with a jump shot by John Jones and the CC club scored on a corner shot by Doug Galvin to tie it up for the first of three times. After that the Seahawks led for the rest of the game.

The high scorer for the Seahawks was Ed Miaszkowski with 21. Others hitting in the double-digit column were Chuck Fearn with 18, Kenny McIntyre 15, John Pritchard 14, and Galantai and Edens with 13 each. The big gun for the night was Charlotte's Dub Plyker with 27 points.

Louisburg Bows 98-92

An early lead proved to be the difference at the Wilmington College Seahawks rolled over Louisburg 98-92.

Billy Galantai, playing the center spot for the WJC club, dumped in 31 points during the game to set the pace for the 'Hawks with Ed Miaszkowski contributing 13 points toward the defeat of Louisburg. Other Seahawks hitting in the double figures were Ken McIntyre 11 and Ronnie White 10. Scoring high for the Louisburg club were Jimmy Dew 24, Roger Pendland and Doug Hobgood both had 18 and Walter Parker had 15.

The Seahawks had the lead for the entire game and only once did Louisburg get close enough to scare them in the second half but the Brooksmen pulled the fat out of the fire and came home with their third conference win of the season.

WJC Over UNC Frosh 89-85

The Seahawks poured in 13 extra points in an overtime period to hand the University of North Carolina Freshmen an 89 to 85 defeat after fighting an uphill battle from the opening minutes of the game.

With the regulation game ending in a 76-76 tie the two teams went into an overtime and the Brooksmen gradually pulled ahead.

Hitting in the double-digit column for the Seahawks were Ed Miaszkowski with 23 points and John Pritchard, Billy Galantai, Ron McIntyre, and Larry Edens. High men for the opposition were Colon 14, Brown 25, Crutchfield 16, and Parker with 11. This brought the total number of wins to four against one defeat.

Charlotte Bows to the Brooksmen

The Wilmington College Seahawks had little trouble in chalking up their fifth win of the season as they bowled over Charlotte College, 96-37. This was Charlotte's fifth loss in six games, and the second time they have been defeated by the Seahawks.

Coach Brooks used only nine players, with each man seeing action about half the game. Six of the Seahawks hit in the double digits with freshman guard Kenny McIntyre leading the way with 17 points. Ed Miaszkowski, a 6-3 veteran and Ronnie White, from Wilmington each added 14 points to the score followed by Larry Edens 13, John Pritchard 11, and Herschel Witten with 10.

Charlotte's high scorers for the evening were guard Sam Dunlap with 16 points and Doug Galvin with 12 points. They got all but nine of Charlotte's points.

USC Frosh Beat Seahawks 101-80

The Baby Gamecocks of the University of South Carolina, after trailing at halftime, used their superior height and free-throw ability to down the Wilmington College club 101-80.

The 'Hawks led almost all the way during the first half and ended the half leading 48-43. The second half proved fatal to the Seahawks with Fearn and John Pritchard, who was also injured in the first half, out for the rest of the game.

WJC Bows to Duke Frosh 101-59

The first road game for the Seahawks turned out to be their first defeat of the season, losing 101-59.

Sports Celeb for this month is Ed Miaszkowski from Floral Park, Long Island, New York City.

UNIVERSITY REPORT

By Charles Dillon

As the year 1959 draws to a rapid close we find that the Seahawks have had a particularly good start in the 1959-'60 basketball season with a five and two record with only two games remaining to be played this year. Starting on January 8, 1960 with Oak Ridge, right on up to the tournament playoffs there will be a heck of a lot of good basketball played.

Through the grapevine comes word that Billy Galantai, pivot man for the Seahawks, has resumed practice after being out of the lineup for several games with a wrenched knee. All we can say is, "Glad to have you back Bill, and we hope to see you under the boards soon continuing on with the wonderful job that you started back in November."

Another one of our star players was injured in one of the games. Chuck Fearn hurt his hip in the first half of the USC tilt. Hope he will be back with us soon.

ATTENTION WILMINGTON COLLEGE AND THE CITY OF WILMINGTON!!!!

Good news for the college! The basketball tournament is going to be held in Wilmington this February, so lets follow our team throughout the rest of the season and give them our wholehearted support through thick or thin!

Now, there is this matter of booing the officials at the basketball games. I realize that I am just as guilty as the next guy; but it, in my opinion, is only a sign of stupidity and no one wants to admit that they are stupid.

It must be realized that two men cannot keep ten other men under constant surveillance all the time, therefore some things are bound to go unobserved. Although we think that they can't see as good as we think we can, because we are obviously prone to be one-sided, they must remain as neutral as they possibly can. So the next time you start to boo the referee make some wise crack about "two blind mice", remember that they are doing a job, and a mighty fine one at that.

Before I finish up my column for the year 1960, I want to, along with Lloyd Robuck, wish you the very merriest of Christmases and a prosperous and happy New Year. Drive carefully so we will see you all next year.

SPORTS CELEB

By LLOYD ROBUCK

This issue the sports spotlight is focused upon big Ed Miaszkowski, who hails from Floral Park, Long Island, New York. Ed, nicknamed "Mousy" by his teammates occupies the forward position on the basketball court. His towering 6'-3" height makes him a valuable man to have beneath the boards when it comes to grabbing rebounds both offensive and defensive. He now leads the Seahawk Club in rebounds with 69 in the seven games played as of press time. He has been the leading scorer in four of the seven past games.

Ed contributes this season's success to his girl, Ann. Ed said, "Ann makes me play harder." He is thankful to Billy Galantai for his many assists under 'neath the boards.

Other than being an outstanding player on the basketball courts, Ed is also a hard working player whether on the practice court or in an actual game. In his modesty, he has a great deal of respect for his teammates and says little, if anything at all, about his own personal gains.

Ed's high school records tells the story for his present success upon the basketball court. He played four years of high school ball, establishing his school's scoring and rebounding record for one game. Ed scored 32 points and grabbed 24 rebounds in separate games to establish these records. He also made All-City and All-County during his bright high school career. May his college playing be as bright as his high school playing.

In asking for his opinion of this year's team, he said, "This year's team is faster and has better shooting ability than last year's."

CIRCLE K CHOOSES SWEETHEART

Standing with the president of the Circle K Club, Henry Chason, is the newly elected Circle K Sweetheart, Jayne Underwood.

Jayne Underwood Chosen Sweetheart

Each year, the Circle K Club selects one from among the students at Wilmington College to serve as Circle K Sweetheart. At the Annual Wilmington College Christmas Dance which was held at the Cape Fear Country Club on December 11, the Circle K Club announced that its Sweetheart for this year is Miss Jayne Underwood.

Miss Underwood will meet with the club at their next meeting at which time she will be introduced to its members and orientated as an honorary member and good-will representative.

The Circle K Club is sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Wilmington and is governed by Circle K International in cooperation with Wilmington College. The officers of this, a students' service club, are as follows: Henry Chason, president; Thomas Wolfe, vice-president; Bobby Salmon, secretary; Cecil Poole, treasurer. Faculty advisor for the group is Thomas Lupton; Kiwanis advisor is Harry Bethea.

Up to this point, you have been left with the impression that all games have a decisive result either by enforced checkmate or by resignation. It is true that the majority of games of chess wind up in a decisive manner. But another kind of result is possible—the draw. A drawn game is one in which there is no decision—no victory, no defeat.

Now there are various ways in which a drawn result may be arrived. The most frequent one is by agreement of both players. The position may lack interest, the hour may be late, a cautious player may be too timid to continue, a reckless player may have overreached himself. Whatever the cause, a draw can always be declared when both players agree to it.

Then there are two provisions in the official laws of chess which make a draw possible.

One of these provisions is the "50-move" rule which states that if, within the past 50 moves, no capture has been made and no Pawn moved, either side may claim a draw. The object of this rule is to penalize players who are incapable of realizing an advantage and to protect players from opponents who refuse to agree to a draw when there is no real basis for winning.

The other rule is that when a position is repeated three times, a draw may be claimed by the player who is about to make the move which will bring about the three-fold repetition.

In actual play among average players, the 50-move rule and the repetition rule play a very small role. More important are the three drawing methods known as perpetual check, stalemate, and insufficient mating material.

Perpetual check is a self-explanatory term, applicable to positions in which a player makes it obvious that he can check his opponent's king indefinitely. Perpetual check is a particularly useful device in

Chorus Presents Its Winter Concert

The Wilmington College Chorus, under the direction of Loyd Hudson, presented a special concert at the annual Christmas luncheon of the Thursday Morning Music Club on December 10 at noon in Keever Hall of St. Pauls Lutheran Church. They presented a group of traditional Christmas songs and carols.

On December 7, the Chorus made an appearance at the Cape Fear Hotel Ballroom where they also presented appropriate Christmas numbers.

On Thursday, December 17, they will present a Christmas concert at Wilmington College at 10:30. This will be their first appearance before their fellow students. They will sing several of the numbers which they have sung in engagements at Wilmington clubs and organizations.

Last year, for the first time, the students at Wilmington College were asked to choose from among their number six women to represent them and to be honored by them in the Fledgling, the Wilmington College Yearbook. These chosen six were to be called the Fledgling Beauties and were to represent the most beautiful, most honored of our number.

This year, once again, Wilmington College has elected its six Fledgling Beauties. They are as follows: sophomores, Kay Sholar, Barbara Jones, and Judy Horne; freshmen, Carol Hewett, Judy Avery, and Sue Trask.

Miss Sholar, Miss Jones, and Miss Horne all attended Wilmington College last year and were very active in student activities. Recently, each of them was elected a Sophomore Superlative. Miss Sholar was chosen Best All Around; Miss Jones, Friendliest; Miss Horne, Best Looking. Each of them is in the May Court. Miss Sholar is May Queen. The three are also active in Student Council affairs.

Miss Hewett, Miss Avery, and Miss Trask are also very active at Wilmington College. The May Court claims two of them — Miss Hewett and Miss Avery. Each of them belongs to several College clubs and organizations.

BOARD ACCEPTS CONSTRUCTION PLANS

Annual Homecoming A College Success

The annual Homecoming Day celebration was held at Wilmington College on Friday, January 22.

The Homecoming Parade was held on that afternoon which featured convertibles carrying the most beautiful women enrolled in the College. They were representatives of the clubs and organizations of the College and were all contestants in the Homecoming Queen Contest.

The Engineers' Club and the Circle K Club were in charge of the parade which took place on Front Street and was followed by a pep rally which was held on the front steps of City Hall.

The Homecoming dance was held in the Wilmington College auditorium immediately following the game. All students and former students of Wilmington College were invited to attend. Here, the Homecoming Queen for 1960 was announced. Marie Fales accepted the honor of representing Wilmington College as its queen.

Last year, Miss Fales attended William and Mary College in Norfolk, Virginia. There, she was selected Miss Norfolk of 1959 and represented that city in the Miss Virginia contest.

Miss Fales was a 1958 graduate of New Hanover High School in this city. While in her senior year, she was very active and was chosen May Queen, Best Looking, and R. O. T. C. Battalion Staff Sponsor.

During her junior year, Miss Fales won the Martha Halligan award—the highest honor that can be paid to a junior class member.

Ground Breaking To Be Soon For Proposed College Buildings

The Wilmington College Board of Trustees have accepted the building plans and specifications of the proposed new college buildings which were submitted by architectural firms Leslie N. Boney, and Ballard, McKim and Sawyer.

The construction of the first three of the proposed buildings, which will be located on Highway 132, will begin soon after the bids for the construction of the buildings have been accepted. It is hoped that students will be able to move into the buildings about 400 days after construction begins.

The buildings, planned as semi-fireproof constructions, will be of red brick with stone and white wood trim.

The new proposed campus consists of 640 acres of piney property. The campus buildings will include a library and administration building, a student assembly building, and a main academic building.

The academic building will be the largest of the three buildings and will include most of the classrooms. This building will include math and social studies classrooms and commercial laboratories.

Private Offices

The latest scientific equipment will be installed in the laboratory areas for physics, biology and chemistry. The science rooms will have adjacent instructors' offices, project rooms, storage and dark rooms.

Two lecture rooms seating approximately 120 students each, will be located in strategic areas for use of all departments of the College.

Private offices for instructors and department heads are provided that students may receive consultation and instruction.

The building will have 18 teaching stations.

The library will contain the main reading room, a stack room, and a librarian's office. It will house about 15,000 volumes with expansion room for an additional 30,000 volumes when this room is needed.

Language Laboratory

With the library, the first floor will house the College administration area with clerical, registration-financial work areas, and faculty offices.

A language laboratory with private booths and modern equipment also will be installed.

The second floor of the library will contain faculty offices, the English department and lecture and seminar rooms. This building will contain 10 classrooms.

A future building is being considered by the board for the administration when the need arises. This building will allow the library to expand.

The student assembly building, located across the campus from the library, will contain a large assembly area with facilities for seminars, lectures and visual aids instruction.

The snack bar for lunches and student dining will be equipped with food facilities for a limited amount of food preparation. In one wing of the building is located the student supply store and student offices and work rooms.

Red Brick

The music classrooms, music library, and mechanics rooms, will be located on the second floor of this building.

The board considered air conditioning for these buildings, but made no decision on this matter. It has been recommended to the board by George B. Rottman, a counseling engineer of Greensboro, that a new type of heating and cooling system with individual controls located in each room be used.

Alternate Bids

Rottman explained the method would consist of only one major plant in each building and would be less expensive to operate than any other method.

Fluorescent lighting will be used in all instructional and office spaces. Ceilings in these areas will be of a acoustical tile or plaster.

Alternate bids will later be taken on science room equipment, venetian blinds, glazed tile for certain walls of the student building, and furnishings for the music department. The bids also will include the buildings' grading and storm damage systems. They will not include road facilities.

Board Issues Money

Wilmington College has been allocated $400,000 by the North Carolina State Board of Higher Education.

The money represents a portion of the 34 million dollars in bond issues approved by the voters in the election of last October.

The board set aside $700,000 for the two community colleges at Charlotte, Charlotte College and Carver College. It directed that not more than $600,000 should go to either institution.

The board allocated one and one-half million dollars to the state's four community colleges for construction work.

Asheville - Biltmore College was allocated $400,000.

Wilcol Very Active In March of Dimes

By KATIE WILSON

January was National Foundation Month all across the United States and, throughout North Carolina. It was also National Foundation Month here in Wilmington and at Wilmington College.

Students and teachers alike took very active parts in the March of Dimes Campaign for 1960. W. K. Dorsey, instructor in retailing, was the 1960 chairman of the New Hanover County March of Dimes. Mrs. Helena Cheek, assistant professor of modern languages, was also on the March of Dimes Committee.

Members of the Student Council, the Engineers' Club, and the Circle K Club helped the committee deliver and place canisters in places of local business. Other members of the student body did their parts by filling the canister in the Pub with change and by buying March of Dimes balloons.

Students at Wilmington College also patronized the gas stations in the city which gave a small percent of the price of each gallon of gasoline to the Foundation.

The March of Dimes Committee also sponsored a basketball game and a March of Dimes Dance in the Wilmington College Auditorium. The Jetty Jumpers furnished the music for the occasion.

Kingston Trio recordings were given to the first 100 couples to appear at the dance.

The enthusiasm, both of the students and the faculty, was very outstanding during this month-long campaign. Everyone concerned seemed to keep in mind the purpose of all the events and work—that others might have a chance to lead a healthy life.

The National Foundation includes in its list of diseases which it helps to fight against polio, heart disease, and birth defects.

EDITORIAL

The Seahawk Needs - You

The Seahawk wishes to invite you, the members of the Wilmington College Student Body, to take an active part in the printing and editing of your newspaper.

There are many ways in which you can become an active contributor to this, the Wilmington College Seahawk. First, you can become an active member of the Seahawk staff. Any student interested in either writing, copyreading, typing, or page make-up may join the staff. Sports writers and photographers are also needed.

Also, students may serve their newspaper by suggesting news or feature topics to the editor. These may be made on slips of paper and placed in the Seahawk box in the lobby.

Any student who wishes to write an occasional news story or feature article is invited to do so. These articles may have as their subjects any event taking place at Wilmington College or pertaining to Wilmington College and any facet of college life.

Feature articles are signed articles which may deal with any controversial subject the author may care to explore. Feature articles may also be interviews, articles pertaining to members of the student body, or articles on college events.

The Editorial Page is your page. Use it! The Seahawk invites you to submit letters expressing your views on topics of interest to the Wilmington College students and faculty. All letters must be signed except in special cases when the Seahawk staff sees importance in the subject matter and finds printing without the name of the author worthwhile.

If the subject with which you are concerned is, you feel, too important for only a letter to be written, the editor of the Seahawk invites you to use the Editorial Column in which to present your article—in the form of a guest editorial.

Do you write poetry? The Seahawk is very interested in the poetry written by members of the Wilmington College student body. Its interest is two-fold.

First, the staff is interested in presenting all creative work of the students. It feels that the creativity of an individual is one of the most important of his assets and that his ability to create should be stimulated as much as possible. Also, with an outlet for expression, the student has a chance to improve his work by the opinions of others who read and evaluate.

Also, this staff feels that it is important to bring the average college student in contact with the poetry of his classmates—in indeed with poetry in general. This staff believes that through reading verse the student can cultivate new interests and broaden his point of view.

Are you a photographer? The Seahawk has immediate need for people with cameras. Photographs are an important part of

The Awakening: A Prayer

I come to You alone,
Head lifted, smiling,
At Twilight,
Soft is my footfall;
My hand, outstretched;
Eyes searching for You.
The Twilight is soft,
But its shadows are dark;
I cannot see Your face.
I cannot see Your face,
Yet I know You are here.
In the dusk of the evening.
The wind from the south
Is gentle to touch;
The sun is no more.
I come to You with Head raised
Out of the Darkness.
The dusk casts its light—
Blue, violet,
Crimson,
Over the ground.
I have come here
From a place obscure
Unthought of, unremembered—
Except that it was dark
There,
And we who dwell There

Knew no sight
In the blackness.
I have flown here
On the wings of time;
I do not remember
The journey.
Through the years,
I have walked alone, unaided,
Head high, chin to the wind.
I have stood alone—
Uncared for and uncaring—
Proud, with shoulders back.
I have lived the tearless,
Emotionless, independent, life—
Feet on the ground.
I have stood up straight,
Back never bending, thought
Never wavering, heart never Believing.
This day,
I come to You alone,
Head lifted, smiling,
At Twilight.
How good to feel Your Hand under my elbow and
Not to need to stand so much Alone,
Head high, chin to the wind.

COLLEGE CAMPUS, U.S.A.

Through The Halls

A rainy day came close to causing a humorous "tragedy" at Northeastern University's (Boston, Mass.) Homecoming parade. Northeastern News reports that one of the parade's floats got stuck in the mud and delayed festivities. Name of the Float? "Around the World in 80 Days."

Students Meet the Press

From the Duke Chronicle, Duke University: Reporters say they were impressed by the "mannerliness and charm" of the 12 Russian students who visited Duke, but they had doubts about the "intellectual sincerity" of replies to questions. Some replies were: 1) The Soviet Union does not expect the U.S. to overtake or surpass it in the scientific conquest of space. 2) Socialist and communist societies are the most progressive, and therefore, most successful. Final victory will belong to Communism. 3) Women are best kept in the home. 4) American rock and roll is not musical art.

Ill-Fated Fisher

In a recent news story, the University of Southern California's Daily Trojan inadvertently demoted one Dr. S. C. Rittenberg, professor of bacteriology, to associate professor.

Dr. Rittenberg's reaction was a letter to editor Larry Fisher promising to name a nasty bacterium after him. Fisher apologized editorially to the professor, but this time his name came out Rottenberg.

The scientist's next message: "Now I have no alternative. The next nasty bug I find gets your name! Please drop me a line with the correct spelling of your name given. I'd hate to make an error."

Why Men Climb

Dentistry student Cleveland McCarty of Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., goes from the depths of human mouths to mountain peaks. He recently finished climbing, alone, 54 of Colorado's peaks, all over 14,000 feet high, in 53 days.

Why do men climb? McCarty gave WU's Student Life this answer. "It's a childhood hangover." The trees and jungles of his youth were molehills that turned into mountains.

Youth Will Serve

From Egyptian, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale: "Some of the AFROTC cadet officers look so young that they should wear their bars on one shoulder and a Captain Video Button on the other."

Guiding Rules

Phil Elkins, a junior at Abilene, Texas, Christian College, has made an all-time sales record as a Bible salesman. In 12 weeks he sold more than $13,400 worth of Bibles, reports ACCU Optimist.

His formula for success? Hard work, careful planning, a desire to go to school and a Christian's faith in God, says Elkins. Also he's up at 6 a.m. every day and eats fruits, nuts and orange juice between house calls.

Katherine Counts Is Amazed, Rewarded
As North Carolina 4-H Health Queen

By KAY COUNTS

"Chicago bound at last," I said to myself on Saturday morning of November 28 at the Raleigh-Durham Airport. Then my mind wandered back to the many heartbreaks and hard work I had to go through for this one week of pleasure, as a representative of the 4-H Clubs of North Carolina. I began to wonder if it would be worth the seven years I had worked for the trip.

My answer soon came when I stepped from the four engine Eastern Airline Plane at Chicago's Midway Airport exactly two and one-half hours after I had stepped on, shaking from head to toe. It was the first plane trip for most of North Carolina's thirty-four delegates to the National 4-H Convention, but most of us enjoyed every mile of it.

When the North Carolina Delegation arrived at the world's largest hotel, the Conrad Hilton of Chicago, our faces dropped. The outside appearance was not what we expected, but we forgot that when we stepped inland. Glamorous shops and cocktail lounges were to the left and right of us extending a block long. Then up the speedy elevators, that left my stomach on the main floor and body on the fourteenth, where I found my hotel suite as I called it. It was well equipped with T.V., soft beds, running ice water, and a bathroom of my own. The T.V. was not used much since I was allowed only four hours of sleep a night.

The first big assembly of thirteen-hundred 4-H delegates from the 50 States and some foreign countries was held in the Grand Ballroom for the Sunday morning service. I had a hard time listening to the message that morning, because my eyes and thoughts kept wandering over the ballroom's huge chandeliers, paintings, balconies and richly decorated furnishings. I have never seen such elegance in one room and I felt the whole hotel was a fairy land from my first moment there on.

I shall never forget the first time I saw our North Carolina flag flying from the balcony of the Grand Ballroom, lighted only by a powerful spotlight. Nor shall I forget sing our national anthem. Tears ran down my face, because there I realized we were united under a symbol of a thing so much greater than any of us.

Every day was filled with huge banquets, outstanding entertainment, and tours, but we never tired. At every banquet we had five course meals, which called for six pieces of silver. The food was always called an outlandish name on the menu but when it was served proved to be something like good old southern fried chicken.

We were never troubled with snacking or money problems. The huge meals called for no snacking, and each of us was given twenty extra dollars for spending by our sponsors besides the money we had brought of our own.

Everyday was filled with splendid entertainment sponsored by big companies such as General Motors, The Ford Motor Company, Montgomery Ward, Sears, Roebuck & Co. and numerous other famous companies.

Some of our entertainers included: Pat Boone, The Kingston Trio, Roger Williams, Herb Shriner and many other top entertainers.

I spent my first night in the city walking what is called Chicago's Loop with a friend of mine (girls were not permitted to go out on the streets unescorted). We told the cab driver to take us to the Loop, but what we didn't know was that it covered blocks or even miles. Half-frozen and lost we walked several miles, it seemed, trying to find one theater. We soon learned, though, how to get there quicker by calling a cab. When I got back to my room that night, I promised myself I'd never go on such a spree again in such a city.

On Wednesday the whole delegation spent the entire afternoon touring the International Livestock Convention grounds. That night we had the parade of States, where the 4-Hers of each State sang their State song as they paraded onto the arena. This was a spectacular night since all of the National

SEAHAWKS TROUNCE EMI

The Seahawks battle for control of the ball as they push to defeat Edwards Military Institute in a conference tussle.

SEAHAWKS TROUNCE EMI; EDGE DUKE IN CLOSE ONE

HAWKS TROUNCE EMI, 103-84

For the fourth time this season, the Seahawks racked up a score reaching over the century mark in a conference tussle with Edwards Military Institute.

Ed Miastkowski paced the Wilmington club with 23 points, Hershel Witten scored 18, Chuck Fearn had 16, and Ronnie White had 14. Big guns for EMI were Bill Schellinger and Harley Canton, each with 23 points.

The Seahawks took command for keeps with about eight minutes left to play in the first half, and ended the half with a 52-40 score.

At the offset of the second half, the Brooksmen increased their lead to 56-40 and then forged ahead by 21 points.

HAWKS WIN CLOSE ONE OVER DUKE FROSH, 76-75

A goal by Kenny McIntyre with only 25 seconds left in the game gave the Wilmington College Seahawks a 76-75 victory over the Duke Freshmen team here January 12.

Leading scorer for the Seahawks was Ed Miastkowski with 23 points followed by Billy Galantai with 16 and Hershel Witten with 11 points. High men for Duke were Art Heyman with 35 and Scott Williamson who had 12 points.

This win avenged an earlier 101-59 loss to the Duke Frosh earlier in the season.

SEAHAWKS RALLY OVER OAK RIDGE BY 105-94

Wilmington College's Seahawks rallied from a seven point deficit to defeat Oak Ridge Military Academy, 105-94, and gain their seventh conference win of the season.

The Oak Ridge club outplayed the Wilmington club during the first half, but the picture changed and in the second half the Seahawks began their rally with Ed Miastkowski leading in the scoring field with 33 points followed by Billy Galantai with 17, Kenny McIntyre with 14, and Hershel Witten had 10. Top men for Oak Ridge were Bobby Edgerton with a fantastic 42 points, with Hamline and Jones hitting 14 and 10 respectively.

WJC DEFEATS PJC, 75-70

With Ed Miastkowski and Larry Edens leading the way, the Wilmington College Seahawks rolled over the Presbyterian Junior College Scotties 75-70 in another come-from-behind win. The Hawks had been on the road for three days and playing every night, but the weary Seahawks showed that they were made of tough stuff. Miastkowski scored 26 points and Larry Edens hit for 14 points to lead the Brooksmen. Ronald Wray and Jack Hussey were the leaders for PJC each with 14 points, with Byers getting 13 points.

This was the last game of 1959, with the first game of 1960 being with Oak Ridge Military Academy.

UNC FROSH DEFEAT SEAHAWKS, 81-79

On the 17th of December, the Wilmington College Seahawks lost their third, non-conference, game of the season, bowing to the UNC Frosh 81-79.

It was a nip-and-tuck affair from the opening jump, with the lead changing hands continually.

Wilmington's Ronnie White led the scoring for the Hawks, with 19 points followed closely by Billy Galantai who had 17 markers. Others hitting in the double figures for the Seahawks were Ed Miastkowski 12, Jackie Bullard 12, and Kenny McIntyre with 10 points. Big man every newspaper and this one is not an exception. Sports shots, action shots, pictures taken at college events are always welcome.

Are you a member of a club at Wilmington College? A line dropped in the Seahawk box concerning club meetings and activities, chorus events, dance band engagements, cheerleader and student council progress, or other college projects would be very helpful to this staff.

Writing and photographing are not the whole story of running a newspaper. Copyreading, proofreading, and page make-up are all important parts of the job of getting the paper to you. Typists are also very useful for last-minute recopying or revision.

Won't you do your part? Support the Seahawk with your work and your ideas. Reading a newspaper isn't all there is to it. Before a paper can be read it must be planned, written, arranged, and headlined. Won't you help?

HOW TO

Not long ago, we said that there are positions in which King and Pawn can force a win against a lone King. On the face of it, this statement seems absurd: the Pawn is much weaker than the Bishop or Knight, neither of which can force checkmate. How then can a Pawn force checkmate?

To answer this question, we must describe a power of the Pawn which has not been mentioned up to this point:

When a Pawn reaches the eighth rank, it can be promoted to a Queen or Rook or Bishop or Knight. The Pawn is simply removed from the board, to be replaced by the piece of your choice. As a rule, the Queen is the piece selected, for she is the strongest piece on the board.

The fact that you may still have your original Queen does not prevent you from acquiring a second one, or even a third or fourth. The fact that you still have both Rooks does not prevent you from acquiring a third rook. It is theoretically possible (but practically very rare) to acquire a third Bishop or a third Knight. Now you see how King and Pawn often win against the King. If your Pawn can be promoted to Queen, you have the ending King and Queen vs. King, in which it is possible to force a checkmate.

There is such a disparity between the powers of the Pawn and Queen that the sudden change, once a Pawn has been Queened, must strike the beginner with dramatic force. The contrast is very effective, he finds.

Capturing in passing is a special power a Pawn gains, when it reaches fifth rank, which allows it to capture an opposing Pawn if the opposing Pawn should pass it by on its first move. The use of this power is not common in actual play, but it is sometimes threatened, and an understanding of its mechanism is essential.

Capturing in passing is an option which must be exercised as soon as the hostile Pawn advances from the second to the fourth rank. If the capture is not made in reply, it can not be made at all.

The capturing Pawn must be on its fifth rank. A Pawn located on any other rank cannot capture in passing.

for the opposition was Dieter Krause, who hit a phenomenal 42 points followed by Larry Brown with 17 and Martin Conlon with 10 points.

SEAHAWKS BEATEN BY S. C.

A last chance Wilmington College rally fell short Saturday night at Brogden Hall as the Seahawk cagers bowed to a red-hot University of South Carolina quintet, 106-95, in the last regular season home game for the local collegians.

Some 1,300 spectators saw Coach Gordon Stauffer's Palmetto sharpshooters hand the Hawks their sixth defeat of the season against 15 wins. It was the second victory over WC for the USC Frosh, which triumphed, 101-80 in a previous fray at Columbia, S. C.

The loss was the first sustained at home by the Seahawks quint since Campbell defeated the locals in a conference game at Brogden Hall in 1958.

Paced by Scotty Ward, a 6-1 set shot artist who dropped in 34 points in a brilliant exhibition of accuracy the Biddies led all the way in posting their 11th win in 14 starts, but the battling Seahawks stirred up a scare near the game's end.

With 4:14 left to go, Ward sank the 100th point for the visiting quint which was 19 points better than Coach Bill Brooks' combine when they reached the century mark. Ward and two other USC starters went to the SC bench.

Larry Edens scored for the Seahawks to reduce the margin to 83-100. A moment later, a bucket by Ed Miastkowski left the locals behind, 101-87. The crowd perked up and Stauffer sent his regulars back to the front.

The Seahawks travel to Buies Creek Tuesday night to compete with the Camels.

HAWKS WIN HOMECOMING OVER LOUISBURG, 96-83

Coach Bill Brooks' Seahawks added a little spice to the Homecoming celebration by reducing the Hurricanes of Louisburg College to little more than a gentle breeze by the score of 96-83.

A crowd of some 1,500 spectators saw the Hawks gain their eleventh straight conference tilt without a defeat and saw them push onward toward their second straight regular season tilt. Five more loop games remain on the Wilmington club's league calendar as this column goes to press.

With Ed Miastkowski paving the way with 24 points, the Hawks piled up a brilliant 54.4 per cent accuracy mark from the floor. In the first half, the Wilmington club piled up a 58 per cent accuracy figure by hitting 20 out of 34 shots from the floor.

Leading point man for the Hurricanes was Jimmy Dew who had 23 points. Following Dew were Lane with 15, Parker with 11, and Roger Penland with 11 points.

Ed Miastkowski led the locals with 24 points followed closely by big Billy Galantai who had 18 markers. Kenny McIntyre had 12 points to contribute toward the downfall of Louisburg.

After the Homecoming game the team departed on an extensive road trip with four games scheduled for the entire week following.

SEAHAWKS DOWN CAMELS

The sharpshooters of Coach Bill Brooks' Seahawks scored their most important win of the conference campaign as they clipped the Camels of Campbell College 90-82 before an estimated crowd of 1,200 spectators on January 20.

The Seahawks, led by Ed Miastkowski, have arrived at an undisputed Number One position in the North Carolina-Virginia Junior College Basketball Conference.

George Lehman of Campbell ended the game with 34 points, high man for the contest. Wilmington College's Ed Miastkowski was second with 28 points, Jackie Reinhardt of Campbell and Kenny McIntyre of Wilmington had 15 and 14 points respectively.

The Brooksmen finished with more than 50% accuracy from the floor by hitting 39 out of 74 field goal attempts.

With the win over the big threat of the Campbell Camels, the Brooksmen went on to score another victory in conference play over Louisburg College.

SEAHAWKS DOWN PJC, 96-95

On January 16 the Wilmington College basketball team traveled to Maxton to engage the Presbyterian Junior College club in a conference tilt. The Seahawks, 10-3 overall and 8-0 in the Carolina-Virginia Junior College Conference had to fight desperately in the last five minutes to preserve the victory. PJC had cut a 13-point Wilmington lead to two points with 10 seconds remaining in the game.

During the first half, the lead changed hands several times but the Hawks came back strong and built up a 13-point lead midway in the second half.

At this point PJC, still smarting from their defeat by the Seahawks, staged a scoring binge that brought them within two points of the Seahawks. With the ball in the Seahawks' hands, Larry Edens was fouled and dropped the first of two free throw attempts making the score 96 to 93 with less than two seconds left to play. PJC quickly brought the ball downcourt, and Jack Hussey tossed in the final two points just as the game ended.

Ed Miastkowski led the local club with 29 points followed by Witten and McIntyre with 16 and 15 points respectively. PJC was paced by Jack Hussey 33, Marshall Green with 24, and Jimmy Wright with 21.

KAY COUNTS IS AMAZED

Achievement, Citizenship and Leadership winners were announced.

It seemed every time we sat down to a meal there would be gifts given by the sponsor of that particular banquet. At the General Motors Banquet I received a '60 Model of a Chevrolet Convertible. At other banquets we got model trucks, a scrap book, cook book, the book of thoughts and essays Words to Live By and canned goods. Still today I am receiving gifts. It can only prove that the businessmen of America have faith in us, and I only hope that we can live up to their expectations.

Especially, I would like to thank my sponsor, The Medical Society of North Carolina, for making it possible for me to have such a trip. And my family, adult leaders and agents, for if it had not been for them I would never have been North Carolina's State 4-H Health Queen and received this trip.

HAWKS SINK FIRST BALL

The Hawks' Ed Miaszkowski sinks the first two points as they went on to defeat E. M. I., 103-84.

PEN PUSHERS

The Pen Pushers' Club, Wilmington College's creative writing club, will publish their annual magazine, With Pen in Hand, in the spring.

The magazine will contain the best short stories, essays, poems, and one-act plays written by members of the club or submitted to the club by other students.

Mary Margaret Ginn is editor of With Pen in Hand. She is being assisted this year by a small committee who will screen the material received and prepare copy for printing.

All students who wish to have their work considered for publication in this magazine should hand the material to Miss Ginn, Miss Shannon Morton, faculty advisor for the club or to any member.

PROBATION

Wilmington College and Frederick Academy have been placed on probation by the Carolina Virginia Junior College Conference for taking part in a free-for-all during a game between the two schools, at Portsmouth, Va., January 25.

Frank Murray, commissioner of the conference, announced the results of his investigations to the press late Saturday.

The Wilmington team drew a 15-day probation period, and Frederick, including both the student body and the basketball team, was placed on probation for the rest of the school year.

This is the first disciplinary action Murray has had to take in the conference since he took over as commissioner two years ago.

HOW TO . . .

It is interesting to know how this rule came into effect. Five or six centuries ago, Pawns could move only one square on the first move, thus leading to a game full of blockaded files. Players in that era thought the game would be improved if they were given the option of moving Pawns two squares at the start so that the major pieces could be developed faster and files and diagonals opened.

Since it was obviously unfair to allow a Pawn by use of this privilege, to escape from an opposing Pawn that had reached the fifth rank, the "in-passing power" was agreed upon.

The study of the elementary checkmates is useful to the beginner, partly because they illustrate the basic technique for bringing a game to a successful conclusion. The mate with the Queen is by far the easiest, as we would expect from the enormous power of this piece. The only occasional difficulty is that stalemate possibilities must be avoided.

The mate with the Rook is slower — just what we would expect, as the Rook is weaker than the Queen. The overall process is the same: the gradual approach of the stronger side's King, followed by a strategic move with the Rook to cut off the lone King's command of a large segment of the board.

As the Rook cannot attack diagonal-wise the weaker side's King has considerable leeway of escape. But the skillful maneuvering of King and Rook forces the mate by an effective attrition process which deserves careful study.

Chess is a game in which mastery of attack and defense is vital. It is important, therefore, to have a good understanding of exchanges, threats, and tactical methods.

Superiority in material is one of the basic devices for winning a game. It is essential that you obtain good value for every bit of material you part with.

Lloyd Hudson Chosen
Kiwanian of The Year

Lloyd H. Hudson, assistant professor of music and English at Wilmington College, has been awarded the 1958 Kiwanian of the Year Award which was presented last month.

The Wilmington Kiwanis Club gives this award annually to the Kiwanian who, in the opinion of a secret committee, contributes most to the club and the community during any one year. Hudson has been very active in this club for four years, especially in the planning and presenting of the annual Kiwanis Minstrels.

He was born in Mount Airy, Iowa, where he also attended high school. He received his B.M.E. in 1948 from Drake University in Des Moines, Iowa. In 1952, he was awarded his M.M. at Indiana University, Bloomington, Indiana.

While attending the University, Hudson met Fred Waring, famed musical personality, and in 1951 sang under his direction.

Before he came to Wilmington in 1955, Hudson taught for six years in Sheldon, Iowa, and was later appointed Director of Vocal Music at Texas Lutheran College, Seguin, Texas.

Here in Wilmington, Hudson was Director of Vocal Music at New Hanover High School for four years where he received much popularity for his outstanding vocal groups and for his presentations of the operettas The Merry Widow, Carousel, Meet Me In St. Louis, and Song of Norway.

During the time he taught at New Hanover High School, Hudson also served as a part-time music instructor here at Wilmington College. This year, he began teaching in this college full time. The newly-organized Wilmington College Chorus has made rapid progress under his guidance and makes many appearances throughout the city.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Fledgling staff has announced that the 1960 yearbook has gone to press and, except for a few minor details, is ready for printing.

Kay Schlar, editor of the Fledgling, says that the book, which are "better than ever" will be distributed in May.

HODGES TO BREAK GROUND TOMORROW

Board Awards Contracts For Buildings

Act Paves Way For Beginning Construction

The Board of Trustees of Wilmington College awarded contracts for the construction of three buildings on the new campus to low bidders at a meeting held at the College, March 24. The action paved the way for construction of the buildings to begin following ground-breaking ceremonies at the new site tomorrow morning.

Total cost of the new buildings, expected to be completed within 400 days after construction begins, is set at $1,149,588.

Leslie N. Boney and Ballard and McKim, associated architects, recommended the low bidders which were accepted by the Board. Named as general contractor is the Anderson Construction Company of Dunn, which submitted a low bid of $753,700. Other low bids accepted were Electric Sales and Service of Angier, $95,990 for electrical work; Onslow Plumbing Company of Jacksonville, $43,880 for plumbing; and Sneed Air-Conditioning and Refrigeration of Wilmington, $213,958 for air-conditioning and heating.

Bids for construction of the new College buildings were first opened in the College auditorium on March 17. It became apparent at that time that total cost would exceed money available, and the bids were taken under consideration for a week to allow time for adjustments.

The total of the low bids, $1,107,528, together with the architects' fee balance of $30,000 and an estimated cost of $33,000 for water and sewerage facilities, brought the total cost

Governor Luther H. Hodges

Three Buildings Will Fill Needs

Completion of Wilmington College's three new buildings on the new campus on Highway 132 will provide classroom and study facilities for 1,000 students, according to Dr. William M. Randall, president of the Port City community college.

The three buildings, consisting of approximately 70,000 square feet of floor space, are expected to be completed within 400 days after construction begins following soon after ground-breaking ceremonies on the new site tomorrow morning.

The three units to be constructed include a library and administration building, an academic building, and a student assembly building. Architectural style will be the traditional modified Georgian type, with the exterior in brick laid in Flemish bond and roofs of slate.

Inside, the buildings will be equipped with a heating and cooling system known as the water source heat-pump type. This will be a central system, but rooms will be furnished with individual controls to warm them in cold weather and completely air-condition them during the summer.

Most floors in the new structures will be of asphalt tile, with terrazzo floors in lobbies, corridors, and the student assembly area. Interior walls of most rooms will be painted masonry block, and venetian blinds will be hung at all windows. In the corridors, walls will be covered with ceramic tile. Administrative offices will be paneled in walnut plywood. Ceilings throughout will consist of acoustical fiber tile.

Coolers And Clocks

In the corridors, water coolers and clocks will be installed in strategic locations. A bell system to be used for fire alarms will also be installed.

In the clerical office of the administration building a dial system telephone control panel will be installed. The College will be equipped to accommodate five outside lines and 18 major stations on the campus. Extensions can lead from these stations. All calls will come in through the central office and be directed to the appropriate station on the campus. Faculty offices will all be equipped so

Historic Occasion Will Mark Start Of New Era At Wilcol

Governor Luther H. Hodges will be principal speaker tomorrow morning at the historic ground-breaking ceremony for three new Wilmington College buildings on the new campus located on Highway 132 near Winter Park.

The ceremony marks the beginning of a new era in the history of one of the State's three community colleges. Founded in 1947, 13-year-old Wilmington College has been housed in cramped quarters in the old Isaac Bear building on Market Street in Wilmington since 1948. The first year of operation it used classrooms of New Hanover High School in the afternoon and evening hours.

The program tomorrow will begin at 10:30 a.m. and is expected to be concluded by noon, according to Dr. John T. Hoggard, chairman of the Board of Trustees of the College.

The ceremony will be opened by selections by the New Hanover High School ROTC Band under the direction of William Adcock. Then the invocation will be made by Dr. B. Frank Hall, pastor of the Pearsall Memorial Presbyterian Church.

Chorus To Sing

The Wilmington College Chorus, under the direction of Loyd Hudson, assistant professor of music, will sing "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God."

Following the Chorus, Dr. Hoggard will deliver a message of welcome to the assemblage. Dr. William M. Randall, president of the College, will present a historical sketch of the College.

Governor Hodges is to be introduced by Dr. Charles E. Hartford, member of the Board of Trustees. After the Governor speaks, he will turn the first shovel of earth at the site with a shovel painted gold. Governor Hodges will be assisted in the ground-breaking by two of the College students — Gene Ballard, president of the student body, and Kay Sholar, May Queen.

The ceremony will be concluded with the singing of the Alma Mater by the College Chorus, and the Benediction by Dr. Hall.

Following the ceremony at the College site, a luncheon will be held at the Cape Fear Club at Second and Chestnut Streets. The Governor, the Board of Trustees, representatives of the College, and guests will attend the luncheon.

Ride Buses To Site

Classes at the College will meet as usual tomorrow morning. At 10 a.m. the entire student body will be loaded on buses for transportation to the ground-breaking ceremony. College officials have requested students to ride the buses to avoid parking congestion along the highway at the new site. Buses will return students to the College immediately after the ceremony.

LARGEST CLASS

According to Dean J. Marshall Crews, the graduation class of 1960 will be the largest in the history of the College. More than 100 are expected to be graduated in the May 23 commencement ceremony. The largest number to be graduated previous to this year was 81 in 1958.

Board Awards Contracts for Construction

Shown here are members of the Board of Trustees of Wilmington College, College officials, and architects as the Board met last week to award contracts for the construction of three new College buildings. Seated (l. to r.) are Harry E. Payne; Charlotte Herring, secretary; Dr. William M. Randall, president; Frederick B. Graham, chairman of the Building and Grounds Committee; Dr. John T. Hoggard, chairman; Bradford Tillery; J. Fred Rippey; and Frederick Coville. Standing are B. D. Schwartz; Dr. Charles E. Hartford; J. COLLEGE TRUSTEE DIES

Wilbur R. Doshier, 78, retired Wilmington postmaster and member of the Board of Trustees of Wilmington College, died at his home last Saturday night following a long illness.

Doshier had varied experience in the business and political world. Prior to being named postmaster, he operated his own business and served both county and state in elective offices. He served as postmaster from 1934 to 1952.

He became a member of the first Board of Trustees of the College in 1958, but had been inactive recently because of ill health and had planned to resign from this position.

Wilmington College is a fully accredited co-educational junior college operating under the Community College Act of the State of North Carolina. The College provides, at moderate expense, courses paralleling those in the first two years of most colleges and universities, two-year technical courses, and special adult education courses. In addition, a full program of varsity basketball and baseball and other student activities is provided to give each student a balanced college life. Presently located at 12th and Market Streets, the College is experiencing a million-dollar expansion program that will move it to three new buildings at its new site on Highway 132 sometime in 1961.

Confidence Justified

The confidence that many friends of Wilmington College have had for the 13-year-old institution must be greatly strengthened today by the historic ground-breaking ceremony for three new buildings on the new 640-acre campus.

We remember the first year when Wilmington College was a night school using the facilities of the New Hanover High School after high school students were through with it for the day. Then we remember using a couple of rooms on the first floor of the Isaac Bear Building. We stood on the front steps of this little building and watched the great plant across the street, and we wondered if coming to college here wasn't a step down, in some respects, for those students who were graduated from high school and came across the street.

We remember our basketball games in those days, when only a handful of loyal fans even knew we had a team. We remember the struggles to find "our place in the sun." We remember when there was the possibility that another college—a four-year college—would be established in Wilmington; this would have meant the death knell for us. We remember holding our breath while the votes of citizens were being cast to tax themselves for Wilmington College, and later when they voted to place the College under the Community College Act.

Now the turning of a spadeful of dirt seems to justify the faith we have had that the citizens of this area have wanted and will support Wilmington College. Now we see a new era of growth and development opening for Wilmington College. Though there are some people in this community who are still not aware of what Wilmington College has been contributing to this community and the State, Wilmington College has established itself as a highly respected institution of learning and is increasing its influence and prestige every year.

Chorus Deserves Praise

The Wilmington College Mixed Chorus has been one of the most active and beneficial organizations at the College this year and is certainly deserving of all the praise that can be heaped upon it. Directed by Loyd Hudson, assistant professor of music, the 40-member group has performed admirably throughout Southeastern North Carolina this year, reaping the plaudits of listeners wherever it went and bringing credit to its members, its director, and to the College.

Unofficially called "The Sea-Tones," the Chorus was organized during the fall of 1958 with only eight full-time members. During the 1958-59 school year this small group filled several performance dates, primarily with civic clubs in Wilmington desiring entertainment for their noon luncheon meetings.

In the spring of 1959, when it was determined that a full-time music department was to be organized for the College, an effort was made by Hudson to secure key singers for the following year. With Hudson now employed by the College full time, and with these key singers in the fold, the Chorus was activated once again at the beginning of the 1959 fall quarter with an enrollment of twenty-seven.

For its first presentation of the 1959-60 school year, the College singing group was asked by the Wilmington Star-News Newspapers to provide the introductory concert for their Ann Landers program in Brogren Hall. Following that, the Chorus prepared for their Christmas presentations for the various civic clubs in Wilmington.

The registration for the winter quarter of the 1959-60 school year provided the forty voices which the Chorus now maintains. The group performed during the early part of the winter quarter for such groups as the Kiwanis, IOOF, Civitans, and the Thursday Morning Music Club. In addition, certain members of the College group prepared and presented the musical portions of the WECT-TV Christmas show. An assembly program appropriate to the Christmas season was also presented at the College.

Immediately after the Christmas holidays, the members of the Chorus began preparation for the first of several out-of-town trips. In February the choristers travelled to the following towns or schools: Topsail, Shallotte, Bolivia, Jacksonville, Camp Lejeune, and Pineland College-Edwards Military Institute. These trips brought Wilmington College to the attention of hundreds of high school students in this area and thus were of inestimable value to Wilmington College and the students who heard our Chorus perform. Without exception, the schools or military facilities have, through their principals or Red Cross organizations, written in praise of the musicianship and conduct of the Wilmington College Chorus.

It seems that the spring quarter will find the group as busy as ever, taking part in the ground-breaking ceremony at the new College site, appearing before civic clubs from whom several invitations have already been received, and, of course, singing for the annual Commencement activities in May.

To the Editor:

The ground-breaking ceremony at the new college site of Wilmington College is the realization of many dedicated men and women of the Wilmington area who over the years have been inspired by the leadership of Dr. John T. Hoggard. In many respects it is the most significant event of the past half century for Southeastern North Carolina.

All of us look forward to the time when it will become a fully accredited four-year college and will serve the needs of thousands of young people in our general area.

My best wishes and congratulations go to all those who have had any part in this splendid achievement.

Most sincerely,
Alton Lennon

To the Editor:

One of the major problems facing America today is providing the educational facilities to take care of our fast-growing population. For some time it has been recognized that an area college is the answer.

When Wilmington College was selected to be one of the three state-supported colleges in North Carolina, it was a great step forward, and I am confident that Wilmington and this section of our state are proud of our college; and the ground-breaking which will start the construction of our new campus and building which will cost in excess of one million dollars will go down in history as one of the real accomplishments of the century for Wilmington and this section of our state.

HOLD DINNER

Members of the Faculty Wives Club held a dinner in the College auditorium this past Saturday evening for members of the faculty and their wives and husbands. Mrs. Ruth Doss is president of the group.

To the Editor:

I want to congratulate Wilmington College on the ground-breaking which marks the beginning of the College at its new location. In this forward movement I am glad to have had a part as the Representative from New Hanover County in the State Legislature. In the Legislature we were able to obtain State appropriations for community colleges, which with local matching funds made possible the capital outlay for the anticipated new buildings.

Yours very truly,
Addison Hewlett, Jr.
Speaker, N. C. House of Representatives

To the Editor:

The ground-breaking ceremony at the new site of Wilmington College on April 1, 1960, will be a momentous occasion for the College and for our entire community.

The New Hanover County Board of Education has a deep and abiding interest in the welfare of the College for many, many reasons. It is our feeling that the institution is an important and integral factor in the educational and cultural life of our community and possesses a potential that cannot be measured or even imagined today.

We join the students and the faculty and the many friends of Wilmington College on this day in rejoicing in this tangible step forward. Our congratulations and best wishes for the future.

Sincerely,
Emsley A. Laney
Chairman
New Hanover County Board of Education

HUDSON IN ORATORIO

Loyd Hudson, assistant professor of music, appeared in the leading role of Elijah in the oratorio Elijah presented recently at the St. Andrews-Covenant Presbyterian Church. Hudson is a baritone. Elijah is a sacred opera without staging, costumes, or scenery. It was presented by the Wilmington Choral Society.

To the Editor:

My hearty congratulations to Wilmington, to Wilmington College, and to students, faculty, and trustees of the College upon the occasion of ground-breaking ceremonies.

A new chapter in the history of Wilmington College now begins. After years of service to Wilmington and to counties in the vicinity, and of high quality instruction and learning carried on in quarters which were crowded, a new physical plant is now made possible by generous and farsighted action of the people of Wilmington and of the State of North Carolina.

May Wilmington College continue her unspoiled efforts in a commitment to learning, and move onward to greater achievements and greater service.

With every good wish.
Sincerely,
Harris Purks
Director, N. C. Board of Higher Education

To the Editor:

Speaking on behalf of the student body, I am very pleased to know that in the not-to-distant future some tangible construction will be getting underway toward the building of our new College. With this comes the thought of knowing that it won't be too long before the new Wilmington College will open its doors to accept its students.

When that momentous day arrives, there will be no end to the achievements accomplished. With a student body such as Wilmington College has and with its loyal and numerous backers, its potentiality is unlimited.

Gene Ballard
President of the Student Body

COMPLETE MASTERS

Two members of the College faculty have recently completed work for new degrees at East Carolina College. They are George Rountree, who completed requirements for a master's degree in psychology; and R. E. Pinier, who completed requirements for a master's degree in administration.

Students Pick One-Act Farce For Festival

Wilmington College drama students have selected Percival Wilde's farcical one-act play, Refund, to be presented at the Drama Festival to be held in Chapel Hill, April 27-30.

Colleges, high schools, and little theater groups from all sections of North Carolina participate in the annual event.

All plays are rated individually. They are judged on a percentage basis, with acting the most important factor in making a final judgment. Ratings on acting include voice, characterization, contrast, timing, and motivation.

This year's production, with an all-male cast, will include Dennis Carney as the principal, Doug Hunt as the mathematics master, Forrest L. Piver as the geography master, Victor Harrell as the history master, and Cecil Poole as the physics master. Pete Camak will play the leading role of Blenkinsop, and the servant will be played by Tommy Wallace.

Assisting on the technical staff for Refund will be stage managers Kathryn Davis and Linda Schulken. The make-up crew will consist of Judy Horne, Barbara Jones, and Julia Rochelle. The play is being directed by Mrs. Doug Swink.

Briefly, the plot of Refund concerns an energetic character called Blenkinsop, who, having graduated from an expensive prep school, returns 18 years later to the institution to reclaim his tuition fees on the basis that he has not really been educated.

In an amusing twist of events, the schoolmasters devise a method of oral examination designed to allow even the most uneducated fool, in this case one Blenkinsop, to pass with flying colors in order to resist the refund of his tuition fees.

In the Art Division of the Festival, Kathryn Davis will enter costume designs from The Silver Whistle. Cecil Poole will also be participating in the art group with a miniature set of The Silver Whistle.

Plans are being made to present Refund for a student body assembly program, April 25, in the College auditorium.

Last year's entry in the Drama Festival, Give Us Time To Sing, received Honorable Mention, and Robbie Nurnberger's set of the play placed first in the Art Division.

Entertains At Catherine Kennedy Home

W. K. Dorsey, director of public relations at Wilmington College, is shown here with three ladies of the Catherine Kennedy Home. Dorsey presented a 30-minute program at the home recently. The program, called "Memories," consists of color slides typical of movie theaters of the silent screen era, and a tape recording consisting of narration and music that accompany the scenes shown in the slides. The ladies with Dorsey are Mrs. J. B. Barrino, Mrs. Kate Ellis, and Mrs. Hopie Barnes.

Adult Education Classes Moving Into Final Phases

Adult education classes offered at Wilmington College this year are moving into their final phases, according to W. K. Dorsey, director of the adult education program. Six of the courses offered have already been completed, three will be concluded in April, and a course in human relations will begin in April.

Mrs. Helena Cheek, assistant professor of modern languages, has been offering a 10-week course in conversational Spanish slanted to meet the needs of travelers to Spanish-speaking countries. Twenty-three adults are enrolled for this course which will be concluded April 26.

A course called "Record-keeping for Small Business" will be concluded in mid-April. This course was designed to enable the small business operator to keep a complete set of books, to prepare income statements, and to introduce him to various taxes paid by the small business operator. A 30-hour course, 34 are enrolled in this course taught by Anne Barksdale, professor of business, and George Rountree, instructor in business.

A second music appreciation course taught this year by Loyd Hudson, assistant professor of music, will be concluded the last of April. Concerned with composers from Bach to Beethoven, the course enrolled 15 persons.

American Novelists
Just recently concluded was a course in "American Novelists of the Twentieth Century" offered by the English Department. The course consisted of six lectures by members of the English staff, who discussed Henry James, Sinclair Lewis, Willa Cather, William Faulkner, Ernest Hemingway, and Robert Warren. About 18 were registered for the course.

Also completed recently was a course called "A Brief Survey of the Art of the World in Words and Picture." The course, presented by Claude Howell, assistant professor of art, was divided into three series of six classes each: I. The Ancient World, II. The Middle Ages and the Renaissance, and III. The Modern World. Classes consisted of one hour lecture and 45 minutes of slides. About 65 persons attended these meetings.

Other adult education courses completed this year were: "This Universe in a Space Age," "Music Appreciation: From Bach to Broadway," "Public Speaking," and "Letter Writing for Business Men."

"The Universe in a Space Age" was a series of non-technical lectures on the universe and mankind. The series included such topics as: "The Universe from an Astronomical Viewpoint," "The Physical Composition of the Universe," "The World of the Atom," "Atomic Survival," "The Constructive Uses of the Atom," "The Problems of Space Travel," and "God and the Atom." These lectures were presented by members of the Mathematics and Engineering Departments of the College. About 25 were registered for these talks.

Music Appreciation
About 34 were enrolled in the first music appreciation series taught by Loyd Hudson. This course consisted of discussions of the lives and contributions of the major composers, and recordings played on the College's new stereo machine.

The public speaking course consisted of a series of two-hour lectures, with frequent use of the tape recorder for study and analysis. Major topics of instruction included: I. Choosing a subject, gathering material, and organizing a speech; II. Developmental materials: visual aids, examples, statistics, quotations; III. Voice and diction: enunciation and pronunciation, voice control; IV. Types of speeches: V. Parliamentary procedure; VI. Summary and criticism, and extemporaneous speeches. The course was taught by Shannon Morton, professor of English, and was attended by about 18 persons.

The letter writing course was concerned with discussions of how the business man can write better letters, and how he can dictate them more effectively to his secretary. Opportunity for practice was provided, also. Fifteen enrolled for this course which was taught by Miss Barksdale.

The course in human relations to begin this month will be taught by W. K. Dorsey.

PHOTOS ON SALE

Individual pictures taken for the College yearbook are still on sale. Cost of the whole package, which contains two 3 1/2 x 5 enlargements and eight billfold pictures, is $3.00 plus tax. You may, however, buy only part of a package. See R. E. Piner, faculty advisor of the Fledgling, in the faculty conference room.

Group Studies Needs For New Buildings

If you think furnishing a new home is a problem, consider the difficulties involved in equipping three new college buildings with adequate furnishings. This is the problem faced by a committee headed by Calvin Doss, assistant professor of engineering.

Appointed by Dr. William M. Randall, president of the College, the committee is currently surveying equipment the College already has and is studying floor plans of the new College buildings. Results of this study will be presented to Dr. Randall sometime this spring in the form of recommendations concerning the type and amount of new equipment that will be needed when the College moves into its new home in 1961.

Right now, Doss says, the committee is only able to guess at how the new buildings will be furnished, but members are studying catalogues and are interviewing manufacturers' representatives and are able to give a general idea of what might be expected.

According to Doss, the committee will probably recommend the following:

- (1) The utilization of equipment presently being used in the biology and chemistry laboratories, with enough additional new equipment to furnish two more laboratories. Laboratory facilities will then consist of one physics lab, one biology lab, and two chemistry labs.
- (2) The furnishing of 28 faculty offices, with a desk, two chairs, filing cabinet, and desk lamp in each office.
- (3) The furnishing of an art room with studio-type easels and art tables.
- (4) The furnishing of administrative offices with present equipment and whatever new equipment will be necessary.
- (5) The furnishing of the library with metal stacks, exhibit case, display rack, and other standard equipment, utilizing present furnishings as much as possible.

(6) The furnishing of 18 classrooms—two to be equipped with drawing tables for the Engineering Department, two to be equipped with large conference-type tables, and 14 to be equipped with furnishings usually found in standard classrooms. Present equipment will be utilized as far as it will go, with new equipment being added wherever needed.

(7) The furnishing of a music room with a piano, music stand and chairs.

(8) The furnishing of three lecture rooms, the type of seating as yet undecided.

(9) The furnishing of all the buildings with a variety of miscellaneous maintenance equipment.

Members of the Furnishings Committee, in addition to Doss, are Louis Adcock, associate professor of physical sciences; Anne Barksdale, professor of business; and George Zebrowski, professor of biological sciences.

Three Buildings

that extension telephones can be installed if necessary.

One feature of the student assembly building will be a wired music system consisting of a central console unit. This unit will consist of an amplifier, three microphone inputs, an automatic record changer, radio tuner, paging microphone, and ceiling loudspeakers.

All classrooms will be adequately furnished with the latest kind of chalkboards trimmed in aluminum, and corkboard bulletin boards.

Academic Building

The academic building, to be named in honor of Dr. John T. Hoggard, will be the largest of the structures. A two-story building, it will have approximately 30,000 square feet of floor space. On the first floor will be located the science classrooms, consisting of general chemistry, analytical chemistry, biological, and physics laboratories, and storage and office space. Two other classrooms and one large lecture room will also be located on the first floor.

On the second floor, the business, mathematics, and engineering departments will be located. Also on this floor will be an art laboratory and studio, and faculty offices and lounges.

The second largest of the three buildings will be the 26,000-square-foot library and administration building. Administrative offices, a language classroom and a laboratory, and library workrooms and reading room will be located on the first floor. Also on this floor will be two seminar rooms. On the second floor will be eight English and social studies classrooms, one large lecture room, and eight faculty offices.

Student Assembly

The student assembly building will have 12,000 square feet. A large assembly area will be found on the first floor. Also on the first floor will be a kitchen and snack area, the book store, two seminar rooms, and offices. An extra-large music classroom and an office will occupy the second floor.

The three buildings are being constructed on a 640-acre campus with a 3,320-foot road frontage. The land was purchased from the International Paper Company, Raeford Trask, and the Bishop heirs.

36 Honor Students Make Dean's List For Winter Term

Names of 36 students appear on the Dean's List for the winter quarter. In order to be eligible for the honor, a student must have at least a B average, with no grade below a C.

The following students from Wilmington are named on the list:

Mary E. Adams, Glenn A. Bailey, Patricia H. Black, Louis Coleman, Jr., Ronald E. Conner, Jean P. Creech, Thomas L. Cromartie, Jerry S. Ely, Richard B. Gerrish, Lillie Hardee, Mary A. Ittner, Basil H. Marshall, Robert J. McEachern, Robert S. McGee, Susan R. Merritt, Bob G. Olsen, James W. Peoples, Aaron Register, Carl B. Schutt, Jr., Ruth B. Scott, Robert C. Steljes, Walter T. Stephenson, Joseph A. Taglieri, Thomas T. Teague, Jayne M. Underwood, Lawrence W. Williams, and Bessie Zezeff.

Others on the Dean's List are: Robert B. Everette and William E. Moore, Acme; Philip King, Southport; Grace L. Merritt, Winnabow; Edna C. Register, Rose Hill; Joe L. Riddick, Jr., Scotland Neck; Robert J. Salmon, Jr., Wallace; Otto Schwartz, Castle Hayne; and Jimmy W. Spivey, Tabor City.

Enrollment Of 378 Is Slightly Less Than One Year Ago

Enrollment at Wilmington College for the spring quarter is 378, according to figures released by Dorothy Marshall, registrar. This is a slight decline from last year's enrollment for the same period.

Men students still far outnumber the women, about three and a half to one.

Enrollment by classes is as follows: 161 freshman men, 41 freshman women, 125 sophomore men, 37 sophomore women, and 14 special students. Among these figures are included 28 ex-servicemen, 9 of them freshmen, and 19 sophomores.

Twenty-three North Carolina counties are represented in the student body, but more Wil-

History Of College Is Dream Come True

The story of the growth and development of Wilmington College in this community is the story of the hope of many people coming alive. First an idea, perhaps just the seed of an idea, was conceived in the minds of a number of citizens who felt that Wilmington needed a center of education beyond the high school level. Then the idea germinated and the College was born.

That was 13 years ago next September. Now, with the ground-breaking ceremony at the new campus and the construction of three new buildings in sight, Wilmington College seems to be moving out of its childhood and adolescent stages into a new maturity.

According to a clipping which appeared in the Wilmington Morning Star shortly before the 1949 commencement exercises, the idea of a college in Wilmington was first conceived back in the late 1930's by the New Hanover County Board of Education. But money was not available then, and along came World War II, which postponed for its duration any serious consideration for establishment of a college here.

UNC College Center

Following the war, in 1946, the University of North Carolina, through its extension service, established a college center in Wilmington. Operating for one year, classes under this extension program were held in the New Hanover High School building from 4 o'clock in the afternoon until 9 p.m. This college center gave impetus to the desires of educational leaders, and the Board of Education, with Dr. John T. Hoggard as chairman, revived the idea of a real community college in Wilmington.

The seed now sown in the fertile minds, the idea gained momentum among community leaders. On March 25, 1947, the idea was presented for public approval at the polls of New Hanover County. The result was favorable. A tax levy of five cents per one-hundred dollar tax value was voted for the financing of a college in New Hanover County. Wilmington College was born.

Wilmington College convened for the first time on September 4, 1947. T. T. Hamilton, Jr., then principal of New Hanover High School, was also chief executive officer of the College, and Dale K. Spencer was dean.

They were assisted by Dorothy Lewis as registrar, and a complement of accredited instructors. Members of the Wilmington faculty that first year included Anne Barksdale, W. K. Dorsey, Adrian Hurst, Mildred Johnson, and Shannon Morton.

The College offered a varied curriculum of academic and vocational courses. Courses were

Complete Plans For Fledgling

Three FLEDGLING staff members check last material for the Wilmington College yearbook, which will be distributed in May. They are (l. to r.) Larry Smith, Kay Sholar, editor, and Besty Lockamy. The 1950 FLEDGLING will be the largest and most colorful published at the College and will be distributed at no further cost to students who have paid the activity fee for three quarters. For the first time, the book will be a full 9 x 12 inches in size. It will have a padded, embossed cover of original design, and about 100 pages of pictures, 28 of which will have a second color.

offered in airplane maintenance, bricklaying, refrigeration, plumbing, and other subjects of this type. Two-year courses were also offered in merchandising, business administration and accounting, general business and secretarial science, and home economics.

Student Government

A student government was set up to work in conjunction with the faculty and administration, and representatives were elected to form Wilmington College's first student council operating under a student constitution. Hugh Henry Fox was the first president of the student body and was also the first to be graduated from Wilmington College. Fox received his associate of arts degree from T. T. Hamilton on April 2, 1949. The presentation was made in connection with a high school senior day program sponsored by the College.

That first year in the life of Wilmington College was a busy one. A variety of activities kept students interested. The first Seahawk basketball team was coached by Mickey Katkevick and won six and lost two against conference competition. Some of the members of this team were James Croom, Carl Mason, Leroy Towles, R. L. Church, and A. L. King. John D. Charlton replaced Katkevick and coached the Seahawk basketball teams until he was succeeded by the present coach, Bill Brooks, in 1950.

Under Brooks the Seahawks have improved steadily, drawing larger and larger crowds and gaining in prestige within the conference. In 1950 the Seahawks won the regular season and tournament championships in basketball.

Baseball came to Wilmington College in 1950. In 1950 the Seahawks went all the way to the national junior college tournament at Grand Junction, Colorado, and finished fourth in that event.

Wilmington College students took a great interest in dramatics the first year. The Wilcox Stagers were organized under the sponsorship of Mildred Johnson, and the group presented two major productions and four one-act plays.

Annual Banquet

Another major event that first year was a banquet held at the Community Center. An indication of the importance of this event in those days is attested to by the fact that more than 160 attended the banquet the second year at the Famous Club — and the enrollment at the College then was far less than it is now. These banquets became an annual occasion until they were discontinued after 1957.

Not only have enrollment figures increased, but the make-up of the student body has undergone at least one noticeable change. Veterans made up a large percentage of the student body in the early days. For instance, out of the 133 students enrolled as full-time academic students the first semester of 1948-49, 64 were veterans. In this year's Freshman Class there are only nine ex-servicemen.

High School Students Show Projects In District Fair

The Southeastern North Carolina District Science Fair was held at Wilmington College last Saturday. The Fair, sponsored by the North Carolina Academy of Science, was under the direction of Louis Adcock, associate professor of physical sciences.

He was assisted by Frank Allen, assistant professor of biological sciences and assistant director of the Fair, and John B. Davis, Jr., associate professor of engineering and Fair official in charge of judging and awards.

Exhibited at the Fair were the projects of junior and senior high school students from 13 counties in the district. More than 95 students participated. Also on display were several non-participating exhibits by various departments of the College.

All participants in the annual event were presented certificates. Six winners in the Junior Division were presented with medals. Ten winners in the Senior Division became eligible to participate in the State Science Fair in Raleigh, April 15-16.

Senior Division winners are also eligible to compete for a two-year scholarship to Wilmington College. Winners in both divisions were equally distributed between physical and biological sciences.

A number of awards were made available to winners through several local sponsors. The awards were slide rules, reference books, drawing instruments, dissecting sets, and an electronic multi-tester.

The sponsors were the Wilmington Engineers Club, North Carolina Society of Engineers, Kiwanis Club, American Chemical Society, Southern Photo and Supply Co., Wilmington Dental Association, Springer Oil Co., Montgomery - Ward, City-Drive Laundry, Hedquist Radio Co. and Chemical Rubber Co.

Judges for the Fair were Dr. Stuart Benson, O. M. White, George Zebrowski, professor of biological sciences, and three judges from the American Chemical Society.

Members of the Engineers Club of the College assisted with the setting up and display of exhibits.

Figures Revealed 447 Graduated Since Founding

A list of figures released recently by the Dean's office reveals that a total of 447 students have been graduated from Wilmington College since its founding in 1947.

Showing a steady increase over a ten-year period, figures show graduating classes ranging in size from the smallest of 15 in 1949 to the largest of 81 in 1958. The number of graduates each year is as follows: 1949 (15); 1950 (25); 1951 (17); 1952 (17); 1953 (20); 1954 (28); 1955 (40); 1956 (57); 1957 (69); 1958 (81); and 1959 (78).

The following figures show how these graduates were distributed among the curricula offered by the College: liberal art, 58; general education, 147; business administration, 16; engineering, 104; science, 5; elementary education, 4; secondary education, 7; pre-medical, 4; pre-law, 17; merchandising, 33; secretarial science, 14; commerce, 1; business administration and accounting, 16; engineering technology, 18; and aircraft and engines, 1.

NEW MEMBERS

Three new members were received into the Circle K Club at a recent dinner meeting held at Carmen's Restaurant. The three new members are Elbert Hodges, David Milliner, and Gene Evans. Plans were made at this meeting for future activities of the group.

Members will sell programs at the Air Show during the Azalea Festival, and they will also assist with the setting up of chairs and will serve as marshals at the College ground-breaking ceremony tomorrow. The group plans a banquet later in the spring, according to Henry Chason, president.

RINGS AND PINS

The Engineers Club is sponsoring the sale of class rings and pins. Interested students should see Sheila Robinson, secretary of the group. Rings are priced from $30 to $40 and pins are $1.25.

Dr. William Randall Is Versatile Leader

By Katherine Davis

Wilmington College is indeed fortunate to have as its executive administrator Dr. William M. Randall. Dr. Randall is indeed a versatile person and has had much experience with college administration.

He was with the University of Chicago as professor of library science and later became dean of students there. He has also been associated with the University of Georgia as director of libraries and student affairs.

After a term of service in the Air Force in the Near East, he was recalled into the service to set up the U. S. Merchant Marine Academy on an academic basis.

It is interesting to know what it was about a small, practically unknown college, such as Wilmington College, was at the time, that would attract a person with such experience in much larger and better known colleges as Dr. Randall has had.

Following an auto accident, Dr. Randall and his family were to be in Wilmington for sometime. He was approached by Dr. Hoggard, chairman of the Board of Education, and was offered the position of dean of the College. Since he would be here in our Port City for sometime, Dr. Randall accepted the position on an experimental basis. He wanted the experience of operating a college on his own. Wilmington and Wilmington College have certainly benefited from Dr. Randall's efforts.

When Dr. Randall came to us in 1951 we had only partial use of our present building and a full-time faculty of nine. Our student body numbered one hundred, and we had only state accreditation. In December, 1951, we received our accreditation from the Southern Association. Since that time our student body, faculty and facilities have been steadily increasing. Now, some ten years later, we have completely outgrown our present facilities and are looking forward to moving into our new college.

"I personally hope we will be able to move into the new buildings by the beginning of the spring quarter of next year," says Dr. Randall. With the able and proven direction of Dr. Randall, our College will indeed be a greater asset to our city and community.

To The Editor:

This past Saturday the Southeastern District Science Fair was held in the College auditorium. The Fair could not have been a success without the interest and effort put forth by the Wilmington College Engineers Club.

These men, despite the heavy course load that the engineering program requires, generously donated their time to setting up tables, running demonstrations, and "policing" the Fair.

As District Fair Director, I wish to express my thanks and those of the Fair Committee to the Engineers Club for a job so well done.

Dempsey, engineer aide and assistant chief of Survey and Computations Section; Jack N. Matthews, engineer aide.

TO CURB CHEATING

STUDENT IN FAVOR OF HONOR SYSTEM

By Bob Olsen

With the concern expressed in national magazines and newspapers over cheating in colleges, it might be well to consider what could be done about our situation here. Last year the Student Council sponsored "Honor Week." A cheater was hung in effigy in the halls. Posters plugging the value of academic honesty were in evidence. I understood that, along with the honor program, a code was going to be drafted. The present Student Council apparently hasn't continued the program. There is no indication that cheating has ceased at Wilmington College.

Is an honor code necessary for Wilmington College? A number of students believe that cheating is an individual problem and that colleges have no business even attempting to control it. But if the objectives of the College as announced in the catalogue mean anything, it is about time that some sort of an honor system be drafted either by the Student Council or the administration.

In spite of the cynical attitudes manifested in this day and time, there are still occupations which require a high degree of integrity. Cheating on some jobs could be of very serious, long-range consequences to the individual. If the College is really a preparation for citizenship, certainly a stand should be taken and a uniform policy established.

At present, the instructors are the sole controlling agents as far as cheating is concerned. Many are quite concerned with the problem, and it is unfair that they should have to worry about this. Methods of control vary a great deal, from taking interval in the classroom on test day, to covering the answers as you write. Some instructors design quizzes that are cheatproof, but only certain subjects lend themselves to this approach. At any rate, the amount and type of control vary a great deal from one instructor to the next. Rumors are that certain instructors are avoided by some because they so rigidly repress cheating.

Current newspapers from colleges and universities in this state indicate a deep concern over the honor problem. Several schools are considering revising their honor code. Carolina and State have long had a comprehensive honor system, but one collegiate wag wrote that the faculty had the honor while the students had the system.

The denominational schools expressed confidence in their honor code, claiming it to be an integral part of their campus life.

While these schools are considering the effectiveness of their honor codes, and even considering revision, it might be well that we here at Wilmington College consider getting one. Certainly a code could not but reduce what cheating is going on.

A code to be effective must be agreed upon by the student when he applies for enrollment. An effective code should provide for judiciary machinery to try cases. Also, students should be honor bound to report cheating observed.

Many advantages to the serious student come with an honor system. Certainly it is more conducive to concentration if the instructor leaves the room during the course of an examination. The student feels he can relax when not "under the gun." "Take home" quizzes are possible under an honor code with the student certifying he has neither given nor received any help. For those who have attended college where an honor system is in effect, the general wholesome attitude prevailing is well worth the system.

History Of College Is Dream Come True

The story of the growth and development of Wilmington College in this community is the story of the hope of many people coming alive. First an idea, perhaps just the seed of an idea, was conceived in the minds of a number of citizens who felt that Wilmington needed a center of education beyond the high school level. Then the idea germinated and the College was born.

That was 13 years ago next September. Now, with the ground-breaking ceremony at the new campus and the construction of three new buildings in sight, Wilmington College seems to be moving out of its childhood and adolescent stages into a new maturity.

According to a clipping which appeared in the Wilmington Morning Star shortly before the 1949 commencement exercises, the idea of a college in Wilmington was first conceived back in the late 1930's by the New Hanover County Board of Education. But money was not available then, and along came World War II, which postponed for its duration any serious consideration for establishment of a college here.

UNC College Center

Following the war, in 1946, the University of North Carolina, through its extension service, established a college center in Wilmington. Operating for one year, classes under this extension program were held in the New Hanover High School building from 4 o'clock in the afternoon until 9 p.m. This college center gave impetus to the desires of educational leaders, and the Board of Education, with Dr. John T. Hoggard as chairman, revived the idea of a real community college in Wilmington.

The seed now sown in the fertile minds, the idea gained momentum among community leaders. On March 25, 1947, the idea was presented for public approval at the polls of New Hanover County. The result was favorable. A tax levy of five cents per one-hundred dollar tax value was voted for the financing of a college in New Hanover County. Wilmington College was born.

Wilmington College convened for the first time on September 4, 1947. T. T. Hamilton, Jr., then principal of New Hanover High School, was also chief executive officer of the College, and Dale K. Spencer was dean.

They were assisted by Dorothy Lewis as registrar, and a complement of accredited instructors. Members of the Wilmington faculty that first year included Anne Barksdale, W. K. Dorsey, Adrian Hurst, Mildred Johnson, and Shannon Morton.

The College offered a varied curriculum of academic and vocational courses. Courses were

Complete Plans For Fledgling

Three FLEDGLING staff members check last material for the Wilmington College yearbook, which will be distributed in May. They are (l. to r.) Larry Smith; Kay Sholar, editor; and Besty Lockamy. The 1960 FLEDGLING will be the largest and most colorful published at the College and will be distributed at no further cost to students who have paid the activity fee for three quarters. For the first time, the book will be a full 9 x 12 inches in size. It will have a padded, embossed cover of original design, and about 100 pages of pictures, 28 of which will have a second color.

offered in airplane maintenance, bricklaying, refrigeration, plumbing, and other subjects of this type. Two-year courses were also offered in merchandising, business administration and accounting, general business and secretarial science, and home economics.

Student Government

A student government was set up to work in conjunction with the faculty and administration, and representatives were elected to form Wilmington College's first student council operating under a student constitution. Hugh Henry Fox was the first president of the student body and was also the first to be graduated from Wilmington College. Fox received his associate of arts degree from T. T. Hamilton on April 2, 1949. The presentation was made in connection with a high school senior day program sponsored by the College.

That first year in the life of Wilmington College was a busy one. A variety of activities kept students interested. The first Seahawk basketball team was coached by Mickey Katkevick and won six and lost two against conference competition. Some of the members of this team were James Croom, Carl Mason, Leroy Towles, R. L. Church, and A. L. King. John D. Charlton replaced Katkevick and coached the Seahawk basketball teams until he was succeeded by the present coach, Bill Brooks, in 1950.

Under Brooks the Seahawks have improved steadily, drawing larger and larger crowds and gaining in prestige within the conference. In 1959 the Seahawks won the regular season and tournament championships in basketball.

Baseball came to Wilmington College in 1958. In 1959 the Seahawks went all the way to the national junior college tournament at Grand Junction, Colorado, and finished fourth in that event.

Wilmington College students took a great interest in dramatics the first year. The Wilcox Stagers were organized under the sponsorship of Mildred Johnson, and the group presented two major productions and four one-act plays.

Annual Banquet

Another major event that first year was a banquet held at the Community Center. An indication of the importance of this event in those days is attested to by the fact that more than 160 attended the banquet the second year at the Famous Club — and the enrollment at the College then was far less than it is now. These banquets became an annual occasion until they were discontinued after 1957.

Not only have enrollment figures increased, but the make-up of the student body has undergone at least one noticeable change. Veterans made up a large percentage of the student body in the early days. For instance, out of the 133 students enrolled as full-time academic students the first semester of 1948-49, 64 were veterans. In this year's Freshman Class there are only nine ex-servicemen.

High School Students Show Projects In District Fair

The Southeastern North Carolina District Science Fair was held at Wilmington College last Saturday. The Fair, sponsored by the North Carolina Academy of Science, was under the direction of Louis Adcock, associate professor of physical sciences.

He was assisted by Frank Allen, assistant professor of biological sciences and assistant director of the Fair, and John B. Davis, Jr., associate professor of engineering and Fair official in charge of judging and awards.

Exhibited at the Fair were the projects of junior and senior high school students from 13 counties in the district. More than 95 students participated. Also on display were several non-participating exhibits by various departments of the College.

All participants in the annual event were presented certificates. Six winners in the Junior Division were presented with medals. Ten winners in the Senior Division became eligible to participate in the State Science Fair in Raleigh, April 15-16.

Senior Division winners are also eligible to compete for a two-year scholarship to Wilmington College. Winners in both divisions were equally distributed between physical and biological sciences.

A number of awards were made available to winners through several local sponsors. The awards were slide rules, reference books, drawing instruments, dissecting sets, and an electronic multi-tester.

The sponsors were the Wilmington Engineers Club, North Carolina Society of Engineers, Kiwanis Club, American Chemical Society, Southern Photo and Supply Co., Wilmington Dental Association, Springer Oil Co., Montgomery - Ward, City-Trade Laundry, Hedquist Radio Co., and Chemical Rubber Co.

Judges for the Fair were Dr. Stuart Benson, O. M. White, George Zebrowski, professor of biological sciences, and three judges from the American Chemical Society.

Members of the Engineers Club of the College assisted with the setting up and display of exhibits.

A list of figures released recently by the Dean's office reveals that a total of 447 students have been graduated from Wilmington College since its founding in 1947.

Showing a steady increase over a ten-year period, figures show graduating classes ranging in size from the smallest of 15 in 1949 to the largest of 81 in 1958. The number of graduates each year is as follows: 1949 (15); 1950 (25); 1951 (17); 1952 (17); 1953 (20); 1954 (28); 1955 (40); 1956 (57); 1957 (69); 1958 (81); and 1959 (78).

The following figures show how these graduates were distributed among the curricula offered by the College: liberal art, 58; general education, 16; business administration, 16; engineering, 104; science, 5; elementary education, 4; secondary education, 7; pre-medical, 4; pre-law, 17; merchandising, 33; secretarial science, 14; commerce, 3; business administration and accounting, 16; engineering technology, 18; and aircraft and engines, 1.

NEW MEMBERS

Three new members were received into the Circle K Club at a recent dinner meeting held at Carmen's Restaurant. The three new members are Elbert Hodges, David Millinor, and Gene Evans. Plans were made at this meeting for future activities of the group.

Members will sell programs at the Air Show during the Azalea Festival, and they will also assist with the setting up of chairs and will serve as marshals at the College ground-breaking ceremony tomorrow. The group plans a banquet later in the spring, according to Henry Chason, president.

RINGS AND PINS

The Engineers Club is sponsoring the sale of class rings and pins. Interested students should see Sheila Robinson, secretary of the group. Rings are priced from $30 to $40 and pins are $1.25.

Dr. William Randall Is Versatile Leader

By Katherine Davis

Wilmington College is indeed fortunate to have as its executive administrator Dr. William M. Randall. Dr. Randall is indeed a versatile person and has had much experience with college administration.

He was with the University of Chicago as professor of library science and later became dean of students there. He has also been associated with the University of Georgia as director of libraries and student affairs.

After a term of service in the Air Force in the Near East, he was recalled into the service to set up the U. S. Merchant Marine Academy on an academic basis.

It is interesting to know what it was about a small, practically unknown college, such as Wilmington College was at the time, that would attract a person with such experience in much larger and better known colleges as Dr. Randall has had.

Following an auto accident, Dr. Randall and his family were to be in Wilmington for sometime. He was approached by Dr. Hoggard, chairman of the Board of Education, and was offered the position of dean of the College. Since he would be here in our Port City for sometime, Dr. Randall accepted the position on an experimental basis. He wanted the experience of operating a college on his own. Wilmington and Wilmington College have certainly benefitted from Dr. Randall's efforts.

When Dr. Randall came to us in 1951 we had only partial use of our present building and a full-time faculty of nine. Our student body numbered one hundred, and we had only state accreditation. In December, 1951, we received our accreditation from the Southern Association. Since that time our student body, faculty and facilities have been steadily increasing. Now, some ten years later, we have completely outgrown our present facilities and are looking forward to moving into our new college.

In fact, at the present he is a graduating senior in the School of Police Administration and Public Safety at Michigan State University in East Lansing, Mich.

This isn't all, though. He has served with Plant Protection in the General Motors Company, has been a police officer in Massachusetts and a deputy sheriff in Michigan, and during the summer has been chief of police of a small park resort in the Middle West.

Next fall, LaCouture will be a graduate assistant in the Department of Psychology at the University of Arizona, where he will also be working toward a master's degree in law enforcement administration.

HE REMEMBERS WHEN

Dr. Hoggard is a Long-Time Leader

by Gloria G. Scott

As the ground-breaking ceremony of the new Wilmington College is held, there is at least one person still closely associated with the College who can proudly say, "I can remember when you were just a gleam in your daddy's eye." This person is Dr. John T. Hoggard, president emeritus of Wilmington College.

This tall, erect man, who is old enough to have seen action in the Spanish-American War and in World War I, has a profound knowledge of the needs of young people and knows exactly how to bring about the fulfillment of these needs.

Dr. Hoggard was chairman of the New Hanover County Board of Education for thirty years. After World War II, since many veterans were not able to enroll in classes at the University of North Carolina, due to crowded conditions, a U. N. C. college center was established in Wilmington. Classes were conducted at the New Hanover High School from four till nine o'clock each evening.

T. T. Hamilton, then principal of the high school, was also made chief executive officer of the College.

Progress Not Easy

But all this progress was not made easily, by any means. Wilmington was far from other colleges, and Dr. Hoggard was an indefatigable champion of higher education in this area. He encountered much opposition from many people who refused to acknowledge the need for a college here. But Dr. Hoggard was not to be defeated.

For five years he fought for a 5-cent tax levy for the College. He arranged publicity for informing the public. He had his congressmen speak to teachers all over the city. Finally, as a result of this exhaustive campaign, the North Carolina General Assembly passed a bill to allow a public vote in New Hanover County for the levy. This election was carried by a large majority.

There were excellent teachers at the high school who taught the first classes in the College. When the thriving night school outgrew its quarters, it had to be moved to the present building on Market Street; then as daytime classes were initiated, ed, other teachers were found. Teachers who remained at the high school acted as substitutes.

Dr. Randall Becomes Dean

In 1951 Dr. William M. Randall came. He was passing through Wilmington on his way to the University of Georgia, when he and his wife were involved in an automobile accident. It was then that Dr. Hoggard asked Dr. Randall to become dean of the College. Dr. Randall, who is now president of the College, then proceeded to convince the public that the school must be accredited.

Dr. Hoggard believes that a smaller school is definitely better than a larger one. He expects Wilmington College to become big some day, but will not allow the efficiency of the junior college to be sacrificed for the sake of a four-year school. He believes that it is better to have a first-rate junior college than a second-rate four-year school.

When Wilmington College becomes a four-year school, the original organization of the junior college will remain. He insists that young people need prodding and counseling in the first two years of college, as this is the time when an age gap occurs before maturity. Young people, he explains, are frivolous and do not understand that in treating their studies lightly, they are really cheating themselves.

Wilmington College, he states, will not be ready for the responsibility of having dormitories for a long time.

Education Is Hope

The good doctor, realizing the importance of study, saw to it that a course in "How to Study" was taught to freshmen at Wilmington College. No official in name only, he knows that education is the hope of the world, and, by way of his vast understanding of youth today, he takes a personal interest in their activities in the College.

He is proud of the fact that leading educators in the state have declared our average student of Wilmington College to be the best in the state. Young people in general nowadays, he believes, are conscientious, many of them working hard to gain the education which means so much to them.

Dr. Hoggard is an Episcopalian, although most of his people are Baptists. He believes that man needs some hope, some purpose in life, and that a religious belief of some sort is essential. Therefore, teachers in a college must be dedicated persons who are willing to talk about their own beliefs in their classes. Teachers are among the privileged who are in a position to mold character and establish modes of thinking and reasoning in the minds of youth. He is convinced that his teachers meet all of these requirements.

Dr. Hoggard, a medical doctor in his own right, is now the chairman of the Board of Trustees for Wilmington College, and also remains interested in civic affairs. With a twinkle in his eye and an air of great pride, he loves to talk about his children, his two great-grandchildren, and the promise of a bright future for them as well as all other youth in this part of the state.

Crews Discusses Old And New Problems Of Growing College

By Bob Olsen

Dean J. Marshall Crews first came to Wilmington College in 1948 to teach mathematics. Like most of the early instructors of the College, he taught part time at New Hanover High School.

He was appointed registrar in 1952 and still continued teaching classes. In 1953 Crews became registrar and assistant dean. In 1958 he was appointed to his present post of dean. In spite of a heavy administrative load, he still teaches mathematics. At present he teaches a class in Math 113—analytic geometry and calculus.

The primary difficulty encountered in the early days after the establishment of the College, according to Crews, was the lack of community acceptance of the College. It wasn't until the Presbyterian College drive of 1957, in which cities throughout the State competed in a fund-raising drive to attract a new four-year consolidated Presbyterian College, that full community backing was obtained.

Wilmington developed a great deal of enthusiasm toward having the Presbyterian College, and when the college site was awarded to another community, the disappointment in not receiving it was shifted to a realization that Wilmington already had a community college. From that time to the present, support has been adequate.

Crews feels that movement of Wilmington College to the new site will increase enrollment next year 15 per cent, and that there will be a steady increase to an ultimate enrollment of 1200 as a two-year junior college.

At present a two-year terminal forestry course is planned as an addition to the curricula offered. Marine biology as an additional science subject will be offered to take advantage of the natural proximity to the ocean.

Crews lists housing in the Winter Park area as an immediate need connected with moving to the new site. He feels that even a greater number of students will be coming from beyond commuting range than at present.

Another problem that will have to be provided for by the local community is the lack of facilities for physical education. State support to community colleges does not extend to physical education facilities, and if the College is to provide courses as required by four-year colleges and universities, the gymnasium and athletic fields will of necessity have to come from community funds. Crews feels that this is the most pressing need for the future.

Crews originally came from McKenzie, Tenn. He entered the Army in 1942 and went to officer candidate school at Camp Davis, Holly Ridge, N. C. After serving as a commissioned officer through World War II, he went back to George Peabody College. He received his master's degree in 1948 and came directly to Wilmington.

He is married to the former Margaret McIntosh of McClellansville, S. C. They have four children, three girls and a boy, and have established their permanent home here.

HUGH H. FOX, GRAD OF '49, COLLEGE'S FIRST ALUMNUS

By Forrest Piver

Hugh H. Fox, who has the distinction of being the first graduate of Wilmington College, is now an internal revenue agent working in this city.

He first enrolled in the College Center, which was an extension of the University of North Carolina. At that time the University established college centers throughout the state to accommodate the overflowing freshman class. That first year there were only a few subjects from which to choose. These courses were designed to correspond with the School of Liberal Arts at U. N. C.

According to Fox, class instruction was excellent. However, the College Center retained the flavor of high school, which pleased him. The students received close supervision. They met in New Hanover High School from 4 o'clock in the afternoon until 9 o'clock at night. The majority of the instructors also taught in the high school during the day.

At the College Center there were few extra-curricular activities and very little college atmosphere. There was the Student Legislature, of which Fox was vice president, dramatics club and intra-mural basketball.

The student body at that time was composed primarily of veterans of World War II. Having weathered a war can do a great deal to the maturity of a man, and these students had no time to waste. They knew what they wanted and the importance of acquiring it with a minimum expenditure of time and money. The school was coed—eight or ten women students. When Wilmington College was formed in 1947, Fox became the first president of its student body.

The students had no trouble transferring their credits. Fox transferred his to East Carolina and said that he had no trouble in classes because he was a transfer student.

He thinks Wilmington College has always been an excellent school and that it has made remarkable progress. Fox also stated that the College is a definite asset to the community.

Veterans Returning To Play

Shown here are six veterans of last year's championship team who are returning to play for the Seahawks. They are, kneeling, Nat Bedford and Cameron Morgan, and standing, Buddy Tilden, Harold Robinson, Bobby Conner, and Roger Coon.

Seahawk Pitching Staff

Expected to strengthen the chances of the Seahawks in conference play this season are these members of the pitching staff. In front are Ronnie Durham and Wes Livengood. Standing behind them are Don Honeycutt, Tommy Cobb, Bobby Conner, and Larry Edens.

VARSITY REPORT

Accuracy Improves Against Louisville

On the second night of the tournament, the Seahawks won over Louisville, 91 to 76. Taking only 68 shots from the floor, the Green and Gold hit 57.4 per cent for the game and were leading at halftime by 45-36. Louisville, cooled off after a first-round win over Chowan, scored a low 37 per cent of its shots.

The Seahawks took an early lead and were never headed. Playing before about 2,000 fans the Wilmington College team had as much as a 26-point lead with three minutes left in the game. With a strong bench, reputed to be the strongest in the conference, Coach Brooks was able to substitute freely.

High scorer for the Seahawks was Ken McIntyre with 22 points. Miastkowski was right behind with 20 points. Chuck Fearn led in the rebound department, taking 10 off the "boards," while Miastkowski recovered nine.

Accurate Foul Shooting Wins Final

As the championship game between the Seahawks and Frederick drew to a close, it was evident that phenomenal shooting from the free throw line had cost Wilmington College the tournament championship by the score of 78 to 75. Though outscored by the Seahawks from the floor 64 points to 58 points the cadets were able to sink 30 out of 36 free throw attempts to give them the final three-point margin. The Port City boys hit only 11 out of 19 attempts from the free throw line.

The game was nip and tuck all the way, with neither team having more than a six-point advantage at any time during the game. At halftime, Wilmington College led by four points, 40 to 36. But in the second half, the Portsmouth team scored 20 out of 21 attempts from the free throw line. Accurate foul shooting plus strategic stalling tactics in the last two and a half minutes of the game were just a little too much for the regular season champs.

Frederick, meeting Wilmington College in the finals for the second year in a row, won 11 and lost five during regular season play. Frederick won the right to meet the Seahawks by defeating Oak Ridge, 81-77, and Presbyterian Junior College, 62-72, in first and second rounds of the tournament. About 3,600 fans saw the championship game in Eroden Hall.

History Of College Is Dream Come True

The College was on the semester system until 1952.

Student publications came to Wilmington College in time. The first issue of a student newspaper appeared on September 27, 1948. It was a small mimeographed paper edited by R. E. Piner. The Seahawk has been published sporadically since that time, with a little more consistency the past three years. Its quality has improved to the point that it received two first class awards from Associated Collegiate Press in 1958-59.

First Yearbook

The first student yearbook, the Fledgling, appeared in 1950 and has been published each year since, except for 1953 and 1956. Editor of the first Fledgling was Ruth Maultsby. The yearbook has also kept pace with the growth of the College, increasing in size, coverage, and quality. This year, for the first time, the cost of the Fledgling to the students is included in the activity fee paid at the time of registration.

During the spring of its first year of operation, Wilmington College became a full-fledged member of the American Association of Junior Colleges, an accredited member of the North Carolina College Conference, and a member of the Southern Association of Junior Colleges. The Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools accredited the College in 1952.

During the 1947-48 term, Wilmington College classes were held in the NHHS building, following the pattern set by the UNC College Center. The second year, however, the College moved to new quarters at the front of the first floor of the old Isaac Bear building. The building had at one time been the Isaac Bear Elementary School and was at this time being used by the high school. High school students used the back of the building and the second floor. As the College grew, it gradually occupied more and more of the building until it became sole occupant in 1956.

R. C. Beemon, Dean

The second year of operation of the College, R. C. Beemon became dean, and Janice Pickard, now Mrs. C. D. Gurganus, took over the duties of registrar.

On May 31, 1949, Dean Beemon presented 14 candidates for associate of arts degrees to T. T. Hamilton at the first commencement exercises. The members of this first class, all men, were: Donald E. Becker, Johnny Brun, Perry A. Dawson, Benjamin G. Gray, John B. Gray, Jr., Harry H. Heard, William S. Holland, Robert S. Huffman, Jr., William E. Hull, E. Eldridge Ludlum, William C. Marks, Peyton E. Pitts, William F. Wagner, and John D. Whitfield. Becker was president of this first graduating class.

When Hamilton resigned his position with the College and the high school to take a position in the State of Virginia in 1948, Dr. Hoggard, serving as chairman of the Board of Education, also became president of the College.

In 1951, following the resignation of Dean Beemon, Dr. William M. Randall came to Wilmington College as dean and served in this capacity until 1958 when he became president of the College.

Community College Act

This last change in 1958 came about when the citizens of New Hanover County voted to remove control of the College from the Board of Education to a new Board of Trustees operating under the Community College Act of the State of North Carolina. Dr. Hoggard, resigning from the Board of Education, became the first chairman of the Board of Trustees. Dr. Randall then became president of the College, and J. Marshall Crews, former registrar and assistant dean since 1953, became new dean. Mrs. Dorothy Marshall is now registrar.

The vote to place the College under the Community College Act made it possible for the College to receive State funds for operating expenses and capital improvements. Funds provided by the Community College Act and matched by County money are being used to construct the three new buildings on the new campus.

The struggle to bring about passage of the Community College Act was carried on in the State General Assembly by Addison Hewlett, State representative from New Hanover County, and representatives from Mecklenburg and Buncombe Counties. The Community College Act was passed in 1957.

Scholarship Group Names Recipients For 1960-61 Awards

The Scholarship Committee of Wilmington College has completed recommendations for scholarships for next year, according to J. Marshall Crews, dean and chairman of the committee. Total value of the scholarships approved amounts to more than $2,500.

Six students approved for 1960-61 received scholarships this year. They are Jean Creed, Elbert Hodges, Norma Horrell, Horace Murray, Beverly Rogers, and David Milliner.

Of the new students approved for scholarships, three are from out of New Hanover County. They are Phyllis A. Sherman, Burgaw, and Linda Thompson and Glenda K. Howard, both from Hampstead.

Others receiving scholarships next year are Charlotte Creech, Rebecca Rivenbark, Dorothy Naylor, Catherine Scruggs, Andrew E. Sondey, Jr., Judy Pluta, Bobby R. Ludlum, Ann Harrell, Tim Chappell, and Mary Downless. These recipients are all students at New Hanover High School.

These scholarships cover from half to all tuition and registration fees.

Library Makes Second Large Order of Year

Approximately $600 worth of new books has been ordered for the library, according to Mildred Dorsey, librarian. Some of the new books have already been received, she says, and the remainder can be expected before the end of the current school year.

The order was the second large order of books this year. The first order, made last fall, also amounted to $600.

The books are ordered by the various departments of the College according to allotments made to the departments by the Library Committee. Allotments for the second book order are as follows: Music, $35; Chemistry, $25; Social Sciences, $75; Art, $35; Physics, $35; Merchandising, $25; Biology, $75; Mathematics, $50; Education, $25; English, $75; Foreign Language, $50; Engineering, $50; and Business, $25.

ENROLLMENT OF 378

Wilmington College students are from New Hanover County than all the other counties combined. Enrollment by counties is as follows:

Beaufort, 1; Bladen, 6; Brunswick, 13; Carteret, 1; Columbus, 10; Craven, 2; Currituck, 1; Dare, 1; Duplin, 3; Durham, 1; Forsyth, 2; Gaston, 2; Halifax, 1; Lee, 1; Lenoir, 2; New Hanover, 284; Onslow, 10; Pender, 14; Randolph, 1; Richmond, 1; Sampson, 2; Stanly, 1; and Wayne, 2.

REVISED FOLDER

A revised four-page leaflet outlining the engineering technology program at Wilmington College was recently published. The green and white leaflet is illustrated with photographs of engineering students working in the field and in the classroom. Designed by John B. Davis and Rexford E. Piner, faculty members, the folder is being distributed to high school students interested in the engineering technology program at Wilmington College.

Five Members Of First Faculty Observe Growth Of College

(Ed. Note—The following article is a composite written by members of the Pen Pushers Club.)

Five members of the original Wilmington College faculty are still with the Port City institution as it moves into a new era following the historic groundbreaking ceremonies at the new College site tomorrow. They are Anne Barksdale, professor of business; W. K. Dorsey, director of public relations and adult education; Adrian D. Hurst, professor of mathematics; and M. Shannon Morton, professor of English.

These teachers all began instruction at Wilmington College on September 4, 1947, and they have watched the College grow from the time when it was a night school utilizing the New Hanover High School buildings to the present time when the College is on the verge of its first building program.

With the commencement exercises this spring, these five members of the first faculty will have watched the graduation of 12 classes consisting of men and women who have gone out to supply the knowledge and techniques imparted to them by these five teachers.

Here is a brief sketch of these five teachers to acquaint readers with their backgrounds and interests:

Mildred Johnson

One of our favorite teachers at Wilmington College is Mildred Johnson. Born in Northampton County, N. C., she wanted as a small girl to be a lawyer; however, her father desired that she become a teacher and she obeyed his wish.

Her first teaching experience came at 17, after a year at college, when she went to teach math in a Baptist orphanage. She later graduated from Western Carolina, a two-year teachers college, and went on to earn her A.B. degree at Atlantic Christian. Not long after, she received her master's degree, but still continued studies at Peabody and Vanderbilt.

Finally, on a summer of study in Europe under the auspices of Chicago University, she satisfied herself that she might now settle down to teach with some confidence in the knowledge which she had diligently accumulated. She has been passing that knowledge on to students ever since, with an attached warmth that is appreciated by all.

Miss Johnson's chief interest is in books. She loves reading and does not limit herself in what she reads, but her favorite subject is politics. She also likes to cook—especially spoon bread and fried chicken.

"I love Wilmington," she said. "The people are so friendly and have been wonderful to me." She also expressed her confidence in the future of both Wilmington and Wilmington College.

Miss Johnson's popularity may be estimated through the size of her classes. This quarter she is teaching history, government, and sociology. She intimated that sociology wasn't her best subject because she felt that she knew the least about it. She is very conscious of her own inadequacies, but those of us who take sociology realize that she compensates for them through her flexible nature.

Anne Barksdale

Anne Barksdale had always wanted to be a school teacher. She was born and reared in Sumter, S. C., and after graduating from Woman's College in Greensboro, N. C., her dreams were realized. She began her teaching career as a math and English teacher at Kinston, N. C., later going to Salisbury and finally to Winston-Salem where she became a teacher of business.

She later came to New Hanover High School in Wilmington, and it was while she held this position that Wilmington College was established. She was asked to teach evening classes at the College after spending her mornings in the high school. She soon came over to the College full time and has remained ever since.

Miss Barksdale loves working with young people and has great faith in their industriousness. She has been chairman of arrangements for baccalaureate and commencement exercises for the past ten years and her experience with the graduates has been a warm one.

Miss Barksdale is a prodigious reader. In her own words, "Reading is one pleasure that I can lose myself in completely." She also enjoys traveling to such scenic places as Asheville. Each summer she visits her sister there and exclaims over the wonderful times she has.

A member of the First Baptist Church here, she takes an active part, often times substituting as a Sunday School teacher. She has a warm sense of humor as expressed by the manner in which she relates her experiences, and her easy manner wins her the admiration of all with whom she comes in contact.

When asked what she thinks of the progress of Wilmington College, Miss Barksdale said, "It will be good to expand — to have better facilities, more classroom and parking space. We have a strong junior college at present and have hopes of a strong four-year college in the future."

Shannon Morton

Born at Clarksville, Virginia, Shannon Morton was graduated from Longwood College in that state and later received her master's degree from George Peabody College in Tennessee. She has also done graduate study at the University of North Carolina and the Bread Loaf School of English in Vermont.

Because of her interest in the beginning of public junior colleges, Miss Morton came to Wilmington. She was also interested in the teaching of veterans, and they made up a large percentage of the Wilmington College student body at the beginning. Most of them were receiving their education under the G. I. Bill. At that time the College was operating under the semester system, but in recent years that has been changed to the quarter system.

Also during the first year, there were only eighteen women students enrolled. Now that figure has increased to one hundred and six for the present year. Because of the comparatively few women students registered during the first years, no dean of women was appointed until 1956. At this time Miss Morton was appointed, and since then she has served as dean of women in addition to being head of the English department.

Showing a decided concern over the students, Miss Morton feels that their attitude over the years has been and is one of seriousness and cooperation. For the most part, students have gone about their work with a zeal and an ardor that show that they know what they want and are willing to work in that direction. Most of the students who have transferred to four-year colleges have made excellent standings. The student body is known for its friendly attitude towards each other and a feeling of close cooperation with the faculty.

But Miss Morton feels that all the emphasis should not be placed on the routine of class. As enrollment has increased, the number of extracurricular activities has grown. Many clubs have been formed, and more social functions have been planned for the enjoyment of the students. We look forward to the student building on the new campus which will accommodate the activities of the students to a greater degree.

Started with classes held in the high school building, the College will soon move to its six hundred-acre campus. She feels a great deal of pride and satisfaction in the development of the College which was so carefully planned by its founders and administrators.

Adrian D. Hurst

The College's first professor of mathematics was Adrian Hurst. The oldest of six children, he early set out to help support his family. He attended Wake Forest College to receive an A.B. degree in education. Three years later he entered Teachers College of Columbia University to acquire his master's.

Hurst has indicated that the study of education was a practical course on his part because he wanted, as mentioned, to help support his family, and this field appeared to be more promising for an early start and might be pursued with fewer obstacles. He also pointed out that mathematics was his best and most interesting subject.

After college, Hurst was married to Betty Herring Hewlett and held a position as a teacher of math at Randelman, N. C., high school. From Randelman he went to Dobson, N. C., where he was assistant principal, as well as a teacher of math, and from Dobson to the State School for the Blind in Raleigh.

Later, in a speculative mood, he and his brothers decided to develop two miles of beach which they owned and which was called Hurst Beach. However, the government took the Hurst property in 1941 to establish Camp Lejeune, and Hurst and his wife and children moved to Wilmington where he became resident supervisor of the National Youth Administration, a center set up by the government to relieve some of the pressure of the depression through the creation of jobs.

The center became obsolete with the advent of World War II. Hurst resigned and went to work at the shipyard where he worked with the fitters and also taught blueprint reading. He remained in this position until all except two of the 243 ships built there were in service. Then the time came for him to be separated from the shipbuilding company.

In 1946, after receiving a phone call advising him that he was a teacher at the new U.N.C. College Center in Wilmington, Hurst entered the school which one year later was to become Wilmington College.

There are four children in the Hurst family, three girls — a sophomore in high school, a senior at Meredith College, one married — and a boy, a student familiar to all of us at Wilmington College.

Hurst has intimated that he is fond of the quiet respectability of Wilmington and he feels that Wilmington College is an asset, commercially as well as educationally, to Wilmington and all of Southeastern North Carolina. "I see no reason why the College should not go forward," he said. "There is no end to the things we can accomplish in putting Wilmington in the lead as one of the foremost cities in North Carolina."

W. K. Dorsey

The director of the adult education program and public relations and one of the most active instructors at Wilmington College is W. K. Dorsey. His activities, extending from school work to social work to bird hunting (at which he is an expert) and fishing, aside from photography, magazine writing, and a most unusual hobby, are the exercises of a man interested in his community and the pleasures one may derive from it.

Born in Owensboro, Ky., a graduate of Owensboro High School, Dorsey attended West Kentucky State Teachers College where he played basketball well enough to later make the team of the "Louisville Jewelers," one of the first professional all-stars in the country. He graduated and received an A.B. degree in business administration, afterwards doing graduate work at the University of Wyoming, the U. N. C., Curtiss Wright Trade School of Buffalo, N. Y., and in management training in Washington, D. C., and Louisville.

After this extensive schooling, he held the position of principal of the Corydon High School in Kentucky, then became superintendent of the city schools of Corydon, Ky. He later

Faculty In Fantasy

RALEIGH — Students of Meredith College recently saw the tenth quadrennial performance of Alice in Wonderland by the Meredith College faculty. The production of Lewis Carroll's fantasy by the group is a tradition of long standing at the Raleigh institution.

The idea was conceived by Gertrude Royster, director of physical education at Meredith for 36 years. Miss Royster directed the first five performances of the play.

Each member of the faculty has participated in the undertaking since it was originated in 1924 to entertain Meredith students. Since the performance is given once every four years, each college generation at Meredith is able to participate in one of that college's liveliest traditions.

Three members of the faculty hold the distinction of playing the same role in each of the ten performances from 1924 to 1960.

Robot Is Answer

HATTIESBURG, MISS. — A freshman student from Mississippi Southern is reported to have solved the problem of foreign language courses in college. Benton Durley is the creator of a 7-foot aluminum robot named "Harvey" that can "speak" 76 languages and perform 100 combinations of movements.

Harvey weighs 200 pounds and is able to do these things, the report says, because of his electrical "organs."

Durley made Harvey after winning first place in engineering at a Virginia science fair with a mechanical robot arm, about three years ago. Harvey is the result of a year's work and $250—not a bad price for such a handy fellow.

Inspired Student

THOMASVILLE — A teacher of United States history at Thomasville High School decided recently that one of her students was going just a little too far in carrying out class assignments.

Seeking to make her history class more meaningful, she had asked her students to bring to class anything connected with the Civil War. Then one morning one of her inspired charges walked in tugging a tombstone.

Made of native stone, the tombstone was about two and a half feet tall and bore the inscription: "J. Lewis, Born 1777, Died 1859."

The energetic student had found the tombstone on a plantation near Thomasville. It had marked the grave of a former slave.

Nervous Editors

MARS HILL—Editors of the Hilltop, student newspaper at Mars Hill College, have been greatly concerned over publication of a special "Literary Edition." Their anxiety has been aroused not so much by extra work involved as by serious doubts about the originality of articles submitted for publication.

It seems that past experience with the "Literary Edition" has made them nervous lest plagiarized material creep into new issues. The fact is, they lament, the "Literary Edition" will probably become a thing of the past at Mars Hill if students fail to realize the seriousness of this offense.

Activities were climaxed with an assembly during which flattering speeches were made about each teacher. Each teacher was also presented with a highly polished apple.

One teacher is reported to have liked the idea so well that she suggested that a Be Kind To Teachers Month should be observed next year.

returned to Buffalo where he was a field representative for the Curtiss Wright Corp. and then civilian training administrator for the War Department. Finally he came to Wilmington and was appointed director of adult education at Wilmington College.

Dorsey is a former board member of the Methodist Church and this year's general manager of the National Polio Foundation for New Hanover County, which under his direction had a larger marked increase monetarily over last year than any other city in the State.

He is one of the brightest stars in that constellation which originated the "Clinic for Small Business" which has since spread over the entire country. The "clinics" at Wilmington College include classes which are based entirely on public interests and desires in various fields. The curriculum is a most versatile one. These courses, an astounding list in variety and in practice, are taught by the faculty of the various departments of the College.

Dorsey is enthusiastic over the interest taken by Wilmingtonians in these classes. He acclaims the cooperation from the banks, the Merchants Association, and the Executives Club which has been fundamental to the success of the "clinic" program at Wilmington College.

More about Dorsey as a man of extra-curricular activities: There have been many sports articles by Dorsey in various magazines over the country. Not only does he write, but being an adept photographer, he illustrates as well. Dorsey doesn't just talk outdoor sports; he participates in them fervently and is a skilled hunter and fisherman. He has lately bought a dog, the son of this year's national champion "Home Again Mike" and grandson of five national champions before, which he plans to begin training soon.

Another fascinating aspect of Dorsey's many-sided personality is his interest in what he terms "Early Americana." This feature is a hobby which consists of collecting objects used in old-fashioned merchandising and advertising and which are now obsolete. He also collects very old valentines, some of which were pictured in our local paper a little over a year ago.

of the building to $1,170,528. But with several deductions from the contracts, this amount was reduced by $20,970 to $1,149,558.

This figure, $1,149,558, was still more than the money on hand, which amounted to $112,000. Prior to the March 24 meeting, members of the Building and Grounds Committee of the Board of Trustees appealed to the New Hanover County Commissioners for an appropriation which would make it possible to award contracts without delay.

The Commissioners immediately granted $20,000 to the College. This sum, matched by a like sum by the State, gave the College a total of $1,152,000 with which to build. This left a balance of $2,442 for contingencies.

WE HEAR FROM ALUMNI

LaCouture is co-author of a book called Resort Policing, which will be published sometime this summer.

Pvt. George W. Knox, III, recently arrived in Germany where he is stationed at Sandhagen, about 20 miles north of Heidelberg. Pvt. Knox entered the Army last September and completed basic training at Fort Jackson, S. C., and Fort Hood, Texas.

These Wilmington College alumni now located out of the State were also heard from recently:

John C. Birmingham, Jr., teacher of English and Spanish, Randolph-Macon Academy, Front Royal, Va.; R. F. Meyland, field engineer, Missile Division of Chrysler Corporation, Huntsville, Ala.; William E. Caldwell, Jr., assistant engineer in the Mechanical Department of the Southern Railway Company, Knoxville, Tenn.; Cynthia Lewis, school librarian in Atlanta, Ga.; Annette Autry, now Mrs. Leonard J. Norwalk, housewife of Gambrell, Md.

John F. Huntington, head of the Science Department of Harrisville Central School, Harrisville, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Andrew A. Stanton reside in Upper Montclair, N. J., where Stanton is secretary-treasurer of an auto frame and front end shop (Mrs. Stanton is the former Sandra R. Horrell);

Humberto F. Prieto, medical technologist at Mt. Sinai Hospital, Miami, Fla., and continuing education at Miami University; Tamara Osikowska, instructor of Russian and graduate student at the State University of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa; Jerry J. Rivenbark, Jr., plant manager trainee with the Tech Panel Company, Kirkwood, N.Y.; Gary J. Wolfe, staff accountant for an account firm in Danville, Va. (Wolfe and his wife Carolyn have one daughter);

Randolph D. Melver, transmission engineer with Virginia Electric and Power Company, Richmond, Va. (He has a daughter born last August); John W. Dickens, consulting and application engineer for Westinghouse Electric Corporation, Baltimore, Md.; and Harold C. Huntington, psychiatric aide at Fairfield State Hospital, Danbury, Conn. (Huntington has a daughter, Crystal Ann, born in July, 1958).

Two other Wilmington College alumni now in the service are George R. Harris and Graham J. Burkheimer, Jr. Harris is a teletype operator stationed on Okinawa with the U. S. Air Force. Burkheimer is an ensign on the USS Essex, recently returned from a 7-month Mediterranean cruise.

In Other Colleges

Ellis Eugene Williams, student at East Carolina College, has recently completed student teaching in Rocky Mount. A Spanish major and social studies minor, Williams has been on the honor roll or dean's list every quarter at the Greenville, N. C., campus. He also reports that he has a 4-month-old son named after himself.

Roger E. Horne is a ministerial student at Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, Va. He did supply work in the Bladenboro Presbyterian Church last summer.

Majoring in industrial arts and minoring in science at East Carolina is Jay Cardy. He will be graduated in 1961. Cardy became a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity last April.

Donald Ray Lennon will receive a B. S. degree in social studies in May from East Carolina. Other former Wilmington College students at East Carolina are Linda Hines, Robert Galphin, Harry L. Formy-Dorval, Jim Hudson, Jack Breaux, Earl K. Swann and Tom McKee. Miss Hines graduates in May with a major in library science. Swann expects to be graduated in the fall.

Rebecca A. Holland, Peter D. Buis, Jr., and Joseph R. Curry, are students at the University of North Carolina this year. Another Wilmingtonian at UNC is Ralph M. Potter, who is president of the first-year law class.

Former president of the Wilmington College Student Government, Gene Trondsen, is a senior at UNC. He will be graduated in June with an A.B. in social studies.

John R. Hearn will be graduated from the University of North Carolina in June. He has majored in business administration and will establish residence in California after graduation.

Several former Wilmington College students are studying at North Carolina State College. They are: Robert C. Carlyle; Carroll Beard, Jr., senior in civil engineering; Theo O'Neal Esom, who is playing varsity baseball this spring; Archie C. Phillips; Wallace R. Conway; Daniel E. Lennon, a junior this year; Curtis B. Hewlett, also a junior; William Joel Gibson, also playing baseball; and Robert G. Knowles, a senior majoring in chemistry.

Several former Wilmington College students are attending various other colleges. Thomas L. Bancroft is a junior at Clemson College where he is majoring in industrial management and playing tenor sax in the Tiger band. Homecoming Queen here last year, Eve Rossen is a student at the University of South Carolina.

The writer of the lyrics of the Wilmington College Alma Mater is now a senior student at Appalachian State Teachers College. He is Charles F. Hunkeler, member of Pi Gamma Mu, national social studies fraternity at Appalachian.

Margaret Olsen is studying primary education and Bible at Flora MacDonald College. She is a junior this year and is a dean's list student.

Robert G. Dees will be graduated in May with a B. S. degree from Atlantic Christian College. He has majored in mathematics and minored in psychology.

Gary H. Darden, sports editor of the Seahawk last year, is a junior at UNC. He is majoring in industrial relations.

A first semester senior at Woman's College, UNC, the Britt is majoring in Spanish.

Randall Lists Staff Changes For Next Year

Several changes in the Wilmington College faculty for 1960-61 have been announced by Dr. William M. Randall, president of the College.

Three present members of the faculty will not return to the College in the fall quarter. They are John B. Davis, Jr., associate professor in engineering; Mildred Johnson, professor of social sciences; and George W. Rountree, instructor in business.

Davis has accepted a position as assistant professor of mathematics at East Carolina College. For eight weeks during the summer he will be studying under a National Science Foundation fellowship at Clemson College, Clemson, S. C. Davis will teach for three weeks at Wilmington College at the end of the summer term and will begin duties at East Carolina in September.

Rountree will begin teaching duties in Tennessee in the fall.

Miss Johnson is retiring at the close of summer school and will return to her home in Woodland, N. C., in the fall. Miss Johnson is a member of the original faculty of the College. She was presented with a silver tea service by the student body at a recent meeting in the College auditorium.

New Faculty Members

Four new faculty members have been employed for the 1960-61 term. Former Wilmington College student Walter C. Biggs will serve as assistant professor of biology and chemistry. Biggs has a B.S. degree from East Carolina College and an M.S. degree from Texas A. and M. He is coming to Wilmington College from Texas A. and M.

William Brock has been hired as a part-time instructor in the Business Department. Brock is a former auditor for the New Hanover County Board of Education and is a Certified Public Accountant.

Another former Wilmington College student returning here to teach is Thomas Gay. Gay will be assistant professor of social sciences. He has a B.S. degree from the University of Tampa and comes to Wilmington College from the University of Virginia.

Staff Members Are Promoted

Six members of the Wilmington College faculty have received promotions in rank for the 1960-61 school year. One was raised to the rank of professor, and the other five were appointed associate professors.

Promoted to the rank of professor was Duncan P. Randall, who was on leave of absence this year to work toward a doctorate degree at the University of North Carolina.

Promoted to the rank of associated professor were Franklin H. Allen, William J. Brooks, Helena R. Cheek, Calvin L. Doss, and Loyd H. Hudson.

New Officers Elected

Following a spirited campaign, these officers were elected in recent balloting at Wilmington College. Buck O'Shields (left) was chosen president of the Student Council. He succeeds Gene Ballard. Heading the Sophomore Class next year will be Thomas Cromartie. (For a list of other officers, see election article on this page.)

Faculty Votes New Policy To Affect Student Absences

A new policy concerning student absences from classes will go into effect at Wilmington College in the fall. Faculty members voted to establish the plan at a recent meeting.

Explained by Dean J. Marshall Crews, the plan will allow each student a certain number of unexcused absences in each class, depending upon the credit-hour value of the course.

A student will be allowed unexcused absences according to the following schedule:

5 and 6-quarter-hour courses, 3 unexcused absences; 3 and 4-quarter-hour courses, 2 unexcused absences; 1 and 2-quarter-hour courses, 1 unexcused absence.

After the allowed number of unexcused absences has been taken, the Dean says, the student will not be allowed any further absences. The allowed number of unexcused absences must provide for minor emergencies and must include all absences which are for the student's convenience.

According to the new plan,

O'Shields Elected Student President In Recent Voting

Buck O'Shields was elected president of the Student Council in student elections held recently. Serving with him will be Rob McGee, vice president; and Judy Avery, secretary.

Also chosen in the elections were Sophomore Class officers. They are Thomas Cromartie, president; Mary Adams, vice president; Brenda Crump, secretary; and Ann Lynn Chapman and Carol Hewett, class representatives.

The new officers were elected after a spirited campaign and speeches made in the College auditorium on May 3. Elections were conducted on May 5.

Announcement of results was made at the annual May Day dance held at the Cape Fear Hotel Ballroom on May 6. At this time the new officers were presented to the student body.

absences due to illness, after the maximum allowed cuts have been taken, must be reported by a physician or some other person competent to certify the facts of the emergency.

Absence from classes immediately before or after holidays will count as two cuts.

A student who is on academic probation will not be allowed any unexcused absences.

Art Students Exhibit Work In Local Show

The Second Annual Student Art Exhibition, sponsored by the Art Department of Wilmington College, is being presented in Artist's Gallery, Post Office Avenue, for the remainder of this month. Claude Howell, assistant professor of art, is directing the showing.

The exhibition is divided into three divisions: life drawings, paintings, and design problems. Emphasis in the show, Howell says, is placed not on the finished work, but on the various problems which face the artist.

The following students are among those exhibiting.

In the life drawings division—William Whitehead, Margaret Davis, Jan Thorpe, and Gale Hammond;

In the paintings division—Catherine Brown, Elizabeth Goodman, Louise Lanier, Horace Pearsall, Dennis Pittman, William Whitehead, and Emily Zuidema;

In the design problems division—Gene Ballard, Kay Brackenbury, Judy Horne, Ronnie Lipsius, Benjamin Vogels, Barbara Willis, Carolyn Greer, Lloyd Robuck, Henry Chason, Robert Barefoot, and Ronald Butler.

ENROLLMENT UP, UP, UP

Enrollments in regular schools and colleges of the U. S. continue to increase. The Census Bureau estimates about 44.4 million persons were enrolled this fall as compared to 42.9 million in the fall of 1958.

Graduation Set For 98 Students

The largest class in the history of Wilmington College will be graduated in the 12th Annual Commencement Exercises that will begin Sunday, May 22, according to Anne Barksdale, director of the graduation programs. Ninety-eight students are scheduled to receive their associate of arts degrees.

Miss Mildred Johnson, professor of social studies and retiring member of the Wilmington College faculty, will deliver the commencement address. The graduation program will be held on Monday, May 23, at 8 p.m. in Brodgen Hall, and will be followed by the President's Reception in the College auditorium immediately after the program is concluded.

The baccalaureate service will be held Sunday, May 22, at 4 p.m. in the St. Andrews-Covenant Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Edward G. Connette, Jr., pastor of the church, will deliver the Baccalaureate sermon.

Hoggard Medal

A highlight of the graduation program will be the awarding of the Hoggard Medal immediately after the commencement address. Harry E. Payne, member of the Board of Trustees of the College, will present the medal to a graduate who, in the opinion of the faculty, has benefitted most from his college experience. The award is given in honor of Dr. John T. Hoggard, chairman of the Board of Trustees.

Following the presentation of this award, the College Chorus, under the direction of Loyd Hudson, will present two selections of music.

J. Marshall Crews, dean of the College, will then present candidates for degrees to Dr. William M. Randall, president of the College.

The Rev. Randolph Gregory, pastor of the First Baptist Church, will deliver the Invocation and the Benediction at the graduation program.

Organ Music

Organ music will be provided at both the baccalaureate and commencement exercise by Ralph K. Sydow, minister of music at the St. Andrews-Covenant Presbyterian Church.

Following is the graduation list:

Charles Milton Acker, Edith Smith Adams, Sarah Margaret

Wilmington College is a fully accredited co-educational junior college operating under the Community College Act of the State of North Carolina. The College provides, at moderate expense, courses paralleling those in the first two years of most colleges and universities, two-year technical courses, and special adult education courses. In addition, a full program of varsity basketball and baseball and other student activities is provided to give each student a balanced college life. Presently located at 12th and Market Streets, the College is experiencing a million-dollar expansion program that will move it to three new buildings at its new site on Highway 132 sometime in 1961.

Miss Johnson Retiring

The presentation of a silver tea service set to Miss Mildred Johnson at a student assembly recently brought both cheer and sadness to our hearts. For Miss Johnson announced recently that she would retire from teaching at the end of summer school. We were happy for her sake, knowing how much she is looking forward to returning to her home in Woodland, North Carolina. At the same time, we were saddened, knowing how much she has contributed to Wilmington College and how much we will miss her.

Miss Johnson, a member of the original Wilmington College faculty, has endeared herself to her students and to all who have known her. Her influence has been far-reaching as she devoted herself to the teaching profession, and she has been an inspiration to countless students who will never forget her.

Miss Johnson has been successful as a teacher for many reasons. It would be impossible to list them all, but one reason is that she knows her subject matter and is able to make it "come alive" for her students. History was never dull in Miss Johnson's class; for she has a way of making it both meaningful and interesting.

Another quality she possesses is "heart." Miss Johnson has the ability to "get next to" students, to make her subject matter personal with them. Young in heart, Miss Johnson knows young people and loves to be with them. Her energy seems to be as boundless as theirs. Her sense of humor appeals to them and makes subjects she teaches lively and memorable.

Students and faculty members alike know that we are going to miss this lady when she leaves our College and community to return from fulltime teaching. Retire? This is perhaps the wrong word to use. We who know Miss Johnson also know that she will be busy wherever she is. We wish her many happy years as she leaves teaching to engage in her many hobbies and interests.

The Ultimate Worth

The ultimate worth of any college is determined by the difference between what its students were when they first registered for classes and what those same students were when they left the college to assume their places in society.

This difference, probably, cannot be determined objectively, but if the success of former Wilmington College students in society is any indication, then Wilmington College is of inestimable value to this community and the State.

We have noticed with pride in recent weeks as alumni news has come in to the College that many former Wilmington College students have assumed important positions in business, industry, and in the professions. We note that as former students seem to be something more than the expectation of them.

Many of them have gone on to other colleges and have made creditable records for themselves there. Many of them have gone directly into some form of work in which their training at Wilmington College has been immediately put to use.

Many leaders of other colleges that have received their former students have come to expect better-than-average transfer students from Wilmington College. Employers in business and industry have come to expect top employees when they hire Wilmington College graduates. The product of Wilmington College is being sought after—what better measure of the worth of Wilmington College is there than this?

Adequately Prepared

The great interest shown by the student body in the recent election of general student officers was due in large measure to the manner in which the students of the Public Speaking Class, in cooperation with the Student Council, conducted the assembly program in which candidates for offices were presented.

That learning had taken place in the classroom was clearly evident by the seriousness of purpose with which the meeting was conducted.

The student government organization provides students with practical experience in the conduct of their own affairs and the assembly program referred to is strong evidence that they are being adequately prepared to do just that. Students taking part in the program demonstrated that they are both capable of and willing to assume responsibility expected of people preparing themselves for positions of leadership in business, industry and the professions.

Rexford E. Piner, assistant professor of English, was inducted into the Delta Pi Chapter of the Phi Delta Kappa fraternity at East Carolina College, May 7. The organization is an international professional education fraternity.

PUBLISH MAGAZINE

The annual literary magazine of the Pen Pushers Club was published recently under the editorship of Mary Margaret Ginn.

Called With Pen in Hand, the 46-page publication contains articles and poems written by members of the club and other college students.

Mrs. Gloria Scott is president of the club. Faculty advisor is Shannon Morton, head of the English Department.

PLAYS PLANNED . . .

The Wilmington College Dramatics Club will present two major productions during the summer, according to Mrs. Doug Swink, director. The plays will be presented in the College auditorium.

APPLICATIONS UP

Dean J. Marshall Crews reports that applications for admission to the College for the fall quarter are up about 25 per cent over last year.

TEACH FOR USAFI

Two Wilmington College faculty members are teaching courses at the Fort Fisher Air Station to men of the 701st Aircraft Control and Warning Squadron. They are A. D. Hurst, who is teaching algebra, and Rexford E. Piner, who is teaching English.

The courses are made available to the airmen through the United States Armed Forces Institute and carry college credit. The 2-hour classes are held four nights each week for six weeks and will be concluded June 4.

COLLECTION GROWS

The slide collection of the Art Department has grown to approximately 1800 slides, according to Claude Howell, assistant professor of art. Begun last summer, the collection is in color and is conveniently catalogued. The collection of reproductions also continues to grow, Howell reports. It now includes almost 900 reproductions, all catalogued for ready reference.

IN-SERVICE MEETING

Calvin L. Doss, assistant professor of engineering, spoke at a faculty in-service training meeting recently. His topic was "A Brief Description of Engineering Graphics as Taught at Wilmington College." He described engineering graphics as the "language" of the engineer that enables the engineer to describe quickly, accurately, and in standard terms every detail of any structure.

PAINTING TO BE SHOWN

An oil painting by Claude Howell, assistant professor of art, will be shown in the First Hunter Annual Exhibition at the Hunter Gallery in Chattanooga, Tenn., during the month of June. Painters from eight southeastern states will be represented.

ed in the showing. Theodore Rousseau of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York City, is juror for the exhibition.

NEW TRUSTEE APPOINTED

John Fox, local bakery operator and past president of the Greater Wilmington Chamber of Commerce, has been appointed a member of the Wilmington College Board of Trustees. He will fill the unexpired term of Wilbur R. Doshier, who died in April. His term expires in 1964. Fox was appointed to the post by the New Hanover County Board of Education.

CHORUS SINGS

The Wilmington College Chorus, under the direction of Lloyd Hudson, recently presented a program of music for a meeting of the Wilmington Rotary Club.

COLLEGE GETS GIFT

Miss Bonnie E. Cone, director of Charlotte College, recently presented a gift of twenty-five dollars to Wilmington College. The money is to be used to purchase a tree or shrub for the new campus.

WIVES PICK OFFICERS

A new slate of officers has been elected to head the Faculty Wives Club for 1960-61.

They are Mrs. Virginia Brown, president; Mrs. Wilma Piner, vice president; Mrs. Marge Hudson, secretary-treasurer; and Mrs. Peggy Brooks, historian.

The group will sponsor the President's Reception that will be held following the graduation program next Monday night.

Here, There, Everywhere

We Hear From Alumni

In Other Colleges

Mrs. Douglas F. Crane, the former Judith Hope Rhodes, is a student at the University of North Carolina and expects to be graduated in June.

Also at Chapel Hill is Sandra Pluta, a nursing student.

Mary Louise Galphin is a student at East Carolina College.

Studying at North Carolina State College is James Ellis Parker. Before going to State, Parker was employed as a surveyor by the T. A. Loving Construction Company.

Out Of State

H. Douglas Sessions is now assistant professor in the Department of Sociology at the University of North Carolina. After leaving Wilmington College, Sessions received an A.B. degree from U.N.C. an M.S. degree from the University of Illinois, and a Ph.D. degree from New York University.

He has had a varied experience and is the author of numerous articles in the field of recreation. Married to the former Celeste Hetherley, Sessions will be doing research in Washington, D.C. this summer with the Outdoor Recreation Resource Review Commission.

Joseph Norwood, Jr. is employed as a physicist with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. He and his wife and daughter will move to Munich, Germany, in September where he will work toward a Ph.D. in physics.

E. A. (Al) Johnson, Jr. is an electronics repairman in the U.S. Army stationed at Fort Sill, Oklahoma. Johnston is married to the former Joanne E. Maitland of Wilson, Va.

George E. Spofford, III, is an industrial engineer with the Union Bag-Camp Paper Corporation, Savannah, Ga. After leaving Wilmington College, Spofford was graduated from N.C. State College. He and his wife have a baby girl, Vickie Linn, 15 months old.

Another Wilmington College alumnus in the military service is Clifford M. Comeau, who is stationed at Fort Sam Houston in Texas. Before entering the service, Comeau was a junior engineer with the Federal Bureau of Public Roads.

Larry E. Lewis is now a district sales representative for the Shell Oil Co. He lives in Greenville, S.C., and is a graduate of the University of South Carolina, where he majored in marketing. He is doing graduate work at Furman University at night.

In North Carolina

Mrs. Gene G. Arnold, the former Lynne Shannon, resides in Rocky Mount. She has a daughter, Lisa, 20 months old.

Charlie W. Formy-Duval is an engineering aide with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. He lives in Nakina.

Betty Houston is a student medical technologist at Rex Hospital in Raleigh.

In The City

Working as a guard at the Sunny Point Army Terminal is Roscoe Edgar Lester.

George E. Lamicia is manager of the carpet and furniture department of Belk-Beery.

Brad Murray is personnel manager for the Southland Manufacturing Company. He and his wife Merle have a son, Brad III, born last December. Murray was graduated from the University of South Carolina in 1957.

Mrs. Walker Taylor, Jr. is the former Ethel Caroline Averis. She has two daughters—Ethel English and Katherine Granger.

Richard S. Walton is employed by the Sing Oil Company.

Studies Radio

Former Wilmington College student Stanley Knowles is now news director of Baylor University radio station KYBS and is also TV and radio engineer at KWTX-TV in Waco, Texas. At Baylor he is working toward a bachelor's degree in radio to prepare himself for radio announcing. He expects to be graduated this month.

Seahawks Are Heading West To Tournament

For the second season in a row the Wilmington College Seahawks are on their way to Grand Junction, Colorado, where they will participate in the National Junior College Athletic Association baseball tournament.

The Port City team will represent the North Carolina-Virginia Junior College Conference and the South-Atlantic region of the United States in the national finals.

The Seahawks earned their position by virtue of an overall season record of 14-2 and a conference record of 10-2. They were slated to play teams from Virginia and Florida for a position in the national tournament, but the out-of-state teams turned down the chance.

The tournament is slated to get under way Thursday, with eight teams competing for the national championship.

Leave By Car

The Seahawks left by car early Sunday morning and are expected to arrive in Grand Junction Wednesday. They closed out the regular season Saturday night against Campbell College at Legion Stadium.

At press time only two other teams had been chosen for the tournament. They were North East Oklahoma A&M, Miami, Okla.; and Mesa College, Grand Junction, Col. Other possible teams were participating in regional play-offs.

The tournament will be a double-elimination affair—a team must lose two games before being ousted from further play. Last year the Seahawks came in fourth in the national finals.

The national Coca-Cola company and the Chamber of Commerce of Grand Junction are financing about two-thirds of the cost of the trip of the Wilmington College team to Grand Junction.

SEAHAWKS 4, CAMPBELL 0

The Seahawks clinched the North Carolina-Virginia Junior College Conference championship by defeating Campbell College 4-0 Saturday night at Legion Stadium. The win gave the Seahawks a 10-2 conference record and was the 12th victory in a row for the Port City team.

Seahawk Coach Bill Brooks used three pitchers in limiting the Camels to four scattered hits. Don Honeycutt received credit for the win. Preparing for the national tournament at Grand Junction, Col., the trio of Honeycutt, Durham, and Conner struck out ten of the opposing batters.

The Seahawks were held scoreless until the fifth inning when they scored their first run on an error, a sacrifice, and third baseman Buddy Tilden's second base hit of the evening.

Leading Seahawk Attack

Largely responsible for the success of the Seahawk baseball team this year are Buddy Tilden (left) and Ronnie Durham. Tilden, a veteran of last year's campaign, has been a consistent hitter all season. He leads the Seahawks in batting with a .338 average. Durham, a big right-handed hurler, has a 4-0 pitching record and a .265 average at the plate.

Coaches Winning Team

Leading his team to the national junior college baseball tournament for the second year in a row is Coach Bill Brooks. The Seahawks closed out the regular season Saturday night by defeating Campbell College in a home game. This win gave the Wilmington College team its 12th straight victory and a 14-2 record for the season.

Robinson Doubles

Two more runs crossed the plate in the sixth inning when Harold Robinson's double scored Roger Coon from second base. Coon had singled to reach first base. A single by Larry Edens then brought Robinson home.

The final run came in the seventh frame when Nat Bedford's single into deep right-field scored Jerry Richardson from first base. Richardson had received a walk to first base. Coon and Edens followed with singles, but the inning closed with three men stranded on the bases.

The Wilmington team had a total of eight hits for the evening. Campbell had 10 men left on base, and Wilmington had eight stranded.

SEAHAWKS 7, EMI 6

On May 11, the Seahawks edged the Edwards Military nine, 7-6, to score their eleventh straight win.

Larry Edens, pitcher, registered his third win without a loss as he hurled the first seven innings before being lifted in favor of Bobby Conner.

The deciding run of the game was scored in the fourth inning. Jerry Richardson got on on a fielder's choice and moved to second when Buddy Tilden walked. A ball hit to the infield by Nat Bedford was labeled a double play ball, but after the Rams forced Tilden at second, they failed to complete the doubleplay, and Richardson scored from third, proving to be the deciding run.

College Bowlers Organize League

A bowling league consisting of four teams has been organized at Wilmington College. The teams are the Dixie Rollers, the Grey Ghosts, the Rolling Rebels, and the Woodchoppers.

Officers of the league are Tommy Wallace, president; Dick Bisbee, vice president; Paul Toburn, secretary; David Rucker, treasurer; and Ronald Lipsius, league representative.

The teams bowl at Cardinal Lanes every Friday at 3:30 p.m. Next Friday the Rolling Rebels take on the Woodchoppers for the league championship.

The Seahawks scored an 8-5 victory over the Louisburg Hurricanes in Legion Stadium, Wednesday, May 4. The loss was the fourth in conference com-

College Drama Group Is Rated "Excellent"

The Wilmington College drama group received the rating of "Excellent" in the Carolina Dramatic Festival for their one-act presentation, "Refund."

"Refund," a one-act farce by Percival Wilde, was directed by Mrs. Doug Swink.

Included in the cast of "Refund" were Pete Camak, Dennis Carney, Victor Horrell, Cecil Poole, Doug Hunt, Forrest Lee Piver, and Tom Harris. Also, working backstage in the production were Julia Rochelle, Mary Margaret Ginn, Barbara Jones, and Judy Horne.

Sponsored by the Bureau of Community Drama of the Extension Division of the University of North Carolina, the Drama Festival offered little theatres, junior colleges, and high school drama groups an opportunity to submit plays to be judged and rated individually.

Plays entering the festival were rated on a percentage basis and scored according to voice, characterization, contrast, timing, and motivation.

A highlight of the festival was the production of "Summer and Smoke," ably acted by the Carolina Playmakers. The play also provided an opportunity for students to see a workable set designed for a small stage, as all scenes were compiled into one set with the use of lighting effects to denote the action of the play.

Another highlight was the showing of costumes from recent New York stage shows and television plays.

Seahawk Receives New Honor Rating From Press Group

The Seahawk has been notified that it has been rated a "First Class" newspaper in the Junior College Division of the Associated Collegiate Press. The rating is based on issues of the paper published during the first half of the present school year.

The announcement marks the third such rating the Wilmington College newspaper has received. Papers in each group were compared with each other, and judges reached decisions after certain basic journalistic standards had been taken into account.

Of 31 papers entered in the Junior College Division, four received "All-American" ratings, 12 were rated "First Class," 12 were rated "Second Class," and three received a "Third Class" rating.

Circle K Club Holds Banquet

The Circle K Club held its annual banquet on May 14 at the Ambassador Restaurant. Dr. Robert Aycock was the guest speaker.

Recently the club presented a trophy to Chuck Fearn for his participation in basketball this year. Fearn was voted "Most Improved Player" by the club. The trophy was presented at the annual May Day dance.

Future plans of the Circle K Club include participation in the international Circle K Club convention to be held in Toronto, Canada, in August. Two delegates have been selected to attend the meeting. They are Harvey Radcliffe and Elbert Hodges. Alternates are Gene Evans and David Milliner.

CIRCLE K

Members of the Circle K Club have elected officers for 1960-61. They are Harvey Radcliffe, president; Gene Evans, vice president; David Milliner, secretary; and Rob McGee, treasurer. Elbert Hodges and Tommy Wooten were elected sophomore directors of the organization.

Staff Changes

Two members of the New Hanover High School faculty will be new Wilmington College faculty members next year. They are Thomas McCall and Doug Swink. McCall will be assistant professor of English. He has B.A. and M.Ed. degrees from the University of North Carolina. Swink will be assistant professor of drama. He has a B.S. degree from Davidson and an M.A. degree from East Carolina College.

T. P. Brown, New Hanover High School teacher and part-time instructor at the College this year, will be at the College full time next year as instructor of mathematics. Brown has an A.B. degree from the University of North Carolina.

Lloyd Elkins, local attorney and part-time instructor in business law at the College this quarter, will continue as a part-time instructor next year. He has an LL.B. degree from the University of North Carolina.

Returning to Wilmington College after a year's leave of absence will be Duncan P. Randall. He has been working toward a doctorate at the University of North Carolina and will be professor of social sciences during the 1960-61 term.

The office of Dean of the Evening College, being vacated by Miss Johnson, will be abolished. Her duties in this office will be shared by Brown and McCall.

TEACH EXTENSION CLASSES

Two members of the Wilmington College faculty are teaching East Carolina College extension courses on the Camp Lejeune Marine Corps Base. They are Tommy Lupton, assistant professor of physical sciences, who is teaching a class in trigonometry, and John B. Davis, Jr., associate professor of engineering, who is teaching a class in calculus. They travel to Camp Lejeune each Thursday evening to instruct in the 16-week course.

Education

Education is a companion which no misfortune can decrease, no crime destroy, no enemy alienate, no despotism enslave, at home a friend, abroad an introduction, in solitude a solace and in society an ornament. It chastens vice, guides virtue, and gives grace and government to genius. Education may cost financial sacrifice and mental pain, but in both money and life values it will repay every cost one hundred fold.

Club Members Hear Speaker At Annual Spring Gathering

The Wilmington College Engineers Club held its annual Spring Banquet, May 7, at the Marina. Major Reonard Edelstein of the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers was guest speaker.

Highlights of the program were a welcome by David Ramseur, a resume of club activities by Tommy Sanderlin, the awarding of membership certificates to freshmen members by Calvin Doss, and recognition of the Engineers Club officers for 1960-61. Master of ceremonies was Elbert Hodges.

New officers of the group are Tommy Sanderlin, president; Elbert Hodges, vice president; Thomas Cromartie, secretary; and David Milliner, treasurer.

Special guests at the meeting included Dr. and Mrs. William Randall, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Crews, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Hurst, Mr. and Mrs. James Reuling; Mr. and Mrs. Grover; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lupton; Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Marshall; Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Hood; Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Bunn; Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Collins, Miss Mildred Johnson, and Miss Catherine Noyes.

AROUND THE CAMPUS: USA HEADLINE HUMOR

(ACP) — Readship for at least one story in a recent Olympic College (Wash.) RANGER ROUNDUP must have been exceptionally high.

The story had to do with apparent theft of a human skull and a preserved human brain from the college science building. But it was preceded by the arresting headline: "Teacher Loses Brain."

OUTNUMBERED?

(ACP) — From the COLLEGE AN of Kansas State University. In an English Literature class recently, students were discussing Chaucer's England. The professor explained that at that time there were three groups of people — clergy, laity and aristocracy. Each group was about one-third of the total population.

One coed, obviously impressed by this, gasped, "I certainly didn't realize the clergy comprised one-third of the people."

PLAIN DEMORALIZING

Wilmington College Adds Six Members To Faculty

Wilmington College has six new additions to its faculty roster this year.

Walter Biggs is in the Biology department. He is from Wilmington, where he attended New Hanover High School and Wilmington College. Mr. Biggs received his B.S. from East Carolina. He then went to the University of Kansas for one year. After two years in the Army, Mr. Biggs taught biology at New Hanover High School for one and a half years. Then he continued his studies at Texas A & M College for two and a half years where he got his masters in Zoology.

Thomas Gay is an instructor in the Social Science department and hails from Bridgton, Maine. He attended high school in Maine and went to Dartmouth College in New Hampshire. At Wilmington College he received his A. A. degree and his B. S. from the University of Tampa.

He has taught at Portland Junior College and at the University of Virginia. Mr. Gay graduated with his masters degree.

In the Engineering department the College has added Victor W. Herlevich. He was born in Arkansas and has lived in Wilmington for eight years. He graduated with a B.S. degree in Forestry from North Carolina State College, and this is his first year teaching.

Thomas McCall joins the English department. He is from Sampson County and attended high school in Cumberland County. At the University of North Carolina he received his A.B. in education and English. After teaching at Moncure High School in Chadbourn County and at Boontrail High School in Hardee County, Mr. McCall received his masters in education and English. He then taught at New Hanover High School for three years, serving as Director of Guidance his last two years.

Circle K Officers Take Canada Trip

Four Wilmington College Circle K officers represented the local group in the recent Circle K International Convention in Toronto, Canada.

The primary purpose of the convention was to elect International Circle K officers and to provide ideas and suggestions for Circle K operations. The convention represented Circle K members of the United States and Canada, working together to improve their college, community and nations.

Wilmington College delegates to the convention, Gene Evans, Harvey Radcliffe, David Millnor and Elbert Hodges, were

Student Council Makes Plans For Elections

Future plans of Freshmen Elections have recently been announced by the Student Council. Elbert Hodges, assisted by John Pistolis, is in charge of this election.

Nominations will be made on September 28 and 29, and announcement of these nominees will be made on September 30. Nominees are scheduled to make their speeches on October 5 at 9:30 or 10:30. Actual voting will be on October 7, and these results will be announced at the Freshmen Dance on October 8.

Registration Improves; Enrollment Increases

Students go through the process of registering themselves for college work. Lines like the one shown were not unusual.

Six-hundred and one students have registered for the Wilmington College Fall Quarter making the largest enrollment in the history of the college, according to Mrs. Dorothy Marshall, college registrar.

Of the total 601 students to register, 391 were men, and 210 were women. Freshmen students numbered 367, and Sophomore students tallied 165. Others included in the registration count were nurses, graduate students and special students.

Some 32 North Carolina counties were represented on registration day. They were: Alamance, 3; Beaufort, 2; Bladen, 12; Brunswick, 33; Carteret, 4; Columbus, 22; Craven, 9; Cumberland, 2; Dare, 1; Duplin, 12; Durham, 3; Forsyth, 3; Gaston, 5; Guilford, 1; Halifax, 1; Hertford, 1; Jones, 1; Lee, 2; Lenoir, 3; Nash, 3; New Hanover, 379; Onslow, 14; Pamlico, 1; Pender, 31; Pitt, 2; Randolph, 3; Richmond, 1; Roberson, 1; Sampson, 3; Surry, 1; Wake, 4; and Wayne, 1.

Scholarship Program Provides Many Chances

Wilmington College has a full and liberal scholarship program, according to Dean Marshall Crews. Many students benefit from the Full scholarship, Work scholarship, National Defense Loan, E. L. White and State scholarship for prospective teachers.

The academic scholarship is offered to a student who wishes to attend Wilmington College for two years. By doing so, their scholarship will pay for the whole tuition while attending the College.

A working scholarship is offered to sophomores, but a few freshmen may also obtain these scholarships. With a working scholarship, a student can be a lab assistant, library assistant, secretary, for a professor, working in the pub, editor of the Seahawk or editor of the Fledgling.

Also, a loan from the National Defense may be obtained. You may borrow up to $1,000 a year and you do not have to pay it back until one year after graduation from college. For those interested in teaching, they may also borrow money. You can pay it back at 10 percent interest or promise to teach in North Carolina for five years.

The E. L. White estate gives two or three scholarships each year to worthy students.

In North Carolina information for scholarships for prospective teachers can be obtained from the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Raleigh.

At a later date, there will be an assembly program to explain fully the scholarships and loans a student may obtain.

Work On College Site Progresses Steadily Over Vacation Time

Construction work on the new Wilmington College site has progressed steadily over the summer months.

Three buildings, the library, the student assembly and the academic, are being consecutively constructed. On September 12, the roof was put on the library, and approximately two weeks from that date, construction of the roof for the student assembly building is slated to begin.

The working crew consists of about 75 general construction workers. According to John C. Thompson, vice-president of the Dunn Construction Company, actual work on the buildings, began the first of April. Without any unexpected difficulties, the construction will end the first of June, 1961.

SPECIAL NOTICE

Students are asked to refrain from using the faculty parking spaces.

Fledgling Editor Organizes Staff

The plans for the 1960-61 Fledgling are nearing completion, as announced by Frances Best, editor-in-chief, and Betty Ward, assistant editor. The advisor for this yearbook is Gerald Rossetol of the English department.

The Feature Staff is composed of Martha Bordeaux, editor, Frank Brown, Beth Borneman, Genie Goodman and Gloria Miller. Rita Sapp is editor of the Activity Staff with Judy Hayes, Sandra Scruggs and Judy Pluta assisting.

In charge of the Sports Staff is Dick Moseley, editor, Mitchell Todd, James Cotton and Jim Hudgens. The Class Section is made up of Sarah Hunnicutt, editor, Doris Hardison, Jenny Thompson, Jane Malpass and Linda Ballenger. The Typists include Charlotte Roycroft, head, Sylvia Carter, Dian Gritdke and Dixie Straughran.

Engineers' Club Sets Up Book Store

The Engineers Club started the year off with a project for the students of Wilmington College—The Used Book Store. This project was undertaken to provide service and savings to the students.

Students wishing to buy or sell used books now have a central location to do business and save. The club will sell a student's books for the student's price plus a nominal percentage. The seller benefits by having a place to sell at no extra cost to him, and the buyer is able to save the difference between a new and a used book.

Many students have made use of the store operated by this local club. The club suggests that students "dig up those used books and help them out—you'll be helping yourself!"

At the close of the last school year, new officers were elected. They are Tommy Sanderlin, president; Elbert Hodges, vice-president; Tommy Cromartie, secretary; and David Millnor, treasurer.

Thirteen Student Assistants Begin College Jobs

Various assistants at the college have been announced by college officials recently.

Art—Kathryn Counts and Benjamin W. Vogles.

Biology—James Peebles and Paula James.

Engineering—Tony Carter and Bobby Raynor.

Chemistry—Mary Ann Iltner and Danny Meir.

Public Relations—Ann Hewett. Office—Judy Avery and Rita Sapp.

Library—Carrie E. Page and Mary Anne West.

Building Taking Form

Construction work on the new Wilmington College progressed during the summer months. All buildings are now taking a definite form.

Editorials

SEARAWK Staff States Policy

The staff of SEARAWK, the student newspaper of the University of the South, has adopted a policy of editorial independence. This policy states that the newspaper will not be influenced by the administration, faculty, or students in its editorial decisions. The staff will maintain a high standard of journalistic integrity and will report the news as it sees it, without bias or prejudice.

Registration Smoother, Quicker

The registration process for the University of the South has been made smoother and quicker. The new system allows students to register online, which saves time and reduces the hassle of standing in long lines. The university officials are pleased with the response to the new system and hope it will continue to improve the registration process for future years.

Just Looking Into The Future

As we look into the future, we must consider the challenges that lie ahead. The world is changing rapidly, and we must be prepared to meet the challenges that come our way. We must focus on education, innovation, and collaboration to ensure a bright future for all. The University of the South is committed to providing a high-quality education and to preparing our students for the challenges of the future.

ATTENTION

Varsity Report

By DENNIS CARNEY

Each year Wilmington College is becoming more and more prominent as an outstanding school in sports. Not only has it been highly successful in basketball and baseball, but in tennis and golf as well. There is a growing awareness among fans in this area that W.C. has the potential to dominate any field it enters, and every year more people turn out to give the much needed support required by a winning team. That support as a necessity to moral cannot be over-emphasized. There is no man nor group nor team which will not respond with pride and effort to the rallying cries of people pulling for them at a crucial moment.

Among America's favorite pastimes, sports ranks first. They are an intrinsic part of our democratic heritage. Just as we have adopted the form of government instituted by the Greeks back almost a thousand years before Christ, so have we adopted their love of games. This competitive spirit is so much a part of the American makeup that we have founded our entire economic system upon it. We are a nation of individualists, and in this modern, highly organized world of specialization, we often find it necessary to assert that individuality. There are different methods of accomplishing such a task and we feel that sports, will.

Seahawk Coach Takes Recruiting Trip

Diamond Hopefuls

Enlists Basketball, Baseball Prospects For Coming Season

Each year before the beginning of school Coach William Brooks takes a recruiting trip which covers an area extending throughout North Carolina and as far north as New York state. The object of this trip is to interest talented basketball and baseball players in coming to Wilmington College.

This year Coach Brooks feels that, though a great many of the boys he talked to failed to come as promised or had other plans, the trip was very successful and that he has an aggregate of talent for both teams including a few returnees from last year.

The five boys whose picture appears on this page are examples of what W.C. has to look forward to in the way of baseball. Ronnie Durham, a pitcher hailing from Asheboro, is looking forward to plenty of arm exercise right along with Don Honeycutt from Besemer City and Bill Haywood from Glenburnie, Md.

Blair Walker is counting on his agility to aid the Seahawks at second base. Double plays will be the feature of him and David Miller who plays short-stop. Blair comes to us from Gastonia and David is from Woodruff, S. C.

It is really too early to talk about baseball, however, so let's move on to basketball. Many of the basketball players have already begun to get into shape preparing for the big season which opens November 12. Coach Brooks, under whom the Seahawks have become one of the most formidable basketball teams in their conference, commented that in spite of a deficit in height over last year, he feels that this year's team will be faster.

There will be eight, and possibly nine, games with freshmen teams from four year schools this year. Four of these games will be played on the home court, but which four it is uncertain now. The Seahawk will have a complete and definite schedule by next publication. The eight games include two with each of the following freshmen teams: North Carolina State, University of North Carolina, University of South Carolina, and the Citadel. Duke is the ninth possibility, but is still pending.

Sixteen conference games will round out the schedule. The first three will be played on the road with Charlotte leading the list followed by P.J.C. and E.M.I.

Seahawk Coach

Coach William Brooks

Sports Spotlight

By DICK MOSELEY

Hi, sports fans!

Well, it's about that time again when the beginning of another sports year rolls around. Let us hope that the Seahawks of Wilmington can go on to another victorious season, as they did last year.

As you know, Wilmington College does not field a football team, so we shall focus our attention toward the future basketball team.

A list of the new prospects and the returning lettermen was given to the sport staff by Coach William Brooks, and is not yet complete, but this will give you a general idea of what to expect from the team.

Ed Miaszkowski, a towering 6'3" lad, is one of the reasons Wilmington has had such fine teams. Upon arriving from Martin Van Buren High in Floral Park, N. Y., where he set many school records, Ed in his two season with the Seahawks has carried on the tradition of making a name for himself. He powered the "fabulous five" to an excellent record of 19-8, and led the team in scoring and rebounding. Aside from that, he was elected the Most Valuable Player in the Junior College Tournament held here last spring.

Ed, with his acceptable height, should be an outstanding and creditable figure to Wilmington College.

Philip Stephenson, another one of Coach Leon Brogden's products, should be this year's playmaker. Along with his uncanny knack of handling the ball, he does a reputable job of scoring. He was third highest scorer for the Wildcats last year and gained a berth to play in the East-West All-Star game.

Don Marshall, playing right along with Stephenson last year, gave the New Hanoverians the one-two punch that led them to the 4-A title. Making All-Press Conference team and the All-Tournament team was not a surprising development for this 6'2" lad. Let's hope he can help lead our team as he did the Wildcats.

Ken McIntyre, a six-foot-two towhead from Bayside High School in New York, is a fine example of what the team has.

He has quite a record that includes an election to the All-Queens team, The All-City first team and the All American fourth team. Ken had a better than average scoring percentage of 23 points per game and was chosen the Most Valuable Player in the New York City All-Star game. Ken's election to the All-Conference and All-Tournament team, was one of the finer aspects of the Seahawk team last year.

Larry Edens, a product of the perennial champs of New Hanover High, is another roundball artist the team has to envy. This former Wildcat was elected to the All - Conference and All-State teams and was a starter in the East - West All - Star game. Larry was the top scorer on the New Hanover team year before last.

Terry Dunn, an outstanding player from Weston, Mass., is one of the better guards attending our alma mater in a long while. This lad is said to be headed for the higher ranks in three or more years. He attended Bill Sharmen's tryout camp and was highly recommended for his ability. All-American first team is one of the numerous accomplishments on Terry's list.

Neil Johnson will be Coach Brooks' "bread and butter man" and along with Miaszkowski he ought to lead the team to another season of good tidings.

This 6'6" "Goliath" played his high school ball at George Washington High in New York City. Aside from making the Top-Ten team in New York, he led his team in rebounding and scoring, made All - New York All-Star team, and played in the All-Star game. Incidentally, he played with Ed Miaszkowski and Ken McIntyre in that game.

We of the Sports Staff hope all these fellows can help our team as much as they helped their own high school teams!

Bowling Teams Roll Into Organization As 12 Turn Out For Qualifying Rounds

The Wilmington College bowling teams got underway Friday afternoon, September 16.

Twelve people turned out and there was a roll off with Gordon Ross achieving the high average of 153. Freddy Johnson rolled high game for the evening at 179, followed by Scott McKinnon with 174 and Mitchell Todd with 171. Others who attended were Ronnie Lipsius, who is due the credit for organizing the teams, Tim Chappell, Shannon Abbott, Albert Cherry, Richard Bisbee and Billy Peeples. Officers were elected Friday.

The four teams, all W.C. students, which will consist of approximately four players each, will bowl every Friday 3:30-6:00 P.M. at Cardinal Lanes. The cost to members is $125 per series, a series constituting 3 games. This fee includes money for trophies and a league secretaries salary.

The teams are sanctioned by the American Bowling Congress which sets up the rules and rewards any highly outstanding bowling. All interested persons are invited to attend the games each Friday.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE, WILMINGTON, N. C.

October 20, 1960

Council Members Serve Students, Administration

Student Council, an elected group of individuals, serves as go-between for the college administration and the student body. It also has specific powers pertaining to student activities, sponsors all recognized student clubs, manages student dances and other parties and other programs designed for the betterment of the campus and student life.

Each spring an election, in which all regular registered students are eligible to vote, for president, vice-president and secretary are elected. Also two representatives from the sophomore class to the Council are elected by the students who will be members of this class during the next year.

Fresh Representatives

Freshman class representatives are elected by the members of the entering class early in the autumn quarter. These seven individuals, plus officers of each of the two classes compose the Student Council. Officers elected for this year are president, Buck O'Shields; vice-president, Rob McGee; and secretary, Judy Avery.

The work of the Council is officially supervised by the Dean of Students, although he may appoint a deputy to represent him. The Council meets once every two weeks, and they are presently working on a school calendar to limit these meetings to once a month and when necessary. The Council officers have regular conferences with the president of the College, in order to acquaint him with student problems and projects under consideration.

Two Class System

Freshman officers are president, Tim Chappell; vice-president, James Cotton; secretary, Gloria Miller; and representatives, Jim Buie and William Loughlin. These officers are ex-officio members of the Student Council.

One of the functions of the Student Council is to appoint delegates to the State Student Legislature which meets each year as a mock legislative body. Wilmington College takes part in this organization each year, and many of the bills proposed by our representatives have been passed. Experience in this State Student Legislature can offer a student training in practical politics and an opportunity to meet with students from other colleges and universities in the State.

The main objective of the student government this year is to revise and amend the constitution. Various suggestions have been made and work has begun toward this goal.

CLAUDE HOWELL PRESENTS ONE MAN ART EXHIBIT

Claude Howell, assistant professor of art, will present a one man art exhibit in the Merin Art Gallery, Greensboro, from November 3 through November 17. Twenty oil paintings will be shown.

Coastal North Carolina will be Mr. Howell's exhibition subject matter. According to Mr. Howell, his oils will range from beach fishing scenes to the familiar sailboat regattas on Wrightsville Sound this summer. Five of the paintings make up a Regatta Series and are entitled Regatta number one, two, three, four and five.

One of the paintings on exhibit, "Net Markers," recently won the Junior League Purchase Award of Winston-Salem, and will be given to the Public Schools of Winston-Salem by the Junior League. "Net Markers" was one of five paintings

Cheerleaders Chosen

Two sophomores and six freshmen were named members of the 1960-61 Seahawk Cheerleading squad yesterday afternoon in the auditorium by a special committee composed of faculty members and club representatives.

Those chosen were: Judy Avery, Virginia Murphy, Cecille Taylor, Pat Moore, Brenda Crump, Lou McCauley, and Genie Goodman, alternate.

Judy Avery, a member of last year's squad, was elected head cheerleader, by a special session of the newly chosen group.

Judging was based on personality, vivaciousness, ability to cheer, as far as voice quality and actions, poise, personal appearance, and general manner.

The cheerleaders' main function is to represent the college and students at basketball and baseball games and to instill an atmosphere of school spirit and student support with unlimited energy.

Club members and faculty representatives were as follows: Mr. Claude Howell, art department, Mr. Frank Allen, science department, Miss Shannon Morton, dean of women, Mrs. Dorothy Marshall, registrar, Tommy Sanderlin, president of Engineer's Club, Harvey Radcliffe, president of Circle K, Dennis Carney, president of Pen Pusher's Club, and Rob McGee, vice-president of the student body.

Freshmen Select Officers In Recently Held Elections

Freshman officers were recently elected. These were president, Tim Chappell; vice-president, James Cotton; secretary, Gloria Miller; and representatives, Jim Buie and William Loughlin.

Tim Chappell came from New Hanover High and was active in many student affairs. When asked how he felt about winning the election, Tim replied, "I am deeply moved by the trust that was placed in me by my fellow members of the Freshmen Class, and I will strive to fulfill my obligations to our class." Tim is planning to follow to follow a course in forestry, but he mentioned the possibility of shifting over to civil engineering later.

James Cotton, the new vice-president, is also a graduate of NHHS. James is taking a two-year engineering technology course. "I was very happy to have the chance to serve the Freshmen Class of 1961 and to become a truly important part of my class. We are all looking forward to a real good year." This was James' reply about being elected.

From Savannah, Georgia, where she attended Jenkins High School, comes the secretary - treasurer, Gloria Miller. Gloria says, "It really made me feel great to think my fellow students had put this much trust in me. At first I couldn't believe it was really and truly me." Business administration is her chosen field and she would like to be a private secretary when she finishes school.

Serving as representative is Jim Buie, another New Hanover graduate. Jim plans on becoming an artificial public accountant. In reply to how he felt about being elected he said, "I was very happy to be chosen to represent my class. I am looking forward to a successful year and hope to represent my fellow students in every way."

The second representative is William Loughlin, who also graduated from NHHS. Willie is taking secondary education and plans to teach school. His answer to how he felt about being elected is: "It was a wonderful surprise. I only hope that I can live up to my position and help our student body in every way. I would like to thank each student for his support."

Freshmen Present Annual Dance

Officers of the 1960-61 Freshman Class were announced at the annual Freshmen Dance held recently at the Cape Fear Ballroom. They are Tim Chappell, president; James Cotton, vice-president; Gloria Miller, secretary; Jim Buie and William Loughlin, representatives.

John Pistoia, 1960 president of the Freshman Class, was general chairman of the dance. Carol Hewett was in charge of the refreshment committee. Gene Evans, David Milliner, Elbert Hodges and Tommy Cromartie decorated.

NOTICE

Year book pictures will be taken on Wed., Nov. 2, from 8:30 a.m. until 8:30 p.m. in the auditorium. The photographer is Carl Davis of Delmar Studio.

All students and faculty members are asked to participate in having their pictures taken.

Male students are requested to wear white dress shirts.

WC Treatre Plans Beaux Arts Ball

Plans for the Beaux Arts Ball, to be held November 5 from 8-12 p.m. in the College Auditorium, are well under way.

The masquerade ball will be sponsored by the Wilmington College Theatre. Students attending the dance must be in costume, and prizes for the funniest and most original costumes will be awarded. Admission is one dollar for couples and fifty cents for stags.

Newly elected officers for the theatre club are: president, Kathryn Davis; vice-president, Cecil Poole; and joint business managers, Rita Sapp and Anne West. Doug Swink is the club director-advisor.

In addition to the Beaux Arts Ball, the club will also present the clown scenes from Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream as a one act play for student assembly during November.

Building Progresses Steadily

Construction work continues at the new Wilmington College site. The building shown is the library, administration and some class rooms as taken from the rear of the building.

Seahawk Schedule

The Seahawk has set up a tentative schedule for the 1960-1961 school year. Editions are scheduled for October 20, 1960; December 14, 1960; January 18, 1961; February 15, 1961; March 15, 1961; April 19, 1961; and May 17, 1961.

Varsity Report

By DENNIS CARNEY

Wilmington College was founded in 1947 and that same year puts its first basketball team on the hardwood. Coach Mickey Katkaveck's quintet were no laggards, giving W.C. a formidable name in basketball right from the beginning.

Such names as Jim Croom, LeRoy Towles, Brick Mason, Douglas Pridgen, "Buster" Brown and R. L. Church conspired to give the Seahawks a second place berth for the season. Some of that first year's scores were:

W.C. 52	E.M.I.	45
W.C. 40	Louisburg	36
W.C. 66	Camp Lejeune	39
W.C. 51	E.M.I.	41
W.C. 42	Louisburg	37

The '48-'49 season saw the Seahawks under new supervision. Coach John Charlton had come down from Greensboro to conduct an infant but proven team led by four returnees from the 2nd place team of the year before.

Four Return

These four big men: Croom, Towles, Mason and Church, with such talented newcomers as Bob Lewis, Harry Coleman, Billy Mason and Billy Weathersbee rounded out the Seahawks' possibilities for that year. The season proved less than was hoped for, though no disgrace by any means.

The next four or five years were up and down, the Seahawks leading their attacks with such capable ball handlers as Sonny Furlong, Harold Parker, Donald Anderson, John Sloan, Thomas Culbreth, Victor Batson, W. A. Brown, Charlie Niven, Don Morton, John McKoy and "Buster" Precythe.

There was never a dull moment, the crowds in those first few years were small enough that empathy between player and fan was at an apex and kept everyone on the edge of their seats.

Small Crowds
In the little gymnasium behind New Hanover High which we now refer to as the girl's gym, the Seahawks, when not on top, held their own. The small crowds were ardent, pinning their hopes on the little college across the street which they knew would grow both in educational facilities and basketball abilities.

These people have not been disappointed. Each year Wilmington College has progressed in both fields. Now more people are beginning to recognize what this city has gained in the way of sports and each year the attendance at Seahawks games is increasing.

W.C. changed coaches in '51, but finally in '52 Coach William Brooks took over and has been an inspiration to Wilmington's sports fans ever since, producing teams which have put W.C. at the very top as contender for conference championships.

The '57, '58, '59 and '60 seasons are more familiar to us who are attending Wilmington College now. Names like Bill Mathias, Jerry Taylor, Neal Eason, Danny Parham and Harry Odham ring clearer in our memories.

'57 Season Good

The above named players along with a host of other talent including Ralph Potter, Tom Ray, Billy Elliott and Connie Mack sparked the Seahawks to a good '57 season. Our prestige in basketball was heightened through recognition by the University of North Carolina. They sent their Frosh down to practice on the Seahawks and found themselves with their hands full.

The home team showed their stuff and thrashed ole U.N.C., but good. The future was to see the freshman teams of U.N.C., N. C. State, U.S.C., and Duke come down to try their medicine on the little junior college with the big ideas. '57 scores were:

Seahawks Fair In '58

Danny Parham, Jerry Taylor, Bill Mathias, Bill Elliott and Harry Odham stayed on for the '58 season. With the addition of Ron Paladini, Denny Lutz and Stacy Wells the Seahawks were in fit shape to tear the floorboards up. Fate or some equally as talented a party-pooper saw things otherwise, however, and W.C. finished up with only a fair season.

We all know what happened in '59. With an entirely new team, a tall bunch of fellows from all along the Eastern coast, Wilmington College wrapped up and brought home the conference championship. It was a proud year for the Seahawks and for the school they represented. It was a high scoring year as well; over 100 points in

Four Pen Smashing Teams Set Searing Pace, High Scoring

Wilmington College's bowling teams have now settled down to a season of pen smashing. Nineteen W.C. students have turned out to form four teams of five players each.

Rolling every Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock, each team plays one of the others in a three game set for which the winner receives one point for each game won and either of the two opponents may receive one point for the highest average of that particular set.

The four teams thus far are so closely matched that it's hard to say which is the top team. This week, however, the Rolling Rebels are on top with 8 wins and 4 losses, followed by the Grey Ghosts and the Splits who are tied for second place with 4 wins and 8 losses.

High three-game set honors go to Gordon Ross with 460, Shannon Abbott with 458 and Gordon Ross again with 453. Laurels for high averages for a single three-game set go to Richard Bisebe with 194, Mitchell Todd with 189 and again Bisebe with 183.

The top five men for over all averages are Todd with 146, Ross with 144, Abbott with 143, Wilbur Brown with 143 and Bisebe with 139. Listed below are all four teams including each member, his average and the team average.

Sports Spotlight

By DICK MOSELEY

This year we of the sports staff are anticipating big things from our Seahawk basketball team. From the looks of his present line-up, Coach William Brooks has recruited many outstanding figures, among them being Terry Dunn.

Terry was born in Rumford, Me., on July 13, 1942, and at an early age moved to Weston, Mass.

He attended Weston Junior and Senior High Schools and became interested in basketball while playing intramural sports. He continued to show his talents in the game of cage-ability and made a reputable name for himself along that line.

Bill Sharman, of the famed Boston Celtics, held a tryout camp in Casco, Me., and all the young men from the ages of 16 to 19 were eligible. Terry, not being of great height, six feet, which is considered comparatively small in basketball, was fortunate to be chosen the Most Valuable Player out of the 125 boys who participated.

All American First team, All-State, All-Area and leading his team in scoring and rebounding are some of the many honors bestowed upon this athlete.

Terry's likes are numerous, and his dislikes are few. Sports of any type interest him, and he tries to be active in all of them mentally if not physically. Upon graduation from Wilmington College, Terry plans to attend North Carolina State or Boston University.

Each of three games. One can compare the scores in this season, with the Seahawks at their zenith, with those of the '47 season and there will be a very close proximity between their difference and W.C.'s growth.

'59 Squad Potent

Jackie Bullard, Chuck Fearn, Joel Gibson, Ed Miskowski, Ronnie White, Jimmy Helms, Jerry Richardson, Joe Wooten, Bob McLoughlin, Larry Lindsey, Richard Brennan, Jerry Fritz and Ted Williams are the victor's names. A chronicle of their fame is as follows:

W.C. 100	P.J.C.	56
W.C. 88	Duke Frosh	67
W.C. 83	Louisburg	78

Last year, '60, was, of course, another high scoring season. With a few returnees, the marquee read as follows: Jackie Bullard, Larry Edens, Chuck Fearn, Billy Galanti, Jimmy Helms, Ken McIntyre, Ed Miskowski, John Pritchard, Ronnie White and Hershel Witten. Again the Seahawks proved themselves dangerous opponents, carrying their reputation like a thin-shelled egg and maneuvering their way to the conference title.

And so after 14 seasons of basketball, we now stand facing another. We have a solid reputation, a top notch coach and an abundance of basketball talent all of which should give us an optimistic outlook for this coming season. All we need now is support in the way of game attendance.

Pen Pushers Elect Officers '60-'61

Officers were elected at a recent meeting of the Pen Pusher's Club. Elected were: president, Dennis Carney; vice-president, Anne West; secretary-treasurer, Katie Wilson; and editor of the club publication With Pen In Hand, Mary C. Hodgins. Miss Shannon Morton is the club advisor.

The purpose of the Pen Pusher's Club is to foster an appreciation of creative writing among the students of Wilmington College and through study and constructive criticism to improve the individual writing of its members.

In addition to publishing With Pen In Hand the club has chosen another worthwhile project. Through the cooperation of the Dramatics Club, they will write and produce a play. In preparation the Pen Pusher's will hold a series of workshops, featuring guest speakers, to learn the fundamentals of play construction.

Meetings will be held each Tuesday at twelve thirty o'clock throughout the year. Students interested in creative writing are invited to attend.

Rancourt, Willette Meet Accidentally In Class At College

Anything can happen — at Wilmington College, that is. At least that's what two students, Edward Rancourt and Sonny Willette thought when they accidentally ran into each other in French class the other day.

Willette and Rancourt were acquaintances in a little town called Waterville, Me., about 50 miles inside the Canadian border. They both attended school in Waterville. The language of the school was French.

Willette left Waterville with his family, and came to Wilmington because of the nature of his father's business.

Rancourt remained in the little French town until he entered the military service. It was through a buddy of his in Germany that he heard of Wilmington College. Upon leaving Germany, he decided to enroll for the fall quarter.

Whether it was irony or fate that brought them together, we do not know but, we do know that Rancourt and Willette will never forget the day they again met after 15 years, in the class of their native language.

Adult Education Begins For Next Two Quarters

Classes in adult education have begun at Wilmington College and will continue throughout the next two quarters. The classes are a part of the Adult Education Program of the College, the main purpose of which is to acquaint the adults of the community with educational topics about which they wish or need to become familiar.

Beginning October 11, a course in creative writing offered by Rip Collins, managing editor of the Wilmington Morning Star, began. The course meets every Tuesday evening from 7:30 until 9:30.

"A Brief History of Italian Art in Words and Pictures" is a group of courses offered in art. It is divided into three series. Each series has six sessions from 8-10 p.m. with the first beginning on October 25 and ending November 29; the second beginning on January 10 and ending February 19; and the third beginning February 21 and ending March 28. A fee of one dollar is charged for each of the three series.

Swink Lectures Drama

The Drama department has a series of courses for the principles of acting, directing, set design, straight make-up, character make-up and basic principles of show-card design and costumes. Lectures for one hour starting October 10 and running through November 14 are given by Doug Swink, Mrs. Kay Swink and James B. Moore.

A geographical survey of some of the strategically significant areas in the world today, where they are, why they are, what their current status is and what might be expected in the future, is discussed in "Political Geography of World Sensitive Areas." Duncan P. Randall will conduct these ten sessions from 8-10 p.m. at a time to be announced.

The Music Department offers "Music Appreciation." The music of the major composers from the Baroque to the beginning of the Romantic Era will be played and discussed. Six lectures from 8-10 p.m. will be conducted by Loyd Hudson beginning October 24, with one a week through November 28. This is the first series and the second series will run January 10 until February 14.

Management Policies

"Business Management Institute" is a 16-hour course for owners and managers of retail and manufacturing concerns. The purpose of which is to enlarge the scope of thinking and better management policies within individual businesses. Each week between October 3 and November 21 a different topic is taken. These courses are sponsored by the Distributive Education Services, Small Business Administration, Chamber of Commerce, Merchants Association, Clearing House of Wilmington and Wilmington College.

Merchandising department will offer a course in "Job Training" at a time to be announced. W. Kendall Dorsey will hold the five sessions of two hours each. It will aid owners, managers and supervisory personnel carrying out effective on-the-job training. It deals with the two procedures of getting ready to train and carrying out the four basic steps in training in skills, factual information and attitudes. Attitude training is approached from the positive angle of how to train an employee to do a job quickly, correctly and conscientiously.

CLAUD HOWELL PRESENTS

In addition to the above honors, Mr. Howell recently spoke in the Winston-Salem Gallery of Fine Arts on "The Influence Of Italian Painting On Contemporary Art."

A course in good hunting procedures by the Wildlife Resources Commission of the State of North Carolina will be announced later. This course is designed primarily to teach students how to teach others in the use of guns and ammunition and the safety factor relative to each plus a knowledge of sportsmanship. A person must be over twenty-one years of age to enroll for this course.

Teachers Attend NCEETA Meeting

Three faculty members will attend the regular fall meeting of the NCEETA in Charlotte Saturday, October 29. They are Miss Shannon Morton, Thomas C. McCall and Jerry Rossetol.

Accompanying the group will be a former faculty member, Rexford Piner, supervisor of elementary education in the county. Mr. Piner is vice-president of the state organization.

The meeting will be conducted on a workshop plan and will place emphasis on college composition, literature and English curricular.

Arts Society Offers College Memberships

The Wilmington Chamber Arts Society is opening membership to Wilmington College Students.

Membership in the society entitles the owner to attend three concerts. "This offers quite an opportunity for students to enjoy good music as the three performances are to be presented by what are considered three of the best quartets in the world," stated Claude Howell, Arts Society member.

According to Howell, the Society will sell memberships to college students at half price, or three dollars. The concerts will be presented on Sunday evening in Thalian Hall at 8:45 October 23, December 4 and February 12. They will feature the Fine Arts Quartet, the Juliard String Quartet and the Quartetto Italiano.

Circle K Organizes Plans For Year's Service Projects

Circle K officers and committee members for 1960-61 were recently announced by Harvey Radcliff, president, at their monthly dinner meeting. Miss Julia Rochelle, sophomore, was named Circle K Sweetheart and presented the club pin.

H. F. Deal of the North Carolina Highway Patrol was guest speaker. He spoke on Highway Safety, and at the conclusion of his talk answered questions presented by club members. Mr. Deal plans to return and show the club how the new "whammy" works.

Plans were completed for the Circle K Wilmington College Telephone directory which will be distributed to students free of charge early in the Winter quarter. This directory contains the names of students and faculty and also lists telephone numbers and addresses.

The club's Fire Prevention and Evacuation plan, another service project of the club, was discussed. The Circle K plans to place a poster in each room of the College on which will be a floor plan of the room, and evacuation routes pointed out. In connection with this project, fire extinguishers are located and explanations of the alarm system are also being printed on the charts.

Officers for the coming year are: Harvey Radcliff, president; Gene Evans, vice-president; David Milliner, secretary; Rob McGee, treasurer; Elbert Hodges and Tom Wooten, sophomore directors; and Tim Chappell, freshman director.

Committee chairmen appointed were: Doug Hunt, house committee; John Pistolis, social; Pete Camak, projects; Rudy Giechen, service; Chan Prince, financial; and Tim Chappell, membership.

Cheek Teaches Class Of Spanish On TV For Sixth Grades

Mrs. Helena Cheek began classes of Spanish on WECT-TV November 1.

These classes are designed to give the sixth grades in New Hanover County a conversational approach to the language. Various objects are used to increase the vocabulary. Dolls and audio visual aids are used also.

The classes are held each Tuesday and Thursday at one o'clock. Mrs. Cheek teaches for 15 minutes, and the teacher continues from this.

The students are to gain a small vocabulary from this program enabling them to speak the language. Adults can also learn from this program.

SPECIAL NOTICE

The Chorus is seeking members for the winter quarter. It is especially interested in more male voices. Interested persons should contact Loyd Hudson, director.

College Chorus Makes First Performance In Series Of Concerts

Broadway show and novelty music was on the program of the College Chorus at the Lion's Club October 26.

This concert was one of several before Christmas. December 11 the Chorus will make an hour-long video tape for WECT-TV station. December 14 they will sing at the Kiwanis Club.

The Rotary Club has extended an invitation for the Chorus to sing at one of its meetings but has not set a date. They have also been asked to sing at the Lion's Club again.

The Chorus is also planning a program of Christmas music to present the Student Body in an assembly.

Student Council Plans Student Legislature Meeting

There will be a meeting of the State Student Legislature in Raleigh for the purpose of debating submitted bills by SSL members December 1-3.

At this gathering, delegates from all the colleges and junior colleges in North Carolina will meet, and the Student Council of Wilmington College has agreed to participate. As a participating member, the college must submit a bill of either international or state importance and defend this bill before this legislature of students.

The problems immediately confronting the Student Council are the selection and drafting of a bill, and the services of the Student Body are needed. Ideas are needed. Selection and drafting a suitable bill requires help of many.

The State Student Legislature receives wide publicity and is composed of the outstanding student leaders of the State. The legislature provides an opportunity for the student body of Wilmington College to earn an outstanding reputation.

Six members of the Council, Rob McGee, Elbert Hodges, Tim Chappell, James Cotton, John Pistolis and Tommy Cromartie, made at trip to Raleigh on Sunday, October 16, to learn of Wilmington College's participation in this project.

Candidates' Wives Share Spotlight

(ACP)—In Kingsman, Brooklyn College of the city of New York, associate editor Judie Nick writes:

... Historians may well record the 1960 presidential race as the time Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy said,

"I do not spend $30,000 a year on my clothes. I couldn't spend that much unless I wore sable underwear. I probably spend less than Mrs. Nixon."

... To which Pat replied, "I buy my clothes off the rack."

Winter Term Classes Begin November 28 After Short Vacation

Examinations for the autumn quarter will be November 18, 21 and 22. This is the first year that examinations have been three hours long.

Teachers discussed the fact that some students required more time than others so the period was extended. However, the length of the examination is still left up to the teacher.

Grades will be mailed from the office Wednesday, November 23, according to Wilmington College registrar, Mrs. Dorothy Marshall.

Registration for the Winter Quarter will be Monday, November 28. Late registration fee of five dollars will be charged for those registering after November 28. Class will begin at 8:30 a.m. on Tuesday, November 29.

There will be three weeks of class before the Christmas recess begins December 16 at 10:30 p.m.

Theatre Club Gives Masquerade Ball

Saturday, November 5, the Wilmington College Drama Club held the "Beaux Arts Ball" in the auditorium.

A masquerade ball of this type was held last year by the Drama Club for the first time. So the club decided to make it their first social event of this year.

Everyone attending the dance was in costume, and prizes were rewarded to the funniest and most original costumes. Cecil Pfole and Susan Halz were the funniest. The most original were Emily Merritt and Charlie Farrow.

Five main committees were responsible for the dance. The committees and chairmen are as follows: publicity committee—chairman, Kathryn Davis; decorations committee—chairman, Forrest Lee Piver; ticket committee—chairman, Anne West and Rita Sapp (co-business managers); entertainment committee—chairman, Jerry Sullivan; and refreshment committee—chairman, Mary Watt. All members of the club functioned on at least one of these committees.

Swink, Hudson Plan Musical Production

About the latter part of the winter quarter, or the first of the spring quarter, the drama and music departments are planning a musical production.

Douglas Swink of the dramatics department and Loyd Hudson of the music department are now making plans and deciding which particular show they will present for this production.

Elections Prove Exciting

Through the long night and into the next day voters watched the ebb and flow of the political tides, until John Fitzgerald Kennedy was elected the thirty-fifth president of the United States. It was the closest election in modern times. In popular vote as of the morning after, the two candidates were only a percentage point apart.

And here at Wilmington College the election brought about an air of excitement and anticipation as students and faculty members campaigned for their favorite candidate. Young Democrat and Republican Clubs were founded and their meetings were eagerly attended by the students. The familiar faded walls became plastered with campaign posters, and at each turn along the halls students were given buttons to wear. The familiar faculty conference room took on a new look, and the professors' conversations were about politics.

Now the election is over, and we all wonder just what Mr. Kennedy will do with the blank check, drawn on a sound and thriving nation, that he has in his hands. He will go on into the White House with a Democratic House and Senate, and with a vice president whose talents lay in handling Congress. The nation that Jack Kennedy has persuaded to endorse him will expect much, will demand much, and, conceivably, will receive much.

Ten-Foot Radius World

Not too long ago, the juke boxes across America were telling the heartrending story of a teen-aged lad who said he didn't know much about history, geography or trigonometry, but that he did know one thing; that he loved this girl, and if she would only love him too, "what a wonderful world it would be."

Unfortunately, there are too many Americans who show this sort of thinking, or lack of thinking. In an age of jet aircraft, guided missiles and world-wide communication, many of us Americans still consider the limits of our world as ten feet in any direction from where we happen to be at the moment.

When we're in high school, we don't read the newspapers because we don't want to be "different."

When we get to college, we don't pay any attention to the rest of the world because we're too busy trying to get into the "sharpest" Greek organization, or slaving to buy a new car or to dress according to Seventeen Magazine.

After graduation from college, we've got to get into the "best" clubs and buy a home in Country Club Heights.

It is very nice when our world is so limited, because then we don't think we will be bothered by such things as hydrogen bombs that could turn the world into a pile of dust, or the spread of Communism which, if not checked, could engulf the world in a new Dark Age.

Hydrogen bombs won't spare Country Club Heights any more than Main Street, and members of the "sharpest" fraternity or sorority won't be any safer than members of other Greek organizations or Independents.

Nobody's little ten-foot-radius world is safe under present conditions. And it won't be safe until everyone starts thinking about something other than himself long enough to start changing the conditions.—(ACP) From the Bulletin, Kansas State Teachers College, Emporia, Kansas.

New Fraternity Regulation
CHAPEL HILL, N. C. — According to the new fraternity scholarship regulation passed by the University of North Carolina's standing faculty committee on fraternities and sororities, at least 80 per cent of the actives must have a "C" average by the end of the fall semester of 1960.

The first failure to maintain this standard will result in an official warning; the second violation will result in loss of rushing privileges in the following semester and until the grades have been brought up to the standard.

White House Picketed By Students

WASHINGTON—College students picked the White House and paraded before polling places in many cities on election day, demonstrating to promote full civil rights for Negroes.

The purpose of the ballot day protest was to put the winning presidential candidate on notice that he must carry out the civil rights plank in his party's platform.

Now You Know!

The largest university building in the world is the Tomonov University of Moscow. It stands 787 feet, has 32 stories and contains 40,000 rooms.

Favoring Unlimited Cuts

DAVIDSON, N. C.—Favoring an unlimited cut system at Davidson College, Dean of the Faculty, F. E. Johnston, believes that only upper classmen should have the privilege of unlimited cuts. Of course, the 25 per cent rule would still be in effect.

The new system would be a challenge to both students and teachers. It would make the student more responsible for his own education if the restraints were removed. Dean Johnston is in favor of the new system because he thinks that it would make the student's attitude toward learning fundamentally different.

Teachers would no longer have a captive audience and would therefore have to be really on their toes. Professor and student would be part of a team, both trying to learn.

Good Report

The growing number of junior colleges has prompted many observers to question the quality of their programs. The American Chemical Society recently completed a study that showed in chemistry, at least, the training was often better than average. A major reason for this high performance, according to the A.C.S. Committee on Teaching, lies in small classes and well-qualified instructors.

Contrary to popular opinion, the committee said, only 10 per cent of the schools are connected with a high school chemistry department. Most of them function under a science department chairman and one-fourth have a separate chemistry department.

Universities on the "Voice"

Fifteen universities are planning a new series of broadcasts to the transmitted by the Voice of America this fall. Their aim is to provide information about American university life to students and teachers in other countries.

Four types of programs will be offered: (1) brief talks, in the language of the receiving station on study courses and the day-to-day life of foreign students now on American campuses; (2) round-table discussions in Spanish, with both Latin and North American students taking part; (3) documentary films prepared by American universities to show American higher education in action; (4) short news reports concerning recent agricultural research.

WHO READS THE CLASSICS?

(ACP)—Ohio State University's Lantern polled students on their knowledge of the classics (a list compiled from suggestions of professors in five fields) and found that the one book almost all were familiar with was Charles Darwin's "The Origin of Species." "A striking example of 20th century emphasis on scientific education," commented Lantern writer Bram Dijkstra.

Other survey results:

Almost all knowledge the average student has about the classics stems from being confronted with them in the classroom—more specifically, in college.

Few had read French and Spanish masterpieces, indicating, Dijkstra felt, that "though isolationism may have left the United States political scene, it still reigns unshaken in the field of education."

Many O.S.U. students requested copies of the poll questionnaire because it made a good reading list.

Keeping late hours at night doesn't bother the average college student in the least, until it is time to get up in the morning.

By ANNE WEST

The newly formed Drama Department presented the Clown Scenes from "A Midsummer-Night's Dream" in assembly on November 8. Doug W. Swink's first production of the year, sparkling with color and comedy, indicated the talent we hope to enjoy throughout the year.

The general tone of the play was set by the light, gay costumes and by the wonderfully free acting area on stage. Mr. Swink used a black cyclorama and little scenery so that emphasis could be placed on his actors and on the genius of Shakespeare's low comedy.

The acting was generally good, although the tempo maintained was painfully slow for comedy. There were several moments of excellent theatre, notably in the acting of Jerry Sullivan. Mr. Sullivan's portrayal of "Bottom" was marvelous.

His delivery was rapid and blessedly free of Southern accent (as was most of the acting). His acting was fluent and fluid. However, Mr. Sullivan should learn to use facial expression and do away with the dead, drained masque-look which he wears. Douglas Hunt also proved to be talented in his hilarious portrayal of "Flute."

The entire piece was most enjoyable. We congratulate Mr. Swink and his fine cast.

This year as in previous years Wilmington College has a dance band, which is far larger than ever before. But any good band needs, and especially a dance band, even instrumentation distribution. At present our college band needs a piano, trombone and trumpet player. Do you fill the bill?

There is nothing amateurish about the Dance Band. At present they are working on selections by Art Dietrick, Ray Anthony, Glenn Miller and Frank Costello. They range from West Coast Jazz, Modern Television Themes, to old standards like "Stardust."

Dance Band members are Tim Chappell, Jack Burnish, Jim Hudgens, Ronnie Lipsius, Tommy Wallace, Scott McKinnon, Jim Bradshaw and Lawrence Williams.

If you are interested in joining the group who not drop by the auditorium any Wednesday night at 7:30.

Seahawks Open Campaign With Two Wins

Varsity Report

By DENNIS CARNEY

The Seahawks have played and won their first conference game now. Their showing in Charlotte Saturday night against the Owls gives us hope for a bright season.

Tuesday night they beat P.J.C. 93-42. P.J.C. had lost twice to Charlotte. The following Saturday night they travel to Salemburg to meet E.M.I. The militarists recently dropped a game to Presbyterian.

November 25 the Seahawks play their home-opener and first real test against Lennie Rosenbluth's All Stars. The University of North Carolina All American has lined up Joe Quigg, Ray Stanley, Tony Radovich, Al Long and Danny Lotz, all former Tar-Heel standouts, and former Duke star Bobby Joe Harris.

The Seahawks have a tough schedule this year with twenty-six games including those with the "Big Four" college freshmen teams. However, Coach Bill Brooks feels that the Hawks are in for a good season.

"It looks like Frederick, Campbell and possibly Oak Ridge will be the teams to beat," Coach Brooks conjectured. "Oak Ridge may be a real darkhorse. Reports indicate that they are potentially the strongest team in the conference."

In any event, we're all behind the Seahawks 100 per cent, and if we can't always make the out-of-town games, we're going to be Johnny-on-the-spot at the home games.

The game with the Rosenbluth All-Stars is during the break between quarters. However, this doesn't diminish its importance. It's going to be a great game, so let's all turn out and support the Hawks.

The Wilmington College bowling teams recently elected officers. Linwood Whitehurst was elected president; Shannon Abbott, vice-president; Ronnie Lipsuis, secretary-treasurer; and Scott McKinnon, league representative.

Wilmington Quintet Breaks Fast, Scores Runaway Victories

Coach William Brooks' Seahawks sailed through their first conference game Saturday night to wallop Charlotte College's Owls 82-55.

Stimulated to an early lead by the hot shooting of Gene Bogash and Ed Miastkowski, the Hawks hurdled to a 33-15 half-time margin.

Bogash paced the W.C. quintet with 18 points. Miastkowski poured in 16 markers and Larry Edens 14 for Wilmington.

Neil Johnson was the backboard wizard and, although hampered by personal fouls early in the game, controlled both ends of the court for the Hawks.

The Owls were led by Ronnie Greene with 17 points, followed by Chuck Huffstether with 12 points, but the taller and faster Seahawks were not to be stopped.

Employing a full-court press, during the second half, in an effort to slow down the Wilmington five, the Owls saw no results.

The Hawks were successful on 32 of 50 free throws while Charlotte succeeded in converting 15 out of 29.

Increasing the momentum of their attack on Charlotte, the Hawks rolled over Presbyterian Junior College Tuesday night for a 93-42 run-away victory.

Taking the lead from the start, the W.C. quintet nearly doubled the Scotties' score at half-time 43-22. Confident, Coach William Brooks substituted heavily in the second half, but the pace never slowed.

The Hawks hit on 51 per cent of their shots in getting 36 field goals, 17 of 34 in the first half, and 19 of 34 in the second.

The Scotties hit only 22.9 per cent the entire game with just 16 of 70 attempts from the floor.

Led by Gene Bogash with 18 points and Neil Johnson with 17, all five W.C. starters hit in double figures. Both Bogash and Johnson were invincible in controlling the backboards.

Eugene Bogash Player of Week

Every season in athletics we find new faces among the prospects recruited. This year is no exception.

Coach Brooks has gone to many parts of the country to recruit the future basketball players of Wilmington College Seahawks, and to acquire the best possible players that he thinks will do the job. One such individual is Eugene Bogash.

Eugene was born January 9, 1941, in the small town of Winamac, Ind. He attended North Judson school which has the grades from first to twelve.

A six-foot-four, 195-pound lad, Eugene became interested in basketball in the sixth grade, where he started by playing intramural sports. He has, by constant practice and effort, developed into a fine player. This is the reason he was the leading scorer and rebounder on his team. He also was elected to the All-Area and All-Conference teams, and was the most valuable player on the team.

The University of South Carolina, Drake University and Michigan State are a few of the other colleges who would have liked to have gotten his talents.

One of them may end up getting him for he plans to attend either South Carolina or Drake after doing work here. The sports staff wishes him a fine year.

Five WC Representatives Attend Legislative Meeting

Five Wilmington College students, Tim Chappell, Elbert Hodges, William Loughlin, David Milliner and Rob McGee attended the North Carolina State Student Legislature meeting in Raleigh Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The purpose of this meeting was to present certain bills appropriated by each participating college. Each college was required to have its bill drawn up and ready to present at a designated time.

Thursday, the delegates registered at 11 a.m., and at 3 p.m. the first plenary session was held. The delegates recessed to their respective Houses at 4:30, and then the colleges began presenting their bills.

Guilford College was first to present its bill, and following this adjournment was made for supper. At 7:45 p.m. the second legislative session began with the UNC presenting its bill. Following UNC were Johnson C. Smith, Woman's College of Duke University and Livingstone College. At 11 p.m. the second session was recessed.

The third legislative assembly began at 9 a.m. Friday. East Carolina was first with Davidson, N. C. State, Duke University, Queens College and Wilmington College following.

Wilmington College presented a bill concerning the appropriation tions by the state of North Carolina for capitol or permanent improvements for community colleges. The bill was passed unanimously in the senate.

At 7:30 there was a banquet with a modern jazz combo concert as entertainment.

The fifth legislative session began at 9 a.m. on Saturday with St. Augustine College presenting its bill. At 10:45 the second plenary session was held for the purpose of considering the bills passed by both houses and senate, election of officers, awards and old and new business.

Enrollment Decreases For Winter Quarter

Enrollment for winter quarter at Wilmington College is 555, which is 54 less than last quarter. There were 441 students last year during the winter quarter.

There were 99 students enrolled for the autumn quarter who did not return for the winter, but there are 45 new students enrolled.

There are 239 freshmen men, 90 freshmen women, 128 sophomore men, 40 sophomore women, 27 freshman nurses and 20 sophomore nurses. Enrolled also are four special students (women) and seven special students (men).

Students represent 32 of the 100 counties in North Carolina with 357 from New Hanover. The states of Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Maine, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, South Carolina and Virginia are also represented. There is also one foreign student from China.

Howell's Painting Opens In State Show

Claude Howell's painting of Saint Marks Square entered in the new North Carolina Art Show was accepted for the annual North Carolina Artists Exhibition in the North Carolina Museum of Art in Raleigh. The show will be open this month.

Mr. Howell also lectured last week in Salisbury at the Rowan County Art Association. He judged their annual exhibitions.

Sophomores Present Superlatives At Dance

Superlatives

Sophomore superlatives recognized at the Christmas dance were: Judy Avery, Buck O'Shields, Tommy Cromartie, Becky Lockamy, Gene Evans, Janice Collins and Doug Hunt.

Sophomores announced their superlatives at the annual Christmas Dance which was held Friday night, December 9, at the Cape Fear Country Club.

These superlatives were elected by a special election on Tuesday, December 6. Chairman of elections, Elbert Hodges, was in charge of this election.

Superlatives are Carol Hewett and Tommy Cromartie, friendliest; Bessie Zezeffilis and Rob McGee, most intellectual; Judy Avery and Buck O'Shields, best all around; Becky Lockamy and Gene Evans, wittiest; Mary Adams and Doug Hunt, most talented; Cecile Taylor and Elbert Hodges, most school spirit; Janice Collins and John Pistolis, best dressed; and Sue Trask and Don Honeycutt, best looking.

The dance was sponsored by the student council. Tim Chappell, president of the freshman class, was general chairman of the dance. Others on the committee were Jim Buie, James Cotton and William Loughlin. Elbert Hodges was responsible for distribution of the tickets. Walter Biggs is the faculty advisor for the student council.

Faculty Wives Club Gives Turkey Dinner

Wilmington College Faculty Wives Club entertained the entire faculty and Board of Trustees at a turkey dinner, Saturday, in St. Paul's Lutheran Church Parish House.

The officers in charge of the arrangements for the dinner were: Mrs. T. P. Brown, president; Mrs. David Collins, vice-president; Mrs. Loyd Hudson, secretary - treasurer; Mrs. Bill Brooks, historian; and Doug Swink, entertainment.

Mrs. Hudson and Mrs. Brown served on the kitchen committee. The table setting was provided by Mrs. Tommy Lupton and her committee of Mrs. Adrian Hurst and Mrs. Thomas Gay. Mrs. Frank Allen was chairman of the serving committee. Assisting her were: Mrs. Carol Gay, Mrs. V. W. Herlevich, Mrs. Calvin Hood and Mrs. Rex Willis.

The decorating committee was headed by Mrs. Tom McCall, with Mrs. Bill Brooks, Mrs. Calvin Doss and Mrs. David Collins, assisting her. Mrs. Duncan Randall and Mrs. George Rountree were in charge of the clean-up procedures following the event.

Hospitality committee was headed by Mrs. Marshall Crews, assisted by Mrs. William Randall.

Mrs. Doug Swink headed the entertainment committee, with Mrs. Gerald Roosevelt assisting her. Part of the entertainment for the dinner was provided by members of the Wilmington College "Seatoners" under the direction of Loyd Hudson.

Four Students Top Dean's List

Four straight-A students head the Dean's list for the autumn quarter. They are Frances Best, Lillie Hardee, Margaret Haskett and Bessie Zezeffilis.

A total of 51 students made the Dean's List. Of these, nine are from Wilmington and the remaining are residents of this area.

Construction Of Buildings Nears Half-way Mark

Construction of the three buildings on the college's new campus is nearing the half-way mark.

Fred Graham, chairman of the Building and Grounds committee, which is overseeing the construction of the buildings on the vast campus site, gave a progress report on the buildings in an interview.

"We're about 45 per cent completed or maybe even a little better than that," he said.

Ahead Of Schedule

"And I think we're running a couple of weeks ahead of schedule because of the nice weather we've been having," Mr. Graham added.

"Our present schedule calls for the students to move into the new buildings, installation of utilities June 6," Dr. William Randall, president, explained.

"We hope to have the first phase completely finished by then."

The first phase consists of the construction of the three large buildings, installation of utilities, road construction and the laying of a network of sidewalks between the buildings.

The buildings are on a 620-acre tract that will be the campus of Wilmington College.

Contracted at a cost of $1,130,000, they are a library-administration building, academic building and a student activities building.

Accommodations For 1500
When completed, they will have 70,000 square feet of space and will accommodate 1,500 students.

Financing of the construction of the new site, comes from a $800,000 New Hanover County

Buildings Near Their Half-way Mark

Building activities maintain a steady pace at the new campus site. Construction work is expected to be complete by late May.

Seahawks Win Six, Capture First Place

Varsity Report

The Hawks have really taken wing this season, soaring over such formidable opponents as the N.C. State and U.N.C. Freshmen. Touching ground again only twice, brought down beneath the big guns of All-American Lennie Rosenbluth and his confederates, and Chowan College, the Hawks have for the most part remained air-borne swooping four times to claw E.M.I., Charlotte College, Fredericks and Campbell College.

McIntyre has been the big scorer in the last six games, followed closely by Johnson. Johnson has been incomparable under the baskets, and Bogash is always dependably on the spot.

Terry Dunn has taken over Ed Miastkowski's job since Ed was hurt in the game against Rosenbluth. Dunn has performed with matchless ease, filling the shoes of a top-notch basketball player and displaying the kind of warm attitude on the floorboards which is both refreshing and encouraging.

By the time this paper comes out there will be only a couple of days left before the Christmas holidays, so let us take this opportunity to wish you a very Merry Christmas. And don't forget Friday night's game against the U.N.C. Freshmen.

Seven Girls Lead Cheering In Support Of Seahawks

Eight girls were chosen the latter part of October to act as a joint impetus to the cheering fans who would attend the forthcoming Wilmington College sports events. They were chosen with full awareness of the important role they would play in communicating to their team the knowledge that the alma mater is backing them 100 per cent.

These girls were the pick of approximately 20 tryouts and it is only fair to our readers and sports fans that they should know a few of their qualifications.

Avery Cheering Head

The head cheerleader, Judy Avery, is a 5'4" sophomore from Wilmington. She is familiar to us as a cheerleader for the Hawks from last year. Judy is also the secretary of the Student Council and has been both a May Court and Fledgling Beauty. Her hobbies are piano and dancing.

Blue-eyed, blond-haired Judy Hayes stands 5'6½". A freshman and Wilmingtonian, Judy has had previous experience as a cheerleader in junior high. She is a business major and plans to become an accountant. She has been a May Queen and her hobbies are music and art.

Lou McAuley is from Clarkton. She is a sophomore and comes to W.C. from Greensboro College. She was a cheerleader for three years in high school and is a business major. She plans to become an airline hostess and her hobbies are records and dancing.

Experienced Leaders

Red-haired Brenda Crump is a sophomore. She has had cheerleading experience in junior high and was one of the familiar faces on the cheering-squad at W.C. last year. Brenda is a business major; has an eye for her trade. Her future plans include marriage. She likes to swim and water ski.

Virginia Murphy, 5'2", hails from Moultrie, Ga. A freshman, she wants to become a cosmetologist. Virginia attained superior ratings in baton twirling throughout her high school years. She was "Miss Moultrie Junior Civitan" for two years and a May Court beauty.

Ivanhoe has contributed Cecile Taylor to the W.C. cheerleading squad. Cecile attended Campbell College last year and was a cheerleader in high school.

She wants to become a secretary and to marry a good-looking man. She has a number of honors such as being selected "Bladen County Dairy Princess." She was valedictorian of her high school and won a total of eighteen medals. Her hobbies are collecting newspaper articles and pictures.

Pat Moore is a brown-eyed, 5'5" freshman with previous cheerleading experience in junior high. Her course of study is accounting, and she would like to become a bookkeeper or private secretary. She was an R.O.T.C. sponsor, a senior judge and a class officer her sophomore and junior years. Her hobbies are dancing, reading, singing, piano and fashion designing.

A future teacher of political science is brown-haired, brown-eyed Genie Goodman. Genie is a freshman from Greensboro and her hobbies are dancing, singing, boys and talking.

Scrambling Quintet Edges Past Camels To Head Conference

Wilmington College Seahawks hit 60 per cent of their field goals in the first half and combined some red-hot free throw shooting in the second half to topple the Campbell Camels 86-82 Tuesday night at Campbell to squeeze into first place in the Virginia-Carolina conference.

Neil Johnson was the Hawks' big gun of the evening with 27 points followed by Ken McIntyre with 26 markers. Ed Miastkowski, having recovered from the injury incurred in the Rosenbluth game, steadied the Seahawks when the going got rough.

There were no witches in Salemburg the Saturday night the Hawks flew in to tear E.M.I. 102-83. Big Neil Johnson, Gene Bogash and Ed Miastkowski turned on plenty of magic, but the 62 points tossed in between them were very real.

Johnson scored 26 points, pulled down 16 rebounds and set up his teammates for numerous easy shots. The 6'6" center hit 9 out of 10 tries from the floor and 8 out of 15 free throws.

First Defeat

The Seahawks were handed their first defeat the following Friday night. Lennie Rosenbluth led a group of all-star cagers to victory over the hard-fighting W.C. quintet. Behind the All-American's 30 point effort the visitors squeezed a 75-69 win out of the home team.

Taking their Friday night defeat in stride, the Hawks bounced back after a slow start Saturday night to rap Charlotte College's Owls 99-48.

Kenny McIntyre paced the home club with a 25-point second half effort to finally rally behind the almost single-handed maintenance of Neil Johnson in the first half. The Owls trailed by only 7 points at halftime, but the Hawks came back from their break like a new team and banked 63 points in the final 20 minutes of action.

Hawks Soar

Hitting on 55.9 per cent of their shots in the second half, the Hawks unleashed a devastating scoring attack against North Carolina State's Freshmen the following Thursday night in Raleigh.

Johnson and McIntyre each hooped 24 points to lead Coach Bill Brooks' team to a victory unparalleled in any game thus far this season.

U.N.C. Vanquished

The University of North Carolina Tar Babies came down Saturday night to try their hand at beating the Hawks who seemed so completely unawakened by the prospect of playing such heralded school as State College and beating them with such gusto.

All five Seahawk starters broke into double figures as the Hawks chalked up win six with a 73-57 triumph. Edens chipped in 16 points, Johnson swished 14, McIntyre 19, Bogash 12 and Dunn checked in 10 tallies.

State Freshmen Return

Blood in their eye, the State Freshmen loped into Wilmington Wednesday night to seek vengeance for the sound beating dealt them by the Hawks earlier.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE, WILMINGTON, N. C.

Mixed Chorus Prepares Musical Production For Spring

March 24, the curtain will fall on the first Wilmington College Theatre musical production, "Earnest In Love." The operetta, produced jointly by Loyd Hudson and Doug Swink will, provide an evening of delight. Let's take a look at the men behind the production.

Mr. Hudson was born and attended high school in Mt. Airy, Iowa. He received his BME Degree from Drake University of Des Moines in 1948, and he earned his MM Degree from Indiana University in 1952.

Teaches in Iowa

Iowa found him teaching in the Sheldon Public School, where he taught grades one through junior college. After leaving Iowa, Mr. Hudson then journeyed to Texas and taught at the Texas Lutheran College in Seguin, Tex., for a year.

This musical personality was a member of the world renowned "Pennsylvanians" and studied conducting under Fred Waring.

With the year 1954, Mr. Hudson arrived at New Hanover High School where he remained until 1959. He is well remembered for the fine musical productions he directed—"The Song of Norway," "The Merry Widow," "Carousel" and "High Button Shoes."

Writes Operetta

While in Iowa, Mr. Hudson wrote the operetta "Where But In America," for which he received a gold medal given by the Principal Fredman's Foundation. Again in 1959 he received another medal from Gov. Luther Hodges for a musical cutting presented at the N. C. Teachers Convention.

Kiwanis' "Man of the Year," director of music at St. Pauls

Engineers' Club Meets

At the monthly meeting of the Engineers' Club, January 18, new members were taken into the club. They are Jimmy Stamp, Paul Thoburn, Thomas Maryscuk, Pete Honsley, Richard Kelly and Bill Horne.

Club pins were awarded to all members. These pins were established this year, and the pattern will be available for clubs of the future. Carol Hewett, the club sweetheart, attended to receive her pin.

The club also finished two of its service projects. They distributed the March of Dimes canisters in the downtown area. They also made arrangements for the state highway department to haul five truckloads of dirt in the College parking lot, and the Board of Education will have the lot packed and leveled.

So pervasive is the academic coloration of the Kennedy administration that one fellow on being told Dean Rusk had been appointed Secretary of State, asked, "Yeah, but what's his first name?"

Lutheran Church and professor of music at Wilmington College are only a few attributes of Mr. Hudson.

"A genius in Stage Craft." That could only be Mr. Swink, head of the Drama Department and joint director of "Earnest In Love."

Swink from Richmond

A native of Richmond, Va., Mr. Swink attended St. Christopher High School. He received his BS degree from Davidson College and his MA Degree from the University of Richmond.

While fulfilling his military obligation he was a member of the First French Army, and was stationed in Africa, Italy, France and Paris during World War II.

A flare for drama led him to play in summer stock at Priscilla Beach Theatre in Connecticut. It was there that he met his wife, Kay. Mr. Swink played in the outdoor drama "The Sword of Gideon," which toured abroad, and has done professional television acting.

Directs Theatres

His unlimited experience as a drama teacher was culminated as he directed little theatres in Wilson, Gastonia, Kings Mountain and the "Straw-Hat Summer Theatre" here at Wilmington College.

The WC Straw Hat Theatre, under his direction, produced Moliere's "The Imaginary Invalid," in 1959 and "The Boy Friend" in 1960, by Sandy Wilson.

That both are tops in their field is doubted by no one. Won't you come to "Earnest In Love" and see for yourself?

Fledgling's Deadline Comes February 3

One half of the Fledgling goes off to the printer February 3; this includes the classes, faculty, half of the features, half of the sports and half of the activity section. The remaining half goes off February 20 and the baseball section March 7.

Pictures are being taken by the student publications' photographer, Lee Dietz, except for some group pictures and dividers which are being made by Carl Davis of Delmar Studios. The class sections are to be longer this year.

Rita Sapp is activity editor with Doris Hardison, Judy Hayes, Pat Craig, Anne West and Mary C. Hodgins on the staff.

Mitchell Todd and Jim Hugdens are in charge of the sports.

Sylvia Carter, Dian Gritzke and Charlotte Roycroft are the typists.

Bessie Zefzill is business manager, and Barbara Bordeaux and Mary Ann Itner are assistants.

Separate staffs work individually and have their own meetings. The entire staff usually meets at a member's home.

Election Names Hewett Queen Of May Court

May Court

Homecoming Plans Progress; Include Parade, Game, Dance

Plans for the Homecoming weekend, February 10, are being made by the Circle K and Engineers' Club.

The Homecoming Queen will be elected by the student body in a regular election, and she will be present at the half time at the ball game between Wilmington and Oak Ridge February 10.

Queen and court will be in a parade Friday afternoon at four o'clock.

One convertible car will be the float and will be decorated with fancy paper. Elbert Hodges is chairman of this float. Approximately fifteen other cars will also be in the parade.

These cars will be trimmed in paper and will have the name of each contestant on the side.

The parade will travel north on Third to Red Cross, down Red Cross to Front, south on Front to Market and up Market to the College. Rudy Geischen is in charge of the parade.

A dance is planned to be held in the college auditorium after the game. John Pistolls is chairman of the dance committee. Admission will be $1.00 in advance and $1.50 at the door. Ken Wooten and the Corvettes will provide the music.

The Engineers' Club with Bill Horne as chairman, is in charge of publicity.

Fledgling Staff

Dance In Spring Honors Attendants

Carol Hewett will reign as the May Queen of Wilmington College this spring.

Martha Bordeaux is maid of honor. Julia Rochelle and Judy Avery are the sophomore attendants. The freshmen representatives are Pat Moore and Genie Goodman.

Carol was elected by the student body on January 20. She is a representative for the sophomore class and was recently named "Friendliest." Carol was sweetheart of the Engineers' Club last year as well as this year. Last year she was a Fledgling Beauty and a representative also.

Selected to serve as maid of honor was Martha Bordeaux. Martha comes to Wilmington College from New Hanover High. She is activities editor of the Fledgling, and modeling and art are her hobbies.

Julia Rochelle, sophomore attendant, is also sweetheart of the Circle K Club. Julia is majoring in medical technology. The other sophomore attendant, Judy Avery, is secretary of the student council. Judy was also a Fledgling beauty last year.

Poetry Anthology Picks Two Wilcol Pen Pushers

Anne West and Dennis Carney, president and vice-president of the Pen Pusher's Club, were recently notified of membership in the National Poetry Anthology.

This anthology is made up of various entries from colleges and universities throughout the United States. The winning selections were: "Hope for '60" by Anne and "The Wizard" by Dennis. Both poems will appear in the Pen Pusher's magazine "With Pen In Hand" this spring.

Circle K Receives Nine Members

New members were inducted into the Circle K Club January 12. New members included Tommy Green, Bobby Way, Jerry Sullivan, Lee Davis, Jim Worthington, Ken Urquhart, Danny Lockamy, Scott McKinnon and Ronald Lee.

January 19, the club appointed various committees to carry out plans of the homecoming weekend, February 10.

Circle K, Engineers' Sponsor Recent Dance

The Engineers' Club and the Circle K Club jointly sponsored a dance after the basketball game Friday, January 13.

This was the first dance of this sort this year. "It was very successful," said David Milliner, secretary of Circle K Club, "and we hope to sponsor more in the future for the benefit of the students."

Today's News Makes Puzzle

Each week's news is filled with the events making up the history courses that perhaps our grandchildren will explore. And as we look closer we can discover that this pattern of history we are fitting together today can well determine whether or not there will be a tomorrow and if our democratic way of life can survive.

We see the Two-Front War . . . First, there is Cuba, who dealt the U.S. a hard blow by ordering the immediate withdrawal of American Embassy staffs, with the exception of a minimum eleven persons, and thus triggered the official break of diplomatic relations by former President Eisenhower. The results of this remain to be seen although reaction was generally favorable in the U.S., the new administration and Latin America.

Secondly, there is the existing Laos invasion by Communist troops from Viet Nam. Our stand? "In view of the present situation in Laos," said the Pentagon, "we are taking normal precautionary actions to increase the readiness of our forces in the Pacific."

And as if in answer to the question of peace, Soviet Premier Khrushchev sent New Year's hopes of peace to Kennedy. In return he received a cool reply. As time passes, the pieces to the puzzle will fall into place, we are sure. But it will be finding which piece goes where and placing it there gently or with force that will be left up to the new administration.

Fire Safety — Important

The Circle K Service Project on Fire Prevention brings to mind many things that we could do to prevent the destruction of our present building. One of the foremost dangers lies in the careless throwing of cigarette butts on the hall and classroom floors. Not only do they endanger the safety of the student, but also they throw a damper on the present Fire Safety program and are a sore eye to the public.

Remember the age old prophesy that "If you do something three times it becomes a habit?" This could very well prove true. And if it does, then we as students about to enter a brand new college building should do something right now to keep it always the beautiful school it will be. What can we do now, you may ask. We can this very day resolve as individuals to place our cigarette butts in the ash cans provided, and encourage our friends to do likewise. Won't you join us in launching the music of cleanliness, beauty and safety on our new campus, and at the same time make sure we keep our present one safe until we say goodbye?

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor:

For several years students have not only supported the "Seahawks" at the basketball games in Brogden Hall, but have also traveled by bus and car to out of town games. How do our players feel about having us there to back them up? "When we know that students are with us cheering us on it gives us a sorta extra drive and makes us want to win even more," said Seahawker Ed Maskowski.

We have one preference game left away from home when we play Louisville. If you would be interested in going by chartered bus to this game, give your name to Peggy Aldridge in the office.

"Hey, hey what do you say! Let's go on that bus and go!"

Hudson, Swink Direct "Ernest In Love"

Ernest In Love, the musical production being presented by the Mixed Chorus, is based on Oscar Wilde's comic masterpiece, "The Importance of Being Earnest." The book is by Anne Crosswell, and the music is by Lee Pockriss.

The story involves a rich variety of wonderful situations; two young gentlemen of late Victorian London and their respective lady loves; the confusion led to by the invention of a fictitious relative — called "Bunburying" — for purpose of alibi; babies in handbags; mixed identities; and other carterious delights from the master of mad plots, Oscar Wilde.

Some songs from the score are: "Lost," "A Handbag Is Not a Proper Mother," "A Wicked Man," "Metaphorically Speaking," and "Perfection."

Directors Name Casts

The cast, selected by Loyd Hudson of the music department and Douglas Swink of the dramatics department, taken from the College Chorus, is as follows:

Jack — Jerry Ely (Jack is also called Ernest)

Algernon Moncrieff — Kermit Norris

Gwendolen — Judy Avery

Cecily — Dixie Strangh

Lane — Doug Hunt

Effie — Pat Moore

Lady Bracknell — Julia Rochelle

Miss Prism — Betsy Currin

M.C.D., Jr.

With this poem as the theme for his first book of poetry, a young master of metrics begins his literary career. Millard C. Dunn, Jr., is already achieving peaks of perfection in his intricately simple rhythm patterns and subtlety of language. His silver lines . . . Beneath the huddling, light shadow sweep robins and crows away and leaves the readers mind free to dance in time with his faultless music.

We cannot doubt the sincerity of these poems, or the passion of their expression; but for a man with such a great capacity for the music of rhyme, Mr. Dunn seems to be lacking woefully in imagination. His book, from time to time, suffers from want of variety. Four values alone control his thought and almost strangle his poetry. He is saved, however, by the matchless beauty of his language and the liquid fluency of his rhyme. Experiments such as:

The witch—; es' fiend—; ish laugh—; ter rings; At fear; of all; unhol—; y things; make this book a worthwhile and important first offering.

Anne West

His intent is to marry Miss Gwendolen Fairfax.

Gwendolen Fairfax is in her twenties, and she is a very outspoken young lady, equally intent on marrying Mr. Worthing.

Lady Bracknell is a society matron with two passions in life—cucumber sandwiches and a proper match for her daughter, he is Gwendolen's mother and Mr. Algernon Moncrieff's aunt.

Algernon Moncrieff is slightly younger than Jack, and is not at all earnest about anything, and not intent on marrying anyone.

Miss Prism is a spinster whose sights are intently set on the Reverend Dr. Chasuble.

Dr. Chasuble is the local pastor, intent only on remaining single.

Cecily Cardew is Mr. Worthing's excessively pretty ward who is only just 18. Her desire in life is to meet a wicked man.

Lane is Alg's manservant.

Effie is just a country maid.

Gwendolen's personal maid in London is Alice.

Perkins is Jack's manservant in town.

The accompanists will be Sandra Willoughby and Verta Rhodes.

By arrangement with Music Theatre, Inc., the show will be presented in the College Auditorium Friday and Saturday nights, March 24 and 25.

Seatone Notes

Last year the College had a male quartet who served the school well. This year there is a Mixed Quartet, and they have been rehearsing and preparing songs to sing with the College Chorus.

There are three sophomores and one freshman in the quartet. Members of the quartet are Mary Adams, Verta Rhodes, Jerry Ely and Doug Hunt.

Mary Adams graduated from New Hanover High School in 1959. She was a member of the Hanover Singers for two years. She has been in two musical productions and sung many times on television. Mary is studying math and science and plans to continue her music throughout school and also after school.

Verta Rhodes was in the Hanover Singers one year and also is a graduate of New Hanover High School. She serves as organist for the First Christian Church. Verta is studying Elementary Education and would like to become a music teacher.

Jerry Ely came to Wilmington College from Pfeiffer College where he was very active in the music department. He graduated from New Hanover in 1956. While in high school he sang in the Hanover Singers for three years. Jerry is majoring in secondary education.

Doug Hunt, a 1959 graduate of New Hanover High School, is well remembered for his outstanding performances in school and civic circles. Secondary education is his major and he definitely plans to continue his musical training.

Seahawks Maintain Lead In Conference

Varsity Report

We are all looking forward to the big Homecoming game the 17th of February. Judging from our previous tight squeeze with Oak Ridge, it may prove quite a night all the way around.

The tournament is another big attraction which will commence in Wilmington February 16. It will no doubt add to the excitement of the season and with our hard fighting team we can count on a great week-end.

Miastkowski Great

We cannot applaud the terrific basketball handling and play-making of Ed Miastkowski enough. He has led the Hawks to victory after victory this year with his incomparable calmness in the tightest spots imaginable. It's hard to conceive of a Wilmington College basketball team without Ed, but let us take this opportunity to thank him for the spirit and ability he has shown which will, without a doubt, stand as a hallmark to future WC basketballers.

Neither can we disregard the efforts and successes of any of the other members of the team. Neil Johnson has been a mainstay; Eugene Bogash has proven himself indispensable along with the colorful Ken McIntyre. Larry Edens, Phil Stephenson and Terry Dunn have each earned our gratitude. Marshall, Haywood, Kuns, the entire team and last but not least Coach Bill Brooks—we thank you for a wonderful season.

High Hopes for Baseball

Here we stand out in front in basketball, facing baseball season. We expect big things from the Hawks when they change suits and crane their necks for the fence instead of the basket. We have no doubts that our expectations will be well met.

All those interested in trying out for the Tenn's team had better hurry and sign up in the office. Let's have a good tennis team this year, too, and walk away with all the honors.

A Moment Out

Sleepy Ed Miastkowski relaxes momentarily as Ken McIntyre, Larry Edens and Campbell players look on in tense anticipation.

Nine Dramatic Loop Wins Propel Hawks Toward Season Finale

With the homecoming game against Oak Ridge coming up February 10, the Seahawks have maintained a snappy first place to make that affair one of triumph as well as pomp.

Their game against P.J.C. was a slow starter due to the opposition's efforts to freeze the game; however the dauntless Hawks were not to be outmaneuvered and, behind the guns of top-scorer Ken McIntyre, checked in with 71-57 win.

Sharp Shooting

Fine free throw shooting and a solid 45 percent accuracy from the floor enabled the Wilmington College five to recover from a three-point halftime deficit and put away an 83-78 conference victory over Campbell College in a game just previous to the P.J.C. engagement.

Ed Miastkowski was a key performer in the contest, along with big Neil Johnson, who topped the game's scorers with 22 points. Easy Ed dropped in 17 markers.

The most outstanding game of this period came on a Saturday night against Frederick. Rally-master Miastkowski sunk two perfect foul throws with 16 seconds of playing time left on the clock to give the Hawks a thrill-filled 83-81 comeback cage victory over the Lions which had the crowded gym reverberating with approval.

Keep First Place

The hard-fought victory kept Wilmington College in first place. After getting but three points in the first half when the locals were connecting on only 10 out of 30 pokes from the floor against the fine defense thrown up by the visitors, Miastkowski came back in the second portion of the scoring fray to tally 23 points and capture high scoring honors for the evening with 26 markers.

The Hawks had been having it relatively easy until the Frederick game. They toppled Louisville with a 102-75 triumph run away. The five Hawk starters all were double-figure shooters, Miastkowski with 21, Gene Bogash 12, Johnson 23, McIntyre 14 and Larry Edens with 15 points.

Revenge Loss

The Chowan Braves had their feathers clipped in a 102-62 revenge match. The Seahawks, with murder in their eye, swooped to claw the visiting Murfreesboro crew to nail down their thirteenth victory at that time.

The vengeful Hawks hit on better than half of their tries from the floor with 38 out of 74 and connected 26 times in 36 chances at the charity line. Johnson and McIntyre scored 24 and 22 points, respectively.

The night before the Wilmington quintet routed the Citadel Freshmen 117-96. High scoring all around was the impetus to a scorching victory. Miastkowski hit for 21, Bogash 14, Johnson 20, McIntyre 19 and Edens 19.

The Oak Ridge game was another narrow win for the Hawks with a 78-77 margin. While McIntyre and Miastkowski were pacing the Seahawks with 16 and 25 points, respectively, Ed-

BOWLING HIGHLIGHTS

The high scoring Grey Ghosts led by anchorman Tim Chappell, strengthened their grip on first place in the college bowling league, defeating the second place Woodchoppers in 3 out of 4 games January 13.

Chip Jordan rolled a 165 average for the Woodchoppers, but the over-all scoring strength of the Grey Ghosts was too much for them. Chappell had a 167 average; Ronnie Lipsius 162; Tommy Thompson 151, and Wilbur Brown a 145 average.

Closing fast with the Woodchoppers are the Rolling Rebels captained by Randy Davis Shannon Abbott led the Rebels to three wins against one loss over the Splits to move within one-half game of the Woodchoppers. Gordon Ross, Charlie Robuck and Rudy Gieschen rolled at 154, 148 and 150 averages, respectively, for the Splits as they lost two close games.

As the split season goes into its final day this week, the Grey Ghosts feel confident of winning the first-half championship, but a new season begins next week with each team ready to take the second-half title.

Chappell has top average in the college bowling league for the first time this season. Taking over from Ross, who has led the league most of the season, Chappell has been rolling close to a 175 average lately to increase his season average to 147.

January 6, Chappell also replaced teammate Brown as holder of high series with a 546 set against Wilbur's 542. Abbott holds third high series with a 501 set.

The Robuck brothers, Lloyd and Charlie, are making high game records a family affair. Lloyd has a 215 game, and Charlie a 207 game. In third place, four pons behind Charlie is Chappell with a 203 game.

The high average bowler is not always the one who carries his team to victory. On the contrary, many times the average bowlers come through with a high game to secure the win.

Some of the reliables of this season have been Jordan and

Player Of Month Big Ed Miastkowski Basketball Terror

In each issue of the Seahawk we will salute one player and at this time we would like to salute Ed Miastkowski, who hails from Floral Park, Long Island, New York. Ed, nicknamed "Mousy" occupies the forward position on the basketball court. His towering 6'3" height makes him a valuable man to have beneath the boards when it comes to grabbing rebounds with both offensive and defensive. At this time "Mousy" is averaging a little better than 17 points a game, although an injury kept "Mousy" from playing in a few of the Hawks games.

Other than being an outstanding player on the basketball courts, Ed is also a hard working player whether on the practice court or in an actual game. In his modesty, he has a great deal of respect for his teammates and says little, if anything at all, about his own personal gains.

Ed's high school records tell the story for his present success upon the court. He played four years of high school ball, establishing his school's scoring and rebounding record for one game. Ed scored 32 points and grabbed 24 rebounds in separate games to establish these records. He also made All-City and All-County during his bright high school career.

In asking for his opinion of this year's team, he said, "This year's team is better on the backboards than any other season. As far as other things go the team is as good as last year's or even better." Lots of good basketball playing to a talented player.

Lenwood Whitehurst who both rallied 196 games for the Woodchoppers. Doug Hunt and Jimmy Herring rolled 160 games for the Rolling Rebels, and Scott McKinnon has rolled 174 for the Splits.

Altogether it has been a season of surprises and upsets in which anyone can take the honors.

Today's News Makes Puzzle

Each week's news is filled with the events making up the history courses that perhaps our grandchildren will explore. And as we look closer we can discover that this pattern of history we are fitting together today can well determine whether or not there will be a tomorrow and if our democratic way of life can survive.

We see the Two-Front War . . . First, there is Cuba, who dealt the U.S. a hard blow by ordering the immediate withdrawal of American Embassy staffs, with the exception of a minimum eleven persons, and thus triggered the official break of diplomatic relations by former President Eisenhower. The results of this remain to be seen although reaction was generally favorable in the U.S., the new administration and Latin America.

Secondly, there is the existing Laos invasion by Communist troops from Viet Nam. Our stand? "In view of the present situation in Laos," said the Pentagon, "we are taking normal precautionary actions to increase the readiness of our forces in the Pacific."

And as if in answer to the question of peace, Soviet Premier Khrushchev sent New Year's hopes of peace to Kennedy. In return he received a cool reply. As time passes, the pieces to the puzzle will fall into place, we are sure. But it will be finding which piece goes where and placing it there gently or with force that will be left up to the new administration.

Fire Safety — Important

The Circle K Service Project on Fire Prevention brings to mind many things that we could do to prevent the destruction of our present building. One of the foremost dangers lies in the careless throwing of cigarette butts on the hall and classroom floors. Not only do they endanger the safety of the student, but also they throw a damper on the present Fire Safety program and are a sore eye to the public.

Remember the age old prophesy that "If you do something three times it becomes a habit?" This could very well prove true. And if it does, then we as students about to enter a brand new college building should do something right now to keep it always the beautiful school it will be. What can we do now, you may ask. We can this very day resolve as individuals to place our cigarette butts in the ash cans provided, and encourage our friends to do likewise. Won't you join us in launching the missile of cleanliness, beauty and safety on our new campus, and at the same time make sure we keep our present one safe until we say goodbye?

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor:

For several years students have not only supported the "Seahawks" at the basketball games in Brodgen Hall, but have also traveled by bus and car to out of town games. How do our players feel about having us there to back them up? "When we know that students are with us cheering us on its gives us a sort of extra drive and makes us want to win even more," said Seahawker Ed Miaszkowski.

We have one conference game left away from home when we play Louisburg. If you would be interested in going by chartered bus to this game, give your name to Peggy Aldridge in the office.

"Hey, hey what do you say? Let's get on that bus and go."

Ernest In Love, the musical production being presented by the Mixed Chorus, is based on Oscar Wilde's comic masterpiece, "The Importance of Being Earnest." The book is by Anne Crosswell, and the music is by Lee Pockriss.

The story involves a rich variety of wonderful situations; two young gentlemen of late Victorian London and their respective lady love; the confusion led to by the invention of a fictitious relative — called "Bunburying" — for purpose of alibi; babies in handbags; mixed identities; and other capricious delights from the master of mad plots, Oscar Wilde.

Some songs from the score are: "Lost," "A Handbag Is Not a Proper Mother," "A Wicked Man," "Metaphorically Speaking," and "Perfection."

Wilmington College Speaks For Itself Through Several Advertising Means

Wilmington College receives extensive publicity through several advertising means.

The Adult Education Program—designed to train the adults in topics in which they wish to become familiar—spreads the educational opportunities to adults as well as students.

At present time there are five classes being taught in adult education. They are "A Brief History of Italian Art in Words and Pictures" (series two), "Shakespeare's Tragedies," "Music Appreciation" (second series), "Human Relations" and "Job Instruction Training" (time to be set soon). By offering these courses the College is advertising its educational facilities to everyone.

New Boating Class

A class on boating started on Tuesday, January 24, for eleven weeks. This is one of the classes in which students can learn to teach others, and is sponsored at Wilmington College by the Cape Fear Squadron of Civil Air Patrol.

W. Kendall Dorsey, director of adult education, is also a commercial photographer. Through this media, he also publicizes the College.

Mrs. Helena Cheek appears on television twice weekly to teach Spanish. The viewing audience is taught to speak the language, and through this learning they may be encouraged to continue their education at the College.

ens and Phil Stephenson played a fine floor game.

The game was tied up at the half and the lead traded hands right down the line. A desperation shot by Oak Ridge, just as the gun went off, bounced off the back of the basket and out of play to give the home team the win.

In the last game before the Christmas holidays, the Hawks played host to the U.S.C. freshmen. Edging the Biddies 81-79, the W.C. five banged in 31 field goals out of 31 chances for a 60.8 per cent shooting figure.

All in all the season has been one of excitement and pleasure. The Hawks now lead the conference with a 12-1 conference slate and a season mark of 16-3.

the United States and Europe, and he never fails to publicize the progressiveness of Wilmington College.

In February Mr. Howell will be a judge for the Motorola Art Contest, the Scholastic Arts Award in Greensboro and will attend a meeting in Raleigh in conjunction with the Art Committee of North Carolina and the three hundredth anniversary of the state. Mr. Howell has also made numerous appearances for television as a representative of the College Art Department.

The College Chorus has performed for various civic clubs and service organizations—the Optimist, the Rotary and the Kiwanis—to build prestige for the College through its ability to perform musically. The Chorus also performed on television numerous times. During the spring quarter, the Chorus tours in many counties in eastern North Carolina, again spreading the prestige of the school.

The basketball, baseball, golf and tennis teams carry knowledge of WC to other teams and their supporters. This is accomplished through the fine sportsmanship of the coach and team.

Theatre Group Active

The Theatre Group at the College participates in the State Drama Festival at the University of North Carolina annually. Groups are selected every year to appear in a play they have produced. Every year the Dramatics Club stands out as one of the better small college clubs in the state.

The administration contributes to the college advertising by numerous public appearances. Dean Crews has been presenting an increasing number of messages throughout high schools in southeastern North Carolina. These talks have contributed greatly to the knowledge concerning Wilmington College.

Every student is an individual advertiser—either a credit or a discredit. This is determined appearance and also through character, behaviour, sportsmanship shown at athletic events.

College Plans Participation In Annual Azalea Festival

Wilmington College's participation in the Fourteenth Annual Azalea Festival is being planned by Dean Marshall Crews and Dean of Women, Shannon Morton.

Carol Hewett, the College May Queen, will represent Wilmington College in the festival, and there will be seven other colleges represented — Duke, University of North Carolina, Woman's College, East Carolina, Flora Macdonald, Queen's and Meredith Colleges.

Queens, Escorts

Some of the queens and their escorts are Gail Rutherford, Queen's College, escort Ray Harding; Ann Stallings, Meredith College, escort Bill Lytch; Sharron Cates, University of North Carolina, escort Ferg Norton; Annie Johnston, Duke, escort Robert Garda; and Gwen Hawley, Flora Macdonald, escort Jesse Bullard. Other representatives have not as yet turned in their escorts.

Miss Morton is the official hostess for the group of queens. She will move in the hotel with the girls and attend all of the activities in which they are to participate. The group will have a Queen City bus to carry them to all of the activities.

Festival Activities

Some of the activities are the Coronation Pageant, Cottage

Pen Pushers Combine Talents Of Students In Spring Anthology

The talents of many Wilmington College students will be combined to produce the Pen Pushers Spring Anthology—With Pen In Hand. Poems, essays and short stories will be spotlighted this year in an effort to display a much wider range of talent.

Students are encouraged to take advantage of this opportunity by submitting their work to any member of the club or to Miss Shannon Morton, the club advisor.

Lane Tour, Street Dance and the Variety Show.

There will be a special float for the girls and several lunches for them.

Judy Counts, W.C. student, designed the new robe for the Teenage Princess this year.

Joe Stanley made the drawings of the design for the dresses to be worn by the queens and princesses.

Forty-one Students Attain Dean's List

Forty-one students at Wilmington College attained academic honors, when they made the Dean's List for the recently completed winter quarter.

Those recognized by the Dean of Students from the Wilmington area were:

Charles T. Barnhill, Ruth Frances Best, Patricia Hall Black, Judith Ann Butler, Lewis Edward Creech Jr., Jerry Steve Ely, Isabell Lewis Foushee, John Lawrence Galloway, Elizabeth Glover Grafes, Margaret Patrick Haskett, Carthon Dewey Hinson, James Maynard Hudgens, Darrow Ransdell Johnson, Ronald Earl Lee, Bobby Raye Ludlum, Charles Edward Pearsall Jr., James Wyles Peebles, Jo Ellen Peterson, Carrie Elizabeth Pierce, Judy Pluta Charles Ray Rackley, Rita Joy Sapp, Catherine Sandra Scruggs, James Alan Smith, Virginia Clark Smith, Andrew Edward Sondey Jr., Michael G. Tsaganos, Alice Elizabeth Wadsworth, Lawrence W. Williams, Sandra Mary Etta Willoughby and Tola Bessie Zezeffills.

Others making the Dean's List were: Lucious Cummings Bigelow, Durham; Dorothy Ward Brittain, Bolivia; Barbara Jean Brodnax, Acme; Stacy Humphrey Covil, Burgaw; Harvey R. Dunlevy, Raleigh; Kermit C. Guthrie, New Bern; Thomas Blair Hines Raleigh; David K. Miller, Woodruff, S. C.; Harold Maurice Rivenbark, Clarkson; and James Lee Stamp, Jacksonville.

Enrollment Down For Spring Term, Yearly Total Up

Enrollment here for the spring quarter is lower than the two preceding quarters, but there are 86 more students this spring than were attending last year, according to Registrar Dorothy Marshall.

There were 83 new students in the summer quarters of 1960, 609 students for the autumn quarter, 45 new students for the winter quarter and 55 new ones for the spring quarter, which makes a total of 792 enrolled for these three regular quarters and the two summer terms.

For the spring term there are 203 freshmen men, 75 freshmen women, 134 sophomore men, 40 sophomore women, five special men students and nine special women students. The total enrollment is 466.

There were 132 students enrolled for the winter quarter who did not return for the spring quarter, but this includes 47 nurses who have no classes here this session.

Students attending from other states are: Florida, three; Georgia, 1; Indiana, 1; Massachusetts, one; New York, five; Pennsylvania, two; South Carolina, six; Tennessee, two; Virginia, five; and West Virginia, one. This is a total of 27 students.

There are 32 counties in North Carolina represented by students. These are Alamance, two; Alleghany, one; Bladen, 12; Brunswick, 29; Carteret, two; Columbus, 14; Craven, three; Currituck, one; Dare, one; Duplin, seven; Durham, one; Edgecombe, one; Forsyth, two; Gaston, four; Jones, one; Lee, one; Lenoir, (Continued on Page 2)

Contractors Grade; Paving of Driveways Starts This Week

According to M. D. Mincey, Superintendent of construction, the three new buildings at the Wilmington College site are about 75 per cent completed.

The library building is 95 per cent completed. The student activities building is 75 per cent toward completion. About 50 per cent of the work on the large class room building has been done.

A lack of water facilities is the only factor holding back construction at this time. Water is needed to raise the temperature of the plaster to the proper degrees before it can be applied to the ceiling. Wells are now being drilled to speed up this part of the construction.

Paving of the driveways and parking areas is expected to begin this week. The contractor is in the process of grading the streets. Paving will be done by the State Highway Department and is being done without charge. All walkways will be constructed of asphalt tile, and construction of them will also begin this week.

Mr. Mincey stated, "I'm very pleased with the progress of the building, and construction is on schedule."

Cast Prepares "Ernest In Love"

Mixed Chorus Presents Musical Production

Tomorrow night at 8:30 p.m. will be the opening for the musical production, Ernest In Love, presented by the Mixed Chorus and under the direction of Loyd Hudson and Doug Swink. There will also be another showing Saturday evening.

The story involves a rich variety of wonderful situations; two young gentlemen of late Victorian London and their respective lady love; the confusion led to by the invention of a fictitious relative — called "Bunburying"—for purpose of alibi; babies in handbags; mixed identities; and other capricious delights from the master of mad plots, Oscar Wilde.

The musical is based on Oscar Wilde's comic master piece, "The Importance of Being Earnest." The book is by Anne Cross-well, and the music is by Leo Pockriss.

Some songs from the score are: "Lost," "A Handbag Is Not a Proper Mother," "A Wicked Man," "Metaphorically Speaking" and "Perfection."

The cast, taken from the College Chorus, is as follows: Jack—Jerry Ely (Jack is also called Ernest)

Algernon Moncrieff—Kermit Norris

Gwendolyn—Judy Avery

Cecily—Dixie Straughn

Lane—Doug Hunt

Effie—Pat Moore

Lady Bracknell—Julia Rochelle

Miss Prism—Betsy Currin

Dr. Chaubale—Tommy Wallace

Alice—Elaine Gregory

Perkins—Harvey Radcliffe

The accompanists will be Sandra Willoughby and Verta Rhodes.

Ten Exhibits Win Science Display

Ten outstanding exhibits were selected at the District Science Fair held at Wilmington College Saturday. These exhibits, five each from the biological and the physical division, will be competing for top honors at the State Science Fair to be held at Duke University April 7 and 8.

Students who were responsible for the winning exhibits are entitled to a full two-year scholarship to Wilmington College. These selected projects were the best high school science exhibits from Southeastern North Carolina. A total of 118 projects were submitted from 28 junior and senior high schools in 13 of the surrounding counties.

Judges for the District Science Fair were George Zebrowski of the College faculty; Dr. Robert Aycock of the Horticultural Crops Research Station at Castle Hayne; John A. Charlton, Richard E. Brownlee and James G. Gorman of DuPont in Kininston; and Dr. Henry Singletary, associate pathologist at James Walker Memorial Hospital.

Student Activities Building

The student activities building of the new college is approximately 75 percent completed.

Student Congress Passes Honor System Resolution

The following resolution was recently passed by the Student Council: A Resolution Urging the Use of a Pledge of Honor. It is given below:

The Student Council of Wilmington College hereby urges the students of Wilmington College to use the following pledge of honor during all forms of quizzes and examinations. "I have neither given nor received aid on this test, quiz or examination."

This pledge, if used, is to be written and undersigned by the student upon completion of his paper. As a resolution, the above is a formal moral statement and is not a compelling law requiring student action.

The Student Council is aware that it has taken no such stand in the past few years, and perhaps this resolution will be a step toward developing an honor system, which is likely to be included in any immediately proposed revisions of the Constitution of the Student Government.

A System of Honor — Ethics or Affidavit?

Recently there has been an attempt to establish an honor system at Wilmington College. The rule or requirement in this system stipulates that the student, upon completion of a quiz or examination, sign a statement to the effect that he has neither given or received aid on that particular paper.

There is a sentiment that this is not exactly an honor system, but that each time a student completes a test he must merely submit a sworn affidavit. This sworn statement actually proves nothing because even the world's greatest cheat can sign his own name.

If a person is honorable, that is to say that he has honor, he has a reputation for behavior that is exemplary and worthy. Honor comes slowly to a person—honor is conferred by the respect of others. When a person has achieved this high esteem, the ethics that he has gained by reputation must never be betrayed. For once a code of honor is violated, it can never be fully regained. If a person swears that he did not steal, it is not so if he is a thief. If a person states that he did not cheat, and he did cheat, absolutely nothing has been proven.

The point is that if a person is honest and worthy, there is no need to swear to that effect. If he is dishonest, there is no validity in his affirmation of integrity. The fraud in the class room cannot gain honor by the means of an affidavit. (by Al Shew)

Baseball Season Arrives; Team Needs Student Support

Spring has finally arrived, and with its coming has brought the sport all America loves—baseball. Baseball is the time of excitement, hot dogs, peanuts and competition. And speaking of competition, the Seahawks will offer plenty of it this season, and the combination of a champion team and top coach will offer plenty of excitement to local fans.

We are depending on our team to play good ball this season, to be ambassadors from our college on the coast, to show our state and neighboring states the quality of sportsmanship we have. And by the same token our team is depending on us. They need our support and good wishes. They want to feel that we are behind them, at home and away. Is this too much for them to ask?

Next week they play Chowan here, their first conference game. Let's turn out at Legion Stadium and let the Seahawks know that we are with them all the way.

The past three weeks have been busy ones indeed for members of the college chorus. Rehearsals have been in progress both night and day on the musical production "Ernest in Love."

The main characters of the play, portrayed by Judy Avery, Kermit Norris, Doug Hunt, Julia Rochelle, Harvey Radcliff, Dixie Straughn and Jerry Ely, are lively and amusing, and the situations they encounter are vivid and real.

Many hands go into the production of an operetta such as this and many people work quietly unnoticed. Judy Counts, a wizzard with a needle and thread, is designing and constructing the costumes used in the play.

Pat Craig has the big job of producing and keeping track of the many properties that will be used. Ronald Lane and Victor Horrell, two jack-of-all-trades, concentrate on scenery design and construction.

Kathryn Davis, president of the Dramatics Club, is on the scene to lend a helping hand and her main job also lies in the scenery department. Doug Nicholson and Ronald Lee can be found running around painting and approving the backstage life.

So, while the cast is on the stage performing, and the audience is sitting back enjoying it, the unmentioned will be near at hand, keeping the backstage machine running.

Drama Club Presents "Androcles And Lion"

The College's dramatics club under the direction of Douglas Swink, presented Androcles and the Lion February 16 in the college auditorium.

When Androcles (Ed Iole) and his wife, Megeera (played by Judy Counts) are leaving home and journeying through the forest, Androcles immediately makes friends with a lion, characterized by Ronald Lane.

The Captain (Bobby Williams) and the Centurion (Tommy Wallace) marched the Christians on the road to Rome for persecution. The persecution of the Christians in Rome was political rather than religious.

Lavinia (Ann West) was a true, faithful Christian. She had several conversations with the Captain which led him to love her.

Ferrovius, Doug Hunt, was the forceful type of Christian.

Spintho, Paul Meadows, just wanted to be martyred because he thought it would get him into heaven.

Ronald Lee played the part of the ox driver.

Androcles was a Christian because it was a kind religion, and he wasn't accustomed to kindness. Christianity also let him love animals.

Dennis Carney played the part of Caesar.

Spintho was impatient and could not bear the thought of dying, and in his escape he was eaten by the lion.

Ferrovius turned back to the god of war and killed all of the gladiators. For this he was given a position in the Pretorian Guard.

Androcles was set free with the lion. No cage for the lion; no slavery for Androcles.

CAMPUS COMEDY

"I'M AFRAID I HAVE TO REPORT THAT THE CHEMISTRY CLASS IS DISTURBING MY LATIN CLASS AGAIN."

Rambling Thoughts

Time brings to mind many things — and Research Papers, ranging in scope from "Witchcraft in the Congo," to "Hypnosis and Dentistry." And, of course there are the usual conventional topics as "The Electric Light," and "Politics."

Paint brushes can be seen as they are busily guided by talented hands in 301 over various pieces of canvas. Instructors, teach, students learn and through practical application, a way of life is discovered in their fingertips.

Another quarter has begun, and many profits have been harvested with the passing of time. A feeling of satisfaction has come to some. And by the same token, others have begun to realize the importance of applying talents and efforts to earn this thing called pride and satisfaction in one's self.

And then there is that paragraph in Conrad's "Youth," that makes us realize that we are indestructible and rich, because we are young. An old man remembers . . . "I remember my youth and the feeling that will never come back anymore—the feeling that I could last forever, outlast the sea, the earth, and all men; the deceitful feeling that lures us on to joys, to perils, to love, to vain effort—to death; the triumphant conviction of strength, the heat of life in the handful of dust, the glow in the heart that with every year grows dim, grows cold, grows small and expires — and expires, too soon, too soon — before life itself." He remembers. We don't have to . . . yet!

Five-Minute Break Presents Problem

What do you do in the five-minute break between classes? During our first few days here, we naturally go directly from class to the next, only to sit there wondering where everybody else is.

The next day you run down to the pub to see who is there. You buy a pepsi and stand around trying to be sociable. When you happen to glance at the clock and discover it is only ten seconds before class starts. So up the stairs you tear, and after a few minor skirmishes, arrive safely on the threshold of the classroom.

Then the question arrives of what to do with the rest of your drink. Should you slip it in your back pocket and ease in the room sideways, leave it in the hall for someone to fall over, or should you run down the hall and pitch it out the nearest window, or sell it at a reduced price to the first lucky person that happens by?

Feeling even bolder the next day you stroll down to the library to glance at the morning headlines. But lo and behold, someone else got shot in the Congo, and by the time you get to Dagwood, it's too late to get to class anyway!

Some of the teachers have a suggestion as to what to do during the five minute break—go to your next class and be ready to work when the class is scheduled to begin.

Seahawks Meet Presbyterian In Opener

Varsity Report

Basketball season is over now. The Hawks had an exciting season with 22 wins against only 7 losses. They won the regular season championship and swept home with a second place in the tournament.

In regular season play, the Hawks averaged 87.1 points per game on a 2,265 point total. Five times the soaring quintet topped the century mark, with a high of 119 against Louisburg. During one three-game stretch, the Brook-birds compiled 321 points. Figures like these are certainly evidence of a brilliant season and a wonderful team.

Individual Performances

Looking at the individual players, we come first to Neil Johnson, the Hawk's leading rebounder. Neil, an all-conference and all-tournament performer, ended the season with 459 tallies and a 17.6 average.

Ken McIntyre posted the top average with 18.8 and missed only 14 of 65 free throws in conference play. Ken, too, was chosen all-conference. Ed Miastkowski, a main-spring for the Hawks, and another all-conference choice, this year ended with a 17.9 clip.

Bogash Steady, Dependable

Gene Bogash, one of the steadiest and most dependable players on the squad, finished with a 12.6 mark; and Larry Edens, a good man for any team, scored in double figures with a 10.2 mark.

Terry Dunn and Phil Stephenson, two of Coach Bill Brooks' most ready reserves, hit a 5.65 and 6.3 average, respectively. Bill Haywood, with a limited appearance, hit 4.1 points a game.

Open Baseball Slate March 24

We now face baseball season. Coach Bill Brooks is optimistic, and with 20 starters, including such talent as Don Honeycutt, Larry Edens, Ronnie Durham and Bill Haywood, he well should be, and so should we.

The first baseball game is March 24 at Maxton against P.J.C., and the first home game is April 7 with Chowan. We expect to have a large turnout for the home game, what with the beautiful weather we are having. Let's all support our baseball team this year.

Coach Bill Brooks says that the boys have been looking good. They will scrimmage against Camp Lejeune and several Florida teams, getting in shape for regular season play.

The tennis team this year has a good deal of talent. They will be playing several matches on the same tour with the baseball team. Let's get behind these teams and show them how much we appreciate their efforts.

Just Practicing

Seahawks prepare for season opener.

Practice Sharpened Baseballers Travel To Maxton Friday

The Wilmington College Seahawks' first game of the baseball season is coming up March 24, against Presbyterian at Maxton.

Coach Bill Brooks has expressed great confidence in this year's team, pointing out that the large turn-out of talent this year is a good indication of a prime season.

Seahawks Go South

The Seahawks went south during the break between quarters. Former major league outfielder Danny Litweiler lined up a full week of practice games for the Hawks against neighboring junior college and service teams.

Seventeen players accompanied Coach Brooks, three of whom are returnees from last year's championship team. Most of the others were former high school and Junior American Legion stars.

The Wilmington nine has scrimmaged against the Florida State freshmen and Camp Lejeune, two formidable opponents against whom Coach Brooks was satisfied that the Hawks showed well.

Abundance of Pitchers

No less than eight of the 20 present squad members are pitchers, and Coach Brooks is more than happy about that. Most are of proven ability, and what's more, they can hit.

Coach Brooks plans to use hurlers at two other positions in addition to their mound chores.

Larry Edens is one of the versatile pitchers who will probably open the season in the outfield. Edens, along with Ronnie Durham, adept on both the mound and first base, and Don Honeycutt are all three returnees.

Haywood New Asset

Bill Haywood, a native of Glen Burnie, Md., is a welcomed addition the staff. Haywood is a righthander who starred with the Camp Lejeune Marines last season. He finished the regular season with a 17-5 mark and won three more during the annual All-Marine tournament.

Haywood rolled up 204 strikeouts in 191 innings and walked only 50 while achieving an earned-run average of 1.60. He also saw action in the outfield and Coach Brooks probably will not hesitate to use him in the field or as a pinch-hitter.

Other prospective hurlers include Bobby Tate, who boasts a 6-0 record with the Clemson freshmen last season; Louis Howard, pitching and hitting star of the local Post 10 American Legion team a year ago; Hiram Lee of Pink Hill; and Wayne Taylor, a pitcher-infielder who starred with the Conway American Legion team.

A possible infield alignment for the Seahawks would include Durham at first base, Blair Walker at second base, Dave Miller at shortstop and Bennie Broom at third.

A likely outfield would be Ronnie Smith in left field, Lawrence Keith in center and Edens in right. Dave Gould and Tom Hines will probably be handling the catcher's chores.

Seahawks Win Loop Title; Place Second In Tournament

The Campbell Camels upset the Hawks 87-73 in the final game of the three-day tournament ending February 18 for the Virginia-Carolina conference basketball championship.

The W.C. quintet succumbed to near perfect free throw shooting, a potent fast break and off and on defense that closed up like a cage, going down in the stretch after a 36-36 half-time deadlock.

Six Wilmington cagers hit in double figures in the hard-fought contest. Gene Bogash, Neil Johnson and Larry Edens tallied 13 markers apiece. Ed Miastkowski and Ken McIntyre popped in 12 each, and Phil Stephenson accounted for 10.

Topple Louisburg

The night before, Friday night, the Hawks had topped a stubborn Louisburg team, cracking a Hurricane freeze with relentless sharp-shooting for a 65-47 triumph.

The Louisburg quintet, well aware of the folly of running with the speedy Hawks, endeavored to slow the game by playing possession ball; however, the Wilmington Club was not to be stopped, and coming onto the floor after a 26-35 half-time margin, began to pull away steadily.

With 17:02 remaining, Gene Bogash put W.C. out front 33-29 and the locals were on their way to their twenty-second victory of the season. Once they had assumed the upper-hand, the Hawks gave out some of the same medicine they had tasted in the first half, and under the leadership of Miastkowski, sailed to victory.

EMI Easy Victim

Thursday night was an easy one for the Hawks as EMI once again felt the talons of the Brook-birds, going down to a 94-60 runaway.

Neil Johnson, the big Hawk center, played possibly his best game of the season scoring 22 points and snagging 17 rebounds in a great performance.

With Johnson, McIntyre, Miastkowski, Edens and Bogash playing near-perfect basketball, the Hawks ran up the score to 74-45 with 10:38 remaining to be played before Coach Bill Brooks cleared his bench.

Oak Ridge Clobbered

On February 11, the Seahawks clobbered Oak Ridge's cadets for the loop title 90-59. The win gave the Hawks a 15-1 record in league play and brought their over-all slate to 20-5.

Johnson, continuing his fine play under the boards, sparked the collegians' attack with 21 points and 15 rebounds. Miastkowski tossed in 17 markers and Gene Bogash, with a sparkling first half 12-point performance, finished with 15.

The Hawks connected on a flat 50 per cent from the floor with 36 successes on 72 tries. Coach Brooks' cagers had little trouble in rolling up a 44-28 half-time margin and their 54 per cent accuracy in the second half clinched the Homecoming game and the title for the fighting Hawks.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE, WILMINGTON, N. C.

May 11, 1961

Summer School Sessions in New Wilmington College

Summer school will be held on the new Wilmington College campus, with registration for the first term being June 5, 8:30 a.m. - 1:00 p.m. and 6:30 - 7:30 p.m. in the library. Registration for second session will be July 17 at the same times.

The first term will run June 13 - July 13. Second term begins July 17 and lasts until August 23. A late registration fee of five dollars will be charged anyone registering after the designated dates.

There will be a registration fee of five dollars, and tuition will be five dollars per quarter hour of credit taken by the student.

During a six-week term students may earn a maximum of ten quarter hours of credit. The administration reserves the right to withdraw any course for which there is insufficient enrollment.

During the first term there will be courses offered in English composition, public speaking, English literature, analytic geometry and calculus, intermediate Spanish, European history, general economics, general psychology, personal hygiene, introduction to sociology, engineering graphics, stagecraft and shop, survey of American literature, kinesiology, review algebra, college algebra and trigonometry, intermediate French, music appreciation, American history to 1865, and several other courses depending on demand.

Courses for the second term are approximately the same as the first term. There are two courses, one in botany and one in chemistry, that last from June 5 to August 23.

Board of Trustees Asks For Tax Raise

Board of Trustees of the College has decided unanimously to ask the New Hanover County Commission to request legislation to permit an increase in the special tax supporting the college from five to eight cents, Dr. John T. Hoggard, chairman of the board announced.

The principal of the three-cent increase per $100 valuation of property would be to expand the college.

Money Needed

Moreover, Dr. Hoggard emphasized, this money is needed to match available state funds for both capital improvements and operation of the institution.

The five-cent tax was made effective in 1947. It is currently returning approximately $83,000 annually for the support of the college.

Dr. Hoggard said this would be "permissive legislation" and whether the tax would be effected would be dependent upon a vote of the people of New Hanover County. The earlier five-cent tax was submitted to a vote here and approved.

The board decided at a meeting that the tax would be better than a bond issue in behalf of the college. If the tax is increased to eight cents per $100 property valuation, it would return approximately $123,000 a year, which would be matched by the state.

The principal need for this money, Dr. Hoggard said, is to accommodate the college's expanding enrollment. The enrollment for the fall term was 660 students, exactly 100 more than at the corresponding time last year. As of today, "we have received approximately twice as many applications for next year as we had a year ago," he added.

Graduation Exercises Set For Sophomores

Graduation Speaker

Earl C. Funderburk, Superintendent of New Hanover County Schools, will be the commencement speaker for the graduation exercises May 22.

One hundred and two students are expected to receive their associate of arts degrees Monday evening, May 22, at Brodgen Hall.

Earl C. Funderburk, superintendent of New Hanover County Schools will speak at this commencement program scheduled to begin at 8:00 o'clock.

There are approximately 75 men and 27 women expected to graduate.

Baccalaureate service will be held May 21 at the St. Andrews-Covenant Presbyterian Church at 4:00 p.m. Dr. W. D. Morris, pastor of the Temple Baptist Church, will be the speaker for the service.

Rev. Mortimer Glover, pastor of St. James Episcopal Church, will present the Hoggard Medal of Achievement to a graduating sophomore who has shown outstanding achievement in academic and service work.

The President's Reception will be held in the College auditorium, 9:30 p.m., immediately after the graduation exercises. Faculty Wives' Club is in charge of this reception with members of the faculty serving.

Elections Today Will Name Council, Sophomore Officers

Student government officers will be elected today, according to Elbert Hodges, chairman of elections. Those elected will serve the students for the 1961-62 school term and will also be the determining factor in all student affairs.

Irving Barefoot and Jim Huggins are running for president of the student council, one of the most important positions in the government system. Irving is from Chadbourne, N. C., where he played an active part in high school politics. Jim hails from Wrightsville Beach and New Hanover High School, and has a great deal of experience in student affairs behind him.

The vice-presidency has two candidates, Frank Brown and Ronald Lee. Both are from Wilmington and attended New Hanover High.

Nominees for the office of secretary of the student body are Frances Best and Judy Butler. At present Frances is editor of the Fledgling. Judy was an active participant in student government in high school.

In addition to student council officers, sophomore class officials will also be elected today. These officers will represent the sophomore class in all affairs pertinent to their duties. Hiram Lee of Pink Hill, and Edward Mauney of Wilmington are competing for the top office of president. John Galloway is running unopposed for vice-president.

Two candidates are running for the post of secretary of the Sophomore class. They are Barbara Brodnaux and Sandra Holden. Representatives nominated are Dorothy Whitten, Scott McKinnon, Rita Sapp, Stacey Covill and Bob Tate.

The officers you elect today to represent you will be your voice in student affairs of the next year.

College Move Set At End Of Quarter

Although summer school will be held in the new college buildings, there is no definite schedule set up as to the exact time the move will be made. However, some of the moving will begin as soon as classes end for the spring quarter here.

According to Rex Willis, comptroller, the contractors have given a tentative schedule though. The library building will be ready May 20, Hoggard Hall May 27 and the student activities building June 2. Although this is indefinite, students can plan that summer school will be held in the new Building.

Fledgling Arrives Friday, May 12 For Students

The 1960-61 Fledgling will arrive for distribution to the students Friday, May 12, according to Jackson Bell Printing Company.

The annuals will be given to those students of Wilmington College who have paid the activity fee for three consecutive quarters.

Students who have paid the activity fee for two consecutive quarters may be allowed to purchase a copy of the Fledgling for $1.50 Monday, May 15, provided there are copies left.

The Fledgling Staff for 1961-62 will begin work during the summer months; therefore, any student who wishes to work on the staff must contact Mr. Gerald Rossetol, Frances Best, or Barbara Brodnaux before the end of the spring quarter. No experience on yearbooks is required for a student to work. There are vacancies on both the editorial and business staffs.

Summer Theatre Group Presents Two Shows

There will be a summer theatre here this year, according to Doug Swink, head of the drama department at the College.

There will be two presentations this summer, one in July and one in August. A definite decision has not been reached to the exact plays to be presented, but consideration is being given to "Italian Straw Hat," a musical, "Mrs. McThing" and "George Washington Slept Here."

These shows will be presented in the student activities (Continued on Page 3)

With Pen In Hand Now On Sale

With Pen In Hand, annual publication of the Pen Pusher's Club is now on sale. The anthology is a selection of poems, essays and short stories, submitted by members of the club and other college students.

Its existence represents the year's work of the club and the product of much work. Copies are selling for fifty cents apiece and can be purchased from any member of the club, its advisor Miss Shannon Morton, or several of the local merchants.

Students Exhibit Work At Gallery

The third annual Exhibition of Painting, Sculpture and Design by students of the art department is now in progress at the Artists Gallery and will remain open to the public through May 12.

Selections on exhibit represent the best work of the department for the current year.

College students exhibiting are: Elsie Bridger, Jim Bradshaw, Ben Vogels, Lloyd Robuck, Kathryn Knox, Pearle Boone, Louise Lanier, Ruth Shephard, Emily Merritt, Pamela Close, Margaret Stokes, Patricia Coppen, William Whitehead, Dianne Blake, Bill Moore, Paul Manley, Robert Barefoot, Jim Wenburg, Joe Stanley, Sue Loyless, Betty Black and Martha Bordaex.

A reception was held in their honor Saturday, April 29, when the exhibition opened.

Art Students

Ben Vogels, Emily Merritt and Jim Bradshaw have prepared their art work to carry to the Artist Gallery for display.

Dorsey Urges Local Citizens To Take Shots

Six years ago April 12 at Anne Arbor, Mich., the announcement was made that Dr. Jonas Salk had found a highly effective paralytic polio preventive.

"At that time," W. K. Dorsey, chairman of the new Hanover Chapter of The National Foundation said, "the development of an antipolio vaccine was hailed as a medical miracle throughout the nation."

"Yet now, only a relatively few years later, it seems a large segment of the population has forgotten this 'miracle.' Millions of Americans continue to risk the possibility of getting paralytic polio by not taking the Salk vaccine."

Quoting Dr. Thomas M. Rivers, vice-president for medical affairs of The National Foundation, Dorsey pointed out that the Salk vaccine already has "saved" an estimated 30,000 Americans, from death or paralysis from polio.

"But there may be other thousands more this summer who are not spared paralysis unless they start getting their Salk shot series NOW."

Last year 80 per cent of those paralyzed by polio were less than 20. Yet there are more than 17,000,000 in this age group who do not have the full protection against polio offered by the Salk vaccine."

A new oral vaccine, which like the Salk vaccine was developed with March of Dimes funds, is in the process of being prepared for manufacture, Mr. Dorsey said. However, it is not expected to be available until well after the 1961 polio season.

"To wait for the new vaccine could be disastrous," he continued. "The fact is that the Salk vaccine, now available, provides excellent protection against paralytic polio."

"U. S. Public Health Service figures show that last year's new case load dropped 92 per cent below the average number of polio cases in the pre-vaccine years 1950 to 1954. And, the polio attack rate was 10 times as high among the unvaccinated as it was among persons with three or more Salk shots."

"The facts are decisive. The Salk vaccine can virtually eliminate the danger of polio. But the vaccine does no good in a doctor's medicine chest. It's well past the time when anyone should be putting off getting Salk shots."

building at the new college. The stage has to be redesigned, and new curtains have to be made for the building.

No definite meetings have been set up for tryouts, but they will be held during the week beginning June 5. The summer theatre is open to the public, and participation is not limited to students only.

Circle K Installs Officers; Hunt To Head '61 Slate

Doug Hunt was elected to head the Circle K Club officer slate for the coming year along with Bobby Vay, Ronald Lee, Charles Farrow, John Pistolis and Ken Urkhart, at a recent dinner meeting.

The banquet was held at the Neptune restaurant on Wrightsville Beach. Club officers were installed by Bryan Broadfoot, president of the Wilmington Kiwanis Club International.

Officers for the present year and their dates were introduced. Mr. Broadfoot spoke on the objectives of the Circle K and commended the club for the work done this year to better their school and community. David Millinor gave a report of the year's activities.

Guests included club members and their dates, Mr. Broadfoot, Casey Hogervorst, member of the Kiwanis Circle K Committee, and Thomas Lupton, club advisor and committee chairman.

President Doug Hunt and vice-president Ronald Lee were appointed by the club to attend the Circle K International Convention which will be held in St. Petersburg, Florida, this summer. Alternate delegates will be secretary Ronald Lee, and treasurer Charles Farrow.

A dance was held after the meeting at the Ogden Restaurant.

Charlotte Station Sponsors Contest

Radio Station WSOC of Charlotte is sponsor of this year's North Carolina "Miss Universe" Beauty Pageant, which is to be held at the Manger Motor Inn in Charlotte on June 2 and 3.

Winner of North Carolina's "Miss Universe" Pageant will win an all-expense trip to Miami Beach in July to compete for the world's crown in the World "Miss Universe" Pageant.

To qualify, a girl must be between the ages of 18 and 28, unmarried, and a resident of North Carolina for at least six months. A student is eligible if she has attended school in North Carolina for six months or more, even though her residence is out of state.

She must have an evening gown and a "Catalina" bathing suit. She will need transportation to and from Charlotte and incidental expense money. Her room and her chaperone's, if she has one, will be furnished free of charge by the Manger Motor Inn. Otherwise, the Motor Inn will furnish proper chaperonage.

Contestants are judged solely on the basis of beauty of face and figure, charm, poise and personality. Talent is not a requirement. There is an official form available for any interested girl in the Faculty Conference Room.

Science Institute Begins July 31

"Why not . . . explore the sciences, discover your potential, use your knowledge" are the words which appear on the cover of the pamphlet explaining the Summer Science Institute, sponsored by Wilmington College, to be held July 31-August 11.

The purpose of the institute is to stimulate interest in several important areas of learning for junior high school students. Students may choose two from the following areas: biological science, physical science, history and geography of the Lower Cape Fear and Spanish.

Leading representatives of business, industry and research will address the group from 1:00-2:00 each day on the educational requirements and vocational opportunities in a wide range of fields. Students will spend three hours per day pursuing a variety of experiences in the classroom, the laboratory and the field.

Speakers scheduled to talk during the address period are: July 31—Dr. B. Frank Hall, keynote address.

August 1—Missile expert from U.S. Air Force.

August 2—T. O. Page, "Educational Research."

August 3—Representative from N.C. State College, "Atomic Research."

August 7—W. E. Adams, director of student affairs, N.C. State College, "General Field of Engineering."

August 8—Dr. E. Guy Owens, senior chemist I.I. du Pont de Nemours and Company, "Chemical Research."

August 9—Representative from International Nickel Co., "Marine Experimentation."

August 10—William E. Smith, Associate Professor of Textiles at N.C. State College, "Research in Textiles."

August 11—Representative from Reigel Carolina Paper Company, "Wood Technology."

College Freshmen Do Advance Work Well

AMHERST, Mass. (IP)—Can college freshmen handle advanced work in certain subjects without first taking introductory courses? According to studies conducted at the University of Massachusetts, they can—and do.

Guidance Director William F. Field recently announced that this year's first-semester grades indicate that freshmen in the University's program for superior students are as successful in advanced work as others are in introductory work. On the basis of high school records, college classification tests, and faculty evaluation, 1200 advanced placements were made in the current freshman class. Since certain students achieved advanced standing in more than one course, the 1200 figure refers only to courses and does not indicate the total number of students involved.

According to Dr. Field, however, approximately one-third of the freshman class of 1750 students earned advanced placement in one or more academic courses. Participants in the program gained full credit for the course waived as well as for successfully completed advanced courses.

Exemptions granted included 169 in English composition and 171 in basic college mathematics. Thirty-eight students were exempted from the first-year zoology course, while 24 others were permitted to take a chemistry course covering two full years of work in a single academic year. Most of the exemptions were granted to students exempted from the basic speech course.

Dr. Field, in commenting on proficient in one or more languages, with French having the highest number of advanced placements. Approximately 400 students demonstrated public speaking ability and were exempted from the first-year public speaking course. He pointed out that the Commonweath's high schools can take a great deal of credit for the general achievement of the class. He pointed in particular to the high percentage of freshmen prepared to take advanced work in English, mathematics, and foreign languages.

College Awards 26 Scholarships For Next Year

Academic scholarships were awarded to 26 persons for the school year 1961-62, and seven people received the E. L. White Scholarships. Work scholarships were given to nine people.

Those receiving academic scholarships are: Lillie Bloodworth, Morris Elizabeth Broadwell, Judith Butler, Paul Cocken, Mary Dowless, Harold Doshier, Evelyn Poster, Sud Howard, Jr., Artis Joye, Mary Ruth Lewis, Bobby Raye Ludlum, Jenny Merritt, Horace Daniel Murray, Neil Musselwhite III, William J. Pate, Judy Pluta, Mrs. Edna Register, Jackson Rivenbark, Lewis Henry Sawyer, Sandra Scruggs, Peggy Gennell Sugg, Henry Allen Sullivan, Richard Ray Sullivan, William T. Taylor, Patricia Ann Teachey and Jan Townshend Thorpe.

The E. L. White Scholarships were awarded on the basis of academic record more than that of need. They were awarded to Jo Ellen Peterson, Marshall F. Brown, Beth Fineburg, Barbara Ann Hixon, Ronald Earl Lee, Edward Allan Taylor and Ritchie D. Watson.

Work scholarships in the drama department were given to Martha Parker and Susan Hale. Those for the biology department were awarded to John L. Galloway and Herbert Lee Davis. Judith Ann Matthews received a work scholarship in the library. Secretaries for next year will be Marie Lasiter, Patricia Marie Stiles, Rita Sapp and Elizabeth Jennette Thigpen.

Seahawks Thrash UNC Frosh In Sixth For 11th Victory

Durham Pitches Four Hitter For Third Win

The Hawks won their eleventh game of the season against the University of North Carolina freshmen last Saturday night 6-2.

Ronnie Durham pitched a four-hitter to win his third straight game without a loss. Durham limited the Tar Babies to three safeties and had a shut-out going until the ninth inning when they used a single and two Hawk errors to push across a pair of runs.

Hawks Explode

Scoreless until the sixth inning, the home team suddenly came alive with four base-hits coupled with two walks and four errors by the Tar Babies to send six runs across the plate.

Louis Howard broke the ice with an infield hit after the UNC pitcher had walked Lawrence Keith. Keith had gone to second on Wayne Taylor's fielder's choice, and scored on Howard's hit.

KO UNC Hurler

Larry Edens drove Taylor home and Dave Miller's infield roller scored Howard. Edens and Miller came in on an error and the UNC pitcher went out of the game.

One more run was contributed by Blair Walker on Ronnie Durham's single, and Carolina brought on the pinch hitters and runners in an effort to even the score.

Shortstop Miller collected two of the five Seahawk hits in four trips to the plate, and he was the only batter to get more than one base-hit.

Golf Team Has Busy Season; Tight Matches Highlight Low Scores

The Wilmington College golf team, coached by Frank Allen, has played seven games thus far this season, winning only one, and tying one against Chowan, but never losing their spirit.

Mr. Allen says that all of the games have been very close, one or two with only a half-point margin. This is a considerable accomplishment since the entire team is only 4 boys.

Those four golfers are Richard Fowler, a man whose form each of his teammates concedes to be the best, and whose average is a low low 76, Jack Dunn with a 79 average, Freddie Best with an 82, and Scott McKinnon with a 90.

One more game against Campbell remains to round out the year for the WC foursome.

WC Officials Shop For New Equipment

With a $50,000 allowance, Wilmington College trustees and officials went shopping for furniture and equipment for the new college buildings.

The shopping tour was at furniture manufacturers' businesses in Siler City and High Point.

Although equipment from the old building will be used in the new plant, there are ten additional classrooms to be furnished (there is furniture for only seven classrooms in the old college) plus furniture for a student lounge and administrative offices.

Fred Graham, one of the trustees, said the classroom desks had been tentatively approved and final selection probably would be made on this particular tour.

In addition to Mr. Graham, the purchasing group included Frank Ballard, Bradford Tillery, trustee, and Rex Willis, college comptroller.

Hawks' Tennis Team Carries Tough Schedule

Lane Serving

Ronald Lane serves a wicked ball.

Rusty Hamilton Leads College Tennis Team With Undefeated Record

WC's tennis team has played six games so far this year. They have won two, dropping four close ones. Their best game came against PJC April 18.

The Scotties had defeated the Hawk team in their opening match of the season, and had gone on to lead the conference with a 4-0 record. However, the Hawks were primed for them and took the match 5-4 behind the sure arm of Rusty Hamilton.

Hamilton has been the bane of every team WC has played this year. A fast, sure serve and a quick eye have netted him six single's victories against no defeats. He has doubled with other members of the team for a 5-1 record. Rusty will represent WC in the big tourney.

Ronald Lane and Tommy Wallace have doubled for a good year with 4-2. Lane has a 3-3 singles as does Wallace. Other members of the team are Norman Holden with a 3-1 singles, Gordon Ross with a 2-4 and Ken Urquart with a 1-1.

- 1—Rusty Hamilton, Charleston, S. C.
- 2—Norman Holden, Southport, N. C.
- 3—Tommy Wallace, Wilmington
- 4—Ronald Lane, Wilmington
- 5—Gordon Ross, Clinton
- 6—Ken Urquart, Norfolk, Va.

Two more games, one with Louisville today and one with Campbell tomorrow are anticipated before the tournament.

The number one player from all schools will be gathering at "Robert Strange Park" for the tourney. One doubles team will also represent each school. A trophy will be awarded for conference champions and for tourney champions.

College Chorus Ends Series of Tours

The College Chorus began its second annual series of appearances in Southeastern North Carolina schools Tuesday, April 28.

Tuesday, the Chorus sang at the Penderlee High School in the morning, at Burgaw High School in the afternoon and at the Atkinson High School in a requested repeat performance.

The singers went to Shallotte High School in the morning and Elizabethtown High School in the afternoon Friday, May 2.

The Atkinson concert on the evening of April 25 was open to the public. The public was invited, with permission of the schools, to all of the other day performances.

The Chorus has appeared before most of Wilmington's Civic Clubs during the current school year, and the group sang for the state convention of the Woodmen of the World April 17.

The soloists have been Elaine Gregory, Jerry Ely, Kermit Norris and Doug Hunt.

WC Art Exhibit Forecasts Big Things For Department

By DENNIS CARNEY

The Wilmington College Art Exhibit, representing the best work of Claude Howell's art classes, opened Saturday, April 29.

Most of the work consists of various problems in design having to do with color, texture and arrangement. Notable among these were Robert Barefoot's "Background Incorporated as a Figure," "Associations Warm and Cool Direction" and "Linear Movement."

Barefoot uses a good deal of texture paper in his work, balancing familiar forms such as musical instruments against one another, suggesting depth and direction. Most of his work is very warm with, here and there, a red hot color subtly placed to draw our eye. A clever example of this is in his "Associations Warm Cool Direction" wherein a bright chartreuse red is placed at the mouth of the clarinet.

Jim Bradshaw's "Representation," "Closed Linear Movement" and "Limited Palette Compositions Number 2&3" are outstanding examples of a completely different style. Where Barefoot's work is soft and rounded, Bradshaw's is all hard angles. His "Representation" is white cubistic figures against a severe black background.

Work in Angles

Bradshaw has made an exception to his usual hard angles in "Closed Linear Movement." He has not omitted his rectangles, but he has toned down their edges with blue water color brushed over them in such a way that they appear to be resting in shadows.

Though Bradshaw is very partial to Mondrian-like arrangements, Betty Black has come closest to capturing the geometric abstractionist's feeling. Her "Horizontal and Vertical Lines in a Rectangle" (black and white) is a wonderfully compact creation which suggests the highest degree of order.

Betty has painted the same design in another problem, graduating her color from a cool, grass green to a hot coal effect produced by intermingling variations of red with black. Twisting shapes, cold colors, a delicate sense of space and color characterize most of Ben Vogel's work. His "Monochromatic—Low Key" fairly makes one shiver. Dark greens intermingling with black and dashes of medium blue make up one of the best problems in the exhibit.

Color and Space

"Limited Palette—Two Hues," "Tonality Toward One Hue," "Neutral Background," "Space in Things" and "Transparency" are five more of Vogel's problems incorporating his talent with color and space. His "Space in Things", in which he has balanced geometric shapes on and against the green cube's walls, is the most adept suggestion of cold space one can imagine.

In sculpture, Lloyd Robuck's "Plastic Lines in Space", Bradshaw's "Plastic Lines, Planes, & Solids in Space", and "Plastic Lines in Space", and Ben Vogel's "Plastic Planes in Space" are the most outstanding.

Both Bradshaw's and Vogel's sculpture are reminiscent of Le Corbusier's architecture.

Still Life Art

Two still life paintings are exceptionally good. William Whitehead's Cezanne-like fruit and wine bottles extend, with the table top on which they rest, back into the painting. Two white bowls spaced apart to highlight the dark greens of the receding bottles and the warm orange of the fruit also succeed in relining the painting's depth.

Mrs. Ruth Shepard's "Still Life" is notable for its texture especially. The rough quality of her painting makes her colors even more prominent than they would ordinarily be, even considering the vivid purples and yellows.

In all, the exhibit is one that WC should be proud of, and, more to the point, should visit.

Spring Orientation Show Student Life to Visitors

By AL SHEW

It was the time of year that new students came on to our dear North Carolina State.

This was Spring orientation day. The prospective students, summoned up the steps of the South campus looking for increased insights and life, while the old timers looked at the steps and welcomed the newcomers with the same old, same old, same old.

Biggs Attends Duke Marine Science Class

Mr. Walter Biggs was one of 22 teachers selected from more than 50 applications to attend the summer institute of marine biology July 10 to August 23 at Duke Marine Laboratory, Beaufort, N. C. Applicants were accepted from as far away as Turkey.

The course will consist of lectures, laboratory, and field work. A great deal of flexibility is planned to enable the participants to pursue that aspect of marine biology which will contribute most of the enrichment to the participant. It is expected that during the regular school year a general knowledge of marine biology and the marine environment will be pursued.

The present summer institute was first started in 1954. It was then a person who participated in the laboratory for one course is apt to benefit most from being presented with a unit of instruction in the interpretation of marine organisms with age order and with their physical environment. Thus, general knowledge of basic knowledge in the various subdivisions will be gained.

Engineers Club Elects Officers For '61-62

Engineering Club of Wilmington College elected new officers and arranged their banquet at their last meeting, April 19.

New officers for the coming year are: president, Bobby Raynor; vice-president, Pete Hansley; secretary, Charles Barnhill; and treasurer, Bobby Ludlum.

The Club will hold its annual banquet Saturday, May 13, at the Marina Restaurant. Guest speaker will be Colonel George W. Wilford, retired, who is now employed by the World Bank as consulting Engineer.

The Club would also like to remind those people who still have books in the Club book store to turn in their money before the end of the quarter. The store is being closed and all books or money left at the end of this quarter will be put in the Club's Treasury. Please contact Ed. Home, David Milliner or Tom Sauerlin.

Eight Instructors Join College Teaching Staff

Eight new instructors will join the college teaching staff for the school term 1961-62, according to Dean J. M. Crews. The additional faculty members will be in the business, modern language, library, physical science, mathematics, psychology, chemistry and social science departments.

Joining the Business department as instructor in business will be Mrs. Edna B. Harrington. At present she is teaching part time. Mrs. Harrington received her A.B. degree from Elon College in 1942.

Serving as assistant professor of psychology next year will be Fred Vallianos. He received his M.A. from East Carolina College in 1961, and his B.S. degree from New York University in 1957.

Miss Linda Lee Hines will join the college library staff as assistant librarian next fall. She recently received her B.S. degree from East Carolina College in 1960.

Assistant professor of mathematics will be Fred Toney, Jr. Mr. Toney graduated from North Carolina State College in 1959, after earning his B.S. and returned to receive his M.A. degree in 1961.

Becoming a member of the modern language department will be Mrs. Mary Cameron Dixon Bellamy assistant professor. After attending East Carolina College and receiving her A.B. in 1947, she attended the University of North Carolina, where she earned her M.A. degree in 1952. At the present Mrs. Bellamy is teaching at New Hanover High School.

Rolla Clayborn Nelson will become assistant professor of physical sciences. He received his B.S. and M.A. from the University of North Carolina.

Additions in the chemistry and social science departments have not been announced.

Drama Group Gives Play In Chapel Hill

Anne West, Doug Hunt and Frank Iole presented a one-act play entitled "The Terrible Meek" for the North Carolina Drama Festival in Chapel Hill, April 13 and 14.

The play was presented in the style of a reading. Charles Kennedy wrote the play.

Assisting these were Pat Craig and Rita Sann who helped with the make-up; Victor Horrell, stage manager; and Kathryn Davis who did the costumes and set design.

Kathryn submitted her sketches of the scenes for "Enter In Love."

Vol. 4, No. 8.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE, WILMINGTON, N. C.

May 18, 1962

Graduates look forward to future years.

Staton, Wilson Editors For Fledgling, Seahawk

Sondra Wilson and Martha Jay Staton have been named Editors of the Seahawk and Fledgling for the school year 1962-63.

Both girls have had previous experience on the newspaper and annual staffs this year serving as assistant editors.

Martha Jay is a local student and plans to further her education at either Wake Forest or Meredith College. Her major is undecided as yet, but she is very interested in French and elementary education. Martha Jay was chosen to serve as a guide for the dedication ceremony of the new college this fall. Her ability as editor has already been predetermined by her Deans' List Record.

Hopes For Interest

"To get people really interested in the annual and willing to work steadily for its progress," was the newly-elected editor's reply to her goal next year. She wants to start working on the Fledgling this summer and to set up her staff. Typists, those with artistic and literary ability, and anyone interested in working on the staff are welcome. One of the main jobs of the new staff this summer will be that of choosing a theme for the 62-63 annual.

Billy Lewis, sports editor of the Hanoverian this year, will serve as Martha Jay's assistant editor, and Laura Ellis will act as business manager.

Wilson Heads Paper

Editor-in-chief of the Seahawk, Sondra Wilson, has an ardent interest in journalism and plans to major in it at Carolina. Sondra's experience measures up to her enthusiasm as she steps up to the editor's position after four years of journalistic activity behind her.

"An efficient newspaper may be created by an efficient staff, but an effective paper can only be created by the readers—and in this case, you, the students of Wilmington College," Sondra emphasized. She wants the students to feel free in criticizing the paper or any other issue concerning the college by making use of the editorial section in expressing their ideas.

By studying the layout, photography, and general form of some of the newspapers from other colleges, she hopes to acquire new and improved methods for the Seahawk.

Builds School Spirit

Sondra feels that a college newspaper can have a definite part in stimulating school spirit and concludes, "I hope that I can present the editorials as well as the entire paper in such a way that every important and deserving issue will get proper coverage and that I can write those things the students are interested in and most eager to read about."

Sondra was chosen by her classmates to represent the Freshman class as one of the May Court attendants and has served as co-editor of With Pen in Hand.

Both girls will receive a full scholarship and will succeed Judy Ely and Francis Best as present editors of the Seahawk and Fledgling.

Scholarships are also available to those students selected for certain positions on the staffs.

Grads Anticipate Exercises; Dr. William Archie Speaker

One hundred and twenty students are expected to receive their associate of arts degrees Monday morning, May 28, in front of the Student Services Building on the College campus.

Dr. William C. Archie, Director of the State Board of Higher Education, will deliver the commencement address. He will be assisted in the program by Mortimer Glover, pastor of St. James Episcopal Church.

The exercises are scheduled to begin at 10:00 o'clock in the morning, and should there be rain, the Commencement Exercises will be held in the library.

The baccalaureate services for the graduates of Wilmington College will be held on Sunday afternoon May 27, at 5:00 o'clock in the Winter Park Baptist Church. Elwood Orr, pastor of the church, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon, and he will be assisted by J. H. Mauney, missionary of the Wilmington Baptist Association.

James M. Hall, Chairman of the County Board of Commissioners of New Hanover County, will present the Hoggard Medal of Achievement. This Medal is awarded to that student who, in the opinion of the members of the faculty, has shown the most improvement during his years at the College. It is given in recognition of hard and honest endeavor which has resulted in self-improvement beyond the average, and all facets of a student's character and performance are taken into consideration.

The President's Reception for the graduates will be given after commencement at 11:00 o'clock in the Student Services Building.

The Wilmington College Chorus will provide music for both the baccalaureate services and the commencement exercises.

College Awards Future Students Financial Help

Scholarships totaling $2,900 were awarded by Wilmington College to future members of the 1962-1963 Freshman Class. Unless dropouts thin the ranks of those receiving financial aid, no new awards will be announced.

Private monetary funds also contributed a sizeable number of scholarships. The value of E. L. White Scholarships awarded reached $1,200. Richard H. Dunlea Scholarships swelled the scholarship fund by $500.

Dean Marshall Crews stated that college grants are based primarily on the student's need. Before any awards are announced, however, the college potential of the would-be recipient is determined.

On the other hand, scholastic ability is the main prerequisite for receiving an E. L. White or Richard A. Dunlea Scholarship.

College officials awarded approximately 30 scholarships this year. This number is equal to that of the previous year.

There are many other grants that are yet to be announced. These grants include work-scholarships in such school activities as music, drama, and journalism.

Students also receive aid for lab and library work. Upcoming freshmen will obtain these grants in the near future. Athletic scholarships also have not yet been given out.

College Expects 200 In Summer School For 1962 Session

Close to 200 students will sweat out the long, hot summer in cool classrooms this year at Wilmington College. They will be attending the 1962 summer school session.

The upcoming session will be divided into two terms. The first term begins on June 4 and extends until July 14. The second convenes on July 17 and terminates on August 23.

Students receive full credit for all courses that they take during summer school. The maximum number of hours that can be earned during this term is twenty.

The exact number of those attending summer school is not yet known. Students have so far only expressed a preference for taking certain subjects.

Summer school offers a wide variety of courses. Math, English, science, and foreign languages are in the schedule. This schedule may be found on the bulletin board in the main lobby of Hoggard Hall.

Could It Have Been Better?

The saying, "It's been a good year, but it could have been better," is only applicable partially to the 1961-1962 school term at Wilmington College.

The move to the three new buildings on campus couldn't have been any better. The confidence that many friends of Wilmington College have had for the 15-year-old institution must be greatly strengthened by the vastly expanding 640-acre campus.

Social, athletic, and academic events have been good this school year, and naturally they can all be better because perfection is a hard and striving goal.

Every year is great that contains learning students, for learning is a most prized possession, and we will need it throughout our life.

Every one of us needs culture in order to realize the immense possibilities of life. College provides us with this culture, and college is therefore a center of culture. Our learning will be of greater value in later life.

Knowledge obtained from the first two years of college is merely a stepping stone to further learning. Knowledge can not be obtained all at once, but rather is a continual process.

This year was great, but a series of good years lie ahead for Wilmington College. A new era of growth and development opens for Wilmington College as it seeks to become a four-year institution.

It was a good year, could it have been better?

Apathy Versus Enthusiasm

By SONDRA WILSON

It's very easy to criticize and it would not be fair to point out the bad points of the Student Council or any other organization without mentioning some of their good points.

There have been several attempts made by the Student Council this year which have failed through efforts not of their own. For instance, a bonfire was scheduled for the week-end of Homecoming and a meager number of students showed up for it. A bus was chartered and students took advantage of this out-of-town trip by making it an opportunity to cut up. The May Dance was an expensive and timely affair. A band from UNC was booked for the occasion, posters were displayed throughout the buildings, the radio station made sure that the students were properly informed of the event, and various students tried to encourage a big turnout. Result: A dynamic 67 attended!

Nevertheless, there has been too much procrastination and lack of enthusiasm on the part of the council. Especially was this true during Homecoming when the newspaper couldn't get a story on the eminent event because clubs had not been adequately informed or encouraged about making nominations for Homecoming Queen. Furthermore, the balloting mismanagement called for a reelection.

Indeed, a great deal of responsibility rests on the students who are honored with Student Government positions and much is expected by the other students of their "leaders." An inestimable number of decisions and a prodigious amount of work confronts the council member and he who runs for an esteemed office merely for prestige purposes can be detrimental to the entire council and inefficient and unresponsive for those who have selected him.

Next year will be a critical year for the newly elected student government officers because Wilmington College is expanding rapidly and is anticipated to growing at an increasingly high rate.

An English author wrote, "An acre of performance is worth the whole world of promise." If the newly elected officers will maintain the enthusiasm throughout next year that they displayed in their speeches and campaigns prior to elections, then there should be a government ultimately successful.

Not to be forgotten of course are the students not recognized as the political leaders but as the indispensable followers. It takes the leaders to get the ball rolling but unless you, the students, get behind their ideas and projects and render wholehearted support, invariable failure will occur.

It seems that too much apathy and nonconcern has gripped the students as a whole. The omnipresent attitude of letting things be done for you and not by you is one of our basic problems in combating our lagging school spirit. Ten or fifteen students cannot hope to solve it either.

Let's make this our goal for next year.

Much, of course, depends on the Student Council members and their ability to keep the students informed and stimulated, but more depends on you, as a student, and your own personal efforts in making our campus more spirited and well-rounded and more the kind of campus you want.

Stated the renowned Emerson, "Nothing great was ever accomplished without enthusiasm."

Students Hold Annual May Dance To Honor Queen And Her Court

Saturday night, the Wilmington College students honored May Queen, Peggy Ann Harris, and her court at the annual May Dance. From 9:00 until 1:00 p.m., the coeds danced to the music of the Chasers. An added attraction was a guest vocal group from East Carolina College, the Highlanders.

The Student Services Building was converted to a beach and waterfront scene. From the walls and ceilings hung masses of Spanish moss, seaweed, and an assortment of fish. Other decorations were a sunburst, palm trees, a bridge, and a pier. The band was located on the pier. The central attraction was a revolving reflector light that cast shadows on the decorations. Decorators for the dance were chairman, Frank Rogers; and assistants, Barbara Bradley, Oliver Vestal, and Tony Wadell.

At half past ten, the May Court was presented. All girls wore formal gowns of white. Representing the freshman class were Millie Stone and Sondra Wilson. Millie was escorted by Buddy Sullivan and Sondra's escort was Ben Graham. The freshman attendants carried nosegays of blue summer flowers.

From the sophomore class were attendants Diane Gritske and Jane Malpass (They carried pink flowers). Diane was presented by David Hursey and Jane was escorted by Merle Norris. Serving as Maid of Honor this year was freshman, Charlotte Taylor. Charlotte carried a small bouquet of green summer flowers and was escorted by Tony Carter.

After presentation of the Maid of Honor everyone's attention focused on Queen of May, Peggy Ann Harris. She appeared radiant in a formal white gown. A small tiara marked her reign; she carried a bouquet of yellow flowers. Peggy Ann was escorted by David Williams.

Letter To Editor

At a time when there seems to be so much discussion about the lack of school spirit, it is certainly a pleasure to call to the attention of the students and the faculty the display of school spirit shown by the members of the Wilmington College Engineers Club at the recent Southeastern District Science Fair.

Members of this organization served as "guides, policemen, and janitors" for the fair all day Saturday, March 24, working without compensation on a weekend which they could have spent "hitting the books" or just "taking it easy." One of the teachers present wrote "... I want to thank you and your helpers for making it so easy and pleasant for us in setting up our exhibits."

This is the type of service that puts real meaning into the terms, school pride and school spirit, and shows the public the true stature of Wilmington College students. Our thanks to each of you.

Louis H. Adcock, for the Science Fair Committee

By MARCIA GARDNER

After completing its tour, the activities of the music department are beginning to take on a slower pace. However, I think I speak for all the members of the Chorus when I say that this has been a most enjoyable year. If I were asked what was the most enjoyable time we had, I would have to answer, in all honesty, that it was the entire year spent in preparation for our various programs.

On our calendar of events for the month, the Top Twelve made their final T.V. appearance on May 15. The program was one of the spots which was given to the college in support of the five cent levy on taxes which will be voted on in the May 26 primary.

Our last two programs for the year are the baccalaureate sermon and the commencement exercises. The entire chorus will participate in both of these programs. "A Light Shines Forth" will be the selection for baccalaureate, and "The Stars Are with the Voyager" will be the selection for commencement.

Eight Instructors Accept Positions On '62-63 Faculty

After eight years at Wilmington College, George Zebrowski will retire at the end of summer school. The 67 year old scientist, whom everyone calls "Uncle Zeb," plans to spend the rest of his years doing research work. He remarked, "I'll raise sandgnats and mosquitoes at my home on Middle Sound; however," he continued, "I'll still be around here next year, maybe teaching one lecture class, probably hygiene."

Although Mr. Zebrowski will be leaving, eight new instructors will be added to the faculty for next year, making a total of thirty-eight persons.

Richard G. Stone, who received his Masters Degree from the University of North Carolina, will be in the Social Science Department. He is the son of the president of St. Mary's Junior College in Raleigh.

Miss Elizabeth Freeman, now a reference librarian at East Carolina College, will serve as assistant librarian. She received an AB Degree in Education and a MS Degree in Library Science from the University of North Carolina. She has had nine years experience as head librarian of public libraries, six of which were in New York.

There are possibilities of a new language instructor who will teach German. Also, there may be two extra instructors in the Science Department, one teaching chemistry and the other biology.

As we understand it, the object of the Pen Pusher publication, With Pen In Hand, is to stimulate interest in creative writing here at Wilmington College. Certainly the improvement of material and of the format of the book would indicate that the club has realized an appreciable part of its high goal.

From a literary viewpoint, the magazine interests its readers throughout with its emphasis on variety. There are the familiar adventure stories coupled with imaginative flights into whimsy and the bizarre "Desert Dawn," by Len Habas, exhibits a fine talent for plot construction; and one of the poems, "To the Morning," by Freddie Newber, presents an interesting study in metrical form. The illustrations are pleasing to the eye and add a great deal to the attractiveness of the book.

The one major complaint with the magazine could be voiced against a new department: our contributors. It seems a limp attempt toward something which was quite unnecessary and became even more un-meaningful.

With Pen In Hand is consistently good this year and is consistently improving over the years. It does us all credit and provides us with moments of reading pleasure.

Fledgling Comes Soon To Students

Free! The students of Wilmington College will receive their Fledgling without cost during exam week if they have paid their activity fee for three quarters.

The student annual will require $1.50 if the activity fee is paid for two quarters and $3.00 if paid for one quarter.

The Fledgling is dedicated to the National Junior College Baseball Champions.

Included in the annual will be color pictures of the baseball team of last year and all clubs and dances of this year. Other phases of the life at Wilmington College will be effectively covered.

The staff has spent the school year in the creation of the Fledgling. Frances Best is editor-in-chief. Martha Jay Steton is freshman assistant editor and will hold the office of editor-in-chief for the next year. Frank Brown is sophomore assistant editor. Business manager is Barbara Broadnax; assistant business manager, Laura Ellis. Miss Ellis will assume the business managership during the succeeding year. Student photographer is Ed Mauney with Carl Davis as professional photographer.

Move To New Campus Marks Active Year

By Ritchie Watson

Lights, camera action—action was a key word at the college this year.

The top news of the year began in September when 682 students enrolled for the fall quarter. This was the largest enrollment in the history of the college. It marked an auspicious beginning for the school on its newly constructed campus. The student body boasted representatives from 32 North Carolina counties as well as 13 states.

To accommodate the expanded enrollment, nine new faculty members joined the college teaching staff. Mrs. Heyward Bellamy, Fred Toney, Miss Linda Hines, Larry Ingle, Alfred E. Saieed, Mrs. Elinor Hamilton, Fred Vallianos, Rolla C. Nelson, and Mrs. Elizabeth Pearsall began their first year of instruction at Wilmington.

Freshman Elections

On October 4-5 the Freshman class of Wilmington College went to the polls and selected five of its members to represent it in the Student Government. The new officers were Terry Horton, president; Reggie Tucker, vice-president; Barbara Singletary, secretary; and Pam Chason and Gennell Sugg, representatives.

Freshman class elections coincided with the selection of the cheering squad. Pat Moore and Gennie Goodman were elected to serve as head-cheerleader and assistant head-cheerleader for the year 1961-62. Mary Henderson, Francis Davis, Dian Gritzke, Ann Ferguson, Judy Hayes, Helen Comally, Jane Wooten, Nancy Bradshaw, and Ellen Tomz were also chosen.

Dedication Held

The big word in the news during November was dedication. Dedication ceremonies for the new campus were held on Sunday, November 19. William C.

Friday, president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, delivered the principal address. Governor Terry Sanford as well as Major L. P. McLendon, chairman of the State Board of Higher Education; and E. A. Laney, chairman of the New Hanover County Board of Education, were present at the occasion.

Also in November students enrolled for the Winter Quarter. A total of 615, 14 new students included, registered for their classes.

School Spirit Boost

More school spirit around Wilmington College was the purpose of a newly selected committee which worked in coordination with the Student Congress. This committee originated and introduced activities and projects to stimulate pride in the newly-dedicated school.

The formation of WILC, the student radio broadcasting service, accompanied a drive for greater school spirit. WILC's task was and is to interest students in extra-curricular activities, to announce election returns, to broadcast school news, and to provide music that students like and enjoy.

February 8, 9, and 10 marked a big weekend for Wilmington College — it was homecoming. A bonfire, a dance, a parade, and a basketball game marked the highlights of the occasion.

From a court of campus beauties, the title of Homecoming Queen went to Charlotte Taylor.

Beauty Reigns

Beauty reigned supreme during February with the selection of May Queen and her Maid-of-Honor. Peggy Anne Harris was elected 1962 May Queen. Charlotte Taylor was the Queen's Maid-of-Honor. Winning the places for Sophomore May Attendants were Jane Malpass and Dian Gritzke; Millie Stone and Sondra Wilson will represent the Freshman Class.

The Panmathan Club, meaning "all learning," became the newest club on campus. Club members elected Al Shew as president, Judy Butler as vice-president, and John Galloway as secretary of the organization.

Joining a roster of new clubs on campus was the Wilmington College Chess Club. Doug Carmichael won the office of president. The posts of vice-president and secretary went respectively to Johnny Lindner and Randy Foster.

The possibility of a four year college at Wilmington came another step closer to reality when County Commissioners gave approval March 5 to an election on a permissive five-cent tax levy. New Hanover voters will be asked to approve this additional tax for Wilmington College in the May 26th primary election.

WC Defeats Chowan In Doubleheader, 3-2

The Wilmington College Seahawks, who started off the Carolina - Virginia Junior College Baseball Conference with a 3-2 loss to Louisburg, bounced back into the winning side by sweeping a double header from the Chowan College by an identical 3-2 score in Murfreesboro, April 10.

In the first tilt, big right-hander Bill Haywood started the pitching chores for the Hawks. In the second seven-inning contest, Louis Howard had a no-hitter going for him for six innings, before he gave up two runs in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Hawks Stage Rally

Larry Edens started the ball rolling for the Seahawks in the second inning in the opening game, when he homered deep into left field for the first Hawk run of the ball game. Then in the top of the third inning, Haywood connected with a long single to centerfield. Lawrence Keith walked, and Flea Coward hit a sacrifice fly to score Haywood for the second Hawk run.

The third and final run came for the Seahawks in the fifth inning when Coward hit a single, scoring Wayne Taylor.

The Chowan team scored its first run in the fourth inning on a Hawk error, and then scored again in the sixth inning on a long-hit double.

Second Game

In the second game of the doubleheader, Edens led off with the Seahawk scoring. After hitting a short single to left field, Edens advanced to third base on an error and scored on an error by the Chowan squad. Dave Miller, in the fifth inning, hit a single to left field with two men on base and scored the second run of the contest for the Seahawks.

The Chowan team bounced back into play in the seventh inning and scored two runs to knot the score. But Miller again hit a single with two men on base in the seventh inning for the Seahawks, scoring the winning run for the team.

In the second game, Howard surrendered only two hits—both in the seventh inning. He struck out eight men and walked three.

By winning the doubleheader from Chowan, the Wilmington College Seahawks boasted their record from 0-1 to 2-1 in conference play, while Chowan took a 0-2 record.

Local Hawks Lose Opener To Louisburg

The Seahawks of Wilmington College fell victim to its old rival in the Virginia - Carolina Conference, Louisburg, by a 9-5 score in a game played at Louisburg, April 21.

The Seahawks started the contest off with a boom by collecting four runs in the first inning on a four-hit attack led by Bill Haywood with a double.

But the Louisburg Hurricanes showed that they were still in the contest by rapping six runs in the fourth inning of the contest. Included in this hard-hitting attack was a home run.

The loss gave the local Seahawks a 3-2 conference record, and Louisburg took over undisputed lead in the conference with a 4-1 record.

The Hurricanes' only loss of the season in the conference was handed to them by the Wilmington College Seahawks earlier, when they received an 18-2 thumping.

Lou Howard pitched six innings for the Seahawks before being replaced by Bill Haywood. Howard was charged with the loss.

"Flea" Coward led the Hawk hitting attack with two hits.

WC Golfers Lose

The hometown Seahawk golfers played their second match of the season against the University of North Carolina Freshmen in Chapel Hill, May 4, and lost handily to the undefeated Carolina golf team, 27-0.

The Seahawks met the UNC team on their home golf course and had a hard time playing the course. The UNC team played exceptionally well with scores of 67, 70, 70, 71, 70, and 76. The low score of 67 was carded by a local Wilmington boy, Leslie Fleisher, who is playing for the UNC squad for the first time this year.

Ricky Berman headed the Seahawk scoring with an 18-hole total of 78. Will Gemmell, the number three man on the team, collected a 78, and Jack Harrell had a 79. Dickie Bersinger had a 79, Bill Cummliff, an 80, and Jack Dunn carded an 82.

clared the new president, "the students' ideas brought forth, heard, discussed, and enforced."

Best Wants Action

He continued, "I want to see our present student activities continued and improved. I want to work with the students in making our student council one in which the students can take an active part and receive action."

Nat is very anxious to have students come to all the student government meetings so that the new council might work more effectively in giving the students the kind of campus they want.

A diligent and rigorous campaign was held by Nat and his campaign manager, Al Shew, until the very end.

Gets Job Done

The students' choice was well-known around campus for his friendliness, vivacity, and his ability to get a job accomplished. His dependability as an officer in the Student Government this past year was stressed in his manager's speech.

Lawrence Keith, Louis Howard, Bob Stevenson, Steve Coley, and Ronnie Smith are members of the Seahawk baseball squad who are eager to win.

Seahawks Drop Ferrum College, 3-1

The Seahawks managed to eke out a 3-1 win over Ferrum Junior College in Ferrum, Va., May 4. Ron Smith pulled the game out for the locals when he hit a triple in the top of the ninth inning, scoring the winning run.

The Seahawks scored in the top of the first inning when Bob Stephenson singled and then scored on Larry Edens' double.

The final run of the contest occurred when Smith scored minutes later after he got his triple. Louis Howard drove Smith home with a single to center.

Howard was credited with the win after he relieved Ken McDowell in the eighth inning. The win gave the Hawks a 6-4 overall record for the year.

Best Wins '62 Presidency

Wilmington College Students flocked to the polls to elect Nat Best president of the student body for next year in the most responsive reaction to any election this year.

They also saw fit to elect Millie Stone as next year's student body vice-president and Kay Wells, secretary of the student body.

Singletary, vice-president of the Sophomore class, and Nancy Lucas, secretary of the Sophomore class, were other victorious class candidates.

Soph Representatives

Judy Matthews and Larry Cheek will serve as Sophomore representatives.

The recently established Judiciary Council will be composed of three sophomores and three freshmen. Harold Sullivan, Richard (Dickie) Zimmermann, and Richard Douthwaite won the sophomore positions.

Nat's winning platform was that of working for the students in making Wilmington College's Student Government a "student-run" government. "I want," de-

Sports Outlook

By GREG MASSEY

Once again we draw to the close of another year in Seahawk sports. Many fans have expressed the thought that it has been a busy year for the Hawks, and rightly so. With all of the adjusting that has been going on in order to get use to our new campus, the teams played exceptionally well.

First of all, let's go back to the beginning of basketball season, when the Seahawk year in sports began. The Seahawk cagers started their practice early in the month of October; and from all indications of watching the practice sessions, it was soon evident that the basketball squad was going to be a strong, swift-moving ball club. This proved to be correct after the Hawks had played their first game of the season, December 2, against the N.C. State Freshmen. In that game the Seahawks romped 79-63 over the Wolflets, with big Gene Bogash taking scoring honors for the Seahawks with 17 markers.

As the season progressed, the Seahawk cagers soared to 11 wins against only three defeats. They then proceeded to eliminate Louisburg in the Carolina-Virginia Junior Conference to take the title. In fact there was no team in the conference this year that even gave the Hawks a rough time—just a few scares mostly.

Bogash Outstanding Player

But if we are to pick out the one player who made the backbone of the basketball team, it has to be the Hawk center, Gene Bogash. Throughout the season he paced the Hawks in scoring and in rebounding. When the Hawks needed points, Bogash was usually the player to get them. This fact was witnessed in Louisburg in the tournament and in the National Junior College Tournament in Hutchinson, Kansas.

Bogash received many basketball honors throughout the season. First of all, he was named most valuable player in the Carolina-Virginia Junior College Tournament. Then, because of his fine play in the National Tournament, he was named to the second string All-American Junior College basketball team. What an honor!

But we don't want to give all the credit to "Bo" for the success of the basketball team. The entire team was well-balanced, and under the excellent coaching of Bill Brooks the Seahawks were able to advance to the national finals.

Tennis, Golf

This year Frank Allen coached the golf team, while Walter Biggs was in charge of the tennis squad. Both Mr. Allen and Mr. Biggs worked hard in getting the teams ready for the spring matches.

The golf team only played two matches in the spring, but the potential of the players was observed. In the first match the Seahawk golfers played Louisburg, soundly defeating the Hurricanes, 18½-5½. Then the second match was pitched against the UNC Frosh team, the best frosh team in the state. Here the Hawks lost 27-0, but they still played good golf.

The tennis team played only one match. This was certainly disappointing after Mr. Biggs spent so much time in trying to get the team organized. But it seems that the other colleges in the conference didn't care enough about this fine sport to even get up a team, or schedule them for matches. Nevertheless, the Seahawk netters played one game with Chowan College.

Baseball

Let's quickly turn our attention to baseball for a minute. The Seahawks started the season off with a loss to Louisburg in the conference, but they then bounced back to win two games over Chowan to stand 2-1 in the Carolina-Virginia Conference.

The Hawks met Louisburg again, and whipped the Hurricanes 18-2. But then the Louisburg squad turned around and clipped the Seahawks again—this time, 9-5.

After losing to Louisburg, the locals split a doubleheader with Chowan. But the Louisburg team lost both games of a doubleheader to Chowan earlier in the same week, so the Wilmington College team found itself in a tie with Louisburg for the conference lead.

Not only have the Seahawks played good ball in the conference, but they have also played some outstanding non-conference tilts. They played Weber College of Mass., the Wake Forest Frosh, and Ferrum Junior College. The Hawks won all of these games.

Hunting

Not to be forgotten are all of the Wilmington College hunters—particularly the dove hunters. Most of the student hunters interviewed reported success in dove hunting this year, although other fowl, especially ducks, were disappointing. We'll be looking forward to next season, won't we?

Just one last comment. We want to thank all of the Seahawk fans that supported the team this year. It was certainly encouraging to see so many fans at out-of-town games as well as home games. The turnout so far at the baseball games has been much better than usual. Let's keep it up, ok?

Hawks Defeat Louisburg, 4 - 1

The Wilmington College Seahawks took over sole possession of the Carolina-Virginia Conference by downing the Louisburg Hurricanes, 4-1, in a hard-fought contest at Brook's Field, May 15, before a home crowd of about 200 fans.

The Hurricanes first scored in the ball game in the top of the fifth inning, after collecting two singles and making use of a Seahawk error.

In the bottom of the fifth, the Hawks scored their first run when Ronnie Smith hit a long single to center field to score Sterling Coward.

It was in the bottom of the sixth inning that the Seahawks got their big run. Lawrence Keith started the Hawk scoring attack when he singled to left field. Then the biggest play of the ball game came when Coward connected for a triple to extreme right field, scoring Keith.

The Seahawks scored again in the bottom of the seventh inning when Louis Howard stole second base, allowing Larry Edens to score the third run for the locals.

In the bottom of the eighth inning, the Seahawks loaded the bases. An error by the Louisburg first baseman allowed another Seahawk runner to score.

Big right-hander Bill Hayward went the stretch on the mound for the Seahawks. Hayward pitched a three-hit game and struck out 10 batters in gaining his third win of the season.

Jim Futrell pitched seven innings for the Louisburg Hurricanes, but was relieved in the eighth inning by Windy Johnson of Louisburg.

The Louisburg team collected one run on three hits. The Hurricanes committed numerous errors in the ball game.

The Wilmington College Seahawks had eight hits to back their four runs, and they took advantage of the Louisburg errors in scoring the runs.

Keith and Coward paced the Seahawk hitting attack against Louisburg.

The win gave the Seahawks a 5-3 conference record, while Louisburg has a 4-4 record in conference play.

The next game the Seahawks will play is against the University of North Carolina Freshman squad.

Hawk Golfers Beat Louisburg

The Wilmington College Seahawk Golfers completely romped over the Louisburg golf team, 18½-5½, in a regular scheduled conference match in Louisburg, April 23.

The Seahawk golfers had a field day on the nine-hole golf course at Louisburg, N. C. Jack Harrell played the course exceptionally well with his irons and carded a low score of 68 for the day. Right behind Harrell was Rick Berman with a 74, Will Gemmell with a 77, Dickie Bessinger with a 78, Jack Dunn with a 79, and Scott McKinnon, who carded an 85.

The low man on the Louisburg team had a 70. The other scores for the Louisburg team ran, 75, 83, 85, 86, and 86.

This was the first match of the year for the Wilmington College Golf Squad; and by winning the match, the Hawks equalled their last year's record.

Seahawks - Chowan Split Twin Bill Here

By Richard Douthwaite

The Seahawks, holding a 3-2 conference record, split a doubleheader with Chowan College at Brook's Field, May 1. In the opener the Hawks lost to Chowan, 7-5, but the Seahawks won the second tilt, 8-3.

In the first game of the day, the Chowan squad opened up a scoring spree in the first inning and collected three runs.

Stephenson then scored a runner in the second inning for the Hawks when he got a single to center.

Edens Gets RBI

Larry Edens, in the fifth inning, drove a long single into left field and scored Dave Miller for the Seahawks, second run of the contest.

Steve Coley collected another single for the Seahawks and scored a base runner for the third run of the day for the Hawks. This run tied the score 3-3 and a new ball game was being played.

In the top of the eighth inning, Chowan collected two runs off a hit and an error. The Hawks then proceeded to tie the contest up again by getting two hits in the eighth.

But the top of the ninth told the story when the Chowan College squad scored two more runs on three Seahawk errors. Then the Chowan pitcher retired the Hawks in the bottom of the ninth to take the victory over the Seahawks.

Second Game

The Seahawks fell behind again in the scoring during the second contest, as Chowan collected three runs in the first two innings of play.

But in the third inning the Hawks got four solid hits and then used two Chowan errors to score three runs to knot the score.

The Hawks' big inning was in the fourth when they rapped four hits for a five-run scoring spree. This was enough to carry the Hawks to an 8-5 win.

Tennis Team Loses To Chowan, 8-1

The tennis team of Wilmington College played Chowan College in a conference match on April 29, and was defeated 8-1 at Murfreesboro.

The Seahawks lost all their singles. Roscoe Eakins lost 6-0, 6-0; Tommy Gerock lost 6-0, 6-0; and Bill Lanier lost 6-2, 6-3.

In the contest the Seahawks collected a total of nine hits as compared with Chowan's one hit.

Coward led the Hawk hitting attack in the second game with two singles.

The win gave the Seahawks a 4-3 conference record for the season.

Will Gemmell, Jack Harrell, Ricky Berman and Scott McKinnon prepare for Hawk Golf Match.

Locals Wallop Wesleyan Team, 9-2

The Wilmington College Seahawks exploded for a five-run eighth inning in Rocky Mount, April 25, to defeat Wesleyan College, 9-2, in a non-conference tilt.

Wesleyan College took a two run lead in the second inning, but the Hawks got back into the ball game by scoring one run in the bottom of the second, and then scoring a pair of runs in the third inning.

Big Inning

Wayne Taylor, Seahawk shortstop, started the scoring rally for the Hawks when he got on base with a walk. He advanced to second base on a fielder's choice. Larry Edens then hit a long single into right field, scoring Taylor. Edens then stole second base and moved to third on a wild pitch. Ronnie Smith then collected a single for the Hawks, and scored Edens before the side was retired.

Bob McDowell started the pitching chores for the Seahawks, but Edens took over the mound in the fourth inning, after McDowell had given up three hits and two runs. Lefty Louis Howard pitched the last innings of the contest and struck out eight of the last nine men facing him. During the last six innings of play, Edens and Howard held Wesleyan College hitless and struck out 13 batters. Edens was given credit for the win—his first of the season.

Rochelle Singles

The big explosion came in the eighth inning when Stephenson led off with a double. Percy Burchette got on base by an error. Bill Hayward then connected for a single deep into center field and scored Stephenson. Jimmy Rochelle, playing his first game of the season for the Seahawks, singled and drove in two more runs.

Taylor singled to score Rochelle, and then scored himself on another wild pitch for the fifth and final run of the ball game.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE, WILMINGTON, N. C.

October 5, 1961

Dramatics Group Presents "Medea," Three Act Play

"Medea," a three-act play under the direction of Doug W. Swink, will be presented on campus the nights of November 9-11.

Best, Brodnax Run Editorial, Business Ends Of Yearbook

Frances Best and Barbara Brodnax will direct the work of the Fledgling this year in their respective posts of editor and business manager. Martha Jay Station, Franklin Brown, and Laura Ellis will give support in their roles of freshman assistant editor, sophomore assistant editor, and assistant business manager.

A considerable amount of work has already gone into the production of this year's annual. All class pictures were taken early in the month of September, and the theme and color scheme of the future publication were chosen as well.

Delmar To Print

Officials have already contacted the Delmar Printing Company to provide for the printing and engraving, as well as the pictures.

This year's Fledgling will be of approximately the same size as last year's book. One significant innovation will be the addition of full color prints or pictures.

Editor Best emphasized that students will receive their yearbooks at no cost provided that they pay their activity fee each quarter. The activity fee, however, must be paid each and every quarter or the student loses his right to a free book.

Frances also commented that everyone will be able to buy the pictures that were taken last month.

Four Departments

The yearbook organization is divided into four departments. These departments are feature, activity, sports, and classes.

Jonnye Flora, Claire Millican, Gennell Sugg, Sarah Honnicutt, Ann Ferguson, and Mary Helen Long will provide for the feature section of the yearbook.

Wilmington College activities will be the specialty of George McKeeuen, Judy Burress, Rita Sapp, and Marcia Kaifeltz. Phil Stephenson, Jim Hudgens, Greg Massey and Mitchell Todd will provide sports coverage.

College classes will be the primary concern of Gloria Baysden, Doris Hardison, Barbara Ann Hixon, Judy Hayes, and Marie Lassiter.

Barbara Brodnax, Laura Ellis, Patti Johns, and Mary Lou Gilliland will see to it that the annual stays out of the red and in the black.

Work on the Fledgling is done exclusively outside of class. All work is done individually. Deadlines for the yearbook material are January 15, February 15, and March 15; the March 15 date being the last deadline.

The yearbooks will be issued to the student body in May.

Created by the Greek playwright, Euripides, "Medea" is an outcry against woman's status in a man's world. Robinson Jeffers has freely adapted "Medea" into a modern play.

Parts Of Story

Prior to the play's opening, Jason has returned from his Argosy to Colchis where with the aid of Medea's sorcery he stole the Golden Fleece from the serpent guarded cave. The princess of Colchis saved his life once again when she slew her brother who pursued them in their escape. Jason returned victorious to Corinth and married Medea, who bore him two sons.

The "Medea" begins several years later. Jason, driven by ambition renounces Medea to wed Creusa, young daughter of King Creon. In the heart of the abandoned barbarian wife, justice is fused to vengeance. When Creon exiles her from Corinth, endless loathing for her perfidious husband, drives Medea to inexorable revenge.

Invoking her witchcraft, Medea sends Creusa gifts of a golden robe and crown which when donned cremate the monarch's daughter, as well as Creon who attempts to rescue her. Her final fury is vented when Medea slays her two sons and departs from kingless Corinth, leaving behind her a Jason, broken, despairing . . . "hopeless, friendless, mateless childless, avoided by gods and men, unclean with awful excess of grief."

Students In Cast

In order of appearance, the cast includes Louise Dobson, the nurse; Ronald Lee, the tutor, Jimmy Fraser and Mike Page, the children; Susan Hale, Martha Parker and Rita Sapp, first, second, third Women of Corinth; Ann West, Medea; Dale Steven, Creon; Doug Hunt, Jason; Joe Copley, Aegeus; Ray Oxendine, Jason's slave; Merle Morris and Ed Mauney, soldiers.

"Medea" will be played on a proscenium type stage in the rear of Room 104 in Hoggard Hall. The stage was designed and is being constructed by the workshop class.

Tickets will be sold at the door on the nights of performance and at the office.

Freshman Class Holds First Dance Of Year

Class Change As Seen Now

Five minutes are allowed between classes for students to make the trek from one building to another. Here students are headed for work in the Library building.

Record Number Of Students Enroll For Fall Quarter

Six hundred and eighty-two students have registered for the Wilmington College Fall Quarter making the largest enrollment in the history of the college, according to Mrs. Dorothy Marshall, college registrar.

Of the total 682 students to register, 418 were freshmen, 282 men and 136 women. Sophomore students tallied 202 with 151 men and 51 women. There were 51 nurses, six special students, and five preparatory students making the total number.

Some 32 North Carolina counties were represented on registration day. They were: Alamance, 2; Bladen, 5; Brunswick, 36; Carteret, 6; Columbus, 40; Craven, 4; Cumberland, 3; Davidson, 2; Duplin, 19; Edgecombe, 2; Forsyth, 3; Franklin, 1; Gaston, 2; Guilford, 2; Lee, 1; Lenoir, 2; Mecklenburg, 1; Nash, 1; Onslow, 9; Orange, 1; Pamlico, 2; Pender, 43; Pitt, 2; Randolph, 3; Sampson, 4; Stanly, 2; Surry, 1; Wake, 4; Wayne, 2; Wilkes, 1; Wilson, 1; and New Hanover, 438. The total enrollment by counties in 645.

States other than North Carolina represented at Wilmington

College are: California, 1; Florida, 2; Georgia, 1; Illinois, 1; Indiana, 1; Ohio, 1; Maryland, 3; Massachusetts, 1; Kentucky, 1; New York, 4; Pennsylvania, 3; South Carolina, 11; and Virginia, 6. Total enrollment from other states was 36.

One other country, Switzerland, is represented by one student this quarter.

Both the Circle K Club and the Engineer's Club participated in the registration procedure by directing lines and giving general directions.

Randall Announces Dedication Services

Dedication services for the new buildings and campus of Wilmington College will be held Sunday, November 19, 2:00 p.m.

According to Dr. William M. Randall, president of the college, plans are still being made.

William C. Friday of the University of North Carolina has accepted the invitation to be the principle speaker of the services.

Athletics Building In Planning Stage

President William M. Randall and Coach William Brooks attended a meeting of the North Carolina-Virginia Junior College Athletic Conference in Raleigh, Sunday, October 1.

Special Notice

There's a new college magazine for every college student. It's Campus Illustrated! In this magazine are events that are going on in other colleges, the latest fashions, and sports news. Contact Judy Ely for further information.

Semi-formal Affair Honors New Officers

Freshman Class Officers for 1961-62 will be announced at the Freshman Dance to be held in the Student Services building of the college Saturday night.

The dance is to be semi-formal and the Continentals will entertain. Admission is $1.00 in advance and $1.50 at the door.

Campaigns and campaign speeches were held in the Student Services building September 26, with Al Shaw presiding. Francis Best gave the devotional.

Candidates for president were Charles Croom, introduced by Ricky Berman; Terry Horton, introduced by Greg Massey; and Toby Sandlin, introduced by Bob Stevens. Bob Ferguson was also a candidate for this office.

Seeking the position of vice-president were Kenneth Stanley, Reggie Tucker, and Ray Oxendine. Their campaign managers were Tim Moore, Charles Town, and Randy Johnson, respectively.

Sondra Wilson, Louise Town, and Carol Hewitt concluded the program by introducing their candidates for secretary, Barbara Singletary, Milli Stone, and Charlotte Taylor.

Gennell Sugg and Pam Chason were nominees for class representatives.

Wilmington College freshmen voted last Thursday and Friday, also in the Student Services' building by secret ballot.

Church Organizes College Age Group; Meet Sunday Night

College Youth of the local area have been invited by St. Andrews-Covenant Presbyterian Church to participate in an inter-denominational organization beginning this Sunday evening at 6:30.

The purpose of the group is to provide youth of college age who are interested in such work, and whose church sponsors no such organization an opportunity to do so.

Under the advisement of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Francis, the programs of the organization will range from those on world affairs to dating. Periods will be provided for recreation, and several socials will be held over the year.

A planning meeting has already been held, but officers and committees will not be named until a future meeting. Sunday night's meeting will be the first programmed session.

Dr. Randall Attends Bond Election Meet

Dr. William M. Randall and Dean Marshall Crews attended a meeting in Raleigh for the Campaign for State Capital Improvements Bond Election on September 28.

Governor Terry Sanford was the principle speaker for the first campaign meeting at which all the presidents from North Carolina's colleges attended.

Students Register In New Library

Editorials

Say What You Think!

You are free to voice your opinion in the Seahawk? How? By just writing a letter-to-the-editor or by drawing an editorial cartoon for publication.

There are many questions that need to be discussed by today's college students and teachers. You can debate anything from Wilmington College's social activities to the educational opportunities in America.

So, think, and get your thoughts together. Think and voice our actual opinion on the subject of your choice. Just place your material in the SEAHAWK mailbox. All letters must be signed, and the staff reserves the right to publish only those letters which are in good taste with the policy of a college newspaper.

Wrong Building?

"Where is Room H216?" "Oh, I can't be in the wrong building again?" Similar questions were voiced during registration by sophomores, and wide-eyed freshmen. It's a fact that there were many wrong directions given during registration, and by sophomores as well as freshmen.

Usually during registration, the sophomores give the essential directions and advice to the inexperienced freshmen. Freshmen were led from line to line and from room to room in years before. In a day the freshmen were usually adjusted to room numbers.

Never before have directions been given in the terms of buildings. This is a new and different experience for sophomores and freshmen alike.

Now, that the confusion has subsided, it is your duty to enjoy our beautiful school. Start taking advantage of the opportunity you have to learn, to make new friends, and to be a big part of Wilmington College.

Don't Dropout!

Why do high school graduates enter college? The majority of times it is for the purpose of providing for the future. With this purpose in mind, the high school graduate enters his freshman year of college.

Surviving the first quarter of college can be a harrowing experience if the freshman makes it that way. If he could develop a sincere interest in college, he could go forward with success.

But, the dropout rate of college freshmen has increased doubly within the past few years. Harold G. Ridlon, assistant professor of English at Tufts University, Massachusetts, whose article appears in September's Atlantic magazine, states, "Though admission officers tell us that the new freshmen are better and better in the ways that are measurable, many of us have a lurking suspicion that the battery of tests and other data college administrators depend on fall far short of revealing student originality, inventiveness, or capacity for intellectual growth under the demanding stimuli of the first weeks of college."

There's an obvious reason for freshman failure. High school graduates must know how to read and how to listen. The college freshman must force himself to tackle these two essentials to be a successful college student.

So, freshmen, prevent your own college dropout!

Creative writing is one of the most satisfying and rewarding methods of manifesting an opinion. For the space in time taken to read the length of lines, the writer controls the thoughts of the reader. This expression of ideas can be vitally important to the individual.

The old axiom, I THINK, THEREFORE, I AM, is immensely more than a bit of archaic philosophy; it is an inherent part of raw twentieth centuryism. To eke out existence in our complex society, it is not even necessary to think. To maintain life, one must create with his mind and be able to express that creation.

Eons ago, it seems, in some prehistoric age called last spring quarter, volume number six of the Pen Pushers' anthology, WITH PEN IN HAND, was published. While this literary shot was not heard around the world, it was of much interest to the students of Wilmington College. The publication was their own—the work within the publication was a representation of their ideas and ideals.

Again this year students will have an opportunity to see their creative work in print. Volume seven of WITH PEN IN HAND is already being planned, and Editor Sondra Wilson asks all interested students to submit their material to her or to the Pen Pushers' advisor, Miss Shannon Morton.

"Listen to the person singing next to you and blend your voice with theirs, pronounce the words more distinctively, etc." There are Loyd Hudson's words as he patiently directs the Wilmington College Chorus.

This fall the chorus is composed of 36 members with Sandra Willoughby as the accompanist. Mr. Hudson also states, "We have a fine nucleus of a group starting this year. With the addition of a few more students—up to a limit of 40—this year's chorus should measure up to, or surpass any of those in the past." The chorus also has several outstanding soloists.

Projected performances for the group include the Grocery Dealer's Convention on October 15, the College Dedication ceremony on November 19, and WECT-TV has contacted the chorus for several performances during the year, principally the two major Christmas shows. Performances for the civic clubs of the area also are on the agenda.

Spring plans include a musical show, and tours of the surrounding high schools.

The music department has a vocal group known as "The Top Twelve," who sing for many occasions during the year. Composing this group are Carol Ellis, Jaye Fisher, Marcia Gardnew, Elaine Gregory, Marcia Kalfeiz, Vesta Rhodes, Randy Coble, Doug Hunt, Ronald Lee, Wally West, Jan Williams, and Oliver Vestal. Their first scheduled performance will be at Roland-Grise Junior High School, October 6, for the Junior Sorosis Fashion Show.

CAMPUS COMEDY

"ENGLISH, SPANISH, CHEMISTRY....GUESS I'LL STUDY SOME HISTORY DURING THE HOLIDAYS, TOO."

Pen Pushers' Club Announces Officers

Tommy Landen, president, and Beth Fineberg, vice-president, will direct the activities of the Pen Pushers Club this year. Club members also elected Rita Sapp as secretary-treasurer and Ann West and Sondra Wilson as co-editors of the yearly publication, With Pen In Hand.

The elections took place at a regular meeting of the club in Room S104 at 12:30 on September 20.

The Pen Pushers Club was one of the first chartered clubs organized at Wilmington College, coming into existence in 1949. The purpose of the club was and is to provide an opportunity for people interested in writing to write for criticism and publication, and to encourage an interest in writing throughout the college.

Looking For Writers

The club has already asked English teachers to give the names of outstanding creative writers. These writers will be encouraged to join the club.

Members in the Pen Pushers is unlimited. Members are not required either to submit or write material.

Club meetings, which are held each Wednesday at 12:30 in Room S104, offer a variety of programs. Instruction in various forms of writing is often given.

There are also frequent addresses by outside speakers to add variety to club meetings.

The culmination of the year's work in included in a publication entitled With Pen In Hand. This literary magazine, edited by the club, contains some of the best work of both members and other students.

Last year for the first tie illustrations were included in the magazine. This year even more illustrations will be added.

To Use Drawings

Drawings are also to be used to apply to specific stories within the book. In this new approach the club will work closely with the art department.

The cost of With Pen In Hand, as in past years, will be 50 cents. The magazine will be distributed to subscribers around the first of May. Due to the increased student enrollment the Pen Pushers hope to have more submitted writing and, consequently, a larger magazine. This hope was expressed by Miss Shannon Morton, professor of English and faculty advisor for the club.

During the year several socials are held by the club. These functions are held approximately once a quarter, and are planned by the social committee.

WC Engineers Plan Activities; Includes Trips To Local Plants

To familiarize the engineering, and to help him decide his correct field of this profession is the purpose of the Engineers' Club.

Officers of this organization are Kenneth Hansley, president; Charles Barnhill, secretary; and Bobby Ludlum, treasurer. At the first meeting in October, a vice-president will be elected along with a club sponsor who will represent the Engineers' Club in all school activities.

Monthly Meetings

Regular meetings are held once a month under the faculty head of Calvin C. Doss. Membership is open to anyone, preferably engineering students, who maintain an over-all C average. However, freshmen are not eligible for membership until after the end of the fall quarter when their grades are available for reference.

"Because of the growth of the new college, its location, and the increasing number of students," states Secretary Charles Barnhill, "we have many more opportunities to expand our club. Last year we had approximately 25 members, and this year we're expecting an even bigger turn out."

Plans For Tours

Tours through Riegel Paper Company, Babcock & Wilcox, Dupont Chemical Company, and Sunny Point are only a few of the many scheduled trips for the coming year.

Guest speakers from the Wilmington Engineers' Club, and representatives from different companies throughout North Carolina provide interesting and worthwhile programs which benefit the engineering student.

"Usually near the end of May," said President Kenneth Hansley, "we 'kick it all off' with a banquet which draws to a close an eventful year."

Coach Brooks Takes Recruiting Trip

Coach William Brooks works at his desk trying to complete his basketball schedule.

September Sees Opening Of Dove Season In Local Area

Dove Hunting Rates High As Favorite Student Past-Time

Mourning Dove season officially opened hunting season in North Carolina at noon, September 9. The North Carolina Wildlife Commission reported that the dove population has retained the same status as last year's crop of birds.

The first segment of dove season ends October 14, and the second half of the split season opens December 13 and continues until January 15. The bag limit for doves is 12 birds daily and 24 in possession. Shooting hours are from noon to sunset.

Dove shoots often take on the aspects of a social event, since the hunters are usually confined to a field and are stationed not too far apart. Friendly insults forth among the shooters.

Difficult Wingshot

The Mourning Dove presents one of the most difficult wingshots of any feathered game. More shots per bird are expended through dove shooting than on any other game bird or animal. Often a lone dove successfully executes the crossing of a field liberally sprinkled with hunters, without having a feather lifted.

Dove shooting is one sport that will separate the men from the boys so far as gun marksmanship is concerned.

But what does dove hunting have to do with Wilmington College? A survey conducted among 20 male students showed that over 80 per cent hunt doves. Five or six of the students said that they even hunted doves between classes!

Group Bags 100

On opening day of dove season, six Wilmington College students and others killed over a hundred doves in a single corn field. It's not often that this many doves are bagged on a single hunt. Freshman students who participated on the dove hunt were Andy Gemmell, Will Gemmell, Ted Graham, and John Allen. Sophomores Ben Graham and Carl Warwick were also among the group. Fred Graham, a member of the Board of Trustees of Wilmington College, headed the brigade of hunters.

Other Wilmington College dove hunters who helped make this sport one of the college's main outside past-times are: Ralph Horton, Lewis Howard, Carl Hiatt, Floyd Pate, Bill Mathis, Ace Potter, Tom Kelly, Larry Cheek, Sterling Coward, John Littleton, Humphrey Jennings, Horace Murray, Dewey Padgett, and David Hursey.

How many dove hunters can crowd into a field without too great a danger of the hunters shooting each other? In one large dove field near Rocky Point, 68 dove hunters were counted, September 16. This is an exception to the general rule, however. To have a successful dove hunt, at least four or five hunters are needed to surround a field. One or two hunters usually can't cover a field adequately. When the doves fly into the field to feed, the hunters will be able to keep them flying by their constant shooting.

The escaping doves will fly to a nearby roost and wait a few minutes before trying to approach the field again. If the doves keep trying to raid the field all afternoon, the dove shooters will undoubtedly have a good hunt. But as the local saying goes: finding the doves is the first problem; hitting them is the next one.

Dove Hunting Costly

Dove hunting can be costly. It is not uncommon for the average dove shooter to shoot a couple of boxes of shotgun shells and drive over a hundred miles trying to locate doves. The hunter's results can also be very disappointing. He may bag only one or two birds. When one figures the cost of each dove killed, he can understand that it is an expensive business.

This past summer Coach William Brooks took his annual recruiting trip throughout much of the Eastern United States in an attempt to encourage top basketball and baseball prospects to come to Wilmington College and play for the Seahawks.

Coach Brooks started his talent journey by visiting towns and cities in the western parts of North and South Carolina. He secured some outstanding baseball potentials from this particular area. Bob Stevenson (Raleigh), Wayne Bolick (Mt. Holly), Sam Page (Woodruff, S. C.), and Steve Coley (Spartanburg, S. C.) are four boys which Coach Brooks enlisted from this section.

Recruits In North

After his stay in North and South Carolina, Coach Brooks travelled through Virginia and West Virginia until he reached Pittsburgh, Pa. It was here that he started searching for some basketball talent. Two boys, hailing from the Pittsburgh area, decided to come to Wilmington College after talking with Coach Brooks. They are Al Ferry, a 6'6" center, and Jim McCurley, a 6'4" forward. Both boys are looking forward to playing for the Seahawks.

Continuing with his trip, Brooks swept south again and stopped at the small town of Frostburg, in the extreme northwestern part of Maryland. He was there just long enough to encourage Marshall Hamilton, another towering 6'6" center, and Jim Evans, a 6' guard, to play for the Seahawks. Back in Lexington, Coach Brooks secured Gary Hedrick, a 6'1" guard, who is expected to give strength to the Seahawk roster.

Mail, Phone Contacts

A few other boys were contacted on the recruiting trip, and Coach Brooks also wrote letters and made telephone calls in an effort to interest talented ball players to come to Wilmington College. Overall, Coach Brooks feels that the trip was highly successful, and he has a good choice of boys this year to play basketball and baseball.

Besides the many new recruits, Coach Brooks has a long list of returnees from last year's basketball and baseball teams. Experienced members of last season's cage team who are expected to see action again this year are Eugene Bogash, Larry Edens, Phil Stevenson, Don Marshall, and Bill Haywood. Coach Brooks also reports that there are four or five good basketball prospects who have come to Wilmington College on their own accord.

Regardless of cost, time, and effort, dove hunters will continue to seek their swift-flying game. At the end of the first split season, a hunter may find that he has spent more than one dollar for each dove bagged. The average hunter will kill one dove for every seven shells shot. A shotgun shell costs about 13 cents. But it does not worry the dove hunter if he has spent time and money. The real joy of the hunter is just getting outside in the crisp autumn air. Besides, the dove shooter hopes that he will be able to improve his shooting eye by the second part of the split season.

In the meantime duck season is approaching, and ducks provide a much larger target. But generally the opening day of the second part of dove season will tell the same story as the earlier one. Oh, well, maybe he'll have better luck next year.

Baseball Outlook Good

Changing from basketball to the baseball outlook, Coach Brooks stated that he has a good nucleus of last season's National Championship team back with him again this year. Wayne Taylor, Perry Burchette, Ronny Smith, Lawrence Keith, Larry Edens, and All American shortstop Dave Miller will be able to provide the Hawks with plenty of hitting power and defensive ability. Of course, last season's versatile and well-known pitchers, Lewis Howard and Bill Haywood, will be right in there pitching for another National Championship crown for the Seahawks.

Not to be overlooked are the good baseball prospects from the surrounding local area. Sterling Coward and Toby Sandlin, who were last year graduates from New Hanover High School, along with Mike List, will make good replacements during the season.

Coach William Brooks feels that the Wilmington College basketball and baseball teams have great potential, but he is aware of strong contention this year. Both teams will have tough schedules.

Varsity Report

By GREG MASSEY

Basketball season is just around the corner, and it appears that Coach William Brooks will have another winning team this year. Coach Brooks reports excellent potential in his new recruits and has five of last year's squad members returning.

The basketball schedule is not available for publication in this issue of the paper, but we hope to have it ready by next issue, along with a run down of each member of the Seahawk cage team.

The Hawks will have strong contenders in the Virginia-Carolina Conference and some rough Big Four college freshman tilts. But with superior height over past years, Coach Brooks should be able to mold a strong, talented team from his boys.

All the home Seahawk games will be played in Brogden Hall, next to New Hanover High School on Market Street. Let's attend all the Seahawks' basketball games this season and give the team our wholehearted support.

Tryouts for the Wilmington College golf team will probably be held sometime in the near future. There is a meeting scheduled for October 13 at 1:30 p.m. in H215 for players interested. Coach Bill Brooks believes that by getting the squad ready this fall, he will be able to work with the boys and have them in top shape for the Spring matches. The prospects for a good golf team are very promising. Many local golfers who played for the New Hanover High School team, and a score of others are enrolled in the college this year. So look for some good golf from the team.

.....

All students who are interested in playing tennis for the Seahawks should try to see Coach Brooks. Last year the Seahawks had a good tennis squad, and we hope that they will have another one this year.

.....

It's a little early for baseball, but let's not forget it. With a national championship team we can expect some fine play from the team. Most of the team members who played on last year's squad will be returning this season along with some new players. Coach Brooks should be given a lot of credit for producing such talented baseball teams.

New members of the Wilmington College faculty for 1961-1962 are Fred Toney, Mrs. Elinor Hamilton, Mrs. Elizabeth Pearsall, Miss Linda Hines, Mrs. Mary Bellamy, Larry Ingle, Fred Vallinos, and Alfred Saiced.

Record Student Influx Expands Teaching Staff

Wilmington College has recently opened her doors to welcome the largest student body in the history of her existence, and has also added eight new members to her faculty.

Mrs. Heyward Bellamy, Spanish and French instructor, is no newcomer to the Wilmington area or to the teaching profession. She taught Spanish at New Hanover High School last year and is now entering the thirteenth year of her teaching career. She is a graduate of the University of North Carolina and hopes to be an interpreter or linguist at the International Trade Market one day. Mrs. Bellamy is the wife of Heyward C. Bellamy, present supervisor of second schools for New Hanover County.

Toney Teaches Math

Former resident of Rutherford County, Fred Toney majored in applied mathematics at North Carolina State College where he taught two years. He is now instructing courses in College Algebra, Trigonometry, and Calculus.

Already a familiar face to Wilmington College students is Miss Linda Hines, new librarian. Miss Hines studied two years at the old Isaac Bear Building and majored in Library Science at East Carolina in Greenville. Her hobbies include sewing and, obviously, reading.

"I believe history is a vehicle to steel fundamentals and truths into somebody," remarked Larry Ingle, teacher of Western European Civilization. Mr. Ingle hails from Greensboro, N. C., and majored in history with a minor in Greek at Wake Forest College. This year he received his Master's Degree at American University at Washington, D. C. He concludes, "Students do not go to college to get an education for the sake of learning but for the sole purpose of making money one day."

Finds Students Eager

Having earned his AB at Duke and a MA at East Carolina, Alfred E. Saiced taught three years at various high schools prior to his coming here. He finds students both at high school and college eager to learn. He likes people and likes to approach things in a positive manner. Outside interests include reading, chess, tennis, and all kinds of music. "The importance of a good background in chemistry cannot be over emphasized," commented the chemistry professor.

Mrs. Elinor Hamilton has been an experienced teacher for ten years and comes to Wilmington College from New Hanover High School. Born in Concord, she graduated from Woman's College with a BS Degree in secretarial administration which she is now instructing.

"When a student enters college he should develop a stronger sense of responsibility as an adult an as an individual," professed test administrator and psychology major, Fred Vallinos. Mr. Vallinos is a native of New York where he did his under graduate work at New York University. He is an East Carolina major. Mr. Vallinos is in favor of weekly dances at the college and thinks that the students, by working through the Student Government, could arrange this and other social functions.

English and drama major, Mrs. Elizabeth Pearsall, graduated from Woman's College and has practiced teaching for three years. She loves literature and finds the entire English language fascinating. She stated the necessity of learning English by saying, "The basis of education is to know how to read and to write well."

New College Concert Band Attracts Student Musicians

Take out that clarinet, bring that drum down from the attic, and join the newly formed Wilmington College Concert Band! William Adcock gave this advice as he had the newly formed band through their first practice sessions.

Twelve students attended the first practice session and more were expected to follow as the band continues its organizational efforts.

Members of the band get together each Wednesday night. Practice continues from seven until nine.

In Planning Stages

Mr. Adcock commented that the band had been in the planning stage for many months. The fact that a dance band had been organized successfully a few years ago was an encouraging factor.

The band director was also prompted by the knowledge that many former members of the New Hanover High School Band were attending the college. Working in liaison with Loyd H. Hudson, associate professor of music and English, the plan for a college concert band became a reality.

Programs Being Planned

The new musical organization is classified as a concert band. Marches and light concert music will compose the musical programs being planned.

Mr. Adcock emphasized that the band was still strictly in the organizing stage. Although no definite programs have been planned, the band hopes to be able to present a program for the November dedication of the college.

In an effort to increase the membership of the band, students with known musical experience are being contacted and urged to join the organization.

"Any students at Wilmington College who have had musical experience are welcome to attend the practice sessions each Wednesday night," says Mr. Adcock.

Doug Hunt Leads Circle K Club

The Circle K Club is a fully organized club for young men at Wilmington College. Having been sponsored by the Kiwanis Club for five years, the Circle K functions as a service organization to help the college and the community.

This year the officers are: Doug Hunt, president; Bobby Way, vice-president; Ronald Lee, secretary; Charles Farrow, treasurer; and John Pistolis and Ken Urquhart, directors. Faculty advisor is Thomas R. Lupton.

Although there are only fifteen members in the club now, plans are being made to select new members for the club. The new members will be chosen and voted on by the old members. The requirements are to maintain at least a C average on studies and to meet the approval of the old members.

The Circle K Club was represented by Doug Hunt and Ronald Lee at the International Convention in St. Petersburg, Florida, this summer.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE, WILMINGTON, N. C.

October 26, 1961

Dedication Service Open To Public, Friday Speaks

Wilmington College's three $1.1 million buildings will be dedicated Sunday, November 19, at 2 p.m. on the college campus. Weather permitting, the dedication will be held in front of the student activities building; otherwise, the ceremony will be held indoors.

Speaker for the dedication will be William Clyde Friday, president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina.

Governor Terry Sanford will also be a guest at the service. He will greet the guests.

Other participants in the program are expected to be Major L. P. McLendon, chairman of the State Board of Higher Education; Dallas Herring, chairman of the State Board of Education, and E. A. Laney, chairman of the New Hanover County Board of Education.

Presentation of the college buildings and grounds will be made to the College Board of Trustees by J. M. Hall Jr., chairman of the New Hanover County Board of Commissioners and O. O. Allsbrook, mayor of the city of Wilmington.

Dr. John T. Hoggard, chairman of the Wilmington College Board of Trustees, will accept the new campus on behalf of the trustees.

Dr. William M. Randall, college president, will preside at the dedication ceremony.

These three buildings are the first in the college's building program. An auditorium-physical education building to cost approximately $300,000 is the next building planned.

The dedication ceremony will be open to the public.

Pen Pushers' Club Studies Short Story

The Pen Pushers Club has chosen the topic of short-story composition to study this quarter. For the past two weeks, the club has had a prominent speaker to lecture on this phase of creative writing.

Gerald Rosselot, English teacher at Wilmington College, was the first guest speaker. As a point of interest, he gave the history of the short-story. Then, by drawing a sketch on the blackboard, he was able to impress on the minds of the members the general pattern of the type of story. The diagram, shaped somewhat like a pyramid, showed the rise of action on an upward slant until the peak or crisis of the story was reached. The falling action or denouement leads to the conclusion.

Rip Collins, Star-News Sports Editor, was the second guest speaker. Mr. Collins has had many of his own writings published. He stated that each amateur writer probably would imitate the style of his favorite writer at first. Later, the writer would develop his own individual style of writing. "One of the most empty feelings a writer can have is to have his work rejected, but this one rejection should not prevent him from trying a second time," stated Mr. Collins.

Cheerleaders Line Up

Music Appreciation, Creative Writing Highlight Adult Education Courses Here

Adults have begun their program of learning as of October 9 and are refreshing their memories of familiar subjects or exploring into new ones being offered here at the college.

This year's class in Music Appreciation, being taught by Loyd Hudson, began on October 9 and will continue for five additional weeks, meeting each Monday evening through November 13, and from 8 to 10 p.m. Short lectures and recordings of major works in the romantic periods of music will be a part of the program.

The creative writing classes also began October 9, under the direction of Rip Collins. Classes are conducted Monday evenings from 7:30 to 9:30. The short story, poetry, and magazine articles will be covered.

A new course, which the College feels will be of special interest to members of clubs and organizations, is being started this year. Its title is Technical Writing, and Gerald S. Rosselot is the instructor. Classes meet Wednesday evenings, October 11 from 8:00 until 10:00 p.m. on six through November 15.

Subject matter will include principles of objective writing as well as basic information about the preparation of technical papers and reports.

Other courses, including one on Shakespeare, a master's class for church choir members, one on painting, one on economics and one on salesmanship, will open later in the year.

The cost of each course is five dollars.

Moore, Goodman Head Seahawk Cheering Squad

Pat Moore and Gennie Goodman have been elected to serve as head-cheerleader and assistant head-cheerleader for the year 1961-1962.

Mary Henderson, Francis Davis, Diane Gritzke, Ann Ferguson, Judy Hayes, Helen Connelly, Nancy Bradshaw, and Ellen Tomz, alternate, will also make up the cheering squad.

These eleven girls were chosen last Friday at 4:30 in the Student Service Building. Judging this contest were: Walter Biggs; Fred Toney; Doug Hunt, president of the Circle "K" Club; Jim Hudgins, president of the Student Body; and David Hursey.

New Uniforms

New uniforms will be ordered for each cheerleader for the basketball season, and will consist of a green pleated skirt and a white sweater and blouse.

"I was really surprised and happy to get head-cheerleader," stated Pat Moore. She said that more cheerleaders were chosen because of the increase of the number of students at Wilmington College this year. "The cheerleaders are chosen to promote school spirit and to lead the student body in the cheers, and we hope to get a lot of support from all the students," she further commented. Pat plans to have a practice twice a week and to teach several new cheers.

"We hope to get up a pep team and to have some pep rallies in the student union. I believe that this year's Freshman Class has more school spirit than last year's class," remarked Gennie Goodman. Gennie plans to major in political science at U.N.C. and to become a college instructor after she gets her Master's Degree.

Favors Pep Club

Mary Henderson is an assistant teacher of tap and ballet at Jane's School of Dancing. She favors a pep club but believes it will be successful only if everyone participates. To graduate at East Carolina and to teach elementary education are her future plans.

Twirling the baton, collecting photographs and dancing are hobbies that occupy Diane Gritzke's spare time. Dian was a cheerleader in junior high school and wants to have a Pep Club for the college.

Jane Wooten believes that school spirit could be increased by having pep rallies, by writing down the words of cheers for the students' benefit, and by putting up posters around the college. This makes Jane's third year as cheerleader.

Follow Team

"I think that a group (even if it's a small one) should always go to the out of town games to let the ballplayers know we stand behind them," stressed Francis Davis. Francis was a cheerleader her Freshman year at high school and likes to write letters in her spare time.

One of the most familiar faces on the squad is Judy Hayes who was a cheerleader for Wilmington College last year. She thinks that by having the cheerleaders wear their uniforms to school prior to a game and by sponsoring a Pep Club, that the school spirit would increase.

Also a cheerleader her Freshman year in high school, Nancy Bradshaw enjoys sewing and summer sports. She may go to East Carolina or Carolina when she graduates from Wilmington College and get her teaching degree.

Hope To Charter Bus

"I was overwhelmed and extremely happy when I got cheerleader and am anxious for basketball season to get here," said Ann Ferguson. This is Ann's first year as cheerleader. She thinks that it would add to school spirit and encourage the ball players if buses were chartered to carry groups of students to the out of town games.

Ellen Tomz will replace any one of the following ten cheerleaders if they are compelled to leave the squad for any reason. She will also cheer when one of the regular cheerleaders is ill. Ellen plans to attend East Carolina in the near future.

The first basketball game of the year will be on November 18, and the cheerleaders anticipate a big turnout and plenty of vivacious supporters.

Freshman Class Elects Officers For 1961-1962

Cliffhanger Election Delays Final Tally

The Freshman Class of Wilmington College in an election October 4-5 named five of its members to represent them in student government. Selected were Terry Horton, president; Reggie Tucker, vice-president; Barbara Singletary, secretary; and Pam Chason and Gennell Sugg, representatives.

Terry Horton is a graduate of New Hanover High School where he was active in student affairs each year. During his sophomore year, Terry served his class as a judge, a member of the Senate, and a representative on the executive committee. Last year, he was president of the Senior Class.

Extra Special Honor

Terry said, "I feel it is an extra special honor to be elected the first freshman president of the new Wilmington College, and I feel that our Freshman Class this year can be the best that Wilmington College has ever had. I wish to thank my campaign manager, Greg Massey, and all those who supported me in this election, and I hope we will work together to achieve our aims in the best way possible."

Vice-President Reggie Tucker hails from Belmont. A graduate of Belmont High School, Reggie is a prospective member of Circle K. He was president of his Junior Class and vice-president of his Senior Class. Reggie said he was stupefied when he heard he had won the election. Charles Anderson was his campaign manager.

Singletary Secretary

Also from New Hanover High School comes the secretary, Barbara Singletary. Barbara was a representative her sophomore year, and a member of the Senate her junior year. Barbara was president of her Freshman Class in Albany, Ga. Barbara says that being elected was one of the greatest thrills and surprises of her life. "I can't believe that it is true. I just want to thank everyone for putting their faith in me and I hope to do my duty in a way to benefit every student." Campaign manager for Barbara was Sondra Wilson. In her campaign speech she said that Barbara was for an active student body.

Exploring The Atom

The world's first atomic bomb, detonated near Alamogordo, New Mexico, on July 16, 1945, fired a new beginning for America. This bomb announced the beginning of the atomic age. The fire ball of this bomb melted the sands. Its cloud of atomic dust boiled eight miles into the sky. Today, 16 years later, the nation has a 25-billion-dollar investment in atomic energy.

Atomic energy program affects miners, nuclear scientists, mechanical engineers, bricklayers, welders, and pipe fitters. It also affects the college student. Every citizen of the United States should feel that he has a part in shaping the future of America, and atomic energy seems to be America's future.

Atomic energy has become an industry, and it has had a breath-taking impact on the American scene and way of life. According to Robert O'Brien, in the fiscal year 1959-60 the Atomic Energy Commission alone spent a prodigious $2,735,000,000 in federal funds for the production of atomic materials and weapons, the development of nuclear reactors and other related projects.

How are these atomic materials affecting us? Reactors for the manufacture of electric power are being built in many metropolitan areas. These reactors will be generating enough electricity to supply the needs of eight million Americans. The perfected atom is being used in thousands of hospitals, laboratories, and factories to treat and detect disease, to increase farm production and to improve dozens of basic products.

Do you know the job opportunities in the field of atomic energy? Salaries range from an average of about $2.32 an hour for starting junior technicians up to $8,000 and $12,000 a year for college-trained men and women with several years' experience. Top-flight scientists of proven ability are earning $25,000 a year and up.

A recent Bureau of Labor Statistics survey revealed that the labor force in atomic energy will probably rise to at least 275,000 by 1970. Even now, just about every branch of the industry reports a shortage of people able to step into jobs in teaching, basic research, and industrial operations.

How To Make Decisions

As students in college, we have a future to plan. This future consists of making several great decisions. The student asks, "Shall I enter college, or the business world?"

After a student enters college, there still exists an inner voice that must be answered. There are many decisions that are common among students rather than just personal decisions, and it is necessary that the students know how to make intelligent decisions.

First, we must be an executive and consider all the facts of a problem. If a problem can not be settled, we must look for more data. "Shall I be in the college band, college chorus, and science club?" Consider the remote possibilities—advantages, disadvantages, opportunities, abilities to be learned. Know your objective. Consider alternative means of reaching that objective. Weigh the pros and cons of each alternative. Then, choose the course that appears most likely to achieve the results desired.

Secondly, we have feelings, and they must be considered. When a decision accords with our inner nature, it brings an enormous sense of relief. According to Robert L. Heilbroner, "good decisions are the best tranquilizers ever invented; while bad ones often increase our mental tension."

Next, we should have the right time set for making a decision—when not to make a decision. Students do know when and when not to ask a question in the classroom; thus they should know when to ask the brain for a decision. In this manner complicated situations have a chance to work themselves out.

After this phase, we have to realize that final decisions can be broadened to include all inner expectations. Secretary of Labor, Frances Perkins, once said of Franklin D. Roosevelt, "He does the best that he knows how at the moment; if it doesn't turn out all right, he would modify it as he went along."

Finally, we must prepare for the worst and be able to stand a sense of loss. Sacrifices are involved no matter what we do.

With a systematic form of decision-making, every student can face his problem of indecision.

The style in which an author writes is the most important single thing in considering the literary value of his work. An author who writes with the timelessness of a Shakespeare can give width and depth to aging themes while imagination dies beneath a mediocre pen.

Growing popular demand for short stories in the past thirty years has produced a new style of writing. The new look in all literature is a result of this. Ernest Hemingway, more than any other writer, is responsible for the new trend in style. His one-syllable vocabularized characters appeal to the public with their realism and simple philosophy. His characters are all endowed with organs necessary for life and are usually in possession of a brain enabling them to act independent of Hemingway, once they are born in print. This is ideal and genius in literature. Unfortunately, there are many parasites of genius writing in a stilted imitation of Hemingway. Ironically enough, their work is stagnant and untrue—ironic, because these were the two elements which Hemingway found most deplorable in literature.

"A writer," he has said, "destroys his talent by not using it, by betrayals of himself and what he believes in, by drinking so much that he blunts the edge of his perception, by laziness, by sloth, by snobbery, by pride, and by prejudice, by hook and by crook."

The writers of today, then, seem to be destroying whatever talent they have by committing literary larceny. They have found a leak in the public treasury and exist on this rather than moving on to an unexplored portion of the literary plain.

By VERA RHODES

Have you ever had a desire to create music? When you hear a beautiful melody do you have an urge to write one of your own, by yourself? Then perhaps you have inspiration, one of the first steps in the creating of a musical composition.

Many people ask if one should compose at the piano. Beethoven composed many times when there was no piano near him. That is had for most of us to do, because for one thing, harmony is so much more complex now than it was in his day.

You may say "How do I begin to compose?" Every composer begins with a musical idea. Keep a book handy in which you can write down a melody when it comes to you.

Music is usually expressive and if your melody expresses happiness or sadness, it should be instinctively known.

Once the nature of the theme or idea has been identified, find what can be done with it.

Having looked at the musical idea, does it belong in a symphony or is it a lyrical theme that would be used to the best advantage in a song?

Next, try to find other ideas that seem to go with the original one. Then some way must be found for getting from one idea to another. This is achieved through bridge material. You may also elongate the material, or develop it.

Student Comes To WC From Switzerland

By MORRIS BROADWELL

Among the approximately 700 students attending Wilmington College, there is Erika Toggweiler, an attractive brown-haired, blue-eyed Swiss miss from Zurich. To her, Switzerland's high white mountain looking down on its green valleys and its clear blue glimmering lakes is one of the most beautiful scenes in the whole world.

"Zurich is the largest city in Switzerland," explained Erika, "and a noted center of learning. There we have one of the finest botanical gardens in the world."

Wilmington Friendly

Of all her extensive travels throughout Europe, including France, Italy, and England, where she has met many, many people, Erika finds the people of Wilmington to be the friendliest yet. "Here," she admitted, "people take time and love to talk."

"And what do you think about Wilmington College?" questioned the Seahawk reporter.

"It's a wonderful college with great possibilities and good teachers. You're very fortunate to have one in which there is such a wide choice of subjects."

High Educational Standards

Because of Switzerland's high educational standards, almost everyone can read and write. Children are required by law to attend school; however the years of required school vary in different cantons.

"A canton is somewhat comparable to a small state," explained Erika, "and in the canton where I live, a student must attend school for nine years at least. There are many other possibilities other than college for majoring in a certain field, for in Switzerland we have technical and trade schools. One can even enter into an apprenticeship for three or four years."

For hundreds of years the Swiss have been known for their love of freedom, and they take great pleasure in the kinds of amusement in which they themselves can take part. Erika, who is typically Swiss, especially likes swimming and sailing in the summer and skiing in the winter.

Loves To Travel

"But most of all I like traveling, as it is a great wish of all Swiss to visit other countries of the world. Traveling, I think, gives you a most wonderful chance to meet all kinds of people in the world, and to see all the historical and cultural places you've read about."

The Swiss people are in no way united by race, language, or religion. There is no single Swiss language; Erika herself speaks four of the official languages—dialects of German, French, Italian, and English.

"We are a federal republic much like the United States," proudly expressed Erika.

An interesting fact is that Switzerland has stood as an island of peace among the strong currents of wars her neighbors have fought, and she has defended her liberty against many ambitious tyrants. Her people have worked together to build one of the most progressive governments of the world.

"Yes," she again emphatically stated, "we are a democracy!"

Special Notice

Students are asked to please remember that there are special areas reserved for the faculty to park, and that students are not to park in these areas. Such areas are marked off in yellow. Also, the grass has been planted around the campus, and students are asked not to park on the grass. Violators will receive tickets.

Cast Develops Teamwork While Practicing Play

"O.K., now we'll do it without scripts," quietly intoned Doug Swink.

A bilious green came over the faces of the assembled cast. There was a scrambled exodus from the rehearsal room by a few of the actors. They crept stealthily into a secluded part of the hall.

"Cue me, cue me, for heaven's sake!" shrieked one of the actresses. "I didn't have time to learn the first part of the speech and completely forgot about the last part."

On this, the sixth rehearsal of Act I of "Medea," confusion reigned.

Inside Hoggard Hall's room 104, Mr. Swink was surprisingly calm. "Death is our theme; it's sort of a night lecture."

Seated far from the stage, a group of players crammed in lines like a suction cup. One or two, relatively sure of lines, tried to do homework. By the way, the assurance that they of all, the welding together of the material to give it cohesion. Every good piece of music must give us a sense of flow—a sense of continuity from first note to last.

Although there is much more to composing than 1-2-3-steps, the individual with a fairly good knowledge of music should be able to compose simple songs that will give him a sense of pride and achievement.

knew their lines later fell apart. On stage an unholly howl ripped from the throat of an actress.

"Louder," stated Mr. Swink. He then gave a piercing cry that will probably live forever in the ears of his listeners.

A nervous actress crept on stage. She whispered, "I don't know a word of it, not a word."

The prompter waited in readiness for action. The old standby of the actor knew that his moment had come.

"Hake me from this tateful sea." The line was uttered with great passion, but . . .

"Is the door over here?" hissed a completely lost soul.

An uncertain rise of voice gave an unexpectedly humorous twist to a tragic line.

A great source of interest was Mr. Swink's criticism. In contrast to the theme of death, life was the keynote for the players.

The rehearsal ended, and the cast scattered. Each of them was inflamed with a determination to learn at least a few lines perfectly.

The teamwork that the cast has developed for helping one another over rough spots will make a unified company. Many times beautiful lines full of meaning fell from an actor's lips. After three more weeks of intensive rehearsal, Wilmington College can look forward to a performance by well rehearsed and enthusiastic players.

Allen Organizes Seahawk Golf Team

Sports Outlook

By GREG MASSEY

The Wilmington College golf team, coached by Frank Allen, promises to be the best yet. Mr. Allen made the comment, "We have a few returning golfers from last year's team and four or five good players who were on the New Hanover High School team last Spring."

The Seahawk golf team will be able to practice and play all its home matches at the Pine Valley Country Club golf course. It is indeed a privilege and expression of kindness that the officials of the Pine Valley Country Club have given to Wilmington College golfers can show their appreciation for use of the course by simply obeying the course rules and not abusing their playing privilege in any way.

Coach William Brooks has been busy the past month preparing the new athletic field directly east of the Hogard Hall building. Coach Brooks says that about ten acres of the cleared land will be used for baseball diamond and a 440-meter track.

Track, like golf and tennis, is another fine sport in which most colleges participate. Wilmington College can certainly use a track team. It would be a big boost to the already well organized sports program at our college.

Here is a brief glimpse at the outcome of the first split segment of dove season. Most of the Wilmington College dove hunters reported success and bagged their limits of birds on numerous occasions. Of course there are always some exceptions. The attention has now turned to squirrel hunting. These bushy-tailed tree climbers had better be on the watch.

Basketball season is rapidly approaching and the schedule shows that the Seahawks will be playing a wide variety of opponents this year.

The Seahawks have been practicing in Brogden Hall since the beginning of October and a look at one of the practice sessions revealed that the team will undoubtedly live up to pre-season expectations.

Once again let's be sure to support all the home games of the Seahawks this season.

Waterfowl Hunts Require Carefully Planned Methods

By ANDREW GEMMELL

Hunting as any other major sport, requires a great deal of knowledge, patience, and skill. Waterfowl hunting, in particular, requires accurate information about concealment and endurance in foul weather. Since ducks and geese hunting is usually best in balmy, freezing weather, the hunter must plan his hunting trips on these days and in relation to the best fielding and water places of the waterfowl.

Concealment Necessary

Perfect concealment is paramount. It is as important for a water fowl hunter to be perfectly concealed as it is for a football player to wear shoulder pads and a safety helmet. Waterfowl have amazingly keen eyesight and a wariness which causes them to shy from the least unusual object or change in a habitat with which they are familiar.

It is not enough to simply be dressed in olive green or brown hunting outfits. A duck or goose hunter must be well hidden, and must keep his face from showing as ducks fly toward or over him. He must also be exceedingly cautious about making the slightest movement. The birds, from their high vantage point, can sweep the landscape with their gaze. Their eyes pick out danger easily from far greater distance than many a hunter realizes or imagines.

Methods to Hunt Geese

Goose hunting is very similar to duck hunting, and often the exact methods may be used. In general, however, geese are far more wary, and their habit of feeding in open fields make them exceedingly difficult birds with which to come within gun range. The usual procedure is to set out goose decoys very carefully in fields of shocked corn, particularly in Eastern North and South Carolina.

All told, although waterfowl hunting is somewhat a complicated business, it is one of the finest and most exciting and enjoyable gun sports known to man. It is truly worth whatever trouble and inconvenience and discomfort comes with it, and is a wonderful hobby for those who are situated as to be able to partake it.

Today every hunter who partakes of it should think of it in that light, and so work to conserve the birds which make it possible that this gunning occupation may continue permanently, even though it must continue on the much-lessened scale to which declines in the annual waterfowl crop have brought it.

Coach Brooks Attends Athletic Conference

Coach William Brooks and President William Randall will attend another meeting of the North Carolina - Virginia Athletic Conference in Raleigh, November 5.

This meeting will be attended by all the coaches in the conference and a decision will be reached as to whether to continue the conference.

Since there are now only two Virginia teams represented in the conference, it appears as if the North Carolina - Virginia Athletic Conference will be discontinued after this year. Fredricks and Louisburg Colleges are now four year colleges and are not in the conference. Also Also former Presbyterian College in Maxton has now become a four-year college, St. Andrews.

At the meeting the proposal to admit Albemarle Junior College to the Conference will be discussed. Albemarle College is a new junior college which has just been completed this year.

If the North Carolina-Virginia Athletic Conference is disbanded, a North Carolina Athletic Conference will be set up for the former junior college participants of the Carolina - Virginia Conference.

Sprayers Threaten Well-being Of Unsuspecting Student Body

By RITCHIE WATSON

A new pamphlet has just hit the bookshelves that addresses itself directly to the student body at Wilmington College. The name of the book: "How to Dodge Erratic Water Sprinklers in Two Easy Lessons." Along this same parallel a new course is now being planned concerning the behavior patterns of disturbed sprayers.

Some readers may be inclined to scoff at such things, but to the student who must make the dash from one building to another while the grass is being watered, such measures are heartily welcomed.

Screamed one enraged student: "For the sake of school stability and dry pants, something has to be done."

Between Class Showers

For some sinister reason the sprinklers are nearly always turned on during the change of classes, much to the horror and dismay of all students. All, that is, except a few who gather around the windows, cheer the undaunted on, laugh at those who are drenched, and generally have a high old time.

To the student who must dash through this modern-day torture chamber, it is no laughing matter.

A typical encounter with the sprinkler unfolds in the following manner: The student warily approaches the fountain - like geysers of water. He pauses a moment, studying the movement of the sprinklers. A smile of satisfaction crosses his face. He is certain he has worked out a sure system this time.

Faked Out Again

At a precise moment the student lunges forward and begins his dash through the threatening jets. Everything is going as planned. Then out of the corner of his eye the student sees trouble. A sprinkler is swishing to the left instead of swishing to the right as it should! Tricked! Foiled again!

Now the victim is faced with a real decision. Either he must plough on through the wall of water or stage a disorderly and face-losing retreat.

After only a second's hesitation the undaunted student runs the final lap, obtaining a complete drenching in the process. As the episode draws to a close, out brave individual walks muttering away, vowing that next time he will get through completely dry.

Needless to say, there is no solution to this problem. The student body, however, is drawing together and showing a tremendous amount of courage in the face of this menace.

Frank Allen, coach of the Wilmington College golf team, held a meeting with interested students, October 13, in his office. He discussed plans for the squad this school year and gathered the names of the boys who hope to represent the Seahawks next Spring.

Although the golf matches will not be held until the spring, Mr. Allen wants to set up a ladder for the boys within the next month. By getting the boys to practice now, he feels that he will be able to get his team better organized and ready for play.

Seahawk Golf Matches

All of the home matches of the Wilmington College Seahawks will be played at the Pine Valley Country Club golf course. There will also be a number of out-of-town games. Mr. Allen says that he will have a good schedule this year and hopes to play most of the Big Four College freshman teams in preparation for the conference matches in the Spring.

The interested golfers who signed up with Mr. Allen will be able to practice at the Pine Valley Country Club. No admission will be charged. However, before they begin to practice, they will have to check with the Pine Valley pro, John Reudi. He will have a list of the names of the players from the college.

Turn Score Cards in Weekly

All of the golfers who have signed up should endeavor to play at least once or twice a week. They should turn their score cards in to Mr. Allen in room H215. Students who have not had much previous golf experience should practice with some of the more experienced golfers. "By doing this, they will be able to pick up a few pointers which might help improve their game," says Coach Allen.

Mr. Allen also has reminded the boys that week-end practice should be avoided at the Pine Valley Country Club because of the crowded playing conditions of local golfers.

Thirteen Boys Sign Up

So far thirteen boys have signed to play golf for Wilmington College this year. Ed Freeman, Harry Buzzell, Jack Corbett, Jerry Strawn, Jack Dunn, Mike Hebron, Charles Croon, Scott McKinnon, Will Gemmell, Val Edwards, Dennis Hembly, Ricky Berman, and Jack Harrell. These last three boys sparked for the New Hanover High School golf team last year and are capable golfers.

Any other boys who would like to play on the golf team should contact Mr. Allen in his office. He will be more than happy to talk with you.

Circle "K" Club States Purposes

What does the Circle K Club do?

The Circle K Club is a college-level men's service organization. It is sponsored and guided by Kiwanis clubs, with the full approval and support of college authorities. It is a service organization and the members are held together by the interest in mutual service and by fellowship the club has such as social events of various types during the school year.

There will be a Circle K Smoker held the first of the winter quarter for the purpose of selecting freshmen and sophomore members.

From these nine girls a Fledgling Queen will be chosen and announced at a later date.

College Of Future Promises Startling, Revolutionary Changes

The grad who returns to Wilmington College in 1971 will in all probability see that many new and startling changes have been made since his graduation. This is the consensus of college President William M. Randall.

Many of these changes are already in the offering. Plans for the new gymnasium are being drawn, and construction will begin in December. Dr. Randall voiced the hope that the gymnasium would be ready by the fall of 1962 for athletic contests and for physical education classes.

Expansion Seen

The gymnasium is only one of a host of new buildings that may compose the college campus in 1971. A returning 1961 graduate may well see an auditorium, a fine arts building, and possibly a new class building. This would increase the size of the campus from the present three buildings to seven buildings.

Today Wilmington College is a junior college. Tomorrow it may be a four year college. Plans are already being made for such a transition.

Dr. Randall commented that for two years the faculty has been working on the proposed curriculum for a four year college. Because of this the college would be able to expand into a four year institution almost immediately.

Continue Present Program

Says Dr. Randall: "Plans envision the addition of two more years to the curriculum in the field of liberal arts, with a strong major in teacher training. These plans also include the continuation of the present terminal and adult education programs."

Looking to the future, Wilmington College can expect its student body to double during the next 10 years. The present enrollment of 682 should expand to between 1200 and 1500. Officials base these figures on the fact that between 1947 and 1961 the number of students has risen from 160 to 680. This is a 426 percent increase.

Expect New Departures

New departures in classroom teaching can also be expected during the next decade. Use of television within a classroom is expected. For example the placing of television sets at convenient places within a classroom would enable an instructor to dissect an animal before a large class. It would give each student

Carpet Of Green Grass Begins To Break Through On Campus

Someone once said, "And from the desert, shall come the rivers." This is especially true when speaking of the Wilmington College campus.

First the student was made to endure the dust, the grit, and grime that only a nomad could withstand. Then one day, at the change of classes, he was suddenly faced with the problem of keeping himself from drowning in the midst of a world of sprinklers—from one to the other.

The sprinklers were not placed here with the sole intention of drowning the student. Actually, there is a great deal of thought behind it all. As a result of this meddling some irritation, the grounds are fast becoming populated with tiny blades of grass. In fact, it looks as though there may be a campus lawn soon!

As for trees: very sparse except those pines on either side of the S. S. Building. Possibly, the place could stand a few shade trees.

Sidewalks! The pattern is unique. They make for a quick change of classes.

There is quite a bit of activity behind the school. Plans are being made to outfit the college with a brand new baseball field.

All in all, Wilmington College is soon to be a school encompassing a stunning campus—something the student can pride himself in.

Pen Pushers' Club

Anne West and Sondra Wilson, co-editors of "With Pen In Hand," have begun plans on the magazine. They anticipate a larger book and many varieties of creative writing. Several stories will be illustrated. Persons interested in having their writings considered for publication are urged to contact one of the editors or any one of the Pen Pushers members.

The Pen Pushers have written a completely new constitution. This new constitution fits the needs of the club and provides a foundation from which to carry on their work efficiently.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE, WILMINGTON, N. C.

Friday Speaks For Dedication Services

Dr. William M. Randall

Dedication ceremonies for the new Wilmington College campus will be held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in front of the Student Services building with William C. Friday, president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, delivering the principal address.

North Carolina Governor Terry Sanford will also be present for the program. Governor Sanford will greet the guests. Wilmington College President William M. Randall will preside at the services.

Other participants in the program are expected to be Major L. P. McLendon, chairman of the State Board of Higher Education; Dallas Herring, chairman of the State Board of Education, and E. A. Laney, chairman of the New Hanover County Board of Education.

Presentation of the college buildings and grounds will be made to the College Board of Trustees by J. M. Hall, Jr., chairman of the New Hanover County Board of Commissioners, and O. O. Allsbrook, mayor of the City of Wilmington.

Dr. John T. Hoggard, chairman of the Wilmington College Board of Trustees, will accept the new campus on behalf of the trustees.

These three buildings are the Governor Terry Sanford

first in the college's building program. An auditorium-physical education building to cost approximately $300,000 is the next building planned.

The dedication ceremony will be open to the public. In case of bad weather the program will be held inside.

College Progresses During 14 Years; New Buildings Replace Isaac Bear

Exactly 14 years ago this past September, Wilmington College was a hope of citizens who felt that Wilmington needed a center of education beyond the high school level. This was the birth of Wilmington College.

Actually the idea of a college in Wilmington was first conceived in the late 1930's by the New Hanover County Board of Education. Due to lack of money, the idea was not further advanced. Then, came World War II, which postponed any serious consideration for a college for several years.

UNC Extension

Following the war, in 1946, the University of North Carolina, through its extension service, established a college center in Wilmington. Operating for one year, classes under this extension program were held in the New Hanover High School building from 4 o'clock in the afternoon until 9 p.m. This inspired educational leaders and the Board of Education, Dr. John T. Hoggard as its chairman, to revive the idea of a real community college in Wilmington.

The idea met with approval at the polls of New Hanover County. The result was favorable. A tax levy of five cents per one-hundred dollar tax value was voted for the financing of a college in New Hanover County.

Wilmington College convened for the first time on September 4, 1947. T. T. Hamilton, Jr., then principal of New Hanover High School, was also chief executive officer of the College, and Dale K. Spencer was dean.

First Faculty

Members of the faculty that first year included Miss Anne Barksdale, W. K. Dorsey, Adrian Hurst, and Miss Shannon Morton.

The College offered a varied curriculum of academic and vocational courses. Courses were offered in airplane maintenance, bricklaying, refrigeration, plumbing, and other subjects of this type. Two-year courses were also offered in merchandising, business, and secretarial science, and home economics.

A student government was set up to work in conjunction with the faculty and administration, and representatives were elected to form Wilmington College's first student council operating under a student constitution.

The first Seahawk basketball team was formed also during this first year.

Drama Group Forms

Wilmington College students took a great interest in dramatics the first year. The Wilcox Stagers were organized and the group presented two major productions and four one-act plays.

The first issue of a student newspaper appeared on September 27, 1948. The first student yearbook, the FLEDGLING, appeared in 1950.

The college was on the semester system until 1952.

During the spring of its first year of operation, Wilmington College became a full-fledged member of the American Association of Junior Colleges, an accredited member of the North Carolina College Conference, and a member of the Southern Association of Junior Colleges. The Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools accredited the College in 1952.

During the 1947-48 term, Wilmington College classes were held in the NHHS building, following the pattern set by the UNC College Center. The second year, however, the College moved to new quarters at the front of the first floor of the old Isaac Bear building. The building had at one time been the Isaac Bear Elementary School and was at this time being used by the high school. High school students used the back of the

Dr. Randall Speaks On Language History

Dr. William M. Randall, President of Wilmington College, spoke to Miss Anne Barksdale's Business English class on Thursday and Friday, November 2 and 3. His subject was the evolution and the history of languages.

He started out by mentioning early language theories. Among the early conceptions of the beginning of language by the cave man are the Bow-Wow and Heave-Ho theories, which say man may have started speaking after hearing the dogs bark or men made noises as they lifted heavy stones.

Dr. Randall discussed the isolated or "pure" languages that, strange as it may seem, haven't changed since their origin. This is largely attributed to the environmental factor of the people, as they are isolated by impassable mountains. He also talked about the number of languages spoken in the world today, there being 2719 altogether.

On Friday, he narrowed his down to the English language, elaborating on various meanings and origins of some commonly used words. He explained how one word can be borrowed several times from another language at different periods in history. The final result may be two different English words that stem from one original base.

He concluded his talk with an overall view of the interesting topics he had presented in his entire discussion.

These four students were accompanied by Larry Ingle, who is a history professor out at the college. The four students went as delegates from the nation of Indonesia.

Friday night, following supper, the first plenary session of the Model UN was held at the Fairmont Methodist Church. All the nations that were represented, and of which had resolutions to introduce, did so.

The delegates from Wilmington introduced the bill on the Algerian question. This was done by Burt Keeble, who was actually the alternate with the other three delegates. However, the bill was voted on to be discussed the next morning in committee, and it passed with a two-thirds vote.

The other five bills which were passed were (1) nuclear disarmament, (2) Netherlands-New Guinea, (3) Berlin question, (4) UN aid to Latin American countries, and (5) Red China's admission to the UN.

After the committee meetings from ten to 12 Saturday morning, the delegates met for lunch, after which another plenary session was held, and the six bills with their amendments were brought to the floor and voted on. This session lasted until 6:30 P.M., and then the delegates had supper.

After supper, Rev. Robert Shaw gave a talk on weapons disarmament for the world. Following discussion on this topic, folk dancing was held.

At the end of the worship service the next morning, the UN was adjourned until the same time next year.

The delegates might be called on to tell of their experiences up in Raleigh first hand to the students at the next student assembly this year.

Nursing Class Elects Freshmen Officers

Special nursing classes are held during the week at Wilmington College for the 28 Freshmen in training at James Walker Memorial Hospital.

In a recent class election, Mary Richardson, president; Martha Kay Brown, vice-president; Mary Elizabeth Merritt, secretary; Janice Henderson, treasurer; Betty Greene, social chairman; and Joyce Ponder and Sharon Parrish, student council representatives, have been chosen to serve as officers for the Freshman Class.

Mondays through Thursdays from 8:30-11:30, and on Fridays from 10:30-11:30, these nurses are instructed in anatomy, physiology, and micro-biology at the college. At the hospital, classes are held for the study of pharmacology, nutrition, and the fundamentals of nursing.

Each Freshman has her own room on the fourth floor of the hospital. She is given demerits for any rule violation, and if at the end of a three month period, she has 10 or more demerits, she is campused for a week. Every month the classes combine for a social, and class meetings are held frequently.

During the year, the training nurse has a four week vacation. (Freshmen are allowed two weeks at Christmas and two weeks during the summer months.)

At the end of a three year period, one becomes a Graduate Nurse and after passing the state exam, is a registered nurse.

James Walker is in affiliation with the Dorothea Dix School of Psychiatric Nursing for three months.

TO CHEAT OR NOT TO CHEAT

"Why should I study when I can cheat and make better grades?" ask many students of themselves.

Cheating does go on, and we must face the fact.

Why do people cheat? Laziness is a possible reason. Maybe students are looking for the easy way out. Also the fact remains that students don't care to be honest.

As exam time approaches, set your own goal, and obtain this goal on your own.

There are possible sources to combat cheating: earnest and honest students, concerned teachers, and an effective honor system.

An author has stated: "A talented man of poor report is of little value; whereas a man of lesser talents, speaking only the truth, is to be highly desired."

WE MUST STAND UNITED

Before basketball season gets into high gear, Wilmington College must acquire the traditional school spirit. In trying to acquire school spirit, students must be prepared as to what is expected of them. Maybe some students are not aware of the importance of their yell at the basketball game.

Why can't we have a campaign for school spirit before basketball season gets underway fully?

Present school clubs must unite and set more school spirit as one of their projects for the year. Posters and banners encouraging the team to win and, even more so, congratulating them afterward would be very worthwhile projects for these groups.

Club participation in this campaign would not only get many students "into the act," but it would also help to unify our school. The posters and banners publicizing dates of games would certainly boost game attendance.

After students have acquired the needed school spirit, they must set a limit on the way in which they express their happiness over winning a game. This limit is one of maturity and thought. Remember, at the game you are representing Wilmington College.

What you do might let a visitor know that all students of Wilmington College act in the same manner!

GIVE THANKS

Do you remember why the first Thanksgiving was celebrated?

The Pilgrims, seeking freedom in a new land, were giving thanks for arriving safely and having a bountiful harvest in their new world, America.

Before sitting down to a festive Thanksgiving Day dinner, remember why you are celebrating this holiday.

We, the students of Wilmington College, have an excellent reason to give thanks this year — the three new buildings of Wilmington College.

It was through the efforts of many citizens that we have the privilege of giving thanks for a beautiful college and campus. We, too, are pilgrims that should give thanks for having freedom in a new college.

As Americans we have many things to be grateful for this week before Thanksgiving.

Within us is the power to destroy democracy and freedom in the United States. What will destroy your freedom? There are many things: our complacency, your refusing to accept a citizen's responsibility for the existence of America, your taking for granted, or advantage of, your guaranteed civil liberties.

The process of giving up freedom is slow and gradual. One morning Americans might wake up and find no daily newspaper. Eventually, they might realize that freedom of speech and freedom of worship are gone, too.

While there is still time, Americans must drop their indifference, their ungratefulness to those who have fought so that they might have many liberties. As Americans we must realize our plight and do something about it.

This Thanksgiving (and after the holiday, too) be thankful for the courage of your forefathers in their search for freedom. We must be thankful that America hasn't seen a freedomless day.

We should also give thanks for the beautiful, free land in which we live as well as such prized materialistic possessions.

Be thankful students and thankful Americans!

Theatre Group Presents 'Medea' In Moving, Professional Style

With a moving, almost professional style the Wilmington College Theatre performed "Medea" on November 9, 10, and 11 in Hoggard Hall.

The play, adapted from the "Medea" of Euripides by Robinson Jeffers, set forth the torture of a barbarian woman struggling for vengeance. This theme was lucidly enacted by the players of the Wilmington College Theatre.

Southern accents at times interfered with the pure delivery of the lines. At various times there was marked overacting, and gestures were sometimes affected. On the whole, however, the play was delivered with exceptional polish.

Anne West, as Medea, dominated the stage. Miss West played an evil woman and was splendidly evil, although at times too evil. Using body, face, and voice with fine power and ability, Miss West created a living Medea.

Doug Hunt, as Jason, portrayed a weak man desirous of wealth. His interpretation was well delivered and well received.

Louise Dobsin played the faithful nurse of Medea with sincerity.

The scenery gave impetus to conception of the plot. Rocks and Medea's black cave set the mood for deeds of darkness.

Makeup and costumes emphasized characterization, rather than detracting from the play.

The lighting and a touch of eerie music made apparent the gloom of Medea's plight. Lighting was particularly used with subtlety to food effect.

Doug W. Swink, assisted by Ray Oxendine, has directed a well performed play. The audience was noticeably affected by the horrible victory of Medea. Mr. Swink states, "Both those who saw it and those who participated in it felt that truly real and vital theater has been enacted here."

Hoggard Watches College Grow

By MORRIS BROADWELL

Sunday, November 19, is dedication day for Wilmington College. It is a long awaited day for all college officials, especially for Dr. John T. Hoggard, the man chiefly responsible for bringing Wilmington College into existence.

Born in Aulander on December 27, 1878, Dr. Hoggard was active in the Spanish American War and World War I. After his retirement from medical practice in 1948, he became interested in the proposal of a two-year college.

By his sheer determination and persistent persuasiveness, he led the voters of New Hanover County in meeting this need by organizing the college as a county institution under the control of the Board of Education.

So, the college finally opened on September 4, 1947, with Dr. Hoggard as its first president, and the response was immediate — 180 students. However, as time passed and enrollment increased, the college broadened its offerings and now has expanded to nearly 700 students. "That was our aim from the very beginning," remarked Dr. Hoggard.

As president, he guided the college from its infancy until 1957, when he retired and became chairman of the Board of Trustees.

Expressing his views on the future of Wilmington College, he said, "We are going forward rapidly and with the approval of the community. People are proud of our progress, and have a strong desire for expansion to a four-year college. However, such an expansion would lower the prestige of our present two-year college."

For Dr. Hoggard the forth-

How many times a day does the sound of music reach your ears? Have you ever stopped to realize how much plays such a large part in our everyday lives?

Without music our lives would be very empty, for it gives us a tremendous amount of pleasure. A radio, television, or record player is usually around most of us for many hours in a day.

However, do you really understand what you hear in a song or symphony? We listen to music, probably without any realization of it, on three separate planes: (1) the sensuous plane, (2) the expressive plane, and (3) the sheerly musical plane.

Listen For Pleasure

Perhaps the simplest way of listening to music is to listen for the pleasure of the musical sound itself. That is the sensuous plane. It is the plane on which we hear music without thinking, without considering it in anyway. When you turn on the radio while doing something else and absent mindedly absorb the sound — that is listening through the sensuous plane.

The second plane on which music exists is what we call the expressive plane. My personal belief is that all music has a certain meaning behind the notes and that that meaning constitutes what the piece is saying, or what the music is about.

Music expresses at different moments, serenity or exuberance, regret or triumph, fury or delight. It expresses each of these moods and many others.

The third plane on which music exists is the sheerly musical plane. Besides the pleasurable sound of music, and the expressive feeling that it gives off, music does exist in terms of the notes themselves and of their manipulation. That is the more technical way of listening.

Hear Three Planes

Actually we never listen on one or the other of these planes. We correlate them—listening all three ways at the same time.

In absense the ideal listener is both inside and outside the music at the same moment, judging it and enjoying it, wishing it would go one way and watching it go another—almost like the composer at the moment he composes it, because in order to write his music he must also be inside and outside in order to write his music, carried away by it and yet coldly critical of it. A subjective and objective attitude is implied in both creating and listening to music.

What we should strive for, then, is a more active kind of listening. Whether you listen to Mozart or Louis Armstrong, you can deepen your understanding of music only by being a more conscious and aware listener—not someone who is just listening, but someone who is listening for something.

Engineers' Club Holds Meeting

Engineers Club had a supper club meeting this past month at the Ambassador Grill. All of the officers of the club have been selected and the committees and their chairmen have been named.

The officers are: president, Kenneth Hansley; vice-president, Tommy Taylor; secretary, Charles Barnhill; and treasurer, Bobby Ludlum.

coming ceremony doesn't conclude his "dream come true," as he holds for Wilmington College an even brighter future.

Sports Outlook

Basketball

December 2 marks the opening of basketball season for the Wilmington College Seahawks. In this opening match the 'Hawks will clash with the N. C. State Frosh team in Raleigh, and the 'Hawks will turn around and face the same team on their home court, December 13 at Brogden Hall.

The Wilmington College Seahawks will be out to preserve their Virginia-Carolina Basketball Championship. Coach Brooks has the skill of weaving championship teams, so be prepared to watch the Seahawks rip the nets this season. Everyone likes to see the 'Hawks swish through a hundred points, so let's go out and watch them!

Coach Brooks says that he has some big towering boys to block the opponents' shots; some little tiny boys to steal the opponents' ball, and some medium sized boys to watch the game from the bench and play a little offensive ball once in a while; so why worry? Well, maybe so.

Have you ever tried to go in for one of those driving shots right through the middle of a group of players under the basket? Then you came out all right you thought, but collapsed halfway down the court? Well, it's not very funny, but I thought I'd tell it anyway. (Apologies to A.G.)

Golf

Frank Allen, coach of the golf team, wants to encourage more of the golfers to get out and play some golf. He also hopes that when you play that you will turn your scores into him weekly, so that he can see how the squad is progressing.

Ricky Berman, one of the Wilmington College golfers, has been turning in some good scores, if you other golfers would like to make a comparison with his score. Berman has been shooting in the low 70's and topped it all off last week with a 69. So you see, a little practice cannot hurt you.

The only way that Mr. Allen has of knowing what kind of golf you are playing is by seeing your score cards. So be sure to turn the cards in to him when you finish playing each round.

Tennis

Walter Biggs just recently took over the task of organizing the tennis team for Wilmington College. He has high hopes for a good team. Maybe when the new tennis court is fixed in the new athletic field behind Hoggard Hall Building, intramural tennis teams can be organized.

Hunting

Quack, Quack season opens in five days (November 21) so get out the old long tom, stock up on shot gun shells, get yourself a duck stamp (of course a hunting license helps too), and head for the marsh (or if you are like me—Greenfield Lake).

I think that I will stay away from that marsh though. The last time I went duck hunting in a boat down Town Creek in Brunswick County, I ran aground five times, got the paint scrapped off the bottom of my boat by running over logs, sheared six pins on my motor for my boat, couldn't find the channel to the creek coming back in the night, couldn't get the boat on the boat ramp because the tide had dropped, and finally my car wouldn't start. But let me tell you—I got a woodpecker out of that trip, and I ate him too!

Phil Stevenson and Larry Edens are talented returnees from last season's 'Hawk basketball team.

Newcomers To Squad

Al Sonntaz (Pleasantville, N. Y.), Gary Hedrick (Lexington, N. C.), and Walter Jones (Farmville, N. C.), want to play basketball.

Basketball Season Is Just Around The Corner

Although the Wilmington College Seahawk Basketball Schedule is not complete yet, Coach William Brooks has released the dates of most of the Seahawk's games. Glancing over the schedule, one can easily see that the 'Hawks are going to have a tough schedule this year, and that there should be some very lively ball games.

Coach Brooks mentioned that he will probably secure at least six or seven more games to round out the schedule. "Presently, fourteen games are scheduled, but twenty games will give us a good slate," remarked Coach Brooks.

Scheduling Hard Work

A great deal of effort goes into gathering a good basketball schedule, and this requires a lot of time. Many small details have to be ironed out. Securing Brogden Hall for the games when the New Hanover High School is not playing, and getting an agreement on dates with other contenders is time consuming.

This season the Wilmington College Seahawks will not play their first game until December 2. This match will be played in Raleigh against the North Carolina State Freshman squad, and will probably prove to be a close game. The 'Hawks will not make their debut on their home court at Brogden Hall until December 13, when they play a return match with the North Carolina State Freshman team.

Practice Held Daily

In preparation for the oncoming season, the Seahawk cagers have been practicing daily since October 16. Some of the boys have been warming up since the beginning of school—looking enthusiastically for the opening tilt. So, all-in-all, the boys should be in good form for the season.

About 18 boys have been working out with the Wilmington College basketball team. These practice sessions are being held in the evenings at Brogden Hall on Market Street. Coach Brooks says that he will probably cut the team down to about twelve players for regular season play.

Bogash, Edens Return

Two players, returning from last year's 20-6 record team, post scoring averages in the double figures. Gene Bogash, one of last season's most dependable and versatile players, ended the season with a 12.6 average; while Larry Edens, another fine player, held a 10.2 points-per-game average.

Last year the Seahawks won the loop title in the North Carolina-Virginia Athletic Conference and placed second in the conference tournament. The 'Hawks, after leaving the court at half-time with a 36-36 tie, bowed 87-73 to the Campbell Camels on the final game of the three-day tournament.

Now let's take a look at the 1961-62 basketball schedule of the Seahawks.

Virginia-Carolina Conference Continues

The future of the North Carolina-Virginia Athletic Conference was decided upon at a meeting held in Raleigh, November 5. Coach William Brooks represented Wilmington College in the athletic meeting, and learned that the athletic conference will still be continued this year, even though only four junior colleges will be present in the conference.

The four junior colleges composing the North Carolina-Virginia Conference are Louisburg, Charlotte College, Chowan College, and Wilmington College. These four members will play against each other in both basketball and baseball contests.

However, Ferrum College in Virginia has joined the athletic conference and will participate in the baseball schedules. The new Albemarle Junior College will not become a member of the Carolina-Virginia Conference this year. This new college still has a great deal of organizing to do before it will be able to play in intercollegiate sports.

During the course of the meetings held at Raleigh, it was hoped that the conference can be built up with more junior colleges next year.

Three Attend Meet

Three members of the faculty of Wilmington College attended the Conference of Teachers of Biology and Mathematics held at North Carolina State College at Raleigh on November 3.

They were Thomas P. Brown and Fred Toney of the mathematics department and Walter Biggs of the biology department.

Biggs Sends Out Call For 'Hawk Tennis Players

Walter Biggs, instructor of biological sciences at Wilmington College, will help organize and assist the Seahawk tennis team this year. Although, like golf, it is a little early for tennis, Mr. Biggs wishes to set up a tennis ladder in the immediate future.

Last year the Wilmington College tennis squad didn't have a winning team, but some very close matches were played. This year Mr. Biggs hopes that the college will have an even better team and feels that there is some good potential students who are good netters. Mr. Biggs wishes to talk with interested students between now and the Christmas holidays and will be glad to discuss his plans with you during his office hours in room H221.

Coach William Brooks has also expressed the hope that a paved tennis court might be ready for our new campus by next Spring.

Last year the tennis team traveled with the baseball team in playing its matches and will probably do so again this year. There will be scheduled games with teams in the Virginia-Carolina Conference, as well as other non-conference matches.

Exams Start Tomorrow For College Students

Fall exams begin tomorrow. From 8:30 to 10:30 the following exams will be given: Biol 97, Chem 101-1, Engg 121, Engg 201, Engl 101-2, Engl 102, Engl 201-1, Health 101-1, Math 111-4, Math 203-1, Music 101, SS 113, Span 101-1, SS 131.

Berlin Opinion Poll Reveals Strong Approval For Firmness

Should the United States risk nuclear holocaust and the possible destruction of civilization in an effort to protect the lives of about two million West Berliners?

This is a question that is not only being discussed by nationally known figures but by the individual American citizens as well.

Many people have committed themselves to defending Berlin at all costs. Others have expressed the opinion that the price we may have to pay for Berlin, the extinction of modern society, is too costly.

Wide Opinions

These two widely diverging opinions have sparked a great deal of controversy on the national level. But what about the ordinary person? How does he feel about the possibility of world war?

A sampling of opinion at Wilmington College shows that students are almost completely united regarding this important question.

Morris Broadwell commented: "We should defend Berlin. If we don't show them we mean business now, they will continue to run over us in the future. There has to be a stopping place somewhere."

Violators Get Tickets For No Wilmington College License

November 1, 1961 . . . the day parking violations became effective on the Wilmington College Campus was one date students will never forget!

The two major violations that are rewarded with a little yellow ticket are: (1) driving with no license tag (a Wilmington College license tag), and (2) parking in areas other than those provided for student parking.

The new laws certainly helped matters out, but then again there are always the consequences of getting caught. Kay Wells, a freshman, never did get the meaning of "air lift" as it was intended to be implied. It seems that Kay thought "air lift" meant any of the grassy areas found at the back of the three buildings. Boy, did she find out! In case you don't know, the air strip is that sandy area located at a 45 degree angle from the student services building about a half a mile from where the student tries to get early in the morning. Kay wasn't the only one who interpreted the misnamed area incorrectly. It was

War Not Wanted

"I wouldn't like to see the United States go to war," said Jeanne Ferger, "but I'm afraid that is what will happen if we come to the aid of the people in West Berlin. However, if we don't defend these people, the Communists will take over. Since we can't seem to work things out peacefully, I feel that our only alternative is to fight."

Len Habes added that West Germany was a NATO ally. "If they attack West Berlin, it would be an attack on all the NATO nations."

Judy Nunalee felt that the free nations would feel that we didn't value their freedom and would lose their respect for the U.S. if we did not defend Berlin.

"If we give in at Berlin it would be the same as in the case of Czechoslovakia, and this didn't stop Hitler." This was the statement of Becky Dillon.

Must Take Stand

Berry Williams commented: "You must make a stand somewhere. History has shown that appeasement is not a successful part of foreign policy. The United States must follow the lesson of history."

"I think West Berlin is a garison and symbol of freedom," stated Douglas Neilson. "It should be defended for the principle if not the city itself."

"Greg Massey stated: 'The freedom of the free world is at stake. If we surrender West Berlin to the Communists, our national prestige will drop, and we will lose the confidence of the free countries of the world.'

n't surprising to hear one student say that he didn't know of anyone "helicoptering" to classes!

Then, there was the colleague who really had the more expensive problem. Fortunately or unfortunately, his dad owned a big car lot. To help promote sales he wanted his son to drive a new '62 everyday for a while. He either got so tired of changing those license from one car to another every morning or ran out of dollars to give to the Great Cause. At any rate, he thumbs a lot now!

This solution of issuing tickets is a tremendous effort on the part of our student government officials, who realized they were here to cope with a problem that was becoming serious. For a week or more, the new laws and their penalties were stressed by each faculty member, and a special assembly made significant changes even more. Dean Marshall Crews said that the first ticket might be considered a warning; however, if one continued to receive tickets for the same violation, more serious fines would be imposed.

Chaotic Chemistry Lab Presents Many Pitfalls

"Somebody get a fire extinguisher quick! I can't shut off this darn bunsen burner." Such pleas as this constitute only a portion of what one hears above the chaotic hubbub of chemistry lab.

The chemistry laboratory has long been a standard institution in American education. Times and techniques have changed but people have not. The old joke about laboratory explosions holds true today, even as it did in dad's and mom's era.

Slight Disagreement

In spite of its contribution to the education of the student, lab definitely does nothing to improve human relations. Many long-standing friendships have been broken because two people unsuspectingly agreed to become lab partners. Little comments like, "I did not heat that test tube too much! It was already cracked." or "Turn off the gas, stupid!" have given rise to ill feeling and even outright feuds.

In chemistry lab one finds only two types of lab partner-building and the second floor. As the College grew, it gradually occupied more and more of the building until it became sole occupant in 1956.

College Progresses

Randall New President

In 1958 the citizens of New Hanover County voted to remove control of the College from the Board of Education to a new Board of Trustees operating under the Community College Act of the State of North Carolina. Dr. Hoggard, resigning from the Board of Education, became the first chairman of the Board of Trustees. Dr. Randall then became president of the College, and J. Marshall Crews became new dean.

The vote to place the College under the Community College Act made it possible for the College to receive State funds for operating expenses and capital improvements. Funds provided by the Community College Act and matched by County money were used to construct the three new buildings on the campus.

On April 1, 1960, groundbreaking ceremony for the three buildings was held. Then, actual construction was begun May, 1960. The final results can now be seen.

ships. In one pair he finds a brilliant student of science alter one finds two people, neither of whom have ever heard of Mendeleeff. The only difference between the pairs is that one goes down fighting while the other just does down.

No Slips, Please

The bad effects of lab are by no means confined to the student. The instructor also runs the risk of such occupational hazards as acid burned hands or nervous breakdowns. Comments such as, "How do I stop this water from boiling over?" or "I didn't mean to drop the hydrochloric acid!" can strain even the most iron-willed of men.

The chemistry laboratory is one of the few places where one can view daily mass hysteria. Yes, it can only be described as hysteria. The following gasps and shrieks give you only a suggestion of the general chaos: "You mean you didn't read the experiment either?" "You can do today's experiment while I lied with someone who doesn't know a test tube from a boiling flask and has definitely never heard of Mendeleeff. In the overtime write up yesterday's." "I don't care what you see, the flame's supposed to be green!" "Is there such a thing as a per-cent error of 1,248?" "Why, why did this have to happen to me?"

Ah well, there are a few consolations. A student who has successfully emerged from the labyrinth of the laboratory faces life with the conviction that he can face any little 'ole' crisis that happens to come his way.

Best In Everything

The Sophomore superlatives were elected last Wednesday and Thursday and were announced at the Christmas Dance.

The following superlatives were elected: Best-All-Around, Frances Best and Jim Hudgens; Friendliest, Barbara Broadnax and Frank Brown; Best Looking, Gennie Goodman and Bill Haywood; Most Original, Betty Ward and Hiram Lee; Most Talented, Sandra Willoughby and Doug Hunt; Most School Spirit, Judy Hayes and Al Shew; Wittiest, Judy Butler and Al McDevitt; and Most Intellectual, Rita Sapp and Bob Ludlum.

4 Straight 'A' Students Head First Dean's List

Four straight-A students head the Dean's list for the autumn quarter. They are David Robert King, James Lambuth Nelson, Beth Fineburg, and Marvin Bell Register, Jr.

A total of 42 students made the Dean's list. Of these, 31 are from Wilmington and the remaining are residents of this area.

615 Students Enroll For Winter Quarter

The Winter Quarter enrollment at Wilmington College for 1961-1962 is a total of 615 students, according to figures released by Registrar Dorothy Marshall.

There were 111 students enrolled for the Autumn Quarter who did not return for the Winter Quarter. There are 44 new students enrolled for the Winter Quarter.

Thirty-three counties are represented in the enrollment for the Winter Quarter at Wilmington College. They are: Alamance, 2; Bladen, 5; Brunswick, 29; Carteret, 4; Columbus, 34; Craven, 5; Cumberland, 1; Davidson, 2; Duplin, 21; Edgecombe, 2; Forsyth, 2; Franklin, 2; Guilford, 2; Gaston, 1; Hyde, 1; Lee, 1; Le-noir, 4; Mecklenburg, 1; Nash, 1; Onslow, 7; Orange, 1; Pamlico, 2; Pender, 39; Pitt, 2; Randolph, 2; Robeson, 1; Sampson, 5; Stanley, 1; Wake, 4; Wayne, 2; Wilkes, 1; Wilson, 1; New Hanover, 401. The total enrollment by counties is 589.

There are 14 other states represented at the college this quarter. They are: California, 1; Florida, 1; Illinois, 1; Indiana, 1; Maine, 1; Maryland, 1; Massachusetts, 1; New York, 2; Ohio, 1; Pennsylvania, 3; South Carolina, 8; Tennessee, 1; Virginia, 3; and Washington, D. C., 1. The total enrollment for other states is 26.

Wilmington College Needs School Spirit; Special Committee Works to Promote It

More school spirit around Wilmington College is the purpose of a newly selected committee which will work in coordination with the Student Congress.

Suggestions to promote the spirit of the college and to make it more than just one of an academic nature have been made by members of the committee. They are:

1. To have pep rallies before basketball games to stimulate interest and student support. (Last year, the college was generally represented by fewer than 40 supporters.)

New Radio Station Aids School Spirit

Wilmington College has her own radio station now. The name? Why WILC, of course! And the best part about it—no commercial interruptions.

Presently, the radio station is under the direction of the Campus Committee and acting chairman, Tommy Landen. It is operated by interested students and is run strictly by format. Except for an occasional tuning in of Sherwood Verteig and the news, it is strictly a student project.

The purpose of the new station is to promote school spirit, to enter students in extra-curricular activities, to announce election returns, to broadcast school news, and to provide music that students like and enjoy.

2. To have informal dances after the basketball games and to have music provided by a juke box.

3. To set up some kind of competitive system to make students more conscientious and active.

4. To have a representative from the college to report points of interest around the college on a television program.

5. To publicize school activities more.

6. To have assemblies.

7. To charter buses to transport interested students to out-of-town games.

8. To establish more clubs and organizations.

9. To have more active participation in the presently established clubs.

10. To give money to bring in bigger, more imminent bands.

11. To have more variety in the nature of the college dances.

The committee concludes that they could originate and introduce activities and projects to stimulate school spirit but that the students would be the ones ultimately responsible for making Wilmington College active and spirited.

Now the larger colleges and universities are requiring students to be well versed in leadership and social participation as well as academic achievement.

Literary Magazine Calls Creative Writers

The annual Arts Forum is to be held at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina from March 21 through March 24, 1962.

A group of distinguished writers and critics have been invited to the college to discuss the poetry and fiction selected for publication in the Arts Forum Issue of Coraddi. Randall Jarrell, director of the creative writing program at the Woman's College, will be one of the leading speakers.

Students who wish to submit manuscripts should observe the following directions:

1. Only clean first copies, double-spaced typewritten will be considered.

2. Verse of any length and complete pros pieces of not over 8,000 words are acceptable.

3. Manuscripts should arrive at the Woman's College no later than January 15, 1962, addressed to Coraddi, Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, Greensboro, North Carolina.

4. Manuscripts will be returned only if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is enclosed.

Works which have been published or are to be published in other literary magazines will not be considered. Those students whose works are selected for publication will be notified in February.

Holiday Festivity Includes Trip to N. Y.; Students Get Tickets for Broadway Hits

On Tuesday, December 26, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. McCall and a group of Wilmington students will leave Wilmington for a four-day stay in New York City.

The students include Anne West, Beth Fineburg, Barbara Broadnax, Doris Hardison, and Elaine Gregory.

Pen Pushers' Idea
The idea of the New York trip originated in the Pen Pushers' Club and extended to include all interested college students.

The trip is estimated to cost approximately $90 per person.

They plan to leave early Tuesday morning, driving the college station wagon, and arrive in

New York at 12 p.m., and leave for home late Saturday night.

The girls and chaperones will stay in a hotel right in the center of the theatrical world.

Tickets have been ordered and the schedule is as follows:

Attend Hit Plays

Wednesday morning: A matinee, "Unsinkable Molly Brown," starring Tammy Grimes.

Wednesday night: An off Broadway show, "The Blacks" or "My Fair Lady."

Thursday afternoon: Tour of New York City.

Thursday night: A hit musical, "Carnival," starring Anna Maria Alberghetti.

Friday afternoon: Tour of New York City.

Friday night: New Tennessee Williams production, "Night of the Iguana," starring Bette Davis.

Saturday afternoon: A matinee, "Caretaker."

Saturday night: Broadway hits, "Camelot" or "Subways Are for Sleeping."

Take In Sites

Other plans include visiting Greenwich Village, going to the Peppermint Lounge to hear Chubby Checker, and possibly ice skating at Rockefeller Center.

Since it is only a day after Christmas, it is hoped that the Christmas decorations will still be up. And because the group will not leave New York until December 30, they will have an "almost" New Year's Eve in gay Manhattan!

Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year

Dance Enlightens Christmas Spirit

The last dance of this year was held last Friday night in the Student Services Building.

The decorations consisted of two silver Christmas trees illuminated by blue lights at the entrance, a blue and silver center piece, and greenery at the back of the orchestra sprayed with silver glitter with shadows of blue cast on it.

The Continentals provided the music playing everything from the cha-cha to dreamy melodies of "Tonight" and "Stardust."

At 10:00 Sondra Wilson announced the superlatives for the Sophomore Class. As each superlative's name was called, he or she went to the front of the room to be presented.

The dance began at 9:00 and ended at 1:00. The admission was $1 per couple in advance and $1.50 at the door.

Students Can Help . . . !

Last year 38,200 persons were killed and more than 1,400,000 injured on streets and highways in the United States. Economic loss from bodily injuries was over four billion dollars, from property damage over two billion—a waste of more than six billion dollars. The statistics come from the National Safety Council. The suffering and sorrow can not be measured.

As Christmas holidays begin, and the college campus is evacuated of its students, the highways become congested with these students. Thus, students must be warned of the menace of poor driving.

First, look around at your fellow students. How many of them have had a classmate or relative seriously hurt or killed by a motor vehicle?

There is another consideration. Young men and women, enjoying the advantages of quick reactions and prime physical consideration, can be among the safest drivers on the road. Often they are. Yet, sadly, they have more than their share of accidents. Of all drivers, 18.4 percent are under 25 years of age. But of drivers involved in fatal accidents, 28.7 percent are in this age group.

Experience proves beyond all doubt that the loss of life and limb can be reduced through diligent effort.

Not The Same Old Problem

Let's not let the lack of school spirit continue to blemish the otherwise honorable record of Wilmington College.

School spirit is pride in one's school. We at Wilmington College have much of which to be proud. We have three new buildings and a new campus, our sports rate among the highest, and many of our graduates have attained very high positions.

It is not understandable that a student, or group of students, would attempt to bring dishonor to Wilmington College. This can be prevented by placing a much greater value on the standards set for our school.

The cheerleaders are working very hard to have a good cheering squad this year. If we, the student body, will try half as hard as they, we will have one of the best cheering sections to be found anywhere. To promote the spirit further, we should learn our Alma Mater, and we should always be prepared to sing it.

Let others say, "School spirit has at last become a part of the students of Wilmington College."

Christmas Means Something

The world changes through new advancements of man. Therefore man strives to make changes, and sadly he has changed Christmas.

Today, Christmas is merely a commercial uproar. Observed in the city of Wilmington, one saw Santa Claus arriving the next day after Thanksgiving; and even before Thanksgiving stores had completed their seasonal decorating. Underneath this grime surrounding lies the truly joyful meaning of Christmas.

There is a spirit of Christmas which wishes to habitate in our hearts. Strive to understand its meaning. "For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord" is the truth to remember.

Possibly, there still remains the thought of Christ in Christmas, and it has not been wholly altered. With the unity of hearts we can seek the hope of Christ remaining a part of Christmas.

The Yuletide season is a time for rejoicing, singing Christmas carols, promoting good cheer, and giving to others. Just as one sacrifices to give to his dearest friend or relative, so we must sacrifice to give to Christ, just as He gave for us.

"What Child is this? The shepherds knew,
Much as the young lamb knows the ewe;
The beasts who shared with Him their manger
Sensed He was strange, but not a stranger;
Of the world's wise men, three at least
Were just as wise as shepherd and beast.

"What Child is this? The shepherd still Hears the angels from his hill;
The wordless beast with wondering paw
Kneels in the midnight of its awe;
And following a nameless star,
The wise man comes from afar—how far!

Shepherd, wise man, beast in me
Kneel and worship the Child, all three."

CAMPUS COMEDY

"SCHOOL OUT ALREADY? MY, YOU TEACHERS CERTAINLY GET A LONG CHRISTMAS VACATION."

Angels Symbolize Christmas Season

By JUDY ELY

At Christmas, the angels draw times close to the earth and even though we cannot see them, we sense their presence and mark it in our daily lives.

The bond of man angels know no season though. The angels are our standard of perfection.

The Scriptures do not tell us how many angels there are, apart from Daniel's revelation:

College Trustees Study Future Building Plans

The Board of Trustees of Wilmington College met with architects Tuesday night, December 12, and went over the plans for the new Physical Education plant.

Drawings and blueprints were explained by the architects and discussed in relation to grounds and landscaping.

Various phases of the building program were considered. The architects, those who designed the three buildings already on the campus, are Leslie N. Boney and the firm of Ballard, McKim, & Sawyer Associates.

Board of Trustee members present were: Dr. John T. Hoggard, chairman; Dr. C. E. Hartford, Harry E. Payne, B. D. Schwartz, Ralfof G. Trask, Frederick Coville, L. Bradford Tillery, and Eugene B. Tomlinson.

Dr. William M. Randall, president of the College; J. Marshall Crews, dean; and Calvin L. Doss, superintendent of grounds and maintenance, were also present.

DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES OF THE STUDENT'S PARTY OF WILMINGTON COLLEGE

The Student's Party, dedicated to fulfilling student life at Wilmington College, promoting its welfare and ensuring the continuation of representative student government, asserts that the following principles will be upheld:

1. Students should have a voice in student government.
2. Organizations deemed vital to student life shall be encouraged.
3. An active interest in the maintenance and expansion of the College will be encouraged.
4. Student cultural and intellectual development should be stimulated.
5. Student Government should operate for the benefit of the students.
6. The students and administration should strive jointly for the betterment of Wilmington College.

"...thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him..." Scriptures tell us of a highly organized angelic society, whose members have specific privileges and duties.

Nine kinds of angels known as the heavenly choirs are grouped into three orders: Seraphim, Cherubim and Thrones, who act as counselors; the Demominations, Virtues, and Powers, who are regents of stars and elements; Principalities, Archangels, and Angels, who are protectors of humans and executors of the Will of God throughout the universe.

Whatever their place, angels are considered passionate musicians, and this is what we usually associate with them. They sing alone or in heavenly choirs.

Student Council Plans Telephone Directory Soon

The Wilmington College telephone directory will be completed in the near future.

The chairman for the directory is Reggie Tucker, and his committee consists of Barbara Singletary, Barbara Broadnax, Rita Sapp, and Gennell Sugg.

The directory is a compiled list of the students' names, their local addresses, and their phone numbers. The nurses in training at James Walker will be included.

These books are free of charge and are printed by Carolina Printing Company.

Faculty Wives' Club Gives Christmas Party

The Wilmington College Faculty Wives Club entertained the Board of Trustees and members of the faculty at a Christmas Tea and Coffee Hour, Sunday, December 10, in the Student Services Building.

Receiving the guests were Mrs. William M. Randall and Mrs. J. Marshall Crews.

The main table was decorated with silver and a floral centerpiece of red carnations, white snapdragons, and white chrysanthemums.

Mrs. Loyd Hudson and Mrs. Doug W. Swink served as co-chairmen of the affair.

A program of Christmas music was performed by the college Top Twelve accompanied at the piano by Miss Sandra Willoughby.

7. School spirit should be fostered.

8. The rights and privileges of students will be asserted and not abused.

—Al Shew

We enter now a beautiful season, a time of lightness and magnificence. A time when the simple greeting of "Merry Christmas" brings an immediate smile of memory and expectation. With the progression of the season, and its constant reminders, our smiles deepen into permanent warmth.

Christmas cards reflect the adoration of the artist in the eyes of the mother looking at her child, or in the beauty of a white-cloaked landscape.

Carols chiming from high-fidelity street corners bring us the simple language of the English and German wassail songs. The Christmas music from Handel's "Messiah" thrills us with its baroque splendor.

But the biggest contribution of the season has been to literature. Our language is rich with Christmas stories. Every school child knows Picker's "Christmas Carol" and the "Littlest Angel."

Finally we turn to St. Luke's simple story of a peasant birth. Two thousand years has not marred its meaning or majesty of language.

December is a busy month for everyone, but especially the Music Department at Wilmington College.

When passing through the Student Service building on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, you will hear the College Chorus rehearsing selections from Handel's Messiah. This is quite an undertaking for the chorus, but with the constant efforts of Loyd Hudson, director, and the chorus members it will be a great success. Among the selections are: "And The Glory Of The Lord," "For Unto Us A Child Is Born," and "O Thou That Teltest Good Tidings To Zion." Also included are a group of recitatives with Jay Fisher as alto soloist and Marcia Gardner as soprano soloist.

On November 29, the Top Twelve sang at the Civitan Club luncheon held at the Azalea Room. Some of the selections done there were: "Little Brown Jug," "America The Beautiful," "Jug," "America The Beautiful," with soprano soloist Elaine Gregory, and "Beyond The Blue Horizon," with tenor soloist Doug Hunt.

December 6, the chorus presented parts of the Messiah at the Kiwanis Club luncheon. The luncheon was held at the Friendly Cafeteria. Also in connection with the Kiwanis Club, a few males in the chorus have made a tape of some of the numbers to be sung in the Kiwanis Minstrel. The tape was played last week on W. M. F. D. radio as advertisement for the show.

Last but not least, the Chorus is suppose to present a thirty-minute Christmas program on W.E.C.T. television. There are no definite plans for this at present as to time and date.

So you see the chorus is just as busy as everyone else. Maybe not as busy as Santa Claus, but running a close second.

Seahawks Crush State Freshmen 102-79

Sports Outlook

By GREG MASSEY

As expected, the Wilmington College Seahawks proved their basketball ability, December 2, when they scored a 79-63 victory over the North Carolina State College Freshmen squad in Raleigh. Although the State College Freshmen team is marked as one of the better big four freshmen squads, the 'Hawks paid no attention to that fact in scoring their rousing win.

The 'Hawks, from all indications, were a little bit shaky in the first half of their opening tilt. This was evident in their rather mediocre play during the first half of the game. But Coach Bill Brooks never gets panicky in a ball game, and as might be expected, the Seahawks came onto the court in the second half looking like a brand new team. The 'Hawks ended the game in a blazing finish and made a very impressive showing in their opening game. We feel certain that Coach Brooks felt pleased with the Seahawks' performance in that game.

Second Tilt Easy Win

The 'Hawks handled the ball exceedingly well in their first home game of the season at Brogden Hall, December 5. The Seahawks rapped the Atlantic Christian College Freshmen team from Wilson in a routing 86-46 victory. Actually it was never even a match. The Seahawks played the game just about as they pleased.

Did everyone at the game notice the incident when Larry Edens bounced the ball off the head of the referee in the second half, when Larry was driving for a lay up? I understand that no one knew who was surprised the most—the referee or Larry. Anyway, it seems that the referee assisted Larry as he got a firm grip on the ball and tossed in a two-point.

There was a right fair turnout for the Seahawks home opening game, but we feel that many more Wilmington College students should have been at the game backing the Seahawks. Out of the 800 fans at the game, there was probably about 150 to 200 college students. However, we feel that the cheerleaders did most of the cheering for the 'Hawks. We can't overstress the importance of the need of supporting the Seahawks during the oncoming basketball season, particularly at the home games. We would like to see at least 500 students at the UNC Freshmen-Seahawk tilt. The boys have practiced hard to form a talented team, but it takes our support to really make them click.

Golf, Tennis and Hunting Notes

The Wilmington College golfers continue to practice at Pine Valley Golf Course for the Spring season. The prospects for a good team certainly look promising as mentioned in the previous issue of the newspaper.

All persons who are interested in playing tennis for the Seahawks next Spring along with the baseball team should be sure to see Walter Biggs in his office whenever you have the chance. Let's keep the athletic program a strong one this 1961-62 school year.

Talented Seahawks Soar to 86-46 Win Over Atlantic Christian Frosh

The versatile WC Seahawks soared to an easy rout over the Atlantic Christian College Freshman team with an 86-46 score, as they out-shot and out-rebounded the visitors in their first home game of the season at Brogden Hall, December 5.

The Seahawks opened the game with sizzling play and ball-handling and with a little over seven minutes gone from the tilt the 'Hawks led 13-3 and were never in any serious trouble throughout the game. When the Seahawks had ripped the nets for an early 13-point spread, 23-10, Coach Bill Brooks called his starters off the court and put in reserves. Even then the 'Hawks managed to hold a 37-28 lead at halftime.

The hometown 'Hawks poured onto the court at the start of the second half, and the first team took over where they had left off earlier in the match. The fast break was executed with ease by the Seahawks, as they opened up a quick running game. After twelve minutes of play the Atlantic Christian College Freshmen trailed 70-34, and the game was already wrapped up except for the final score.

All of the Wilmington College Seahawk basketball squad saw action in the game. Leading the scorers was guard Larry Edens with 19 points. Right behind Edens was big Al Thiry, center, who tossed in 16 markers. Jim McCurdy, another newcomer to the Seahawk squad this year, posted 11 points, while dependable Gene Bogash helped the 'Hawk cause with 10 points.

The Wilmington College Seahawks had a respectable 48.7 per cent from the floor during the game in gaining their second straight win of the season.

The Wilmington College Seahawks, using hot outside shooting and sizzling ball play, romped over the State Freshmen, 102-79, before 700 spectators in Brogden Hall, December 13.

It was the second meeting between the two ball clubs—the Seahawks also winning the first match at Raleigh, 79-63.

In the game, the Hawks operated without the aid of their big center, Gene Bogash, who fractured his right hand in the Seahawks only loss of the season to the Citadel Bulpups, 79-73.

Jumped To Early Lead

The Wilmington College squad jumped to an early lead and were never in any serious trouble throughout the game. Jim McCurdy, a top scorer for the Seahawks with 22 points, started the game rolling for the Seahawks by tapping in a two-pointer with less than twenty seconds gone from the tilt.

The victory-hungry Hawks took a 10-6 lead in the early moments of the first half, but the State College Wolflets were determined to put up a good, tough scrap and tied the score at 11-11 after five minutes of play.

Then a long one-hander by guard Larry Edens pushed the Seahawks ahead again, 13-11, but the State team knotted the score at 13-13, when John Arganbright hit a short jump shot for the visitors. Then the home squad broke loose! Edens hit a four shot, McCurdy layed in two points, and guard Bill Haywood added another two points, as the Hawks took a 20-15 lead.

During the next five playing minutes, forward Al Thiry, along with Edens and Haywood, boosted the Seahawk lead to 10 points at 32-22, and with 3:25 remaining in the first half, Wilmington College enjoyed a 15 point spread in their favor, 40-25.

Halftime Lead

At halftime the Seahawks led, 48-33, and were in command of the game at that point.

In the first five minutes of the second half, the home team tossed in 12 more points, while the Wolflets collected only seven markers. In another brief scoring spree, the Seahawks added another twelve points to their lead in less than two minutes of playing time, while holding the visiting team to six points.

Biggest Lead

In the middle of the second half, Edens tossed in another one of his deadly accurate, long one-handers from near the foul circle, and the Seahawks enjoyed their biggest lead of the night, 78-48.

Wolflets Determined

It was at this point in the game that the State team began to check the Seahawks assault. Led by their center, Charles Grob, the Wolflets made a last effort surge and ripped the nets for 12 points in three minutes, while holding the seemingly, hapless Hawks, scoreless! But once again the Seahawks began to chalk up the markers and managed to keep ahead of the fighting State Frosh, 89-69, with 4:41 left in the ball game.

Reserves See Action

At this point Coach Brooks removed his Seahawk starters from the floor and put in his reserves. With twenty seconds left in the match, the high-flying Seahawks hit 100 points.

Hawks Upset State Freshmen, 79-63, In Opening Tilt Of Season

The Wilmington College Seahawks opened up their 1961-62 basketball season December 2, by downing the State College Freshman squad, 79-63.

The first half of the tilt was close, as the lead exchanged back and forth between the two clubs. At halftime the Seahawks managed to hold a slim two-point lead, 30-21. The Seahawks were not getting the rebounds and were having a hard time with their outside shooting.

Second Half Surge

The second half of the game was almost an inverse from the first half for the Seahawks. The 'Hawks, led by the deadly accuracy of big 6-8 Al Thiry, who is a transfer from the University of South Carolina, ripped the nets in a sizzling display which surged them ahead of the State College Wolflets.

Gene Bogash cleared the rebounds from both boards for the Seahawks. Bogash ended up with 21 rebounds for the night, and was followed by Larry Edens with 14.

The Wilmington College Seahawks held a small 44-40 lead after the first few minutes of the second half of the game, but connected on ten shots in less than four minutes while holding the State Freshmen to five points. After this brief spree on the court, the 'Hawks won the game going away.

Seahawk Scorers

Four of the Seahawks cagers hit in the double figures in carrying their team to its first victory of the early basketball season. Thiry ended up with 23 markers for the evening, followed by Bogash with 17, Jim McCurdy with 13, and Larry Edens with 12.

Not to be overlooked was Phil Stevenson, who tossed in nine points for the Seahawks.

Larry Worsley and Charles Grob were high men for the losing Wolflets with 15 points apiece.

Sharp Shooters

Although the 'Hawks had a poor first half, they turned in a sensational 50 per cent shooting average for the second portion of the contest. The Seahawks hit on nine out of 18 free throws from the floor, and ended up with an overall percentage of 41.2 for the game. The State College team only had a 34.2 per cent shooting average from the floor, and hit on seven out of 14 foul shots.

The Seahawks hit 35 of 85 shots from the floor, while State hit 28 out of 82 shots.

As Christmas Holidays Approach Parties, Parties, More Parties!

Only one thing seems to be running through the minds of most Wilmington College students as the Christmas holidays are approaching—parties, parties and more parties!

Phyliss Hazel: "I plan to work for the best station in town, WKLM, and to wait for Santa Claus."

Tommy Landen: "I'm going to Fort Lauderdale and raise a little calf!"

Nancy Bradshaw: "I plan to do all of those things which I never have time for while going to school, if you know what I mean . . ."

Tom Covi: "Starting off, I'm going to take a long nap and then get up and go hunting, then back to sleep again."

Sondra Wilson: "My ambition is to spend most of my time in the library working on my research theme, painting my room, and dating Alex."

David Williams and Peggy Ann Harriss: "We're going to attend 'our' regular row of parties during Christmas—morning, noon, and night."

Barbara Singletary: "I'll be working at the Camera Shop, picking out pretty presents, and spending all my leisure time with Ken."

Ann West: "I'm going to NEW YORK!!!!"

Jay Fisher: "I'll be Christmas shopping like mad. I might even have a party!"

Bonnie Raines: "I'll be working, socializing, and trying to be real good for Santa Claus."

New Year's Resolutions

I RESOLVE! — Linda Hancock and John Galloway quietly ponder their New Year's Resolutions. Resolutions have become an annual institution, especially among students.

Automobiles, Hospitality Impress
Sohrab Yavari, Persian Student

Sohrab Yavari, nicknamed Jimmy, remarks, "What impresses me the most about the United States is her size, automobiles, and the hospitality of the Southern people."

Jimmy came to the U.S. in September of 1959. He lived in New York City for a year and studied one semester of speech at Queen's College. He thinks that Wilmington College is "just fine."

Lectures Influence

Equipped with a Persian-English dictionary, Jimmy told why he had come to this country. "Some of my school friends came here and said they liked America. I attended some lectures of the American Friend of the Middle East and decided to come.

Telling of the life in Iran Jimmy states:

"The people of Iran are mostly concerned with agriculture and the petroleum and mineral industries. The majority of them are Moslem.

"Persia is divided into five segments: North, South, Middle West, Northwest, and East. All of Iran is governed by the Shah that the student body could learn the cheers and know them and be able to really yell at the ball games."

Nat Bost believes the formation of a booster club would improve school spirit. "I feel that within the last few weeks school spirit has been boosted because of the tremendous efforts put forth by the student government."

His friends call him Jimmy.

of Persia, who is very friendly to the United States.

"Moscow broadcasts to Iran in five languages. The program is the same time as that of Sound of America.

"The young people of Persia do not have the freedom of those in this country. They are very respectful to their parents; for when one disobeys his parents, it is a sin. At the table the parents sit and eat before the children do so.

No Blonds In Persia

"There are no blonds in Persia; all girls have black hair and brown eyes. "They wear make-up in the second or third year of high school. Persian girls are not as forward as American girls.

"When we date in Persia, we do the same things as you. We go to the movies and dances. Many times in the summer we swim. The young ones like rock and roll and the 'cha-cha'."

Jimmy speaks three languages; he learned most of them in the public schools of his country. The school system consists of six years of elementary school and six years of high school. The school year consists of ten months and allows only Friday to be a holiday.

Twenty-one subjects are taught during each of the six years of high school. Jimmy would go to bed at twelve or one o'clock a.m. and arise before sunrise to worship at a mosque. He would then go to school and study biology, physics, chemistry, physiology, arithmetic, algebra, trigonometry, history, Arabic, Persian literature, geography, physical education, and art.

Sohrab Yavari plans to continue his college studies at North Carolina State College. He wishes to become an engineer. Jimmy is undecided where he will practice his profession, in the U.S. or Iran.

College Students Sound Off;
Urge More School Spirit

Recently a special meeting was held at Wilmington College. The purpose of the meeting: to find ways to improve sagging school spirit.

To those who contended that school spirit was satisfactory, many students commented that the morale and unity of the college left much to be desired.

It is easy to criticize but vastly harder to provide concrete proposals to improve a situation. How do students feel that school spirit can be improved? A survey recently conducted revealed these following comments.

Sarah Burgess listed many ways in which she felt school spirit could be improved. Among these suggestions were included:

1. Bonfires
2. Pep rallies.
3. Card sections.
4. Charter buses.
5. Closed study at college on week days so students can attend games at night.

When asked to comment on school spirit, Martha Jay Station commented: "We need to realize that our college is what we make it. We have a good basketball team and a good baseball team. We should be very proud of them. Why don't we all get together and give them our support."

"I do not think school spirit can be improved," Frank Rogers stated.

George McKeeuen had a rather novel idea. "I think it would be nice for us to have a live mascot. I guess a mascot would be hard to have, but we do need more and better organized pep rallies than we had last year. These rallies really would make more people take more of an active interest in our team."

Ann Ferguson stated: "I think that school spirit could be improved by having pep rallies so

WILMINGTON COLLEGE, WILMINGTON, N. C.

January 25, 1962

Student Body Elects May Court Beauties; Harriss To Preside Over Spring Event

Peggy Anne Harriss has been elected by Wilmington College students to serve as May Queen for 1962.

Peggy Anne is 5'6" tall, has green-brown eyes, and is a fledgling beauty. She came here from Stratford College in Danville, Virginia, where she finished her freshman year. At Stratford she was one of the two freshmen who were chosen for the May Court. Peggy Anne is interested in painting and plans to attend Carolina next year.

Queen's Court

The Queen will have a court made up of a Freshman Maid-of-Honor, two Sophomore attendants, and two Freshman attendants.

Blonde-haired, blue-eyed Charlotte Taylor was chosen to be Maid-of-Honor. Charlotte comes from Georgetown, South Carolina where she spend most of her leisure time riding horses and hunting. She has recently been nominated to take Pam Chason's (who moved to Florida) place as representative of the Freshman Class.

Sophomore Attendants

Winning the places for Sophomore May Attendants were Jane Malpass and Dian Gritski.

Jane is the shortest member of the court standing only 5'1". She has blue eyes and dark brown hair and loves to water ski. Her major is elementary education and she, too, is thinking of transferring to UNC next year. Jane was a Fledgling beauty last year.

Baton twirling and dancing are Dian Gritski's favorite past times. Dian is a strawberry blonde, has blue eyes, and stands 5'5½". She is one of the cheerleaders for the college and a Miss Wilmington contestant.

Fresh Members

Millie Stone and Sondra Wilson will represent the Freshman Class in the May Court.

Hailing from Lake Waccamaw is Millie Stone. Milli is the fourth blonde in the court and has brown eyes. She is usually recognized by her hair style—a bouffant French Twist. She is taking a liberal arts course and is also a Fledgling beauty.

Sondra Wilson is the second of the two brunettes in the May Court, has green eyes, and stands 5'2¼" tall. Sondra plans to major in journalism and is associate editor of the Seahawk and co-editor of "With Pen in Hand." She is a sponsor for the Homecoming Court.

The May Court elections were held on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week and the girls were notified Wednesday night. They will be presented at the May Dance.

Panmathan Club Sets New Education Aim

The Panmathan Club, meaning "all learning," is one of the newest and most lively on campus.

"To walk the first mile," Lary Ingle explained is the purpose of this group.

Meetings are held every alternate Thursday at 7:30 in the Student Services Building and the first meeting successfully got under way with an attendance of nearly 20 persons present.

Walter Biggs and Frank Allen, zoology instructors, were guest speakers for the first meeting and gave their opinions concerning the "Theory of Evolution."

Rev. Ray B. Nowland of Grace Baptist Church, will speak tonight on why he does not believe in this theory.

Each Thursday, the club will have a speaker to debate on social, religious, and political matters. Students are invited to come to the meetings and participate in the discussions.

Officers of Panmathan are Al Shew, president; Judy Butler, vice-president, and John Gallo-way, secretary.

HOMECOMING BEGINS FEB. 8; CLUBS CHOOSE SPONSORS

What's so important about February 8, 9, and 10? Why, it's the biggest weekend that faces Wilmington College coeds during the entire year — HOME-COMING!

On Thursday night at the Le-

Ballgames, Dance, Beauty Pageant, Highlight Weekend

No idle moments for Wilmington College students this week-end!

Tomorrow night in Brogden Hall, the Seahawks play The Citadel from South Carolina and the college radio station anticipates having an informal dance in the Student Services Building.

Saturday night the Seahawks play a second game with Chowan College.

On this same night in the high school auditorium the Miss Wilmington Pageant will be held sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce. Perhaps, one of the WC student participants—Judy Burris, Dian Kritski or Phyllis Hazel—will take home the title.

One of the best known bands in the state, the "Blue Notes," will play at the Armory for the 1962 March of Dimes dance Saturday night also.

gion Stadium at 7:30, a bonfire will be built and the college band, "Continental," will be on hand to provide music for the event.

On Friday, at 4:30, the Homecoming candidates will ride in convertibles down Front Street.

That same night the Seahawks will meet Louisburg at Brogden Hall at 8:00 p.m. Following the game, an informal dance is being planned for the students in the Student Services Building.

Finally, on Saturday night, one of the biggest college dances of the year will be held in the union and will feature either the Embers or the Blue Notes, according to John Pistolis, chairman of Homecoming.

Highlighting this week-end will be the Homecoming Court, one member of this court being chosen by the students for Queen of Homecoming. Every organization at the college is allowed to sponsor one of the freshman or sophomore girls.

When the paper went to press, the following girls had been sponsored: Engineers, Judy Hayes; Pen Pushers, Sondra Wilson; Student Council, Barbara Broadnax; Cheerleaders, Mary Henderson; and Seahawk, Morris Broadwell; basketball team, Vivian Lee Harris; Fledgling staff; Francis Best.

Wilmington College Accepts Invite; Presents "Prince of Parthia" At Festival

The Wilmington College Theatre has received an invitation from the Carolina Dramatic Association, Chapel Hill, to present "The Prince of Parthia" by Thomas Godfrey. The performance will be given at the University of North Carolina during the week of April 11.

The Carolina Dramatics Association is celebrating its 40th anniversary. In doing so, the April festival will feature only plays and organizations by invitations. Such groups from North Carolina and neighboring states which have been issued invitation and accepted include Richmond Professional Institute, Mars Hill College, Shaw University, Lyric Theatre in Greensboro, North Carolina State Ballet, Elizabethan Players of Manteo, Northampton County Players, and Wilmington College Theatre.

The yearly awards for excellence in production will be presented at the various district festivals around the state.

Godfrey wrote "The Prince of Parthia" while residing in Wilmington. It is the first play written by an American to be performed in America by a professional company of actors. The play was produced in April 24, 1767, too late for Godfrey to realize his wish. He died August 3, 1963, and was buried in St. James Cemetery.

Tryouts for the play will be held in February. The production will be under the direction of Doug W. Swink, of the Drama Department.

Swink Names "Family Affair" Cast

Play Rehearsals

Martha Parker, Susan Hale, and Oliver Vestil practice their lines for upcoming play, "Family Affair."

The second play of this year, "Family Affair," under the production of Doug Swink, will be held in Hoggard Hall, room 114, February 15, 16, and 17 at 5:00 p.m.

This comedy was written by Charles Townsend in 1898, and will be done in the 1898 style of acting.

Doug Hunt plays the part of Dan Gallepie, the young man around whom the play is centered. The rest of the cast includes: Miss Cameron, Susan Hale; Deacon Smith, Oliver Vestal; Louisiana, Martha Parker; Sally, Anne West; and Jorkins Jobson, Ed Mauney. Martha Parker is stage-manager and Sammy Carr will be in charge of lights.

New Club Strives For More Socials

The Catillon Club, another new organization on campus, has formed and been chartered by the Student Council. Its purpose is to establish a standing organization for the provision of social functions for the students at Wilmington College.

It will comprise all of the members of student council and three members from the Sophomore and Freshman Classes.

The sophomore members are Tommy Landen, Peggy Ann Harris, and Larry Lanier.

Frank Rogers, Sondra Wilson and Hilda Rooks are the freshmen.

The president is Al Shew who will provide for the supervision of the standing social functions of the school year.

The secretary-treasurer will record all transactions made by the club and will submit reports upon request to the Student Council. Sondra Wilson will act as the secretary temporarily.

WILC Names Staff

A staff of announcers was announced Thursday for WILC, and a new console installed.

The announcers are Barbara Bradley, Randy Coble, Genie Goldman, Thomas Howell, Wallace West, and Stan Willis.

Assistants are: Leslie Harris, Doug Carmichael, James Cotton, Ed Freeman, Phyllis Hazel, Ronald Lee, and Ray Oxendine.

Frank Rogers is station manager. Ed Mauney serves as head announcer. Oliver Vestal is engineer, and Mary Lou Gilliland is secretary-treasurer.

Doug Swink of the drama department is faculty advisor.

Students Shirk Political Obligations

Although we have a vast new campus, the area is not too vast for the students to be informed of the future events of the school.

Homecoming is approximately two weeks away, yet students were not informed of this date by the student council in ample time to prepare for the occasion, as several dates had been proposed, yet no definite one.

Several girls are usually sponsored by various clubs to participate in the homecoming activities, and from among them a homecoming queen is selected. The newspaper staff had to inform the various organizations of the near approaching homecoming and encourage them to select a sponsor. This is the responsibility of the student council, not the newspaper staff.

An election must be held to select a homecoming queen, yet an adequate date has not been decided on, in order that the nominated girls might campaign ad let the student body know of their seeking the position.

The May Court is usually selected at this time of the year, and a hurried election was planned. It was so hurried that the girls nominated were not even checked for class standing, and booths were not erected so students could vote privately.

Students have no sense of their obligations after they are elected; their sense of duty has diminished. The news-ers are elected; their sense of duty has diminished. The news-ning of the Student Council.

Students have very eagerly participated in the school spirit effort which was sponsored by a few anxious students. Now that there is a concern to have more active clubs at the college, students have expressed their desires to participate.

Perhaps with enthusiasm among the officers, students will be encouraged to participate in class activities further.

The student government has done very little to promote interest in the school's activities. As new ideas are forming, individual class spirit can be enhanced.

With aspirant officers, students will be able to support their school, support their officers and their ideas.

With great enthusiasm, the candidates ran for the elective positions on the Student Council last spring. We, the students of Wilmington College, were promised a prosperous and successful year, governmentwise, for 1961-62! Have we received this promise?

Secret Campus

Moscow University is immense. Its new buildings dominate the city. They form the center of what is envisaged as the new Moscow.

In the main building of the university and in neighboring blocks are all the science faculties, and here live some undergraduates and graduates from all faculties and all foreign students except those attached to the separate Friendship University.

Others live in hostels, and all whose families are in Moscow are obligated to live at home. The arts faculties and the main university library are in the old building in central Moscow.

It is impossible to enter any university building without a general pass. This system was necessary to prevent students from bringing their families to live with them at the hostels.

A different pass is needed to get into each library and institution. As well as this all citizens of the Soviet Union have a passport, to be produced when being paid, when collecting mail, applying for a job, joining a library, or selling anything to a second-hand shop (the only legal way for private individuals to sell goods).

Student discipline within the university is left largely to the student committees, who expose the misdeeds of those who break the rules through "wall newspapers," according to universal Soviet custom. A picture is hung of the student's wrong results, and this photograph would appear on a board with maybe the words, "Shame on (the student's name)."

Inside the long, low corridors with no windows, there is little conversation and no one saunters or stands still unless waiting in a queue.

This is an extremely forbidding impression of public life in Moscow, and the private life is completely different and more pleasant.

The Russians are incredibly generous, friendly and warm-hearted. They are almost completely free from affectation and snobbery, and have a refreshing healthy contempt for the material, the "good" things of life.

By MARCIA GARDNER

The Music Department is experiencing another very busy month filled with programs, programs, and more programs. On January 11, the entire Chorus presented a program for the Lion's Club meeting held at the Friendly Cafeteria.

The following day the "Top Twelve" made a television appearance on Jim Burn's Variety Showcase. They sang three numbers which were as follows: "I Am An American," "Little Brown Jug," and "Beyond the Blue Horizon" with tenor soloist Doug Hunt and soprano soloist Marcia Gardner.

On Tuesday, January 16, the "Top Twelve" sang at the Rotary Club meeting held at the Friendly Cafeteria. The selections consisted of "U. S. Air Force Blue," "Melodic Caravan," "In the Still of the Night," "Little Brown Jug," "I Am an American," "America the Beautiful," with soprano soloist Elaine Gregory, "Beyond the Blue Horizon," and a special solo, "Il Bacio," presented by Carol Ellis.

On January 17, at 7:30 o'clock the "Top Twelve" sang at the Cape Fear Country Club.

The entire Chorus will sing at the District Area Counsel Parent - Teachers Association this evening at 5:30, and on January 29, we will sing at the Optimist Club meeting at the Friendly Cafeteria. Then on February 19, at the Thursday Morning Music Club's Opera night, the Chorus will present the selection, "Bell Chorus," from the opera "Pagliacci."

On March 11, at the Covenant Presbyterian Church the Chorus will sing Brahms "Motet."

These are all the programs we have scheduled at present.

Teacher Training Makes Progress

An outspoken critic of accreditation procedures in American education declares that the most revered forerunners of education — John Dewey, Henry Barnard and Horace Mann — could not get accredited to teach in a public school today.

Despite encouraging signs that subject-matter training of teachers is making headway against professional education courses, Prof. Edward J. Gordon, director of Yale University's Office of Teacher Training, takes a pessimistic view. "My prediction is that little will change in the foreseeable future in the pattern of accreditation of teachers, unless some miracle takes place."

Prof. Gordon said a movement back to subject-matter training of teachers is being sparked by the liberal arts colleges. He said that the national government "is spending millions of dollars in summer schools aimed at retooling the teacher who is not up on his subject matter."

"Courses are taken because they come at four in the afternoon, because they are easy, and because they open the way to administrative positions. The teacher learns that the school community values most that for which it will pay the most. And the teacher, under this system, learns that the only ways to succeed in too many systems is through giving up teaching. It is the rare teacher — and the good teacher — who will make his commitment to subject-matter."

First Night Proves Future Of Theatrical Opening

By ANN WEST

Excitement built up around a theatrical opening, a "first night," can be great enough to carry the play for weeks, even months and years when the play is a solid hit. "The Night of the Iguana" is a hit, and the excitement of the second night was at a killing pitch. The audience had been completely convinced over its morning Tribune and coffee — Kerr had been moved!

Nerves were kept on edge by the traumatic experience of bawling through the jammed lobby and the constant jarring of telephoned reservations. The audience was a quivering mob of emotional putty when the curtain shot up and Bette Davis sauntered onto the veranda of her crumbling Mexican hotel.

"Hah!" she barked with harsh humor, and the play was off and running.

"Han," is the key to an open door character—the "rapacious-lusty" widow Faulk, whose ideals and desires go no deeper than the flagrantly unbuttoned shirt and tight levis she wears.

Diametrically apart and aloof stands Hannah Jelkes, magnificently played by Margaret Leighton. She is hauntingly alone, accepts her loneliness calmly and consciously, without self pity.

Caught between the feminine extremes is a very violent person the defrocked minister, Reverend Shannon. Shannon has been reduced to conducting old ladies tours by a world which sees God as "a senile delinquent." He himself is a tortured mass of extremes, enjoying his torture as a mild form of crucifixion, frantically trying to rid himself of guilt by wallowing in pain.

Hannah sees through his Christ-like charade as quickly as he realizes her loneliness. Their emotional bankruptcy calls out to each other upon a plain just slightly below heaven. An earthly "Han" blots out this exterior vision, however, and the good widow Faulk manages to insure the loneliness as she hauls Shannon off for a swim and Hannah stands alone in the calm light of sunset.

It is easy enough to say that the role of Hannah Jelkes is the most memorable portrait of the play. The difficulty comes in trying to decide at which point the genius of the playwright ends, and the genius of the actress begins. Of Williams' many heroines, Hannah is probably the best developed. She is one of the most moving characters in modern theatre.

Williams and Margaret Leighton have succeeded in creating an image which goes very much deeper than either the mind or emotion. The only thing one can say is that it is very probably an immortal thing.

Three Easy Steps To Make Sophisticated Individual

Friends, do you lack a certain quality of sophistication? Do you wish just once you could be a little "beat" or individualistic? Do you yearn to rise above the ordinary? Weep no more. Follow three steps, and in a matter of days you can obtain the standing of intelligentsia, first class.

First, buy a chess board. Deposit it on a table in the student services lounge, grab a chess partner (preferably one who doesn't know how to play), and then sit and meditate. Does this impress the crowd!

Don't be disturbed if you can't play chess. Just remember that ninety-nine per cent of the others can't play either and have no idea of what you are doing. A little acting ability and a lot of gall will carry you through. Since everyone knows chess is a game for the erudite, this stunt can vastly increase your prestige in the eyes of others.

The second step is much easier to carry out. It consists of buying a few books such as Crime and Punishment or the Iliad. Paperbooks with splashy covers will best serve the purpose.

Also pick books written by obscure foreign authors. People always go on the assumption that if they have never heard of the author, he must be good.

Be sure to carry these books around so that everyone can see them and be impressed. It might be a good idea to read the information on the cover so that if anyone asks you a question about the book, you can bluff your way out. By the way, if you are reading magazines from the library, choose either Realite or Atlantic Monthly. Avoid such commonly read magazines as Sports Illustrated or Life.

Step three requires a big mouth and a loud voice as well as an accomplice. Find a crowd of people (the lunchroom is a good place), worm your way into the middle of the mob, and then begin a lofty discourse on the truths of existentialism or the merits of Buddhism.

The discomfort of the wide-eyed stares or of the wise-cracks will be more than offset by the knowledge that you are developing a thoroughly intriguing personality.

Seahawk forward Al Thiry scores two-pointer in win over Charlotte College, January 20.

Seahawks Crush Owls

In their opening game of conference play, the Wilmington College Seahawks took a one-sided, 76-42, victory over the Charlotte Owls, January 20, in Charlotte.

Once again, Gene Bogash and Al Thiry combined their efforts to lead the Hawk attack with 46 points and 27 rebounds. Bogash hit ten out of 14 attempts from the floor and hit six free throws for 26 points. Thiry hit ten out of 21 shots from the floor.

The Seahawks played a very deliberate game for the first time this season and held a hot 76.2 per cent field goal accuracy at halftime, leading 36-22 over the Owls.

The contest was close only in the opening minutes when Charlotte pulled within one point of the Seahawks at 13-12. But the Hawks surged ahead with their scoring and soon held a ten-point spread.

Although the Hawks had a rather poor shooting accuracy in the final half of the game, they were still able to coast to an easy win on merits of their first half performance.

The win gave the Wilmington College squad a 6-2 record for the season and dropped the Charlotte Owls to 1-9 overall and 0-3 in conference play.

Tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in Brogden Hall, the Wilmington College Seahawks will try to extend their current winning streak to four straight, when they entertain a strong Citadel Freshman squad from Charleston, South Carolina.

In an earlier meeting between the two teams in Charleston, the Citadel Bullpups managed to eke out a slim 79-73 win over the high-scoring Seahawks, December 12. It was the first setback suffered by the Hawks, who will be out to revenge the loss tomorrow night.

Gene Bogash, Seahawk center, suffered a fractured hand in the Citadel tilt after five minutes of play in the first half. Without the aid of the big center, the Hawks managed to tie the score at 68-68 with six minutes left in the contest, but couldn't stop the quick-scoring Citadel Bullpups.

With Bogash back in action tomorrow night, the Seahawks will try to gain a 7-2 record for the season. The team appears to be in good physical form and is anticipating the game.

Current scorer for the Citadel Bullpups is lanky 6-5 forward George Metkiff. He scored 24 points against the Seahawks in the first game between the teams.

However, Metkiff will meet his match Friday night, because the Hawks' Bogash is averaging 26.6 points a game for the last three contests and will probably continue his hot pace against the Citadel.

The Seahawks, fresh from a 76-42 romp over Charlotte College last Tuesday night, will continue their conference play Saturday night, when they meet Chowan College in another home game.

Bogash Leads Locals To Win Over St. Andrews, 98-82

The Wilmington College Seahawks extended their record to five wins and two losses, January 16, with a 98-82 romp over four-year St. Andrews College in Laurinburg.

The hometown Hawks built up an early lead and were ahead, 14-5, with five minutes played in the game and were never in any serious trouble the rest of the contest.

Accurate Shooting
The Seahawks turned in a sensational 58 per cent shooting accuracy from the floor in the game, and were led by center Gene Bogash, who hit 11 out of 14 shots from the floor and hit one free throw for a total of 23 points.

Four other Hawk players also posted double figure scores. Al Thiry collected 16 markers, Gary Hedrick had 17, Phil Stephenson made 11 points, and Larry Edens tallied 10 points before he left the game early in the second half because of an ankle injury suffered in the contest.

Bogash, who has seen limited action with the Seahawks this season because of a hand fractured in the Citadel contest, has scored 26 shots out of 33 attempts in the last two contests. Bogash led in rebounding by grabbing 17 off of the backboards.

St. Andrews Rallyes
Although the Seahawks extended their lead to 28-15 midway the first half, the St. Andrews Knights staged a rally with four minutes left in the first half of play and closed the scoring gap to 42-39 at halftime.

In the opening minutes of the second half, both teams scored evenly until Jim McCurdy, big Seahawk forward, hit a twisting layup and then stole the ball for an easy shot to put the Hawks ahead again by a 59-52 advantage.

The Hawks then started to move the ball quickly and worked a fast break to boost their lead to 16 points at 71-55 with eight minutes left in the ball game. The Wilmington College Seahawks held as much as a 22-point spread in their favor at one point in the tilt, but the Knight of Laurinburg cut the lead of the Hawks in the final minutes of play.

In the Seahawks' second half surge, they hit 23 of 36 attempts in the last 20 minutes of play to break the game wide open.

Sports Outlook

By GREG MASSEY

After the Christmas Holidays, the Seahawks of Wilmington College swayed back into basketball action, January 5, when they encountered the University of North Carolina Freshmen at Brogden Hall. The game proved to be a real battle as a jeering home crowd of 2,000 spectators watched the Hawks bow to the UNC Frosh, 70-68, in overtime. The Seahawks made a remarkable comeback in the second half of that contest, but couldn't shake the visitors in the overtime play.

Even though the Seahawks lost the ballgame to the North Carolina team, the fans had a good chance to observe the offensive and defensive strengths of the Hawks. The University of North Carolina Freshmen are undefeated so far this season, but the Seahawks definitely gave them their biggest scare. In playing other Big Four freshmen teams, the UNC Frosh have had little difficulty in gaining wins, but the Seahawks almost knocked them from ranks of undefeated.

There was a good turnout of spectators at the game, but there was still more room for college students. All of us need to support the Seahawks.

Seahawk Statistics

We have tabulated some statistics of the Seahawks for the first six games of the basketball season.

After playing the sixth contest with the University of South Carolina Freshmen, four of the Seahawk starters were averaging in the double figures. Towering, 6'-6" forward Al Thiry leads the Seahawks in scoring with an 18.3 points per game average. He is closely followed by guard Larry Edens, who is not far behind pace with a 17.2 point average. Gene Bogash, star Seahawk center, boosted his average to 12.6 points a game when he tallied 32 points against the University of South Carolina Freshmen, January 13. Jim McCurdy rounds out the foursome with a 12.2 average.

In the first six games that the Seahawks have played, they have averaged 83.6 points per contest, while holding their opponents to an even 68-point average. This indicates the Hawks strong offense and defense.

Sports Chips

Frank Allen reports that the prospective members of the college golf team held a brief meeting January 16, and had their pictures taken for the college annual.

Walter Biggs, coach of the tennis team, says that so far five boys have stopped by his office to sign up for next spring's team. Mr. Biggs wishes to stress the fact that more students ought to come by and discuss the prospects of playing on the squad. One certainly doesn't have to be a Pancho Gonzales to play on the squad, so why not help build it into a good intercollegiate team.

Dove season was over January 15, and there are rumors that some students cut classes that day to get in a last shoot. Many college students hunted January 13. Bill Mathis, engineering student, said, "the doves were really flying because of the snow and ice on the ground Saturday, January 13."

Wilmington College Scores 94-71 Win Over University of South Carolina

Gene Bogash, despite the fact that he had been out of basketball action for five weeks, turned in a brilliant 32-point performance to pace the Wilmington College Seahawks to a 94-71 victory over the University of South Carolina Freshmen in Columbia, S. C., January 13.

The win extended the Seahawks' record to four wins and two losses.

Bogash, playing the pivot spot, got the game underway when he tossed in two buckets at the beginning of the game to give the Hawks a 4-0 lead.

The Seahawks grabbed a good lead and led, 51-38, at halftime. Numerous Seahawk reserves played the last 10 minutes of the contest and moved the ball with good form.

Phil Stevenson, a starter at guard for the Hawks, had one of the best nights of his college basketball career from the floor, as he hit seven buckets out of seven tries. Very seldom does a starter have a 100 per cent shooting accuracy.

Dean Crews Reveals Improved School Spirit

A recent interview with Dean Mary J. Crews by a Seahawk reporter reveals that the administration is well pleased with the progress the students have been making in the school spirit drive.

The union of any campus can be strengthened by its school spirit and with each passing day the student body of Wilmington College is becoming more conscious of the need of better school spirit. Up to being questioned various subject, Dean Crews gave the following answers:

What are some of the things that have been done to promote more school spirit?

"Perhaps the radio station set up in the Student Services Building has been the greatest means of communication, as it has been receiving a tremendous response from the students. Also, there has been a better organized social event schedule. However, all the credit for carrying out this program must be given to the students themselves. It is their program and they should be commended for the swell job they are doing."

What other things are being planned in the near future?

"A committee will be called together for planning a dance for the Apollo Queen's court during the Apollo Festival. In the very near future, however, another assembly will be held featuring the College Chorus and the dance band."

What part can the individual play in this school spirit drive?

"Each person can talk school spirit and participate in as many campus activities as possible."

College Students Voice Strong Plea For Firmer American Foreign Policy

Berlin, Laos, Cuba, South Vietnam—The United States is constantly colliding with the forces of Communism.

A new administration has been guiding American interests for nearly a year. Is this nation's foreign policy sufficiently forceful and energetic to counter the communist menace? A survey of Wilmington College students revealed that the younger generation generally is perplexed, pessimistic, and sometimes angry regarding the present condition of world affairs.

Iris Pickler felt that U.S. foreign policy lacked determination. "I think the U.S. should take truly firm stands on international issues and use force if necessary," commented Iris.

Doug Neilson also viewed the present international situation with pessimism. Said Doug: "I think we've backed down on too many issues. We've taken stands and not supported them. We've presented a soft, compromising image to the world."

Helen Webb felt that American plenty could be used to improve U.S. prestige abroad. "I think food surpluses should be distributed by experts to all poorer nations—pro-communist as well as anti-communist," stated Helen. "This would show our true intentions to the world."

Harry Buzzell felt that the U.S. should use force, if necessary, to protect its interests. Believing American foreign policy to be too lenient at times, Harry stated that policy should be carried out "more quickly and positively."

Peggy Anne Harris was also among those who felt that the tide of the cold war was running against this country. When asked to give reasons for this view, Peggy stated: "The American Activities Committee was not forceful enough in its investigation of Communists in the San Francisco area. It's the general feeling of nearly all Americans that we will sit back and let the other man do it. Our problem is internal rather than external."

Michael Sellers is convinced that the U.S. made its biggest mistake after World War II. "We controlled the economic and military resources of the world. We should have been more forceful in our demands for control of military armament at that time. Russia was without resources. Europe was beaten. We should have warned the world that a military buildup of any kind would result in an invasion by the U.S."

Liz Taylor, Richard Chamberlain Voted Most Admired Personalities

Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Chamberlain Tops

In a recent poll on the campus, students were asked who they thought were the most glamorous or attractive male or female personality.

First place male winner was Dr. Kildare, or Richard Chamberlain. Second and third placers were Warren Beatty, who recently starred in "Splendor in the Grass", and Gardner McKay, a T.V. personality on "Adventures in Paradise".

Elizabeth Taylor was elected a unanimous favorite among the boys on the Wilmington College campus. In a different category than the screen stars, Jacquelyn Kennedy was mentioned as being a lady of much glamour.

The following that were interviewed reveal their ideas of the most attractive names to young collegiates:

Genie Goodman—Richard Chamberlain.

Betsy Pons—Gardner McKay. Ritchie Watson—Elizabeth Taylor.

Peggy Anne Harris—Warren Beatty.

Burt Keable—Sophia Loren. Andy Gemmell—Gina Lollobrigida.

Pat Craig—Richard Chamberlain.

Nancy Bradshaw—Rock Hudson. Steve Culbreth—Elizabeth Taylor.

Iris Pickler—Troy Donahue. Nat Bost—Jacquelyn Kennedy. Ray Oxendine—Kim Novak.

Donnie Ezelle—Jacquelyn Kennedy.

Betty Matthews—Richard Chamberlain.

Terry Horton—Elizabeth Taylor.

Martha Jay Staton—Gardner McKay.

Anne Ferguson—Richard Chamberlain.

Pen Pushers Plan Annual Magazine

The main project of the Pen Pushers every year is to publish the literary magazine "Wink Pen In Hand."

Stories, themes and short stories have been submitted by students. These works are first read by the coeditors for approval and then sent before the club for criticism and selection.

The club is considering presenting a cash award this year for the best piece of creative writing submitted for the magazine.

If any student wishes to submit his work, he should see either Ann West or Sandra Wilson coeditors.

Chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. McCall, the five girls arrived in the big city. "Big," of course, is a gross understatement.

An eleven o'clock on Tuesday night, December 26, six new arrivals made the pilgrimage down Times Square and Broadway. Mrs. McCall had the excellent sense to go to bed. Four cold girls were dragged by Mr. McCall and Anne West up Shubert's Alley, and down Shubert's Alley, and up—Five girls, numb with cold, retired at one o'clock with nicely developing cases of pneumonia.

As you might have known, the next day all five ventured with terrifying enthusiasm on a shopping extravaganza. Barbara Broadnax struggled through the crowds on Fifth Avenue with praiseworthy zeal. I was ashamed to propose a visit to Klein's.

Thursday the determined five took a bus tour of New York and saw all those things one should see. With consciences clear, the whole group went to Sardi's after the theater. I or-

NEWSPAPERS MUST MOTIVATE PUBLIC REACTION TO ISSUES

A newspaper that always printed the "nice" material for mass consumption would certainly not be representative of its readers. A newspaper must print the "nice" along with the "unpalatable." Providing the paper has not been libelous, and if the "unpalatable" has left an unfortunate taste, at least the newspaper has achieved one of its primary functions in motivating public reaction to controversial issues.

The editorial columns are free to those who might consider themselves misrepresented or unjustifiably treated. And college students, least of all, ought not to be "defenseless." — Reprinted from The Western Carolinian

WILL COLLEGE STUDENTS BE PAID?

An economist from the University of Chicago recently suggested that students be paid to go to college.

Prof. H. W. Schultz advocated to the American Association of Land Grant Colleges and State Universities that colleges and universities seriously under-estimate the time element of a student's education.

He further suggests that if students were paid to go to college that they could no longer consider that their hours in furthering an education a waste of time, and this proposed factor would also bring about basic reforms in higher education.

The time spent in college is not a waste in the general sense of the term; it merely implies that students should be compensated for the salaries that they would be earning were they already economically employed. When a student graduates from college his contemporaries have already been earnestly at work for several years expending their working power.

If students were paid to attend college, it seems that there would be certain drawbacks to this seemingly impractical economical venture. This is quite true, but if students were first required to take a preliminary test in order to prove their potentialities then there would be less likelihood of a poor financial investment on the part of the college in these students.

Earnest students certain that their college education was financially secure, would then be able to concentrate more fully toward quality rather than toward quantity education. Perhaps then there would be a basic reform in the use of school facilities — libraries, laboratories, and classrooms — in the use of faculty time, and above all a reform in curricula.

Students could center their efforts toward broadening their education rather than just in learning the essentials of making a living. A college or a university's curricula would certainly benefit from a higher caliber of student commitment.

Paying students to go to college is not a new concept in education; it has been discussed and kicked around for some time. Now the time seems right for some college or university to consider the possibility of the idea.

Students' financial worries could be over with this move. They would not have to spend long laborious hours at some after class job in order to earn enough money to see their way clearly through college, and they would not have to strain dad's already frayed pocketbook.

STUDENTS NEED GUIDANCE!

There have been past years at Wilmington College when the Student Council and class officers have been given little responsibility. Much of their energy was devoted to planning and directing student activities, which only included little more than a few annual dances. The college never possessed anything closely resembling a student government.

Since Wilmington College has grown, the student body should begin to take steps toward the future. There has been talk concerning the possibility of the school eventually becoming a four year college. Thus definite plans should be made to give Wilmington College a more convincing college atmosphere.

The Student Council's time has not been merely devoted to the planning, but rather a broader activities program here is glaringly evident. Yet, the students are not informed and guided into the initiation of these various activities. A program should be drawn up to guide the future officers' efforts toward an established goal.

Well-informed students can make a tangible contribution to the progress of their school.

Letter To Editor

February 9, 1962

Dear Editor:

What is the purpose of a bonfire during a homecoming weekend? To bolster school spirit, to create a sense of common bond among the members of the student body, and to prepare the way for an exciting and thrilling homecoming weekend have always seemed to me as its main purpose. However, anyone unlucky enough to be present at the farce put on last February 8 will be compelled to admit to the utter disillusionment of the greater part of the student body.

Two points must be considered here. First, let it be said to those students who were not there, that they are woefully missing out on one of the most important aspects of their college years, that of extracurricular activities. One of these activities would be the active participation and support in your school sports events and various related items, such as a bonfire. Students who do not take an active part in such events cannot truthfully say, "I am getting a college education."

The second point I should like to bring to the students' attention is the lack of interest in school spirit in those who should be the "promoters" of such matters, our inadequate little girls in green? Why were they not at the bonfire leading us in a good old fashioned pep rally? Don't they realize their role in the life of the student body and the duty they owe to their fellow students? From all appearances, they must not! If our head cheerleader doesn't know these things by now, only a miracle of the first magnitude could possibly change things.

It is truly a shame that the cheerleaders and the majority of the student body, including the stone statues who were at the bonfire, cannot gather up enough pride in their school to support it at all times.

Yours very respectfully,
Ronald Earl Lee.

Thomas Godfrey occupies a significant position in the history of American literature, and this is not solely by reason of the fact that he was the author of a single drama which had the unique distinction of being the first tragedy ever written by a native in the United States.

Wholly unshadowed by the gloomy forebodings of the Puritans, he recalls the period of the Elizabethans. The publication of his poems in 1965 marks the beginning of a new epoch in American literature, for he was our first conspicuous devotee of the principle of "art for art's sake." Unlike the American poets who preceded him, his writing is for esthetics rather than ethics; beauty rather than morals.

His play, "The Prince of Parthia," is a worthy beginning for dramatic literature in America. The dialogue is especially fine, and amazingly enough, it remains beautifully workable even though two centuries have passed since its completion here in Wilmington in 1759. Godfrey was eager to have his play acted by a professional company. The fragmentary last act is evidence of the play's somewhat hurried completion for a Philadelphia performance.

It must not be forgotten, in any consideration for Godfrey as a dramatist, that "The Prince of Parthia" was not designed as a mere closet drama, but was written with the avowed object of stage-production. It is with this fact in mind that the Wilmington College Players begin rehearsals on "The Prince." It will be interesting to see a revival of this play done by this particular group.

Students Learn Russian Language

Trinity College in Washington, D.C., has initiated a Saturday program to train prospective teachers of the Russian language. A basic course in Russian is being offered for two hours every Saturday morning. The program ends May 26. Enrollment is open to junior and senior high school students, college or graduate students, and certified teachers.

Classes in grammar, conversation, and composition are arranged according to the educational level of the program's participants. Varying from $75 for teachers, graduate students, and college students, to $80 for junior and senior high school students, the enrollment fee covers the entire cost of textbooks, transcript, and records for home study.

Three undergraduate college credits will be received by those students who complete the

Have you ever thought just how dull the world would be if music were banned? We are sure you'll agree that this would be tragic. When a person is asked for his opinion of classical music he usually replies that he can't stand it. Many say this without even thinking of the meaning of classical music.

To begin with, classical music refers to music written during the period of 1750 to 1810 and not to the style of music. Therefore, this music was not written to be classical but rather to sell. Composers of old were human just as you and I are today. They had to make a living in order to survive. Gounod wrote his opera FAUST not as classical music but rather as something to sell.

With this in mind, how can you learn to like music? First of all, you must concentrate. In concentrating you should be able to isolate the melody and keep up with the rhythm. Also, listen for the high points and, above all else, listen to it often so that you will be able to recognize or even hum the melody.

You can make music more enjoyable by choosing that which follows a story. There are a great number of operas which have a beautiful story behind them and, if you are familiar with the story, the music has much more meaning. Also, choose an artist you like and listen to him or her often, whether it is Johnny Mathis or the fine works of Bach or Handel. When you choose the style of music and the artist you like, live up to your convictions.

These are just a few ways you can learn to like music, not any particular style or kind but just music in general. So, for a change, why not listen to something else besides Chubby Checker. Who knows, you may like Bach better!

Wilmingtonians should view this venture with historical fact in mind—Thomas Godfrey completed his play here; he remains lie in St. James Cemetery. Wilmingtonians should view this venture with pride — Godfrey has brought literary fame to his adopted city. Above all, Wilmingtonians should view this production.

course in good standing. All students on each level of instruction are subject to a weekly verbal quiz and both mid-term and final written examinations.

Supplementary courses in elementary and intermediate Russian are planned for succeeding semesters. Advanced courses will also eventually be offered. According to Sister Mary Frances, head of the Russian department, the program as outlined meets a real need in contemporary society. "Russian has become a 'critical' language," she states, "and there are relatively few teachers equipped to teach it."

"Trinity's program begins on the junior high school level, because colleges will be better able to train teachers of Russian if students come to college with a mastery of basic skills in the language."

Hawks Head For Kansas

The high-flying Wilmington College Seahawks roared over the North Greenville Mounties, 93-69, on a neutral court in Florence, S. C., March 8, to win a best two out of three series and the right to play in the National Junior College Tournament in Hutchinson, Kansas, beginning March 19.

In the first meeting between North Greenville and Wilmington College, the Mounties handed the Seahawks a 78-87 defeat, in a game played at Greer, S. C. The second game of the series was played here at Brogden Hall, and the Hawks, supported by a large home crowd, managed to drop North Greenville, 71-60.

In the final playoff game held at Florence, S. C., the Seahawks played almost seemingly pro-type basketball. They made few mistakes in the contest and easily took advantage of the numerous mistakes of the Mounties. Throughout the entire game the Seahawks clicked with precision shooting and rebounding.

Early Lead

The Hawks took the lead in the ball game within a few minutes of play in the first half. Larry Edens hit a long shot and the Hawks, cheered by many Wilmington College students, held a 10-9 lead.

With a little less than ten minutes left in the first half, the Seahawks began to find the range on the basket and ripped the nets from all corners of the court. In six minutes the Hawks stretched their 21-16 lead to a phenomenal 40-19 lead, while holding North Greenville to only three points. This scoring assault was spurred by Gene Bogash and Larry Edens. In this scoring spree, Bogash had 11 points and Edens hit 8 points.

25-Point Half Lead

At halftime the Seahawks enjoyed a 48-23 lead and appeared to have the game under control. When the second half of play opened, once again the Seahawks started their hot scoring. The Hawks increased the score to 58-28, and with about five minutes left in the contest, the Seahawks enjoyed their biggest lead of the night at 83-37, a 46-point spread in their favor.

Coach Brooks used reserves to play the remainder of the ball game, and the Mounties, at this point, began to whittle away at the Wilmington College lead by scoring 32 points in the five minutes left. However, the Seahawks continued hitting the basket.

Top Scorers

Leading the Seahawks in their one-sided victory were Gene Bogash with 27 points, Al Thiry with 18 points, and Larry Edens with 28 points. All three of these players missed very few shots throughout the game.

Bogash had another remarkable night from the floor. He grabbed 15 rebounds and hit for nine out of 10 free throws, besides scoring 27 points.

The Seahawks hit for 56 per cent during the first half of the game, but did even better in the second half when they hit for 71 per cent. The win gave the Seahawks a 20-4 win for the overall season, and the Mounties record was dropped to 23-7.

College Golf Team Ready For Matches

The local college golfers are getting ready for the spring golf matches which are only days ahead of them. Frank Allen reports that the boys are practicing earnestly now and have already set up a ladder for the oncoming season.

Leading the top players on the squad are three boys who have become quite famous around Wilmington golf courses for their low net scores and many trophies which they have won in local tournaments. Each of them has been playing golf since he was old enough to swing a golf club, and they have played in all types of weather and seasons.

Scores In 70's

Ricky Berman, Jack Harrell, and Will Gemmell are the three boys who will make up the backbone of the team this year. Both Berman and Harrell are consistently shooting around 75, while Gemmell, who hasn't played too much golf this year, is getting back into the golf groove with a 79 average.

Four other Wilmington College golfers: Bill Cuniff, Dickie Bessinger (captain of team), Jack Dunn, and Scott MacKinnon have been shooting low 80's and are determined to make this year's golf team the best yet.

Practice Daily

The boys are now able to practice seven days a week at Municipal Golf Course. The week-end practice makes it more convenient for the college golfers, because they were only able to play at Pine Valley Golf Course on week days. Because of their studies, the boys didn't have too much time for practice during the week.

All of the home games will be played at Municipal Golf Course. The golf team will travel with the Seahawk baseball team this spring when they have out-of-town games. So far about 15 matches have been arranged for the golf team, including matches with many freshmen teams of some of the big four colleges throughout the state.

The Wilmington College golfers also hope that they might get a chance to attend the National Invitational Tournament for high school and college golf teams in Odessa, Texas, this year, and feel that they will stand a good chance if they have a winning season.

REGISTRATION CHANGES; 500 STUDENTS RESPOND TO SPRING QUARTER

Registration day began quietly but reached its hectic climax during the midday hours. The library was filled to near capacity as students gathered here to fill out the long registration forms.

Spring pre-registration procedure was somewhat different from the two previous registration periods. Students carried cards with course and name of student written on them to each instructor prior to registering.

All students who did not register March 2 were required to pay a late registration fee of five dollars. Late registration continued until Wednesday, March 8.

Sports Outlook

By GREG MASSEY

The Wilmington College Seahawks swept the Virginia-Carolina Junior Basketball Conference this year without a single conference loss. This was not surprising to most of the Seahawk followers because they immediately recognized the great potential of the team at the beginning of the basketball season.

In fact, the Hawks lost only three games during their regular season play. All of their losses were to freshmen teams of four-year colleges, and even then, the Hawks played level-headed ball and lost by only the slimmest margins.

Hawks Win Conference eCrown

The game at Louisville, in which the Hawks won the Conference Crown 84-63, over Louisville, was attended by only a small crowd of Wilmington College students, but their support for the Seahawks staunchly stood out among the 300 Louisville supporters. The hometown crowd cheered and yelled the Hawks to victory, especially when the going got rough for the Seahawks late in the first half of the tilt. True school spirit could be seen in this handful of Wilmington College students, and we wish that more people could have been at the game from Wilmington. Mary Henderson, the lone cheerleader from Wilmington College at the championship game, deserves a lot of credit for drafting two Charlotte College cheerleaders to help lead the Seahawk rooters.

Gene Bogash

When the game was over and the announcer finished giving the awards to the different participating teams, everyone waited eagerly for the most valuable player award. But the Seahawk fans from Wilmington had no doubts as to whom the award would be given—it had to be Gene Bogash. They were right. He won the award by a unanimous vote by all the coaches.

In that final championship game, Bogash paced the Hawks in all departments. He was a regular terror under the backboards and grabbed down 22 rebounds. He also sparked the Hawks with 29 points.

Bogash was not having a real hot night in that particular game; he has led the Wilmington College cagers most of the season in rebounding and scoring. He averaged 18 points and 12.4 rebounds per contest in regular season play.

Another remarkable quality of Gene Bogash is his calmness on the ball court. During the season when the Seahawks fell behind in games, he continually spurred them on to victory. Never once did we see him lose his temper in a ball game, even though some of the games got pretty rough. This is another attribute of a great ball player—one which few ball players and even coaches have. So our hats are off to a fine sportsman, and all of us are eagerly looking forward to his play next year.

We want to take time to express our appreciation for all of the Seahawks basketball players who helped make a winning team this year. The boys who helped make the talented Wilmington College squad this year were Mike Hebron, Phil Stevenson, Bill Haywood, Edens, Jim Evans, Bogash, Don Marshal, Thiry, Walter Jones, Marshal Hamilton, Harry Buzzell, Bill Henderson, Dave Miller, Gary Hedrick, and Jim McCurdy.

Tennis and Golf

Coach Walter Biggs is busy trying to get the tennis team organized for spring matches. He reports that six boys have expressed that they want to play on the squad, and all of them have been practicing individually. Mr. Biggs is still trying to work out a schedule and is trying to find a location for the home tennis games.

The boys on the golf team wish to thank the Pine Valley Golf Course for letting them practice free during the week this year. Frank Allen, coach for the team, feels that the club has been very generous in letting the team practice at Pine Valley.

Hawk's Baseball Season Opens With Short Drill In February

The Wilmington College Baseball team opened its practice in February at the ball park at Thirtieth and Ann Streets in hot 85-degree weather.

The following day the Hawks met in Brogden Hall for a short work-out and have been practicing daily.

But the Seahawk baseball team didn't begin full practice until Coach Brooks finished coaching his basketball team in the playoffs with North Greenville, S. C.

Returning to the Seahawk roster this season are veterans Dave Miller, shortstop, and Bill Haywood and Lou Howard, both top pitchers for last year's national champions. The Seahawk baseball squad also has some promising newcomers this season.

Presently Coach Brooks is working on a 13-acre tract of land behind Wilmington College for an athletic field. Although the field was started last fall, progress has been slow because of bad weather conditions and lack of appropriate funds.

The baseball diamond will be completed for use this year. Later a track course and tennis courts will be constructed.

Marine Biology Course Attracts Nature Lovers, Beachcombers

Beachcombers, nature lovers, spring fever types; here's your chance! You're invited to enroll in one of the most novel and excitingly different courses ever offered at Wilmington College.

The place: Wrightsville Beach. Time: Friday afternoons or Saturday mornings. Attire: Worn tennis shoes, snug sweater, and some old but durable pants for ocean wading. Destination: Ocean, sea-shore, and sound. Course: Marine Biology.

Biggs, Allen Instruct

Waiting for the small group which has taken advantage of this course on the first balmy morn of lab session will be the two co-sponsors, Frank Allen and Walter Biggs. (The latter instructor recently took a Marine Biology course at Duke University.) Both, having relinquished their conventional classroom attire for more casual clothing, add to the informality of the subject on hand.

A typical scene might be a scattered group ambling along the shoreline gathering, analyzing, and studying various organisms washed up to the shore. Or perhaps they are learning more of the chemical and physical factors (temperature, light, pressure, currents, salinity) of the ocean. Whatever the case, the environment and the constant vitality keeps this class wide awake.

Special Gear Needed

Special marine equipment has been ordered specifically for this group for such purposes as testing the salinity of the sea water and collecting microscopic life in the ocean.

The marine organisms studied will be divided into three groups — benthos, nekton, and plankton — but will deal with generally with those organisms abundant on our coast. Such organisms as seaweed, snails, crabs, worms, starfish, sand dollars, shellfish, and squid will be relative to discussion.

There are several reasons why students should and are taking advantage of such a course. Marine Biology is fast becoming an increasingly important field. Marine biological stations are situated all over the world and are invariably established near seashores where living plants and animals can be readily collected for lab study.

Need For Understanding

With the ever increasing population of the world, the inhabitants may find themselves depending more and more on the ocean for a greater percentage of their food supply.

There should be a better understanding of the vast ocean which covers over 71 per cent of the earth's surface and the life within. And finally, Wilmington College students have a definite need and advantage for taking such a course because of the relatively short distances from the beaches.

If Marine Biology proves as successful as it sounds interesting, there should be a full class next spring.

Anne West, Martha Parker, and Ed Mauney give a "presentably presented" performance in comedy farce, "Family Affair."

Hale Receives Praise In "Family Affair" Role

By BETH FINEBERG

"A Family Affair" can be easily summed up in a single phrase — presentably presented. A good deal of mixed praise and blame can be intermingled in its evaluation.

The gay '90 comedy is a good farce of the period, but we question its performance on the limited extent of stage. The comedy in many respects was broad, and the action of the players was at times much hampered by the small area in which to move. Doug W. Swink, however, did a fine job of direction despite this drawback.

Costumes Good

One of the most ably handled aspects of the play was costuming. All costumes radiated authenticity and contributed much to atmosphere and credibility.

A handicap well apparent was the inexperience of the actors to which can be attributed many painful breaks in the sustenance of mood. To this lack is owing the places in which timing, body expression, and action went sadly awry. These flaws are completely understandable in college actors; the surprising fact is that in a few instances inexperience was triumphed over.

Best Performer

Without a doubt, Susan Hale gave the best performance. She played a skittish coquette of an old lady who was out to get a man. Miss Hale made the best stab at leaving self behind and lacing another personality in its stead. Her excellent timing, skillfully managed exits and entrances, and stage presence were a refreshing spectacle.

Martha Packer played a colored mammy with a bang during her short duration on stage. Anne West gave a nice, but inconsistent, interpretation. Doug Hunt projected personality well, but lost control of the character by a melodramatic fit of overacting. Ed Mauney's performance and that of Oliver Vestal had an equal number of good and bad points.

The play, as a whole, gave a worthwhile addition to the fund of the players' experience and was a pleasant interlude for the audience.

Students Respond Differently To Glenn's Public Recognition

The statement has been made that Lt. Col. John Glenn has been sold like a bar of soap. What is your opinion?

Henry Morgan: Yes, I strongly believe this because his name has been put before the eyes and ears of the American public and the world for the past couple of weeks now since his orbital trip. It was wonderful, but new and great things have happened since and therefore will happen again. I think his name should be dropped from the news and the more important items put in his place.

Jay Fisher: Yes, I'm sick of hearing about it. He is becoming more of an idol than an astronaut.

Will Gemmell: No, I don't. Just think how many chances he was taking. The rocket was fueled by liquid oxygen, a very dangerous and touchy fuel. Anything could go wrong. There was the chance of never seeing his family again. Sure, he's being commercialized, and he deserves to be.

Barbara Ann Hixon: Yes, I don't think there was any danger in his going up or they would not have sent him. Ronald Lee: No, I don't. He's not being as commercialized as the Soviet Cosmonauts. They were even sent to foreign countries as communist salesmen.

John Galloway: Yes. It was all right to put him in the limelight, but they have carried it too far. However, his glamor could encourage others to join in the space race.

David King: Not exactly. The rest of the world has to look up to us. The two before him should have gotten more praise; they seem to always be sitting on the sidelines.

Jerry Eason: Yes. They are taking off all my favorite programs, like "The Edge of Night."

Mary Henderson: I think the American public tends to idolize a person who has done a feat such as he, but I also think he should be recognized for what he did because it was such an important event in American history.

Barbara Fulford: I think he's being too publicized. The man is becoming more important than what he did.

Nancy Bradshaw: In all of his speeches, he's been so humble. If he is, he doesn't realize it.

Evelyn Adkins: No. What he did is something all America should be proud of, and something we have worked for a long time.

Mike Barton: You can't interview the launch itself; you have to interview the main representative. It's the only way.

Campus Radio Sponsors Friday Night Programs; Recreation Night Features Award Winning Movies

WILC, Student Broadcasting Station, has originated and sponsored a special "Recreation Night" for the Wilmington College students.

According to Frank Rogers, "Recreation Night" was designed to give students something to do over the week-ends.

Exactly what does this once a week event feature? First, there will be first rate movies shown every alternate Friday night. When the movies aren't shown, some other, special entertainment like a combo will be scheduled for the students' enjoyment. And invariably chess and checkerboards will be available and records will be played from the student radio station for those who want to dance. There will also be a concession stand where candy, drinks, and even popcorn will be sold.

Non-profit Project

Because it costs the radio station to rent the film, each student will be required to pay $.25 per night. Incidentally, this is not a profit-making project.

Last Friday night Pete Kelly's Blues, starring Jack Webb, Janet Leigh, and Peggy Lee was shown in the Student Services Building.

On next Friday night, "The Court Martial of Billy Mitchell" will be shown. It was directed by Otto Preminger and will star Gary Cooper, and Ralph Belamy. This is a factual, dramatic account of the stormy career of General Billy Mitchell who risked disgrace and dishonor to show to the public the inadequacy of the nation's rudimentary air force in the 1920's.

Varied Movie Types

"Rebel Without A Cause" with Jimmy Dean, Natalie Wood, Sal Mineo, and Jim Backus will be featured the alternate Friday night. It is about a juvenile delinquent in search of love and understanding.

The final movie, "The Long, Long, Trailer," is a hilarious comedy of two newlyweds who set out on their honeymoon in a three-ton trailer. Everything seems to go wrong for the two stars, Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz.

All of the movies are in color and will be followed by a cartoon. Dress is strictly informal and stags are allowed. "Everybody" at the College is urged to take advantage of "Recreation Night" and unless support is given it, the Station will be forced to discontinue their project.

Drama Organization Invites College Group

Wilmington College Theatre has been invited by the Carolina Dramatic Association to participate in their 40th anniversary celebration in Chapel Hill on April 13.

The College group will present a play of historical and literary significance, "The Prince of Parthia" written by Thomas Godfrey.

Godfrey wrote the play while he was residing in Wilmington, and is credited with being the first play written by an American to be performed in this country by a professional company of actors.

The five-act play was under the adaptation of students, Martha Parker and Tommy Landen, and will be presented in a 45-minute time period.

The selected cast is as follows: Arsaces, Robert Autry; Vardanes, Tommy Landen; Gotarzes, Ed Mauney; Barzaphernes, Dale Stevens; Lysias, Ronald Lee; Phraates, David Stone; Thermusa, the queen, Anne West; Evanthe, beloved by Arsaces, Susan Hale; and Cleone, her Concubine, Beth Fineberg.

The tragedy involves a power struggle among the characters Thermusa, Vardanes, and Lycias who have already killed the king

Wilmington College Students Participate In Many Phases of Festive Celebration

By SONDRA WILSON

Wilmington College will be swept into the exciting and wonderful whirl of events during Azalea Festival time and will be represented in almost every phase of festivity.

Parade, pageant, dances—you name it—Wilmington College will be there. And the time is here.

Today will start off with a bang as 15 of the top colleges and universities of North Carolina send their lovely array of beauty queens for participation in the Azalea celebration. Dean Marshall Crews, committee chairman of the Queen's Court Division of the Azalea Festival Committee, has been responsible for inviting the various colleges to send their queens, for selecting escorts, and chaperones, and for all other details concerning this court.

Harriss WC Queen

Peggy Ann Harriss will represent Wilmington College and will take her place on the specially designed float for the Queen's Court beside Karen Tanke of Duke University; Agnes Smith of Salem College; Susan Pinyoun of Peace College; Jean Spears of the University of North Carolina; Barbara Ann Walkir of Lenoir-Rhyne College; Jean Brower of Greensboro College; Mary LeVan Collins of St. Andrews College; Marsha Bumpass of Woman's College; Catherine Shesso of East Carolina College; Alicia Lee of Queen's College; Gwen Cooper of Meredith College; Margaret Weston of Methodist College; Gail Robertson, Rhododendron Queen; and Toni Holhouser, Apple Blossom Queen.

Male students selected from the College to act as escorts for the various May Queens will be Ben Graham, Teddy Graham, Larry Cheek, Terry Horton, Stanley Winborn, and David Williams.

These 15 Misses will be kept busy enjoying tours, luncheons, dances and making appearances at the Queen's Coronation on Friday and Saturday nights.

Dance On Campus

From 11:00 p.m. to 2:00 a.m. the Student Service Building will be gaily illuminated and decorated for the special dance held in honor of the Queen's Court. Because the Azalea Festival Committee is paying for this function, the number of invites had to be limited to the Student Council and the May Court. At midnight, breakfast will be served to the guests. Entertainment will be furnished by the "Continental."

Early Saturday morning will find the streets of Wilmington vigorously alive and anxiously awaiting the grand parade of celebrities, bands, marching units, and floats.

Freshman May Attendants, Millie Stone and Sondra Wilson and Sophomore May attendants, Jane Malpass and Dian Gritski will ride the Seacrest float and will match the red and white color scheme wearing white formal gowns and carrying red bouquets of flowers.

Landen Designs Float

Among the long line of impressive floats will be Wilmington College's own. Tommy Landen was in charge of designing this float and the Cline Float Manufacturing Company in Newton, N. C., is making it.

Arranged in four different levels, the first level of the float will symbolize the Fine Arts and the Humanities, the second level sciences, the third level engineering, and the fourth level will consist of two students contemporarily dressed and signifying the typical well-rounded college student. Each will be holding a streamer going down to the individual levels.

Students to represent the College on the float were selected by the designer and will be Charlotte Taylor, Bonnie Raines, Jo-Ann Legwin, Oliver Vestal, Ed Mauney, and Tommy Taylor.

Faculty Representatives

The College will also be represented by faculty members, Doug Swink and Gerold Rossetol. Mr. Swink is in charge of the Queen's Coronation and Mr. Rossetol and his wife will act as chaperons for the Queen's Court and will stay at the Cape Fear Hotel during the Festival Week-end.

These illustrative events with many, many more (like the Teen-Age Princess Ball, Fire Works at Legion Stadium, and the Street Dance, "and parties") should highlight a wonderful week-end!

Judges Solemn After Shattering Verdict!

Prince of Parthia cast includes Doug W. Swink, Ronald Lee, Martha Parker, Doug Carmichael, Sandy Carr, Susan Hale, and Tommy Landen.

Question Arises Again

Once again the question of an honor system at Wilmington College is arising. Will it accomplish its decided goal? Is it the right thing for Wilmington College?

There seems to be a concern expressed in national magazines and newspapers over cheating in colleges, so it might be well to consider what could be done about our situation here.

A resolution was passed last year by the Student Council: A Resolution Urging the Use of a Pledge of Honor. The program hasn't continued into this year, and there is no indication that cheating has ceased at Wilmington College either.

It may be a fact that cheating is an individual problem and that colleges have no business even attempting to control it; but if the objectives of the College as announced in the catalogue mean anything, it is about time that some sort of an honor system be drafted either by the Student Council or the administration.

There are still many jobs which require a high degree of integrity. Cheating on some jobs could be of very serious, long-range consequences to the individual. If college is really a preparation for citizenship, certainly a stand should be taken and a uniform policy established.

At present, the instructors are the sole controlling agents as far as cheating is concerned. Many are quite concerned with the problem, and it is unfair that they should have to worry about this. Methods of control vary a great deal, from taking interval in the classroom on test day; to covering the answers as you write. Some instructors design quizzes that are cheatproof, but only certain subjects lend themselves to this approach. At any rate, the amount and type of control vary a great deal from one instructor to the next.

There are also current newspapers from colleges and universities in this state indicating a deep concern over the honor problem. Carolina and State have long had a comprehensive honor system, but one collegiate wag wrote that the faculty had the honor while the students had the system.

While these schools are considering the effectiveness of their honor codes, and even considering revision, it might be well that we here at Wilmington College consider getting one. Certainly a code could reduce what cheating is going on.

A code to be effective must be agreed upon by the student when he applies for enrollment. An effective code should provide for judiciary machinery to try cases. Also, students should be honor bound to report cheating observed.

Many advantages to the serious student come with an honor system. Certainly it is more conducive to concentration if the instructor leaves the room during the course of an examination. The student feels he can relax when not "under the eye."

Under a short trial basis, the honor system will prove itself worthwhile or ineffective.

Easter Season

Masterpieces of Christian art and a brief narrative have often combined their grandeur and simplicity in unfolding a portrait of Christ to you. You alone can add deeply to this revelation of Christ, by learning His message and etching its meaning into your life. This is well expressed in the poem entitled "Hosanna."

A man is dead, yet is He living.
Christians, believe, all honor giving.
Mourn ye no more, Joyful behold
Bright seraphim in their glory untold
In the heavenly regions Hear melodious legions.
Him for ever they bless, Jesus Christ they confess.
Christ, my heart thou enfoldest
Thou my soul ever holdest.
By Thy grace I see Thy face!
Hosanna! Hosanna! Hosanna!
All shall raise, Hosanna, glory, praise! . . .

Minerals Represent Numerous Countries

Ben H. Smith, Jr., civil engineer with the Corps of Engineers of Wilmington, has a display of minerals and gems in Hoggar Hall at the College.

While there are some gems and minerals from North Carolina there are also some from Canada, Brazil, India, Burma, Norway, Switzerland, South West Africa and Australia.

One section is devoted to gem stones of many types, both in cut stones and in the rough gem material. Several pieces of jewelry are also on display to illustrate how some of the gem stones can be mounted for wear.

The many beautiful color and intricate patterns of Mexican agates are shown by slices of the agates which are lighted from the rear.

Some of the crystal forms of minerals on display appear to have been cut and polished by man, but they are exactly as formed by nature.

Many of the specimens on display were found by Smith. Others were obtained by trading with other collectors or by using the "silver pick" which to the uninitiated means by purchase.

Smith recommends the hobby as one that can be enjoyed by anyone and can be adapted to a large or small budget.

American Colleges Set Business-Like Examples

A business enterprise crumbles when it fails to produce profit, but American colleges and universities may "prosper" while failing to deliver their unique product. This warning comes from Dr. Boyd R. Keenan, assistant professor of political science at Marshall University, Huntington, W. Va.

The product of the university which distinguishes it from all other institutions, according to Dr. Keenan, is "a free academic climate." Just as profit is the standard for gauging business success, so the university must be measured by its ability to provide a "home for the spirit of learning."

Dr. Keenan contends that the business "board of directors" pattern is properly utilized by universities. But he notes an increasing tendency in America to overlook the vast difference in the desired products of the two types of enterprises. "The conclusion here is that confusion over the proper product of institutions of higher learning could reduce them to appendages of the business community," he declares. However, Dr. Keenan emphasizes that he is opposed to a return to the patterns of the early European universities.

An administrative "Pandora's box" would result if such patterns were reinstated in our complex society, he says. Instead, Dr. Keenan suggests that universities retain their basic board structures while easing the fund-raising and public relations duties of their presidents. Strangely, he states, university chief executives, unlike corporation president, rarely perform those tasks for which they were hired.

"Fund-raisers and promotion experts are far more plentiful than either top corporation executives or college and university presidents," Dr. Keenan maintains. In a time of unprecedented challenges, the need is for "educational evangelism" rather than "educational salesmanship," he concludes.

Everyone is hustling and busting in preparation for the coming Azalea Festival weekend, the Top Twelve included. Yes, believe it or not we're going to appear in the limelight also. The Top Twelve is going to sing at the opening of the Cottage Lane Art Show on Friday, April 6. Wilmington College will be represented along with all the other celebrities.

Tuesday night, March 27, the Top Twelve sang at the Lion's Club Ladies Night. The program consisted of: "In the Still of the Night," "U.S. Air Force Blue," "Melodic Caravan," "Sunday," "Little Brown Jug," "Beyond the Blue Horizon," and "I Am An American."

This about wraps up the Music Department's activities for this month. We hope to be telling you about our coming tour in the next issue. Until then, we hope you all have a big Azalea Festival weekend.

by Anne West

The literary world has been noticeably stirred this past month by a young man from North Carolina and his very brief and deceptively simple first novel. In A Long and Happy Life, Reynolds Price has developed from a simple story in limited surroundings a vivid piece of fiction which sticks to your mind long after the scant two hundred pages have been read.

Price's heroine, Rosacoke Mustian, suddenly faces her future and asks herself the question: What in this world does she have, that she can reach out to and touch, that will bring her a happy life? Just as this question reaches the fringe of an answer Mr. Price chooses to end the book.

This unresolved ending is enough to worry most readers. But the genius of the book is in more clanging question. For instance: what in heavens name are two people with the names of Wesley Beavers and Rosacoke Mustian doing as the main characters of a serious novel?

And then there is the book's symbolism to brood over. The obvious symbolism is handled with a flair for imagery that one may safely say will be the cornerstone of Mr. Price's later style.

The animals and the Carolina land work their way into Rosacoke's mind, actions, and into her words. No one will need to look very far to find the deer in the bread of the story. But what about Mr. Isaac's spring? What about Mr. Isaac himself? Are they symbols? They are symbols? They are certainly something more than concrete reality to Rosacoke.

It will be interesting to watch Mr. Price's work for the answer to these questions and to the question of Reynolds Price's merit as an author. We strongly feel that the delicacy created in A Long and Happy Life can only be enhanced by the future work of this talented young North Carolinian.

universities and little theatres in North and South Carolina and Virginia. These presentations represent various phases of the growth in this part of the United States.

Representatives Talk Future Plans

Representatives of Wilmington College, who attended a Community College meeting in Charlotte, March 27, reported they were "very much encouraged" with the prospect of the College attaining four-year status.

Present at the meeting were members of a sub-committee of the Governor's Commission on Education Beyond the High School Level.

The sub-committee's purpose is to make recommendations on what new community colleges should be founded and where, and to decide which of the present community colleges should be expanded to four-year institutions.

Wilmington College based its campaign to become a four-year college on a 14-page brief submitted by Dr. William M. Randall, president, prior to the meeting. In this brief the need for a senior college here was pointed out.

It was pointed out that the college would continue to draw the largest number of its students from an area within commuting distance, so that the large cost of dormitories and other facilities for resident students would be nominal.

The new college would continue to offer essentially all that it is offering at the junior college level.

Student Body Elects First Judicial Council

The first election held under the new voting system elected the Judiciary Council on Friday and Monday, March 17 and 20. The members of the Council are Kaye Wells, Larry Cheek, Grady Connor, Robert Brinkley, Joe Johnsons, and Oliver Vestel.

According to Oliver Vestel, the main function of the Council will be to act as judicial reviewers on traffic violations. However, they will also try cases concerning charges of misconduct.

Jim Hudgens, Student Council president, states that the Judiciary Council will be a branch of the Student Council and not a separate organ of the student government.

The new system of elections called for nomination by petition by ten petitioners. This differs from the old system as only one signer was required to nominate under the old system. James Cotton, elections chairman, stated that this system eliminates "joke" nominations as well as promoting student interests in elections.

Hawks Score 10-4 Win Over Williams College

By Richard Douthwaite

The Wilmington College Seahawks exploded for a nine-run sixth inning to triumph over Williams Junior College of Williamston, Mass., 10-4, at Brook's Field, March 29.

In the bottom of the sixth inning, Dave Miller and Bob Stevenson walked. Jerry Smith then scored Miller on an error. Perry Burchette connected with a single to center field, scoring Stevenson. Wayne Taylor hit a double, bringing home Smith. After Steve Coley walked, lefty Lou Howard approached the batter's box with the bases loaded. Howard hit into a fielder's choice, but scored another runner. The next batters, Lawrence Keith and Sterling Coward, singled; driving in three more runs. At the top of the batting order again, Miller walked, followed by two sacrifice outs by Stevenson and Smith for the final two runs of the inning.

In the top of the sixth inning, Williams College took a 4-1 lead, when Lou Howard, who took over the pitching chores from Bill Hayward, walked two players and gave up a single and a double for four runs.

The Seahawks scored their first run early in the bottom of the fourth inning, when Smith hit into a fielder's choice to score Stevenson, who got a base knock to left field.

Leading hitters for the Seahawks were Keith, Burchette, and Coward.

Williams College made numerous errors throughout the contest.

Seahawks Crush Weber College

In their second game of the National Junior College Basketball Tournament held March 22, the Wilmington College Seahawks crushed the Weber College Wildcats, 78-65, to advance in tournament play.

During the first half of play, the score was tied numerous times, but with two minutes left in the first half, the Hawks grabbed the lead for good when Larry Edens hit a jump shot to give Wilmington a 34-33 lead.

At halftime, the Seahawks had stretched their lead to seven points, 40-33, and midway in the final period, the Hawks held a 57-49 spread in their favor. The Wildcats of Ogden, Utah, managed to close the gap to within three points at 57-54.

At this point in the contest, Gene Bogash and Al Thiry began to find the basket for the Seahawks, and in a brief five minute scoring spree, these two players hit 12 markers, while Weber College was held to four. From then onward in the tilt, the Seahawks ran away with the contest until the final buzzer.

In the contest Bogash emerged as high scorer with 33 markers. He was followed by forward, Thiry, who tossed in 23 points.

Sports Outlook

By GREG MASSEY

Early Monday morning, March 19, a small group of fans and parents were on hand to watch the Wilmington College Basketball team and their coach, Bill Brooks, leave the New Hanover County Airport by plane to play in the National Junior College Tournament in Hutchinson, Kansas.

Although the Seahawks didn't bring back the championship crown, the Hawks impressed many spectators and coaches by their well-disciplined play.

Wilmington College's star basketball center, Gene Bogash, was named to the All-Tournament team along with nine other players.

In the three Seahawk games in the national tournament, Bogash scored a total of 85 points.

Bogash was also named to the second string All-American Junior College basketball team. This is quite an honor for the local cager, and all of us should really be proud of "Bogie."

A Real Heart-breaker

In their first contest the Seahawks lost what could be called a heart-breaker to Trinidad College, 73-72. With less than a minute left in the contest, the Seahawks appeared to have the game wrapped up, but a technical foul and loss of ball possession quickly changed things, and a disheartened Wilmington College team left the court.

But the Seahawks were not to be counted out of the tournament. In fact the very next contest the following day, the Seahawks bounced back into action and completely thrashed the Weber College Wildcats, 78-65.

From that contest, the Wilmington College squad met Bethany Lutheran Junior College. But this much taller team played exceptionally good ball and dominated the backboards, while handing the Hawks a 85-67 defeat and an elimination from the tournament. In this game the Seahawks led during the first half of play, but couldn't manage to hold on in the second period.

Baseball

The Wilmington College Baseball season officially opened March 26, when the team played the University of North Carolina Freshman squad at Chapel Hill.

Earlier this month the Seahawks played exhibition games with the Camp Lejeune Marines, and split a pair of games with them. In the first contest the Seahawks won 3-2, but in the second tilt, the Hawks were blanked 8-0.

The Seahawks baseball squad lost to the Carolina Freshmen, 10-8 in an error-filled ball game.

First Home Game

The Hawks played its first home game on new Brook's Field at Wilmington College, March 28, and managed to beat Williams Junior College, from Massachusetts, 8-1.

This contest which started in the afternoon was attended by only about forty college students, but the Hawks made a fine showing for the fans. Sound hitting by Lawrence Keith and Sterling Coward highlighted the easy win for the Seahawks.

Even Coach Brooks was shaken up by the fine play of the Hawks. At one point in the contest he jumped from his bench and said, "Where's Flea (Sterling Coward)?" One fan yelled, "He's on third!"

Golf Notes

The Wilmington College Golf Team will begin play when they opened with Louisburg this afternoon. Last week the Azalea Golf Tournament kept the team from holding any matches.

Bethany College Eliminates WC

Bethany Lutheran Junior College of Mankato, Minn., staged a hot second half spree to come from behind in the contest to eliminate the Wilmington College Seahawks, 85-67, in the National Junior College Tournament, March 23.

At the half the Seahawks, paced by center Gene Bogash with 18 big points, held a five-point spread at 38-33. But the second half was mostly an up hill fight for the Seahawks, who were trying to grab back their lost lead.

With a little more than 14 minutes remaining in the all-important contest for the Seahawks, the Bethany five found the basket and made good use of numerous Seahawk mistakes.

This 18-point defeat was the worst suffered by the Wilmington College team all season; however, Bill Hayward had four personals and Al Thiry fouled out of the contest with about five minutes left. When this happened, the team placed two men on Bogash, keeping him to only six markers in the second

Golf, Tennis, Baseball Teams Play Louisburg

The Wilmington College baseball, golf, and tennis teams swing into action when the Seahawks entertain the Louisburg Hurricanes here today.

The first tennis match for the Seahawks will start around noon today, when the Hawks open up with conference play.

The matches will be played in various courts, including Robert Strange Courts, and possibly the Cape Fear Country Club tennis court.

Large Team

Walter Biggs reports that this year's team is one of the largest ever. Presently, seven boys and one girl have been practicing for the spring matches. Among those looking forward for play today are Doug Ward, Jimmy Cook, Bill Lanier, Terry Horton, John Eakins, Tommy Gerock, Ben Graham, and Vivian Harris.

So far this season the netters have been practicing off and on at the tennis courts at Ninth and Ann Streets near New Hanover High School.

Last season the Wilmington College Tennis team ended up with a 2-6 record. This year the Hawks will be seeking revenge today for the past losses.

Hopes For Good Year

The Wilmington College golfers, paced by Jack Harrell, Ricky Berman, Bill Cunliff, Will Gemmell, Jack Dunn, Dickie Bessinger, and Scott McKinnon, will be trying to start the golf season off with a bang today at Municipal Golf Course. The Seahawks, who lost all but one game last season, will try to better that record this season with some low hole totals.

This will be the first game of the year for the golf squad, and is a conference match.

Last year Frank Allen's team only had four golfers to play matches. Returning this season for the divit-diggers will be Jack Dunn and Scott McKinnon.

Last spring the golf team played only eight games, but all of the games were close, one or two with only a half-point margin difference.

Opening up with their fifth game of the season today, the Wilmington College Seahawk baseball squad will be carrying a 2-2 pre-season record with them against the Louisburg Hurricanes.

The Hawks baseball team paced the Virginia-Carolina Conference last season with heavy hitting and pitching.

But it was last May 2 that the Seahawks dropped their second conference game, this one to the Louisburg Hurricanes, 11-4. In an earlier contest last season the Hawks shutout the Hurricanes 5-0.

Lou Howard is expected to open up with the pitching chores against Louisburg today, backed up by pitcher Bill Hayward and Sterling Coward.

Debaters Consider 'The Welfare State'

Thomas Gay, economics instructor, and George Rountree, III, Wilmington lawyer, debated on the pros and cons of a welfare state at the Panmathan meeting last Thursday night in the Student Services Building.

Larry Ingle acted as moderator and approximately 40 persons were present, the largest group thus far this year.

Mr. Rountree began the debate and spoke about 25 minutes. He contended that welfare could be better administered at local level through charity supplemented with state aid. According to Rountree, the present federal welfare programs are unconstitutional because they interfere with the prerogative of the state. He emphasized the necessity of the government's control and assistance for the promotion of the general welfare of society.

Mr. Gay spoke for the next 45 minutes on why he felt that there should be a welfare state. He outlined his debate with the four following points:

1. An all pervasive government is inevitable in a dynamic society.
2. A big government is necessary in such a complex society as we have today.
3. The growth of American economy up to the present time is largely the result of governmental action.
4. The General Welfare of our society can only progress under a mixture of private enterprise and governmental control.

Local Art Department Displays Variety Of Creative Exhibits Here

From Christmas cards to artifacts—the student body has had an opportunity to view many art exhibits, either by close examination or by a quick glance during class changes.

Art students under the direction of Claude Howell have presented in the display cases of Howard Hall numerous facets of the world of art. Seaweed and coral, seashells of the North Carolina coast, original Christmas cards, artifacts from Old Brunswick, and old Valentines were among the earliest presentations. All of these were local exhibits.

Presents Graphics

The department later presented graphics by modern masters. This was the first imported art display. Recently set up in the display cases are the works of James Walker of Flint, Mich. All of these exhibits are serigraphs.

A collection of gems and minerals, Japanese ceramics and a number of paintings by Mr. Howell himself round out the impressive list of displays.

Art activities have not alone been limited to art presentations. Students are now actively engaged in illustrating With Pen In Hand, annual magazine published by the Pen Pushers Club.

Public Speaking Pupils Conduct Tour Arama

Wilmington College was the scene of a Tour Arama of a group of Wilmingtonians interested in learning more about their city last week.

Advantageously, the tour was planned before the Azalea Festival so that the citizens of the city could more adequately and accurately inform the Azalea tourists of questions they might have concerning the city.

Miss Morton's public speaking classes acted as guides for the morning and afternoon groups. The local tourists were divided into even smaller groups, each group having a student speaker.

Tour Chairmen, Terry Horton and Louise Town, planned the itinerary.

Commenting on the activity of his department, Mr. Howell expressed his opinion that Wilmington College should serve as the center for arts in Wilmington and the surrounding region as well. "Our college," said Mr. Howell, "should and can do a great deal artistically for the community."

With this purpose in mind, said the noted artist, new courses in art will be initiated in the near future. These courses will include ceramics, weaving, and possibly graphics.

Mr. Howell emphasized that art should not be narrowed only to those who can draw or paint. "Everyone should be aware of art. We have many painters in the United States but we do not have an educated public. The level of appreciation in the South, and particularly in Wilmington, is very low."

State Produces Artists

North Carolina as a region, says Mr. Howell, produces many good artists, although none of world-wide fame. Moreover, interest in art is rapidly increasing, "especially in the piedmont region of our state."

To those who wish to view at first hand works by the masters, Mr. Howell suggests the state museum at Raleigh. This museum is rated among the top 14 art centers in the United States.

Hidden Drama Rages Furiously In Library's Hallowed Halls

A hallowed institution in any center of learning is the library. Here, to the unexperienced eye, scores of serious students ponder over thousands of books in an earnest search for knowledge. But, alas, all is not what meets the eye.

In the first place, there are three different types of people who frequent the library. The first type is the unadmitted trouble-maker. To this individual the library is a place to catch up on all the gossip, renew old acquaintances, and generally have a high old time.

Opposite Extreme

At the opposite extreme is the book worm. To him the library is some sort of sacred cow, and any unnecessary word uttered within its walls is total blasphemy.

The third and by far largest group stands undecided between the two opposing forces. Duty tells them to join the book worms, but other demonic voices urge them to fall in with the rabble-rousers. As a result they remain in the middle and receive the scorn of both sides.

Police Action

Now a new force enters the scene. Library officials join the battle and lend all their assistance to the champions of silence. Patrolling the tables at frequent intervals, they succeed in establishing a brief reign of terror over all.

But these tactics have unexpected results. Studiers, having grown used to the monotonous hum of chatter, are completely upset by the unnerving, eerie silence that follows.

Somehow the talkers always seem to emerge the victors in every contest. The token resistance put before them is easily smashed, and the library returns to its characteristic chaotic hubbub.

College Receives Gift For Building Fund

A gift of $500 to Wilmington College was announced March 26, by Dr. William Randall, president.

The gift was made by Riegelwood Community Foundation and will be added to the building fund, Dr. Randall said.

WC Students Sound Off; Suggest Festival Changes

What is wrong with the Azalea Festival? A recent survey reveals that students have numerous complaints and suggestions to make.

Anne West aimed her criticism at the climax event of the festival. Said Anne: "To me the parade is the highlight of the festival, and I certainly think more time and effort should go into its preparation. The obvious thing that comes to mind is the tawdriness of the floats. They are uncolorful, unappealing, and unimaginative. The intervals between floats could, I feel, be filled with better entertainment. The long, long procession of bands and clowns seems to get longer, louder, and wearier after about the first million have passed. Why not quality rather than quantity?"

State-wide Concern

Ronald Lee felt that improving the Azalea Festival was a state-wide concern. "I think there is room for improvement," said Ronald, "but since the Azalea Festival has become a state project this year, it will have a better chance of improvement in the years to come. This depends, of course, on whether the people of this state will get behind it and support it."

"It seems," said Sandra Wiloughby, "that there are not enough events in the festival, other than those concerning celebrities, for the visitors to attend. The parade and pageants, however, are very good assets."

Marcia Kallfelz had quite a few original ideas: "I think we should have more prominent celebrities. The people of Wilmington should be allowed to vote for their Queen. We should have more street dances and pattern our festival after the Mardi Gras. Furthermore, we need a twist contest!"

Better Floats

Joe Ashley had a special complaint to make. "They ought to have the weather and the festival coincide," said Joe. "We should have fewer unknown celebrities and more of those well known. The festival should be more a state affair. They also should try to show more originality, especially on the floats."

Said Evelyn Adkins: "I think we should have much better M.C.'s for the Queen's Pageant. We need someone who can talk better than those in the past. Fewer and better name (and more sober) personalities should be asked to come."

Ken Stanley struck a verbal blow for the younger generation. "I think the dance we are having this year will be an improvement. I don't think they are promoting interest in the festival among the teen-agers. All we have is one street dance. They ought to draw up a special schedule of events for teen-agers and college students. We need more exciting events so that people will come and stay, not just see the parade and go home."

Barbara Hixon also had many suggestions for improvement. "The festival gets monotonous after a few years," she stated. "They need to plan ahead of time and get really outstanding celebrities. Since this is a state affair, why not have more cities build floats? This may improve the quality of the floats."

Frosh Receive Scholarships

The following members of next year's Freshman Class have been awarded academic scholarships.

Catherine O'Brien of Wilmington, $112.50; S. T. Tyler of Wilmington, $112.50; Linda Faye Bordeaux of Wilmington, $150.00; Colin Stuart Shaw of Atkinson, $150.00; Linda Kay Owens of Penderlea, $125.00; James Monroe Morgan of Wilmington, $150.00; and Isabelle Sfeferbiak of Wilmington, $112.50.

Also Louise Ambrosiana of Wilmington, $150.00; Julia Ray Norris, of Atkinson, $125.00; Besva Anne Batts of Topsail, $125.00; Ruth Batson of Burgaw, $125.00; Judith Rowena Skipper of Wilmington, $112.50; Norma Horrell of Wilmington, $112.50; and Judith Ann Campbell of Wilmington, $112.50.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE, WILMINGTON, N. C.

September 25, 1962

Dr. Randall Announces New Dean of Students

A large number of students were present last Monday evening for the first Student Council meeting of the school year. Approximately 65 students, officers, and administrators were on hand as Nat Bost, Student Council president, called the meeting to order and urged all present to take part in the Student Council and pass the word that all meetings are open to the entire student body.

Bost also stressed the point that the Student Council needs and must have the co-operation, interest, and backing of the students.

"The purposes of a Student Council are threefold," spoke Dr. William P. Randall, president of Wilmington College. Its job is to have an organized program of activity, to unify the College and weld the students together through student activity; and to place an educational value on all activities by having them well organized and properly supervised. He also suggested that the Student Council must work hard in a judiciary, systematic, and planned way to be successful.

Allen Appointed

The appointment of Franklin H. Allen as Dean of Students was announced to the group by Dr. Randall. As the Dean of Students, Mr. Allen will be in charge of all student activities, and he will make all final decisions in this particular area. In closing, Dr. Randall expressed his confidence in the Student Council in solving any problems connected with student activity.

"It does my heart good to see such a crowd" were the words of Mr. Frank Allen. He expressed the thought that studies are important but not all important, and that real school spirit comes through participation in extra-curricular activities. He stressed the importance of planning ahead for all student activities.

Also addressing the group were the academic dean of the College, Marshall Crews, and Miss Shannon Morton, dean of women.

Kinlaw Heads Election

Acie Kinlaw was appointed to the chairmanship of the Board of Elections by the council president, and the appointment was approved by the elected members of the Student Council. Kinlaw accepted the appointment with the hope that he could fulfill the responsibility bestowed upon him.

Freshman elections will be held during the first three weeks of the Fall quarter, and the method of voting will be by mechanical apparatus.

Cotillion Club Discussed

The dance committee for the College is known as the Cotillion Club. This group is responsible for the dances held at Wilmington College. There was some debate as to whether there should be a few large and well planned dances or a number of small ones. Although a definite decision was not reached, it was generally agreed that any dance held should be

Freshman Nominees Seek Votes Friday

Tonight various members of the freshman class will be notified of their nomination to a class office. These students were chosen today by their classmates. The only requirement a nominee had to fill was that of having at least ten petitioners.

Tomorrow and Thursday these nominees will put up campaign speeches. Each of the nominees will speak at an assembly to be held Friday at 9:30 in the Student Services Building. At this time they will speak to the freshmen regarding their nominations.

The election will be held Oct. 1 and 2. The offices to be filled include: president, vice-president, secretary, two class representatives, and two representatives to serve on the Judicial Committee. The voting machines will be utilized from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Only members of the freshman class will be eligible to vote.

This year the Freshmen Class officers will be in charge of a Freshman Class project. Last year the entire student body took part in a successful project to help influence the voters of New Hanover County to raise the tax five cents on every one hundred dollars assessed property value to help make the college a four year institution.

Freshman Class officers will also be members of the Cotillion Club which will be in charge of college dances.

Acie Kinlaw, head of elections, will be in charge of and will tabulate the votes from the voting machine after election. A representative from the Schoup Voting Machine Company will be on hand to assist Kinlaw.

Already on the ball—new Dean of Students, Franklin H. Allen, talks with two students, Harry Paterson and Bobby Greer.

Wilmington College Gains Six New Faculty Members

Six new persons have been added to the faculty of Wilmington College, making a total of 39 instructors in all for the current year.

Jack Dermid, instructor in the Department of Biological Sciences, came from Raleigh, where he was editor of Wildlife Magazine. The father of one daughter, Mr. Dermid is a lover of the great outdoors, where he spends his free time hunting, fishing, and experimenting with wildlife photography. He admits, "I'm impressed with Wilmington College or I wouldn't be here."

Mrs. Julia Everette, a newcomer to the English Department, graduated from East Carolina with a master's degree in English. Mrs. Everette teaches English 101, and as a mother of two small daughters, finds little time for anything else. Originally from Delco, she commented on the friendliness and eagerness of the students whom she teaches.

Robert Stone, instructor of Western Civilization and American History, is another newcomer to the faculty. He attended the University of North Carolina where he received both his degrees, majoring in European history as an undergraduate and American history as a graduate. A bachelor and originally from South Carolina, he has been living in Raleigh since 1946.

Mrs. Barbara Payne, now teaching Elementary Spanish, graduated from Catawba College with an AB degree, majoring in Spanish and English. She has a sixteen month old son and is originally from this city. Upon being interviewed she remarked, "I am very impressed with the beauty and attractiveness of our buildings and campus, and I find the people here so very friendly."

Mrs. Ruby Knox, shorthand instructor, attended Woman's College and is doing graduate work at East Carolina College where she will receive her master's degree in June. Mrs. Knox lives at Carolina Beach and is the mother of three children.

Mrs. Elizabeth Freeman, assistant librarian, is from Grant. She has an AB degree in Education and a BS degree in Library Science from the University.

Pen Pushers Club Encourages Students To Write Creatively

The first meeting of the Pen Pushers Club was held on September 12 in H-104. During this organizational meeting the Pen Pushers reaffirmed their desire to stimulate creative writing on the campus of Wilmington College.

They determined to hold monthly dinner meetings to discuss the writings of the members. Guest speakers will be invited to these meetings. At the meetings members will hand over their written works to an editorial committee selected from the Pen Pushers. This committee will choose the best contribution and read it to the club for its reaction. Then a general critique will be held.

The Pen Pushers Club desires to begin a membership drive. To those whose interest in creative writing is known, invitations will be sent. Anyone, however, who would like to join the Pen Pushers Club, is encouraged to do so.

Officers will be elected at the next meeting.

Faculty Members Organize Chapter Of National Club

Eleven faculty members of Wilmington College have organized a local chapter of the American Association of University Professors.

Miss Shannon Morton was elected president of the local chapter; Fred Vallianos was named vice-president; and Larry Ingle will serve as secretary of the organization.

The American Association of University Professors is a national organization with a membership of over 50,000. Its purpose is to instill a sense of professional competency and to give voice to members of the teaching profession.

Panmathanian Club Selects Officers

The Wilmington College Panmathanian Society held their first meeting last Thursday night and elected the following officers: Sandy Wright, president; Steve Preston, vice-president; and Robert Price, secretary.

Their aim this year in the meetings will be to discuss timely subjects that could be of interest to all people, not just to college students. Religion, Politics, Art, and most of the subjects that confront modern America will be gone through in the Society meetings.

SRO Theatre Plans Fall Production, Comedy, "Farewell, Farewell Eugene"

"Farewell, Farewell Eugene" will be the fall production of the S.R.O. Theatre. It will be presented November 2 and 3 at 7:30 p.m. in the S.R.O. Theatre of Hoggard Hall.

This warm, laugh-provoking play was written by John Varl with Rodney Ackland. "Farewell, Farewell, Eugene" is set in a basement apartment inhabited by two captivating sisters whose brother Eugene went to Africa in a mad search for diamonds. The plot takes place in Manhattan, in 1915, where sisters Gertrude and Minerva, Gert and Minnie, and the rest of the characters provide the mood of good-humored fun.

Comedy Cast

The cast of the comedy is: Emily Coddington, Gertrude Povis; Rosemary Swisher, Minerva Povis Goody; Ray Oxendine, Mr. Reardon; Marietta Bowers, Flossie Reardon; Barbara McLeod, Peonie Povis; Sam Garner, Chuck Bailly; Martha Parker, Mrs. Reardon; Barbara Brady, Miss Hammon; Sandy Carr, Mr. Davies. Posters are handled by Judie Norris.

The production is under the direction of Doug W. Swink, with assistant director, Sandy Carr.

Production progresses—under the eye of Sandy Carr, assistant director of "Farewell, Farewell, Eugene" as two members of the cast go over their lines.

Editorials

Are You Prepared?

"Now that I'm in college, I had better decide what I'm going to do after I'm out!" This statement typifies the attitudes of most freshmen and many sophomores in our colleges today.

One is awed by the confusion of junior high until he reaches high school. Then there is college with its even more profound state of chaos.

The instigators of this overwhelming chaos are inestimable but I would like to dwell on one, and that is the lack of preparation on the part of college students in making their vocational choices.

Too many of us think of college in fallacious terms of a fourth year of high school—simply another year of doing that which is practically required by today's society—or of a "beginning" step to college.

Ginzberg in his book, Occupational Choice and Approach to a General Theory, cites three periods of choice evident in one's life. There is first a fantasy choice. (What has happened to all of our prospective cowboys and movie stars?). Following this stage is a tentative choice (in which phase most of us are presently) and finally a realistic choice.

Upon entering college, most students have made a provisional vocational choice and have only a vague idea of their future job when they formulate their course of study.

Unfortunate for the student are the outside coercive forces burdening him with "the right" and "the wrong" vocations. Nevertheless, he is equipped with the potential to make his own choice and intelligent enough to follow his inclinations.

One never knows the actual essence of a particular job until he has examined it through the various sources of information and will find that experimentation before hand is always beneficial in that it avoids repeated changes of schedule, extra years of college, or ultimately, an insipid lifetime job unsuitable to his personality.

Paul Givens, associate professor of psychology at South Florida University, believes that finding self-identity or self-discovery is a basic step in selecting a vocation. This is essentially the aim of the Junior College. It endeavors to present a type of setting where students are able to find themselves, to become more aware of their surroundings, and to develop open-mindedness and more independence and self-sufficiency.

Procrastination in selecting one's vocation only reflects insecurity and poor judgment on the part of those who will be the future leaders of the American economy.

Are You Doing Your Part?

The turn-out for the first student council meeting was indicative of a definite social climb for Wilmington College this year; and because enthusiasm is a contagious agent and the necessary factor for any degree of progress, the attendance should be a substantial boost to school spirit.

With the adjustment period of acclimating oneself to a more independent institution coming to a close and with the novelty wearing old, the freshman should be willing to devote more attention to his special part in rousing school spirit. Nor should the sophomore, in remembering his seniority and familiarity with the college, forget his responsibility of getting things underway, so to speak.

Enthusiasm might be fostered through your participation in the student government and its various activities, by your forming specified clubs on campus, and by using your privilege to express your opinions in the newspaper.

If a student is desirous of more college dances, or of new clubs, or of any social innovation, he should use his own resources in their promotion.

Our campus radio station is a result of the unification and enthusiasm of a group of students on campus who shared similar interest and who were industrious enough to convert through to action.

For those of you who do come to college with the intention of social participation (I speak not to those who come expressly for academic reasons, for this is certainly the case with many and the prerogative of all) it is your own fallacy not to satisfy those intentions. I am in complete cohesion with Bovee who implies that "failure establishes only that our determination to succeed was not great enough."

Radical or Conservative?

Neither! Though the trend today seems to be that of designating ourselves as either one or the other, the policy of the Seahawk will be that of neither abnegating nor adhering to radicalism or conservatism but to essay to reach a happy medium. It seems completely rational to "never cut with a knife what you can cut with a spoon."

This year, the Seahawk will attempt to publish its papers in a larger quantity than in previous years. Because you, the students, are our subject matter and because your activities compose the greater percentage of our text, you will directly influence our objective. The more active the student body, the more available will be material for news, features, and editorials; consequently, the stronger the incentive for a larger and more frequent paper.

We intend to give every organization and every event proper coverage being influenced by no one student or group of students and to invariably strive for fairness in every aspect of our publication.

Worthy of comment is a section designed especially for the student—our "Letter to the Editor" section. We vehemently urge you to utilize this column whenever you feel the need to discuss an issue (be it local or national or international) or simply the desire to express a personal opinion.

In conclusion, we would like to remind every student of Wilmington College to do business with those who do business with us. We are, of course, speaking of our gracious advertisers.

Ta, ta, ta, ta (that's fanfare).

This piece of literary ingenuity, which you have before you, has been graced with a new column. Whadda ya' mean "so what!"

This what-ever-it-is is Not a gossip column—we've graduated from Mickey Mouse. It will encompass campus news, a variety of nonsense and humor (?).

Faces from last year may be seen on campus again this fall, also a few from the year before, (and the year before that). For some, this is a four-year college.

The departments of Biology, Chemistry, English, Business, History, Language, and Math at Wilmington College have gained new faculty members this year with its record student enrollment.

Since school has started, the Wrightsville Beach sand crabs will have a deserving rest after three hectic months of beer can dodging.

An essay written by a Harvard graduate and student counselor, Robert U. Jameson, stated that a serious problem faced by many colleges today is a three-way problem: drinking, dating, and driving. This is humorous, but false, I hope.

Let Us Be Lions

RANDY JOHNSON

"Given many lions and few fleas, the lions are in no danger; but when the fleas multiply, how pitiful is the lion's lot." Amedee Ozenfazit (The Foundations of Modern Art.)

We would all tend to consider ourselves lions rather than think our lot that of "M. Puce." But let us also consider what we must do if we are to be lions. The lion is master of all he surveys, and there is dynamism in his natural conclusion.

Man is supposedly master of his worlds, but he has an advantage over the animal—his faculties and potential are greater. He is dared to explore his powers to live more fully, and simultaneously, to fulfill his nature. If he fails to do this through negligence, he abdicates much of the privilege and dignity of being human. He is much less than the man for it. He is, in fact, playing flea.

Freedom is taken for granted, but is its extent realized? Probably everyone will claim his freedom to be unlimited. Predicate this unlimited freedom with unlimited choice and see if there are enough alternatives to live up to that freedom. Doubtless there are, but we must avail ourselves of enough alternatives to make more than a token decision. We must greatly enlarge our consciousness.

Today, human achievement is a fact. The 19th century mind would think we have attained the infinite, but in many respects we are just beginning. If we remain complacent now, we might as well indulge in a little cyanide and possibly assert ourselves with our willful demise.

One is not necessarily educated in the college or university and to have "just a little rub off on you" is no particular honor. Neither is one necessarily educated to prepare for the rest of his life. If his life is held in abeyance for four years, he may bear a somewhat botanical resemblance at the end of that period. An awareness of our position as men is a great step—there is much to do now. Let us exploit our consciousness; let us be lions.

Daughters of American Revolution Society Observe Constitution's 175th Anniversary

The National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution has called upon its members to participate in the observance of CONSTITUTION WEEK — September 17th through 23rd. Residents and merchants are asked to display the Flag of the United States of America all week.

The purpose of the observance of Constitution Week is to recall to the American people the true significance of the events that occurred during the week of September 17-23 in 1787 and to revitalize appreciation of the great heritage which is the Constitution.

Since in the present critical period of this Nation's history, there are advocates of socialism, internationalism, and world governments who would subvert the Constitution and jeopardize the sovereignty of their country, it becomes increasingly important for all loyal citizens to protect this greatest of all documents and to defend it against all threats to its supremacy, to the end that all may continue to enjoy the rights and freedoms guaranteed therein.

College Sets Record; 760 Students Register For Autumn Quarter

Registration for students attending the fall quarter of Wilmington College was held September 6 and 7 in the college library.

A record 760 students registered for the quarter as compared to 682 for the fall quarter last year. There are 549 freshmen, 34 of whom are nurses, and 222 sophomores, 21 of whom are nurses. Nine special students are attending the college.

Students from North Carolina number 727. New Hanover County leads in the enrollment with 464 students, followed by Pender, Columbus, Duplin, and Brunswick Counties, respectively. The total out of state students is 33.

In the near future 23 students are expected to attend the classes held at Fort Fisher.

Coke Party—Martha Jay Staton serves Mr. Doss, Mr. Nelson, and Scott McKinnon, refreshments for the getting acquainted (faculty, freshmen, and upper-classmen) phase of Orientation.

Nancy West and Nat Bost take time out to practice for the most successful, according to the Freshmen and the tremendous turnout, part of Orientation—the dance Thursday night.

FRESHMEN HAVE FESTIVE ORIENTATION

Approximately 400 freshmen met at 10:00 a.m., September 4, in the Student Services Building. Freshmen Orientation gave the newcomers their first glimpse of life at Wilmington College.

Nat Bost, Student Body president, opened the meeting by introducing The Reverend Hunley Elebash of Saint John's Episcopal Church who delivered the invocation.

During the course of the meeting Nat introduced Dr. William M. Randall, president; J. Marshall Crews, dean and director of admissions; Miss Shannon Morton, dean of women; and the heads of some of the various departments.

Also included in the program were speeches by representatives from the social organizations and clubs. These students explained the purpose and activities of their particular club and extended an invitation to the eligible freshmen to join.

Wallace West represented the Circle K Club, a male service organization; and Sammy Wright spoke for the Panmathian Society, a club which explores and delves into various subjects.

Beth Fineberg explained the purposes and objectives of the literary organization, The Pen Pusher's Club.

Sondra Wilson and Martha Jay Staton represented the College publications, the Seahawk and the Fledgling.

Allen Sullivan spoke for the Engineers Club, and Ed Freeman spoke for the Radio Club and Station WILC.

Later in the afternoon, faculty and students gathered in the Student Services Building for an informal coke party. The purpose of the party was to give the freshmen a chance to meet their upperclassmen and learn first-hand of college life.

The following day freshmen re-assembled in the Student Services Building and were divided into groups for guided tours of the campus. After the tours, the freshmen were introduced to and met with their advisors for a brief period during which time the advisors discussed college regulations and procedures in detail.

The initial planning of Orientation activities was made by Dean Marshall Crews, Frank Allen, Sondra Wilson, Nat Bost, and Wallace West.

Beth Fineberg is snapped in action as she speaks to an attentive audience on the Pen Pusher's Club. She is one of the students who gave a pep talk in assembly Tuesday morning.

The conditions were crowded on Thursday morning when A through H's registered. Carol Fladd is used as writing facility for Jene Anderson.

Eagerly awaiting their "problem children" are the advisers, with whom the Freshmen spoke after the personal guide tour Wednesday morning.

Probably one of the busiest men on campus during registration was, comptroller, Rex Willis as he accommodates a "mile long" line of book enthusiasts.

planned well in advance of the event. At a later date the chairman will be selected and approved by the Council members, and the chairman will then select committeemen with whom he feels he can work closely.

Kay Wells, Student Council secretary, and Nancy Lucas, secretary of the Sophomore Class, will serve as co-chairmen of the Telephone Directory Committee. They will be assisted by student volunteers, and it is hoped that the directory will be out before the Thanksgiving holidays.

"Dino" Explains

The final order of business brought forth much discussion from the floor. It concerned the Campus Radio Station and a plan for a fifteen minute daily program on radio station WGNI. Ed Freeman, station manager of WILC campus radio, and Dino Summerlin of station WGNI explained the plan to the group.

The program would be planned by the WILC Radio Club, directed by Summerlin, and pertain to anything connected with Wilmington College. The Student Council finally approved the initial idea and left it up to WILC Radio Club to work on all the details and present this at the next meeting. If it is favorable at this time, the program will go on the air immediately thereafter.

"Dino," WGNI announcer and Wilmington College student, speaks at Student Congress meeting. Ed Freeman, Nat Bost and approximately 60 other students listen.

Freshmen Participants of Orientation Voice Supporting, Dissenting Opinions

"I thought it was fine."

"I really enjoyed it."

"It was very helpful to me."

These and many other comments expressed the feelings of some of the members of the freshman class in regard to this year's orientation program. The majority of the freshmen interviewed felt that either orientation as a whole, or some particular part of it proved very helpful to them by acquainting them with the college, instructors, clubs, and other students.

Barbara Black, a freshman from Wilmington, said, "I think the tours were especially helpful and I received a lot of information in assembly the first morning. However, I think it would have been more beneficial if the club members had waited to speak to us at the coke party. This would have given us an opportunity to think about which organization we would like to join." Faye Barnes, another Wilmingtonian, also felt that the guided tours were helpful.

Jimmy Moseley, also from Wilmington, had this to say: "The tours didn't help me because I had already been out here and seen everything. However, I did enjoy the speeches by the students and instructors by the first morning. They were most helpful." After listening to Jimmy's opinion, Sonny Davis, of Wilmington, expressed his agreement with Jimmy's views.

Among the out-of-town students the following comments were given:

Parris Croom, Beaufort, N. C. — "I thought that the orientation helped everyone to a certain extent, but I don't think it was absolutely necessary."

David Parrish, Richmond, Va. — "I thought it was pretty good — on the whole. The speeches by the club presidents and faculty helped to acquaint me with the college better than the tours. I enjoyed orientation and like Wilmington College very much."

Another Wilmington student, Marion Verzaal, said, "It gave me the opportunity to make new acquaintances early and new old acquaintances. I think the guided tours could've been improved, although the guide was cute." Shirley Bethea also felt the orientation was helpful. When asked why she felt this way, she replied, "Because I encountered some of the 'challenges' of college life."

Other views contributed by the Wilmington students included:

June Gideon — "I thought it was helpful, but I think the activities could have been arranged closer together."

Wilmington College Adds Six Instructors To Present Staff

sity of North Carolina. Part of her job is to assist in the library orientation program in which she instructs thirteen classes. "There is a big future ahead for Wilmington College," she remarked, "and I'm looking forward to seeing it become a four year institution."

Miss Ethel Murray, who has had experience in teaching modern languages, is now instructor in German and French. She has attended Duke University, Columbia University, and the University of North Carolina. "This is one of the nicest places I've ever been and there is a wonderful atmosphere of friendliness among the students and the faculty," she said.

N. Y. Sends W.I.L.C. 2,000 Records Soon

W.I.L.C., The Student Broadcasting Service, recently announced the names of the new announcers for the fall quarter. These announcers were chosen because of their interest, voice quality, and potentiality.

The announcers are as follows: Bert Gornto, Robert Autry, Tony Waddell, Carl Sneed, Randy Coble, Sam L. Garner, Elliot Hughes, and Hugh Paschal.

The radio station, located in the Student Services building, starts its broadcasting day at 8:00 a.m. and signs off at 5:00 p.m. Many varied programs make up the day at W.I.L.C. Among them are "Randy's Record Bar," "This and That," and "Tone." The station has over 300 45's and approximately 100 LP's, and the playing of music most desired by the students is the primary interest of the staff of announcers.

The staff includes station manager, Ed Freeman; secretary and treasurer, Barbara Brady; head announcer, Wally West.

The radio station publishes each month, a calendar of important events which is placed on the bulletin board of the College, is the lost and found department, and now has cards, bridge score tablets, chess, and checker sets for the students to sign out.

In the very near future, a shipment of records is expected from New York containing over 2000 records for the student's listening pleasure. Also, a list will shortly be posted in order that students may request the records that they would like purchased by the station.

Requests are accepted by the announcer or his assistant during all programs during the broadcasting day.

New Additions Delay Return This Quarter Of Corbett, Bellamy

Missing from Wilmington College's faculty this year are Mrs. Heywood Bellamy, French and Spanish instructor, and Dr. Joanne Corbett, English professor, who plan to return later this year.

Delivered to the Bellamy family this past summer was a baby boy and the Corbett family has also received an extra addition, a baby girl.

Similar additions were made to the following faculty members during the past year: Larry Ingle, instructor of American History and Government, is the proud father of a baby boy, as is Thomas Lupton, Math instructor and advisor for the Seahawk. Louis Adeock, Chemistry instructor, and Carl Gay, who teaches Western Civilization and North Carolina History, are just as proud of their baby girls.

College Grants Scholarship Aid In Various Form to Students

Scholarships at Wilmington College come in many types and various amounts. They range in amount from $112.50 to $333.34. A full scholarship, which includes tuition and registration fees is in the amount of $225.00 per year.

The "Seahawk" offers a full scholarship to its editor and this year it was awarded to Sondra Wilson. The "Fledgling" offers a full scholarship to its editor also, and this year it was awarded to Martha Jay Staton.

The work scholarships were awarded to Judy Clark, Harold Sullivan, Julia Ray Norris, Leslie Harrison, Thomas H. Covil, Sara Avery, Gray Bass, Joyce Ann Bennett, Lillie Bloodworth, Kenneth Hansley, Timothy Jordan, Patricia Stiles, Mary Vogels, Wallace West, and Steve Mintz.

The Whitehead scholarships in the amount of $333.34 were awarded to Elizabeth Broadwell and Vivian Ann Harris.

The Spelling Bee scholarships were awarded to Asa D. Ruark, Jo Anna Weaver, Wanda Pope, Faye Sealey, Gloria Baysden, and Mary Blanchard.

Edward Worrell received the Science Fair scholarship. Ray Oxendine and Faye Barnes received the Art Fair scholarships.

The Drama Department awarded scholarships to Martha Parker, Robert Autry, and Wilbur Carr.

Those who received scholarships from the library were Brenda Kay Wells, Judy Matthews, Barbara Fulford, and Rose Williams.

The Roland E. Noblin Scholarship was awarded to Larry Honeycutt.

The Music Scholarships were awarded to Joanne LeGwin, Judy Driggers, Marcia Gardner, Sam Garner, Wayne Robinson, and Carl Sneed.

Greer, Sullivan Plan Work For Engineering Club

To familiarize the engineering students with the different fields of engineering, to help him decide his correct field of this profession, and to help promote school spirit is the purpose of the Engineering Club.

Officers of the club this year are Charles Greer, president; Allen Sullivan, vice president; Richard Douthwaite, secretary; and Harold Sullivan, treasurer.

Membership is open to anyone, preferably engineering students, who maintains an overall C average. However, freshmen are not eligible for membership until after the end of the fall quarter when their grades are available for reference.

Regular meetings are held once a month under the faculty head of Calvin C. Doss and a sponsor is elected to represent the club at all times.

The Engineers were especially active last year in the Homecoming Game and "Open House" for Wilmington College.

Cape Fear Archery Club Organizes In Wilmington

The ancient sport of archery is being revived in the Wilmington area by members of the newly organized Cape Fear Archers. The club's initial meeting was held Wednesday, September 12, at the Community Center in Wilmington. Present at the organizational meeting were 22 amateur archers who expressed strong interest in the formation of such a club in the Wilmington area.

Highlighting the business agenda of the meeting was the election of temporary officers. Bill Price was elected president. The office of vice president will be filled by Larry Sherwood with Robert Marlowe serving as secretary-treasurer. Al Page was named range captain. Bob Bowden and Sam O'Shields of Wilmington College were named to the range committee.

Membership in the Cape Fear Archers is open to men and women having an interest in any phase of archery. Also planned is a junior division with membership opened to boys and girls 16 years old and younger.

The club expects to recruit many Wilmington College students interested in archery. To help stimulate interest in archery by students of Wilmington College, the college has donated a 20-acre tract of land north of the athletic field to the club for the erection of a field archery range. The club has agreed to reduce the dues of college students equivalent to those of junior members.

Meeting Tonight

The next meeting of the Cape Fear Archers will be held tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the Wilmington Community Center.

The history of archery dates back to prehistoric times. Authorities place the bow and arrow as third among the world's great factors for advancement of civilization, with only speech and the use of fire ahead of it.

Sharp Shooters

Many nations have become extremely proficient in the use of the bow and arrow. The Israelites, as we can gather from the Bible, were great archers. So were the Egyptians, Assyrians, Babylonians, Persians, Greeks, Chinese, and Japanese. Japan, in particular, was the land of the rising arrow as well as the rising sun. The bow and arrow gave that country its ancestral early empire, and it is to the records of early Japanese scribes that modern historians go for information about archery dating back to the stone age.

The development of the famed English long bow during the middle ages helped to bring about the disappearance of the knight in shining armor. And, of course, almost everyone is familiar with the legends of William Tell and Robin Hood.

Queen Elizabeth I of England hunted deer in the royal forests and made archery a fashionable court sport. Her Yeomen of the Guard was a crack archery corps.

American History is also interwoven with the story of the bow and arrow. The American Indian was no doubt a skilled marksman, although modern bowyers do not give him the same high rating as other primitive races in the actual manufacture of his implements. Much of his skill as an archer was overshadowed by his expert stalking of game.

Until some time after the Civil War, archery as a sport was hardly known in this country. Then a wave of enthusiasm started rolling from coast to coast, largely through the efforts of the Thompson brothers, Will and Maurice. It is only since 1918, however, that archery has really come into its own with us.

Varsity Report

By HUGH PASHAL

Frank Allen reports that plans for the 1963 edition of the Wilmington College golf team is progressing rapidly. With the return of six experienced golfers in Ricky Berman, Val Edwards, Will Gemmell, Jack Harrell, Mike Hebron, Scott McKinnon, and the addition of another fine golfer from New Hanover High School, Roger Fowler, Mr. Allen expects to have a good season on the links.

As yet the course on which the team will practice and play its matches has not been selected, but this announcement will be forthcoming within the next few days. Mr. Allen states that he is setting up a very challenging schedule for the golfers this year and encourages anyone interested in golf to contact him for further information about the team.

With the basketball season just around the corner, it appears that the Seahawk cagers will have another winning season this year. Coach Bill Brooks reports excellent potential in his new recruits and has four of last year's squad members returning.

Although the basketball schedule is not yet complete, it is known that the Seahawks will open the season December 1, in Chapel Hill against the University of North Carolina Freshmen. Coach Brooks states that he has scheduled games with the freshman teams of The Citadel, Duke, East Carolina College, and North Carolina State as well as the Tarheel Frosh. He also expects to establish games with Charleston College and the University of South Carolina Freshmen.

The Hawks will be up against strong competition in the Virginia-Carolina Conference and some rough Big Four freshman tilts. But with the good combination of height and experience available to him, Coach Brooks should be able to field a strong, talented team from his boys.

All Wilmington College home games will be played in Brogren Hall, next to New Hanover High School on Market Street. Let's make every effort to attend all the Seahawk basketball games this season and support the team wholeheartedly.

Walter Biggs reports that he has several prospective tennis players lined up for next spring, including Doug Ward and Bill Lanier who played for the Seahawks last year. He asks that anyone interested in the tennis squad contact him for further information. We are looking forward to another fine tennis team this year.

The Cape Fear Archers are seeking prospective members. Anyone interested in archery is urged to attend the meeting of the Cape Fear Archers tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the Wilmington Community Center, Second and Orange Streets.

Fall practice for the Hawk baseball team started last Monday with Coach Brooks greeting a host of outstanding prospects vying for the vacancies left by the graduation of many of last year's players. It looks like another talented baseball squad for the Wilmington College Seahawks.

Coach Brooks Hits Trails For Talent

Once again last summer Coach William Brooks made his yearly trek in search of top-notch basketball and baseball prospects for the Wilmington College Seahawks.

This year Coach Brooks concentrated his efforts largely on the two states of North Carolina and Virginia. He enlisted the services of several outstanding basketball prospects from the western part of North Carolina and Virginia. Tommy Cole and Wray Ware were secured from Danville, Va., while James Braxton from Winterville, Larry Porter from Atkinson, and Bill Harris from Hamlet were obtained here in North Carolina. These boys are also expected to be good baseball prospects for the Seahawks.

Coach Brooks also expects to get good service from Lenny Litchenstein, a New Yorker who has expressed his desire to play for the Seahawk basketball squad.

Basketball Outlook Good
With the new recruits and the return of such experienced members of last year's cage team as Gene Bogash, Harry Buzzell, Marshall Hamilton, and Mike Hebron, Coach Brooks looks forward to a fine season from the basketball team.

Wilmington College will again be a member of the Virginia-Carolina Conference also consisting of Charlotte College, Chowan College, and a strong Louisburg College. Coach Brooks is very confident concerning the Seahawks' prospects in the tough Virginia-Carolina loop.

Baseball Team Rebuilds
Turning now to the baseball outlook, Coach Brooks stated that with only two members of last year's fine team back with him this year he faces a big rebuilding task. However, he also said that he has many fine prospects in store for the baseball fans of Wilmington College.

Last summer he secured a host of former New Hanover High School baseball players in the persons of Herb Darden, Eddie Lemmon, Glenn Mills, Bobby Shipp, and Butch Watts. In addition Coach Brooks hopes that Harold Criddle from Elkin, Md., Larry Honeycutt from Raleigh, Whitey Hunsucker from Asheboro, Jackie Smith from Woodruff, S. C., and Bill Stevens also of Asheboro will bolster the Seahawk attack this spring.

Four Boys Back

Returning from last year's team which went to the finals of the National Junior College Tournament are Sterling Coward and Tommy Hall. Coach Brooks also reports that two pitchers, Sam Page and Percy Wood, who, because of transfers, were ineligible to play last year, will be available for duty this spring. Judging from the fine turnout for fall practice which started last Monday, Coach Brooks expects the Seahawk baseball team to be right back in the thick of things when the 1963 baseball season opens.

With the vast amount of new talent cropping up Coach Brooks feels that the Wilmington College basketball and baseball teams have great potential, but he is also aware of strong competition this year. Both teams will have difficult schedules.

Student nurses of James Walker Memorial Hospital do laboratory work in Anatomy class at Wilmington College.

James Walker Student Nurses Study Morning Course In Anatomy At College

Bright and early on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings, actually at 8:15 a.m., a chartered bus pulls up at Wilmington College, discharging 34 freshman nurses. These shining faces represent part of James Walker Nursing School.

Autumn quarter they attend Frank Allen's Anatomy and Physiology class. This class is designed especially for students who are in nursing school. Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings the freshman nurses attend Mr. Allen's lecture. On Tuesday and Thursday mornings you will find them busy in lab.

In an interview with these nurses, various opinions were gathered. According to Gale Barefoot, "I love the atmosphere at Wilmington College. I only wish we had time to enjoy it."

Staton Names 1962-63 Staff For Fledgling

Editor-in-chief of the Fledgling, Martha Jay Staton, has announced the staff for 1962-63. They are as follows: Billy Lewis, assistant editor; Dick Caravati, sports editor; Feature staff: Marie Lassiter, Ann Ferguson, Madge Britte. Activity staff: Editor Nancy Lucas, Judy Matthews and Barbara Fulford. Class staff: Editor Barbara Anne Hixon, Pat Stiles, Evelyn Adkins, Ann Davis and Bryan Dawson. Photographers: Carl Davis, from Delmar and Alan Lewis, student.

This year's Fledgling staff began work early in July while many were still loafing or, alas, working, at which time a theme was also chosen. This will remain a secret until disclosed in the annual received by the students in May.

In August the editor journeyed to Charlotte to discuss layouts with Delmar Artists, the publishers.

Jane Mitchell feels the classes they attend here are harder than the ones at the hospital. "We all love Mr. Allen," says Anita Edwards summing up the general attitude of the nurses.

All student nurses look forward to the day when they adorn uniforms for the first time. Excitement fills the air as the freshman nurses are measured for theirs.

If you are interested in nursing, James Walker Hospital offers a three-year school. Each quarter the student nurses attend Wilmington College to take special courses. Graduation takes place in August. Then the moment arrives—the time to take the State Board Exams. This takes place in October.

Circle K Club Meets Monthly For Dinner At Ambassador Res.

The purpose of the Circle K Club is to help build the character of college men and to prepare them for civic duties in their community.

The Circle K Club, sponsored by the Kiwanis Club, meets every other Wednesday night at the college. Once a month they have a dinner meeting at the Ambassador restaurant.

To become a member of this club a young man should have a "C" average, be in good standing with the college, and attend 60 per cent of all scheduled meetings.

The officers of the Circle K Club are: president, Wallace West; vice-president, Ed Freeman; secretary - treasurer, Bob Bowden.

President Wallace West has this to say about the club: "This is a worthwhile club which every college man should want to join for his own benefit as well as for the benefit of his school and community."

Luxury of Travel Entices Various W. C. Students

Ah, the luxury of travel! This past summer Wilmington College students went on vacations ranging from New Orleans to Seattle's World's Fair. The most popular vacation spot seemed to be New York City, as far as Beth Fineberg, Sondra Wilson, Louise Ambrosiano, Marie Lassiter, Bonnie Raines, Barbara Hixon, Heidi Trask, and Teddy Graham can attest.

Saw the Famous and the Obscure

Because traveling alone was an unprecedented event for Beth and Sondra, their activities were meticulously planned weeks beforehand. They stayed at the Biltmore Hotel between Madison Avenue and 43rd Street, only one block from Fifth Avenue, one of the most exclusive shopping districts in the world.

One of their more fortunate experiences was that of meeting personally and seeing original fashions of such famous names as Ceil Chapman Semont and the Goldberg Brothers. Central Park. Metropolitan Museum of Art, St. Patrick's Cathedral, Macy's, Gimbles, Bernard Altman's, Sax Fifth Avenue (From this all exclusive store, Sondra purchased the only thing in her financial range—a box), Greenwich Village—your name it, they saw it! The highlight of their trip was seeing three of the most talked-about shows on Broadway. Pulitzer prize-winning "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," "No Strings," and "A Man For All Seasons."

Barbara stayed at the Commodore next to the Grand Central Station. This central location helped her to see the most with the fewest blisters. She visited the United Nations, stock Exchange, and toured the city by ferry.

From New York her party (father, mother, a cousin and her aunt) sojourned to Canada via Niagara Falls. At Hamilton, Canada, she visited the Royal Patineal Gardens and in New Orleans the French Quarter and Bourbon Street.

Works in Park

Ritchie Watson worked this summer in the Old Faithful area of Yellowstone Park with 2,000 other students. They did practically everything, including staging a successful strike for better working conditions and job security. This action made headlines in many Western newspapers. The students proved that they were serious workers, and evidently they had support, for the manager was shipped and several waitresses previously discharged without voiced reasons were rehired. Hiking was the fad transportation as over half of them did not have cars, and hitchhiking over 120 miles a day was not uncommon. Leisure moments were spent in exploration of the prodigious park and overnight camping.

Attends World's Fair

Bonnie Fergus also went to Yellow Stone National Park, Canada, and British Columbia. The high points of her western jaunt were Las Vegas, Grand Canyons, Los Angeles (Disneyland), San Francisco (China Town) and Seattle's World's Fair. The fair was over 90 percent exhibits and, according to Bonnie, both fascinating and unusual. Naturally, one would expect the Fergus party to visit the huge food circus where there foods are prepared in styles made famous by renowned restaurants the world over.

Learns from Professionals

This summer Martha Parker was talented and lucky enough to become one of the twelve apprentices in summer stock, professional theater in Connecticut. There she (and Anne West, sophomore at Wilmington College last year) became acquainted with various aspects of the theater from professionals in each field. In all of the ten shows presented, Martha had a task of either performing, lighting, or staging.

Brings Home Honor

Carla Otis brought honor to Wilmington from the Order of Rainbow Girls convention at Woman's College this summer. The Order of Rainbow Girls is the branch of the Masonic Temple for young ladies. Out of 700 girls she was elected Grand Worthy Associate Advisor, the organization's second highest position. Last year she was Grand Charity, so we see no reason why next year she won't become the highest of the high, Grand Worthy Advisor.

Another combiner of leisure and labor was Betty Lou Collins. Betty Lou did secretarial work at Taylor Fireworks Company in Kansas this summer. She shopped in the Country Plaza, a very elaborate and specialized area—and from Kansas, she went to Oklahoma to visit friends.

Wilmington College Progresses Rapidly

In March, 1947, a tax levy was approved by the citizens of New Hanover County, Wilmington College was organized as a county institution under the control of the New Hanover Board of Education, and on September 4, 1947, Wilmington College opened its doors for the first time.

As of 1958, when it was placed under the Community College Act of the State of North Carolina, the College has been a part of the State system of higher education; and control has passed from the Board of Education to a Board of twelve Trustees. In 1961, the College took a big step forward when it moved to the three modified Georgian buildings on its new 600-acre campus.

Wilmington College has had a rich past, full of hope, dreams, hard work and accomplishment. However, the dreams of the foresighted have reached farther than the achievement of today. There is a new objective, that of making Wilmington College a four-year college.

Great effort has been expended toward the achievement of this objective. For two years the curriculum of Wilmington College has been prepared so that it will meet the requirements of a four-year college by 1963. The official progression toward this goal has been proceeding steadily. A Governor's Commission has recommended that Wilmington College be made a four-year college. However, the end realization of this is dependent upon the enactment of a bill to that effect in the North Carolina legislature. It is hoped by College officials that this will be accomplished within the year.

The greatest and most beneficial effects will, of course, be to the students of Wilmington College; and in regard to this, all students are urged to carefully think about whether or not they wish to remain four years and to plan their programs accordingly. As a four year college, the first two years will include courses in liberal arts, engineering and business administration. Those in liberal arts and teacher's training will, if they choose, continue in their course through the third and fourth years, with engineering and business administration students transferring to the institution of their choice for further study in their field.

A special committee of the Board of Trustees of the University of North Carolina has visited Wilmington College in regard to the proposed affiliation of Wilmington College to the University.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE, WILMINGTON, N. C.

October 9, 1962

Hall Addresses Panmathians On Court's Prayer Ban

"If I have any argument with the Supreme Court decision to ban prayer, it is not with the philosophy involved; it is with the confusion over the Bill of Rights as our forefathers wrote it," began Dr. B. Frank Hall at a speech he delivered to the Panmathian Society the night of October 4.

The text of the talk by the Presbyterian minister and theologian was the issues involved in the recent Supreme Court decision to abolish prayer in schools.

"The Greeks believed that as soon as piety disappeared, tyranny appears. Human dignity has been bulwarked with a universal sense of human destiny." Ancient Rome grew strong at a time of almost puritan piety, explained Dr. Hall. "Down through the history of the world no nation has long lasted when spirituality disappeared."

"Our forefathers recognized this. . . What man builds, man can tear down. The Constitution is built upon a divine structure; we derive our freedom from an untamperable source."

Law By Nature

"Law is not made by man; it is discovered," said Dr. Hall, quoting Justice Blackstone. "Law is discovered in the structure of nature. . . When a man violates the moral law of nature, he doesn't break it; he illustrates it."

"The Constitution was copied from the ways and woof of nature. It is a self-evident fact that we get our dignity from God, according to the Constitution."

Dr. Hall explained that the establishment of any sectarian religion in America is contrary to the principles of the Constitution; "but, at the same time, no government that follows the principles of the founding fathers can be neutral to spiritual realities."

When Jefferson mentioned the separation of Church and State, said Dr. Hall, he didn't mean the separation of America and God. The position of American foundation being based on a belief in God wasn't a debatable point to Jefferson; it was a self-evident fact.

America's heritage is based on the belief of rights endowed to man by a creator, argued the minister. "When we deny to the rising generation this cultural heritage, we are falling right into the hands of men trying to overthrow this country."

Minority Dangers

Dr. Hall expressed concern over the recent general trend of the Supreme Court to undercut religion in America. He blamed this on minority groups who have served notice that they are challenging our basic governmental foundations.

"A nation that is like Russia can believe that it is made up of animals; the United States cannot," said Dr. Hall at one point.

"If we don't teach religion at all in our schools, we teach our heritage wrong. If we teach religion in a sectarian manner, we destroy that heritage. It's a touchy question; I don't come with answers; I come with questions."

Dr. Hall, minister of the Pearsall Memorial Church, lectures to the Panmathian Society on the banning of prayer in public schools.

Freshmen Go To Polls; Elect Class Officers

Freshmen class members voted seven officers into the student council October 1 and 2. Mike West was elected president of the freshman class; Barbara Black, vice-president; Peggy McAdams, secretary; Faye Barnes and Karen Ray, freshman class representatives; and Judy Campbell, judicial representatives.

"We compose the largest freshman class in the history of Wilmington College; I foresee that it can and will be the best," said the new Freshman Class President, Mike West.

Psychology Major

West, who comes from Pennsylvania, moved to Carolina Beach last summer. A liberal arts student, West plans to major in psychology.

"I deeply appreciate the interest and enthusiasm shown by the students during the elections. I consider it a great honor to have been elected Freshman Class President," said West.

"I will serve the class with sincerity and honesty, doing my best to present their opinions and ideas to the student congress and faculty."

Hopes for the Future

Speaking on his hopes for the year, West commented that he wanted to "integrate fractions of the college"; that he didn't want one clique to feel at home and the rest to feel left outside. "I want everybody to feel they're a student of Wilmington College, and that they belong here as much as anybody else."

"I plan to devote all of the time necessary to fulfilling the job of Freshman Class Vice-President in a satisfactory manner," stated Barbara Black. "I intend to cooperate fully with all members of the student congress in promoting their various ideas."

Best Appoints Staton, Summerlin Cotillion Chairmen

Ronnie Staton and Dino Summerlin will be co-chairmen of the Cotillion Club, as announced by President of the Student Council, Nat Bost, at the second meeting of the student council on October 1. Members of the student council and those chosen by the co-chairmen plan all of the socials on campus.

Barbara Singletary will be returning Winter Quarter to take up her position as sophomore class vice-president. This was discussed and voted on by student council members. All students are urged to attend these meetings every alternate Monday night.

Convention Bound

Nat Bost, Mike West, and Acie Kinlaw will represent the student body at the State Student Legislature on October 7 at Morehead Planetarium on the UNC campus.

The purpose of the meeting is to learn more about the operation of other college governments. The transfer of ideas is expected to boost level government to a higher degree in the state.

One of the ideas that Barbara hopes to see carried out is action in the direction of getting more parking areas for the students.

"I will make sure that the views of the students are heard, and that the student government stays alert to opportunities to help make Wilmington College a four year institution."

Peggy McAdams named the main reason that she ran was that she "wanted to work for the college and help it grow."

Class Objective

"The main objective of the freshmen should be the promotion of school spirit," said Peggy.

"The duties of the representative center around the students," said newly elected Freshman Representative, Faye Barnes. "The representative must find out what the students want and bring this about."

"I intend to do my best to represent the freshmen of Wilmington College," stated Faye, who plans to major in art.

Karen Ray, the second freshman class representative, said that in the year ahead she "will do all possible to carry out the duties of this office to the best of my ability and knowledge."

Judy Campbell, a liberal arts student and one of the judicial representatives, stated, "I will do my best to use wisdom, honesty, and fairness in court proceedings."

Judy further said that she "considers it a great honor to know that her fellow students place their trust and confidence in her."

Different Branch

"I was a senator in high school," said Pat Beasley, new judicial representative. "This is a different branch, and I think that it will be just as interesting and rewarding. Any way that I can serve the students is always an enjoyment."

"The challenge is strengthened by the duties," said Pat. "I will at all times strive to be fair and just."

Karen Ray, representative; Pat Beasley, judicial representative; Faye Barnes, representative; and Judy Campbell, judicial representative, all residents of Wilmington, are newly elected officers of the Freshman Class.

WGNI Features New Variety Program For Worthy College Incidents, Students

The first in a series of "Wilmington College" shows was featured as part of the "Dino" show at 3:15 p.m., October 3. Each Wednesday and Friday between 3:45 and 4:00, the variety show sponsored by WILC will feature school news, special events, and student activities.

The "Wilmington College" program is designed to build school spirit, arouse public interest, and aid the student-station's growth. Also on the program will be student "pick-hits" of the week and student leader interviews.

The first program was mainly to inform the general public about WILC. It brought out the history of the station, its present activities, and its future goals.

The WILC staff is in full charge of the production. A committee of four announcers will write the script which will then be approved by members of the student council.

The whole idea of the show was the product of "Dino" and Barbara Bradley. The objective was to promote student interest in the station, to stimulate school spirit, and to let the public know what the student body is doing.

Ed Freeman, manager of WILC, states, "I think it is going to be a swinging thing. It is now a two-day-a-week show. In the near future we are hopeful that it will be a five-day-a-week show."

Last Friday Mike West and Peggy McAdams were interviewed by Frank Rogers concerning their campaign platforms and plans for the coming year. In return for this time spent on the air, WGNI donates current hit records to WILC.

Practice What You Preach!

The presentation of this issue would seem a bit juvenile for some college students; and were it not for the indisputable fact that cheating is being used as a crutch for many in our colleges today, reiteration of this subject would not be necessary.

Recently, a true-false questionnaire proved disastrous for the habitual cheater in our own college. When unaware that the quiz on the next row was not a duplicate of his own, he copied diligently his neighbors' answers. Is this not a rather infantile method for a seemingly adult class?

Cheating cannot be the fault of the professor. Let him watch our every move and we cheat for spiteful reasons and because we feel he's daring us. But allow him to leave the room and do we not cheat because we seraphically accept his leaving as a trusting gesture?

Let's face it. For many, college, just like Weejuns and Villagers, has become a trend. We are here because everybody else is here. Consequently, there is no profound incentive for us to do our own work or to do it especially well. We do just enough to keep us in and allow us to socialize.

Honor systems have been suggested and resuggested, but we do not conceive one working in this college. At West Point where the honor system is instilled into every cadet as rigidly as his other military training, the successful results of an honorary system are feasible. However, in a college of our size the students are too familiar with each other and would neglect their duty. Moreover, we do not feel that the independent student should be bothered with or responsible for reporting the dependent student, but that this decision should be made by the individual student. If integrity means nothing to us now, when will it?

It is fortunate that the studios do not have to depend upon the other segment of our college. But perhaps this is the solution. If the inviolable cheater would disrupt his pattern and study one time for a quiz, only then would he feel the disgust and the nausea of another infringing on his property.

In an article in The New York Times Magazine by Samuel Middlebrook, it was stated that the majority of teachers today find that the only panacea for cheating is either 1. the abolishment of the competition of the human race or 2. the abolishment of the human race.

We pridefully compute unique methods of cheating in our classes and readily boast of our successful strategies to our admiring classmates. Minutes later we are proclaiming ostentatiously our dislike of rigged political campaigns and shrieking at the facts disclosed by The Ugly American. We are willing to be cheaters ourselves but unwilling to tolerate it in others.

Where Were The Issues?

By Stanley Winborne

The tremendous apathy recently exhibited by our freshmen towards their class elections seems to reveal a dismal lack of initiative in this institution. By no means is this indifference confined to the freshmen; it is a school-wide wave of impassiveness.

The facts of the election are plain. Of 537 eligible voters, 282 voters (over half) abstained. Why didn't these people vote?

To diagnose a malady is normally not as difficult as to tell why it is present or to prescribe a cure. Probably the situation here was brought about by a combination of circumstances.

First, the elections got off to a bad start. A relatively few people were chosen, considering the large size of this Freshman Class. Perhaps, if more groups had nominated persons, wider and more diverse interests would have arisen.

There was certainly no lack of posters and gimmicks advertising their candidates' personalities. However, when the campaign speeches were made, painstakingly warning the students that this was to be no popularity contest, one found that there were no real issues at stake. Clearly, this made it hard to exclude popularity. What else would one have to go by?

Granted, a few of the candidates worked hard to solicit their votes, but they did not solicit them on the basis of any true issues. There simply weren't any! The candidates got their votes on the basis of their prior experience, character, personality, and good looks.

The point is that no real politics went into play, no splits occurred, and no factions disagreed because of the candidates' platforms.

True political activity in this school would breed social and intellectual activity. It would institute a trend toward general energetic action. If the above statements can be accepted as at least partial logical conclusions, then it is only left to discover the cure.

Student political parties are my proposed answer. They work effectively in other colleges. They are in most cases the nucleus of every phase of campus activity. Student parties promote social, intellectual, religious, and other activities.

Is everyone at Wilmington College truly content? Doesn't anyone feel the need for diversity? Or, is everyone simply content with mediocrity?

Since the analyzing of this exemplary situation is after the fact, it is obvious that nothing can be done about it now. We can only hope that through one half-hearted attempt we have chosen the right candidates for the job.

Our personalities are suffering. Now when we should be adding to the well rounding of our character and learning from scholarly activities, extracurricular activities, and the political process on which we live.

Insights

By Randy Johnson

The recent student rioting at the University of Mississippi is highly indicative of the tenor of a good many American undergraduates. This was no Budapest or Checkpoint Charlie but a university in the United States—equality under the law. In protest of this the students were rioting; certainly equality is no atrocity. Albert Camus called it irrational terror, and I would term it unconscious terror.

Governor Ross Barnett's tactics, politically motivated no doubt, are not unrecognizable. He resorted to demagoguery which had much the same effect as the ranting of certain leaders of the 1940's. The students were duped, but they are by no means blameless. If any should be aware of the ideological situations in the world it should be the students. After all, they are surrounded by ideas; why did they not realize what was happening to them?

It would be interesting to know how many of the participating students were aware of the situation and consciously, willfully engaged in the riots. I would not be so concerned with them because at least they are awake. But for the others, the sleep-rioters, will the rioting and violent killing be remembered next semester as just another extra-curricular activity—premature Homecoming Festivities? No doubt an impression will be made on some, 200 were jailed, and I should think someone should remember that two men were dead as a result.

Society must be in flux and there is necessarily revolt, but irrational terror is not the answer. More often than not men renege on their human commitments in a situation of terror. And, when one fails to assert himself in his humanness by refusing to be bridled and spurred by complete irrationality, it is even more depressing.

But let us not judge them and at the same time pat ourselves on the back. How many here at Wilmington College would have joined the rioting? How many would have asked themselves, "Can I be honest with myself and still be swept away by the crowd?" Here was an instance where decisive individuality was needed. That "everyone is going to the riots" is no justification for abdicating the uniqueness which is within all of our grasps.

EDITORIAL NOTE: We wish to apologize to Mrs. Elizabeth Freeman whose position we confused in the first issue of the paper. Mrs. Freeman is head librarian of Wilmington College and is a graduate of East Carolina College.

Everyone seems pleased with the outcome of the Freshman Class officers' election. Let's try to show a little more interest in Student Council affairs instead of sitting around and griping about the school not doing anything. This body was organized for the students, you know.

We hope some of you saw "The Ordeal in Oxford" the other night on the idiot box. The war between the states was fought over less than the "Ole Miss" episode.

Well, you got this far; don't quit reading now.

For those who wish to offer criticism on this paper, either try writing something for it yourself; or, preferably, write us a letter (that may be published).

Credit for this poem is to be given to Bill Arnold, past columnist for the East Carolinian. He seems to have a knack for writing material that was consistently interesting and unusually funny.

The day doesn't pass that somebody

Doesn't come up to me and say,

Why you're the most wonderful person

I've ever known.

And I say,

I know it; my mother was a Full-blooded Chinese Bandit.

And they say, No!

And I say,

Yes. And God was my co-pilot.

And they say, No!

And I say,

Yeah, and he didn't even fly half the time; he was too busy worrying about the sheep and goats and all.

Well, so much for the good old days.

Pen-Pushers Club Chooses Officers

Approximately 20 students attended, by special invitation, a formal dinner and initial meeting of the Pen Pushers Club last night.

Sondra Wilson was elected president; Ritchie Watson, vice-president; and Morris Broadwell, secretary. Randy Johnson and Beth Fineberg will serve as co-chairmen of With Pen In Hand, the anthology compiled and published each year by the Pen Pushers Club, and Dick Caravati will represent the club at all student congress meetings.

This club will meet monthly in the evenings for special programs and guest speakers. Also, there will be individual projects by members of the club which will be presented at the regular meetings. These projects will enhance literary subjects such as preferred authors, poets, novels, and plays.

A committee will be appointed to arrange special activity for the group and to be in charge of selecting monthly hostesses or hosts for the meetings.

The advantages and necessity of the club's publishing a quarterly periodical with outside contributions was discussed and will be considered by the co-editors and presented at the second meeting for approval.

Because the Pen Pushers is an organization to promote creative writing among the members, each member will be expected to submit his writings regularly for critical analysis. The Editorial Committee will select the best work which will be included in the special monthly programs.

Returning Hawk Golfers Form Nucleus Of Squad

Plans for the 1963 edition of the Wilmington College golf team are in the final stages of competition. With the return of several fine golfers from last year's squad, Frank Allen believes that he has the nucleus of an outstanding Seahawk golf team.

Mr. Allen has arranged practice agreements with Lawrence Cook, pro of the Municipal Golf Course, and has urged the members of the squad to start practicing early.

Although the golf season for the Seahawks will not get under way until the spring, Mr. Allen wants to set up a ladder and elect a captain within the next few weeks. He feels that by starting as early as possible he will be able to mold the team into a more capable and better organized unit.

Schedule Incomplete

The golf schedule has not yet been completed but Coach Allen says that all members of the Virginia - Carolina Conference are planning golf teams this year and that he will have no trouble in scheduling them. It is also quite possible that the Seahawk golfers will take on most of the Big Four College freshman teams and a team from Camp Lejeune in preparation for the conference matches in the spring.

Various members of the faculty of Wilmington College have expressed a desire to challenge the Seahawk golf squad. Mr. Allen says that given a little time to polish up their games and to establish some healthy handicaps, the faculty golfers could give a good account of themselves. He reports that both teams are eagerly awaiting the match and are practicing diligently.

The golfers who have already signed up to play for the Seahawks should make an effort to play as often as possible, and at least once or twice a week. They should turn in their score cards to Mr. Allen in room H-215. All members of the squad should try to practice with each other. In this way

Mr. Allen hopes that the boys will swap pointers that will improve their games.

Weekday Practice

The coach has also reminded the boys that because of the crowded week end playing conditions at the Municipal Golf Course, most of their practicing should take place during the week.

The nine boys who have signed up for the Seahawk golf team so far this year are: Ed

Freeman, Roger Fowler, Mike Hebron, Ricky Berman, Jack Harrell, Val Edwards, Harry Buzzell, Scott McKinnon, and Will Gemmell. The last six boys sparked last year's squad and proved themselves fine golfers.

Any other boys who are interested in playing on the Wilmington College golf team should contact Mr. Allen in his office. He will be more than pleased to supply you with all the information available.

College Dove Hunters Report Good Season

The first segment of the split season on dove hunting has witnessed some fine reports from Wilmington College hunters. Most hunters have confirmed the North Carolina Wildlife Commission's statement that the dove population has maintained the same status as last year's fine crop of birds.

With shooting confined to the hours between noon and sunset, many Wilmington College students restrict their shooting to week ends. As is the custom, these week-end dove shoots have taken on all the aspects of social events. Since the hunters usually are gathered around a field, it is not unusual to hear friendly insults passed back and forth among shooters.

It is generally conceded that the dove presents one of the most difficult wingshots of any game bird. Because of its swiftness and agility in flight, the wary dove presents a challenge to even the most experienced hunter.

Demands Good Shot

Dove shooting is one sport that demands expert marksmanship on the part of the hunter. Proof of this statement is presented by the fact that many times a solitary dove successfully negotiates the crossing of a field over a small army of hunters without having even a tailfeather ruffled from the shot blasted at him.

The second split is expected to bring with it even more favorable hunting than the first. Cooler weather, an abundance of cut grain such as corn, milo, beans, and peas, plus an even better crop of birds promises Wilmington College hunters some excellent shooting opportunities.

Student Hunters

Wilmington College dove hunters who help make this sport one of the main outside past-times are: Larry Cheek, Ted Graham, Will Gemmell, Bill Bryan, Alan Malpass, Eddie Bergamini, Bobby Greer, and Hary Paterson. These boys, regardless of cost, time, and effort, will continue to seek their swift-flying game. Meanwhile the less adept hunters are hoping that their shooting eyes will have improved by the second part of the split season.

Duck season is quickly approaching, and ducks provide a much larger target. However, ducks usually bring with them many of the same problems that beset the dove hunter. It isn't likely that he who brings in few doves will bring in many ducks.

Varsity Report

By HUGH PASCHAL

With the acquisition of Wilmington's fine Municipal Golf Course for practice rounds, the Seahawk golf team has begun preparing for next spring's matches. The 1963 Wilmington College golf team promises to be the best yet.

Coach Frank Allen also reports that various faculty members are planning to give the college boys time to polish up their golf games before challenging them to a match. In addition to Mr. Allen, Walter Biggs, Tommie Lupton, Rolla Nelson, and Fred Toney have been sighted chasing the little white ball trying desperately to knock a few strokes off their handicaps. Any faculty member shooting under 150 is welcome to help put the Seahawk golf team through its paces.

Wilmington College's basketball schedule is nearing completion. With practice starting on October 15, Coach Brooks says that he has already lined up a host of non-Conference games with such teams as the freshman squads of Duke, University of North Carolina, Citadel, East Carolina College, and North Carolina State College. The Seahawk mentor is contacting the other coaches of the Virginia-Carolina Conference to set up the loop schedule for the forthcoming basketball season.

Several members of the Wilmington College basketball team are getting a head start on practice by working on their own in the gymnasium of the Wilmington Community Center. They feel that they can save time by being in top physical condition before the start of official practice. Coach Brooks has encouraged this individual practice on the part of the players, stating that he would like to devote the entire seven weeks of practice to fundamentals rather than whipping the team into shape.

The Cape Fear Archers are continuing their campaign for new members. A special rate of 2 dollars and 50 cents per year is being offered to all students. Bill Price, the club's president, extends a special invitation to the students of Wilmington College. The next meeting of the club is scheduled for Thursday night at 7:30 p.m. at the Wilmington Community Center.

* * *

Fall baseball practice has been completed, and Coach Brooks reports that the practice period was an unqualified success. The practice sessions gave the Seahawk mentor an excellent opportunity to judge the squad in action. Hopeful candidates for the Wilmington College baseball team were able to take advantage of the chance to size up their competition for berths on the starting lineup.

Several boys looked good, and Coach Brooks states that he has some fine material with which to mold another fine Seahawk baseball team next spring.

Students Discuss Contest Between Kennedy, Lodge

In an effort to bring to the attention of the students of Wilmington College the political progress in which we live, the following question was asked at random throughout our student body: Whom do you think will win the Kennedy-Lodge Senatorial contest in Massachusetts, and why?

Chuck Wright — "I think that the people of Massachusetts are not stupid enough to put an inexperienced young boy right out of school in office. Rather, they will look over the record and see what Lodge has done as Comptroller and Attorney General of their state."

Jim Griffin — "Ted Kennedy, because he dresses sharper."

Jenny Merritt — "Ted Kennedy will win, mainly because his policies coincide with those of his brother, the President. The voters of Massachusetts will realize the President's policies will be most beneficial for the people of Massachusetts, and that Ted Kennedy would best carry them out. Also, being the President's brother, he will have more influence than a normal first year senator."

Mike Hebron — "Kennedy will win in a close race. He appeals more to the middle class than Lodge; he is more liberal than Lodge. Since his brother once held the same office, he will learn from his brother's mistakes and will profit by them. The political background that Kennedy grew up in was more influential than Lodge's. Therefore, he should know more tricks of the trade in getting the office. Besides, he is the best man."

Robert Waushawsky — "Kennedy will win the senatorial contest in Massachusetts. He represents that fraction of the people which is interested in the development, production, and improvement of our society. This plus popularity will give him a landslide victory in November."

Betty Lou Sanderson — "I believe this will be a close election with Kennedy winning by a small margin. The Democrats have been very strong in Massachusetts recently and are very proud of the Kennedy family."

Ed Freeman — "I think Ted Kennedy will come up on top in Massachusetts this year, because the Democratic party is the strongest party there. Another reason is the good job the Kennedy family as a whole has been doing in national politics, not family prestige."

Richie Watson — "Although George Cabot Lodge undoubtedly has superior qualifications, Teddy Kennedy will probably win. The glamorous image of the Kennedy family seems undefeatable in Massachusetts. This is a sad comment on American politics, but a true one."

Doug Ward — "It's primarily a family debate. It's just like everything else in America today, it's a money thing. The family with the money shall succeed — and they will — you just wait and see. If you have money, you can get anything you want."

Volunteers Receive Kennedy Treatment

"The people here treat me like one of Kennedy's sons." These are the words of one of the many members of the Peace Corp volunteers who are striving to help people of underdeveloped countries to raise their living standards.

The Peace Corp was first proposed by President John F. Kennedy during his presidential campaign in 1960. In the President's own words, the purpose of the Peace Corp is to "help teach in the schools, construct development projects, demonstrate modern methods of sanitation, and perform a hundred other tasks calling for specialized knowledge."

Most of the volunteers range between the ages of 20 and 30, and are chosen to serve through written tests and interviews. All volunteers must be over 18, and need not have a college education. "Corpsmen, who are not exempt from the draft, will be trained from three to six months in the U.S. or its possessions, then sent to a newly developing country in Asia, Africa, or Latin America for two or three years."

Training Program Hard
Before taking on their assigned jobs, Peace Corp volunteers must go through a training program containing three basic parts: (1) preparatory training, (2) instruction in the underlying concepts of American democracy, and (3) physical conditioning.

The preparatory training includes lectures on the "emerging nations" and some of the problems which are present in these countries. The physical conditioning includes strenuous exercises such as, push-ups, set-ups, jumping, climbing, and weightlifting. These exercises are designed to prepare the volunteers for the conditions in which they will be working. The following are some of the questions which must be answered about volunteers as they go through their training period: "How do they get along with the people? How do they 'take' the conditions in which they have to work? What is their attitude?" A volunteer's attitude to his work is very important.

Corpsmen Live Humbly
Peace Corpsmen live humbly. They receive only an allotment to allow them to live at the same level as the native population in their region. Upon separation from the Corps, they will receive $75 for each month of service.

Two freshmen, Mary Dexter and Bert Herring, at Wilmington College, have already taken the local examination for Peace Corp volunteers. Mary described the examination as being much like college boards. The tests takes approximately 4½ hours and contains two required topics and two sections which must be chosen from a list of several.

American History and Verbs are the required sections. The applicant must also choose two topics from the following: English, agriculture, mechanical skills, natural sciences, and a modern language, such as Spanish or French.

Before a person can take the exam, he must fill out an application and send it to Washington. He is then notified when and where he is to take the exam. After taking the exam, the applicant waits to hear, if he has been accepted.

Uncalled Four Sing For Clubs, Events

What's new in the music world of Wilmington College? A quartet has been formed in the music department, and the name given to this group is the Uncalled Four. Quartet members include Wayne Robinson, Jerry Ely, Carl Sneed, and Jan Williams. Accompanist is Bobby Robert.

The quartet has been practicing two days a week for the past three weeks. Their selections include songs from "Carousel", "The Drinking Song", "Hernando's Hideaway", "My Gal Sal", and "I Want A Girl". They are to perform for various clubs and special events.

Attend Big Halloween Dance This Friday

Cotillion Club members take a break from gathering branches and moss which will serve as part of the decorations for this Friday night's dance.

Republicans Ask Students At WC To State Meeting

An invitation has been extended to the Republican inclined members of the Wilmington College student body to attend the North Carolina Young Republicans College Fall Convention which will meet in Winston-Salem at the Robert E. Lee Hotel on October 26, 27, and 28.

Registration will begin at the hotel at 3:30 p.m., October 26, and will continue through Friday night. The first session will begin on Friday night with a speech by Jim Harff, national College Young Republicans Chairman, who will be at the convention for the entire weekend.

Convention highlights include a business session for N.C. Young Republicans' delegates from all campus clubs in the state; a training school and idea shop; and a banquet on Saturday night followed by a speech by an outstanding Republican. A dance is scheduled after the banquet in the hotel ballroom.

Linda Sutherland, "Miss Young Republican of North Carolina" and a Wake Forest College coed, will be official hostess for the weekend event.

A wrap-up session and critique is slated to end the convention on Sunday morning.

Registration fee is $6.00. Those students who are interested in attending the convention have been asked to write directly to the Hotel Robert E. Lee in Winston-Salem, North Carolina, for room reservations.

Adrian King, junior at Wake Forest College, is chairman of the NCYC College Campus this year.

Modern Language Club Organizes; Abbott Heads Temporary Committee

An organizational meeting of the Modern Language Club was held Monday afternoon at Wilmington College in room L101.

At this meeting there was a formation of a Constitutional Committee and the establishment of a program Committee. Mr. Cameron E. Shaeron, a student at Wilmington College, presented the program for the day. He showed slides taken in foreign countries that he had visited.

Temporary chairman, John Abbott, explains, "The purpose of this club is to promote more interest in foreign countries and to present a clearer picture of the way of life in these countries, with specific reference to France, Spain, and Germany."

Any student is eligible for membership; however, it is preferable that the student be taking a modern language or have knowledge of one.

The club, whose advisors are Mrs. Helena Cheek, Mrs. Beatrice Payne, and Miss Ethel Murray, have plans for certain projects throughout this year; such as the publication of a periodical, broadcast over WILC and the sponsoring of a dance.

John Abbott, anticipating an active club, remarks, "The Modern Language Club will serve as a recreational, service, and social outlet for students, while retaining its educational aspects."

Gay 90's Come To Life In SRO Stage Production

The Dramatics Department of Wilmington College will present a comedy, "Farewell, Farewell, Eugene", in three acts.

To add flavor to this already confused concoction comes Carol Grotchen, Ray Oxendine, Marietta Bowers, Martha Parker, and Sam Garner.

Gertrude Pavis, played by Emily Coddington, is an elderly woman with an authoritative air and an exacting manner. There is "no nonsense" about her and this tends to make her a woman demagogic of respect. She may seem overdominate at times but deep down one can tell that there is truly a heart of gold.

On the other hand, we have Minerva Goody Pavis, who is played by Rosemary Swisher. Entirely different from "Gat", she has been married and was at one time an actress that performed in traveling plays. Minerva, the profound extrovert of the family, is a very enthusiastic personality. She adds spirit and joy to what would seem to be a dull household otherwise.

To add romantic feeling, in this play, the author provides

Dance To Feature Instrumental, Vocal

Cotillion Club members will hold the Halloween Dance for members of the college and their dates in the Student Services Building this Friday night from 9:00 till 12:00.

Co-chairmen of the Cotillion Club, Ronny Staton and Dino Summerland, outlined the plans for the dance before the October 15 assembly of the Student Council.

Jetty Jumpers Play

Speaking on entertainment, Summerland named four groups that would perform at the dance. Included are the Jetty Jumpers, a six piece semi-rock and roll group. Also featured will be Ray Hewlett, a singer who is "quite popular in Florida."

Mason Appeals For Chess Sets

"Why Chess?" some people may ask. Well then, why not Spoons?" said Jack Mason at the October 15 student council meeting. "Chess is a much quieter and more intellectual pastime."

At that meeting Mason, president of the Chess Club, outlined his need for financial backing from the student congress in order to buy equipment. The council voted to grant $7.00 from the student activities fund.

Each Tuesday night the club gathers to hold tournaments. The administration has given permission and granted funds for the club to play teams from other schools.

To assist in learning chess, the club has the North Carolina State Champion, Oliver Hutaff, as a coach.

The four new sets are available in the Student Services Building for any of the members to check out.

Hewlett, a college student, has worked in several night clubs in Florida. He has recorded six records, his latest, "Forbidden", now going out on nationwide release.

Others entertaining at the dance will be the Bald Head Island Singers, a five-man folk singing group; and the Majestics, another vocal group.

No Stags Admitted

Couples only will be admitted, no stags. The tickets are on sale in the lounge this week from 8:30 a.m. till 4:30 p.m.

Tickets sell for $1.00 in advance and $1.50 at the door per couple. The purchaser must present his student activity card both when he buys the ticket and when he arrives at the dance.

"Speaking for Dino and myself," said Staton, "we want to extend to each and every student a personal invitation to the dance; we hope to make this dance one of the best the college has had."

Decorating Committee

Marjorie Smith is chairman of the decorating committee. Other members of the committee are Ray Oxendine, Lilly Bloodworth, Claude Heath, Mary Antly, Marietta Bowers, Charles Greer, Barbara Bradley, and Jacky Hurst.

"The decorating committee will have the traditional halloween decorations, plus some halloween tricks to play on you," Staton said at the Student Congress meeting. Definite plans of the decorations are being kept secret.

The dance will begin with 40 minutes of band music, followed by 20 minutes of vocal arrangements, 40 more minutes of the instrumental, another 20 minutes of vocal, and then 40 minutes of the band again.

Members of the Cotillion Club and the student council plan all socials on the campus.

Tense Moment

By Gene Marlowe

Whenever we observe a heroic act, similar feelings arise in ourselves. If this courage is real and pertains to problems of ourselves, it is more so. Last night it was such with the American people. President Kennedy made a speech which will earn him peerage with men whose biographies he once called "Profiles in Courage."

This morning there are few democrats, republicans, segregationists, or special interest groups. We have become Americans.

In close affinity with our founding fathers, once more we are aware that we are willing and ready to die for our country.

We seem to be slipping again into the long, dark night of war, but with the courage which nations wax great flames high in our midst.

Not Too Young!

Because we do not meet the required age limitations of twenty-one does not necessarily imply that we should be oblivious to the General Elections which will confront eligible voters next Saturday or impervious to our responsibilities and needs of stimulating voting activity.

More than any other segment of the American population, the educated should be and are expected to be concerned and informed about political proceedings. We read and think more than the average American; consequently, we should not be inert or unaware of those things happening around us.

Right now, there are parents, neighbors, and fellow employees who have not registered to vote in the November 6 primary and who do not plan to.

Realizing how few of our own local residents react to the General Elections and the percentage of those who do vote and who are inadequately informed of the candidates and their platforms, we should also realize our own personal obligations as college students to diminish irresponsibility among our citizens.

We could solicit the votes of our citizens by a direct and personal approach or by an indirect method which would involve the distribution of printed material citing the issues at stake and the necessity of voting.

There are students in our college who speak profusely on political subjects and who are avid and ardent readers of political news. Why do they not try to instill some of their knowledge and ideas into the common voter?

Embarrassing Situation

Florida's cup is running over with Cuban refugees and she is swaying unsteadily under this influence.

Why, since this Cuban rehabilitation program was a federal project, has she been so lax and ineffective in alleviating this over-abundance problem? And why does she sit back and idly observe a personal endeavor burdening one state whose advantageous location and environment have been taken advantage of?

This is not a healthy situation for anyone involved, especially the United States. We encourage Cubans to escape the invidious schemes and propaganda of a dictator with communistic theories to a more contented state. Do we consider our state one of more contentment?

The New York Times revealed among other unfortunate situations that there were some refugees working for less than 40c an hour. Are we not inviting and offering excellent material for communistic propaganda?

Our inactivity over this problem is certainly not appeasing our already contentious and dissatisfied southern neighbors.

The educational aspect has been greatly affected by the terrific influx and in some cases an entire school has been compelled to revert to a double program. We are not helping the inhabitants of Florida either by the stiff competition of the overflowing of the jobless.

It is not only important but imperative that the federal government step in to completely relinquish this "Florida Perplexity" and to indulge in an effective relocation program to equalize this national responsibility.

Do Nothings, Do Something

The proverbial complainer of "There's nothing to do around this place" should simmer down for a while.

Friday night there is a dance in the Student Services Building unprecedented in its line up of entertainment for our college.

Next Friday and Saturday nights, Doug Swink will present his first play of the year. The members of the cast who have been constantly rehearsing for this production and the director merit more than a handful of viewers.

Determined by the initiative of students to compose and submit their literary writings is the publishing of quarterly periodicals by the Pen Pushers Club.

Have you considered contributing to what could prove to be a very worthwhile and advantageous project? Have you made plans amidst all of your boredom to attend the dance or the play?

No doubt there is someone right now slapping his cards on the table and indignantly assailing the school for its social inertia.

Insights

By Randy Johnson

Upon hearing criticism of this erstwhile journal, I charge anyone who either has a complaint or a constructive suggestion to have the gumption to promulgate his sentiments. It does no good to sit back and say "It ain't no 'count and never will be!" I say if you are worth your salt you will at least offer an alternative.

The object of this paper is to create a life within the college environment that will provide a challenge to achieve consciousness and a responsibility. It is a tragedy if you do not care... care enough to search and investigate the possibilities within the frame of your existence.

Really, why are you here; what are you doing? Is your college education going to be merely job insurance? Strangely enough freedom is not a matter of chance. Freedom implies a choice and an obligation, to yourself and to your fellows. Accept it if you have the courage.

Work Together

On Monday night, October 15, I suggested to the student council that it take the lead in engendering a desire for growth and improvement of Wilmington College. It is my firm conviction that both the student body and the faculty can take an active part in preparing this junior college for its course as a four year college. It will in fact require coordinated effort and concrete communication between faculty and students.

A good many of us can vote; we all have a right to express opinions. Our presence here can mean much more than punching the clock for 15 to 18 hours a week. Take a vital interest in the present state of Wilmington College and I think you will find that the future will perforce draw on that interest.

Support Library Needs

Before we can become a four year college we must have, among many other things, an adequate library. The faculty and administration are aware of this need; but are the students? I urge that we support the enlarging of the library.

If you need a certain book in any field, ask that it be acquired. Interest your professors in adding to the library material in the courses that they teach. It would be extremely unrealistic to ignore this need.

Use Voice in Government

On last Friday's "Today Show" on NBC Television there was a discussion of the function of Wayne State University in the city of Detroit. It was evident that there is a vital interchange between the students and faculty and the city government. I think that this could be one of the chief objectives of Wilmington, since it is a city college. Consider this objective; discuss our needs with the leaders of Wilmington; you have a voice; use it.

Claude Howell of the art department has gone to Raleigh to participate in the organizing of a large agency whose aim is to get North Carolina a little more "Kultur". A great number of individuals are attending; artists, representatives from the news media, teachers, and influential persons interested in the humanities. The colleges and universities must assume a great part of the responsibility for providing this cultural advance. Southeastern North Carolina is out of North Carolina's cultural mainstream, whether anyone wants to realize and admit it or not. The core of the area's culture should be this college. Is it? But it must be. If it is not now, it must act immediately and lag no longer.

There are concerts and lecture series in the Piedmont colleges; why cannot they be here also. The cultural spirit that these represent is essential to the college atmosphere. As one student speaking his feelings, I insist that the student government and the faculty consider this matter. It is an area where we are not hamstrung; no one truly interested in our education will deny us the indispensable exposure to the humanities.

Submission of Television

Newton Minnow, Chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, emphasized in the recent FCC hearings that the radio-TV industry has a definite duty to present edifying material if it is to justify its existence. That the public wants poor to mediocre television and radio is no reason for the leaders of the industry to relinquish their integrity by providing only the "entertainment" of which the advertisers approve.

Also there is no justification for letting a stultified public stay stultified. Any media that is a potential arbiter of taste has a grave responsibility to provide the best, or at least to try to do so. It is a fallacy to offer poor service under the banner of "democracy". I would suggest a flag with intellectual dishonesty and rationalization be raised. Democracy presupposes a reasonably educated and intelligent public. Help us educate ourselves!

These thoughts are offered to the staffs of Station WILC, WGN, WMFD, and to whom it may concern.

Four Hawk Returnees To Spark WC Cagemen

Sixteen hopefuls turned out for the opening of practice for the 1962-63 Wilmington College basketball team on Monday, October 15. Among the candidates vying for a starting berth were four lettermen from last year's squad who sparked the Seahawks to a sixth place finish in the National Junior College tournament last year.

The four returning Seahawks who led Wilmington College to an overall record of 22 and 6 are: Gene Bogash, center; Mike Hebron, guard; Harry Buzzell, forward; and Marshall Hamilton, who alternates between forward and center.

It was Bogash whose unprecedented play in scoring 522 points and snatching 344 rebounds in 26 games for a 20.1 scoring average and a 13.2 rebound average led to his selection to the first team All American after the national tournament.

The other lettermen returning this year saw action mainly as reserves on last year's highly talented squad. Mike Hebron in 16 games while accumulating 29 points. Marshall Hamilton, playing in 13 games, racked up 53 points and 70 rebounds. Harry Buzzell totalled 78 points in 20 games last season.

Coach Bill Brooks has rounded up some promising Freshmen. Their added height and huskiness promise to bolster the Hawk attack this year.

The Seahawk mentor reports that he is very well pleased with this year's team. After testing each boy's capabilities he will start preparing in earnest for the squad's first of two scrimmage games with Pembroke College on November 6. Coach Brooks also expects to line up two games apiece with both Camp Lejeune and Campbell College.

The completion of the regular season's schedule has been hampered by Charlotte College's unexpected withdrawal from the Virginia - Carolina Conference. Only Louisburg, Chowan, and Wilmington Colleges remain to make up the conference.

Newcomers Add Strength To Teams, Cole, Ware, To Stand Out In Sports

Tommy Cole and Wray Ware are the featured Wilmington College basketball players in this edition of the Seahawk. Both boys are natives of Danville, Va., and participated actively in baseball as well as basketball before coming to Wilmington College.

Each spent three years on his varsity basketball team in high school and both played on the varsity spad in baseball for four years.

Lead In Playoffs

In addition to their high school athletic careers, both boys sparked the Danville team of the Virginia State Connie Mack League. Tommy and Wray led Danville to the runner up position in the Southeastern Regional playoffs of the Connie Mack League in 1961. The following year they returned to win the playoffs and to advance their team to fifth place in the National Connie Mack League World Series.

Tommy and Wray proved to be outstanding in the field of basketball as well. At the culmination of three fine years of play in high school, Tommy was voted to the All-District Basketball Team in the tough Western District of Virginia. Wray distinguished himself by receiving honorable mention in the balloting.

Shift to Guard

In bringing the boys to Wilmington College, Coach Bill Brooks has shifted them from their customary positions as forwards to those of guards. By doing this he believes that Tommy and Wray will best live up to their potential as outstanding backcourt men for the Seahawks. He states that they will be a great asset to the Wilmington College basketball team.

Tommy and Wray share a great deal of enthusiasm for the Seahawks and Wilmington College and they are planning to complete all four years of their education here.

Varsity Report

By HUGH PASCHAL

The members of the Wilmington College golf team are hard at work in preparation for their match against the faculty challengers. All of the boys are taking full advantage of the college's practice arrangements with Wilmington's Municipal Golf Course.

Scott McKinnon reports that he and the other Seahawk golfers have been scouting the faculty golfers paying particular attention to the games of Thomas Lupton and Fred Toney. The faculty members are rapidly improving their substantial handicaps and are expected to issue their challenge soon.

Coach Bill Brooks greeted four returning lettermen from last year's Seahawk basketball team and a host of freshman hopefuls at the opening of basketball practice on October 15. Among the returnees is big Gene Bogash, back to improve his outstanding record of last year, posted while leading the Seahawks to a 22 and 6 record.

Harry Buzzell, Marshall Hamilton, and Mike Hebron round out the list of lettermen from last year's team. Coach Brooks plans to depend heavily on these talented sophomores to lead the Wilmington College cagers to another successful year.

A great deal of interest has been displayed by the students of Wilmington College in the formation of an Archery Club. A group of college archers headed by Bob Bowden and David Seigler have constructed targets on the baseball field in hopes of drumming up enough interest for the formation of such a club at Wilmington College. Anyone interested is asked to contact either of these boys for the latest information on the subject.

Wilmington College hunters are reporting continued success in their endeavors. The fine crop of doves has brought about many praising remarks from the hunters who have bagged their limits. The squirrel season is now open and a few hunters have reported their successes with the bushy-tailed critters.

Student Archers Work To Raise Active Interest In College Club

A group of students interested in organizing an Archery Club at Wilmington College met at the college on Tuesday, October 16.

With the formation of the Cape Fear Archers in Wilmington, interest in the ancient sport has quickened at Wilmington College and many of the students at the college have displayed an increasing amount of enthusiasm for their own Archery Club.

Bob Bowden and David Seigler, the ablest archers at Wilmington College, have succeeded in securing some hay bales for targets which they placed on the baseball field. All interested Wilmington College archers are invited to try their skill on the range. Informal gatherings will be held on the range at 9:30 a.m. every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, in addition to the regular meetings to be held approximately every two weeks after the official organization of the club.

Wilmington College already boasts several avid amateur archers in addition to Bob and David. Berry Williams, Ken Mills, Randy Coble, Ted Graham, Johnny Allen, Hugh Paschal, and several other students have demonstrated some degree of proficiency with the bow and arrow.

Their aim is to get about ten more interested archers, to organize the club, and to compete against the Cape Fear Archers and several other clubs in the area. They also plan to make use of the land donated by the college for a field archery range as soon as the club is well organized.

Anyone interested in organizing an archery club at Wilmington College is requested to contact either Bob Bowden or David Seigler for the latest information on the club's progress.

Seventy-two years ago October 28th, on Bedloe Island in the New York harbor, a giant gift from the French people to the American people was unveiled and dedicated. It was the Statue of Liberty, designed by Frederic Auguste Bartholdi.

It still stands to greet incoming ships with the following words, by Emma Lazarus, inscribed on its pedestal:

Not Like the brazen giant of Greek fame,
With conquering limbs astride from land to land,
Here at our sea-washed sunset gate shall stand
A mighty woman with a torch, whose flame
Is the imprisoned lightning and her name
Moth of Exile, from her beacon hand
Glows world-wide welcome, her mild eyes command
The air-brided harbor that twin cities frame.
"Keep, ancient lands, your storied pomp," cries she
With silent lips. "Give me your tired, your poor,
Your huddled masses, yearning to be free.
The wretched refuse of your teeming shore.
Send these, the nameless, tempestost, to me,
I lift my lamp beside the golden door."

Shemake Shows Paintings In Hoggard Hall, Represents Evolution Of Technique, Style

The October show on the first floor of Hoggard Hall consists of the oils, woodcuts, and etchings of Ed Shemake. Some fifty in number, they represent a chronological development in technique and subtlety. Throughout the whole show, however, he expresses a sort of contemporary humanism. In doing this he does not set man in the atomic age, or sermonize on his indirectness; he portrays him as a constant idea of his humanity. The stylized figures offer a challenge for us to realize what we are: potentially a fulfillment of man. For example, in one group the female figure is painted without any of the accoutrements which constitute femininity and sometimes effeminacy. Rather the essential femaleness of women predominates.

The seascapes recreate the apex of visual perception of the lights of the shore. The land and water bathed in the light after it has been broken and diffused as if by a prism. In the Power Boat group light is again the subject; also sand an unusual panel effect is given through use of shadows.

In the oil, Nude is not so dramatic as it is an enlightening figure study. "Tis possibly the most "sensual" of the oils in which line impresses the viewer most.

Ed Shemake is presently on sabbatical leave from Salem College where he is the head of the art department. He has exhibited in a large number of shows, but this is the first time this many of his works have been shown together. The showing is a wonderful opportunity for comparing the periods of his work.

If you have not seen the showing or taken time to really "see" the paintings, you have definitely missed several worthwhile experiences.

Summer Travel In Europe Offers Positions With Pay

Do you need a summer job? Would you like to spend a summer in Europe? Well, why don't you do both this summer through ASIS—the American Student Information Service.

This year the ASIS has 3000 summer jobs in Europe for American college students who wish to "earn, learn, and travel, all at the same time. Through ASIS you can be assured of a summer job and also of the opportunity to learn of the people and customers of their countries. The ASIS is also offering grants and cash scholarships up to $175 which will be awarded to the first 1000 applicants.

Three Programs

The ASIS program includes three European Safaris, each with a standard price and a special price for students or teachers. Students may choose their job locations from one of the following: Germany, Israel, Finland, England, Switzerland, France, Norway, Spain, Luxembourg, or Holland.

The job requirements, such as linguistic ability, vary with the type of work, and students may choose jobs which best suit their abilities. A person does not necessarily have to work in order to take part in the ASIS program.

Include Tour, Job

Each European Safari includes a planned tour, a summer job, and ample free time for you to enjoy your holiday. Summer jobs may be obtained for a minimum of our weeks or for the entire three months. In some cases an extension of your work period or perhaps a permanent position may be arranged.

Safari number one has a student price of $150, and begins with orientation in Luxembourg, continuing with a four country tour. If you choose this safari, you are expected to make your own travel arrangements to and from Europe. However, you may participate in an ASIS student ship crossing costing $360 round-trip.

number two is $599. This safari includes your transportation by a modern jet airliner to Paris and an extensive tour of the city. Places of interest include the world-famous Louvre and the Cathedral of Notre Dame. Students taking part in this safari or number three may extend their tour if they wish, as their return ticket is valid for one year after the date of their departure from New York.

Number three is priced for students at $799. This tour includes Paris, Brussels, Amsterdam, Venice, Rome, Florence, and other well-known European cities.

"To the first 1000 applicants who are registered students or teachers at accredited colleges, ASIS will award a $125 travel grant for participation in safari number three, a $75 travel grant for participation in safari number two, or a $25 travel grant for participation in safari number one."

Germany Popular

Of the countries chosen for summer jobs, Germany is the most popular because of the variety of jobs offered and the fact that wages and working conditions are slightly higher than in other countries. Some of the jobs available in Germany include: factory work, hospital work, resort-hotel work, farm work, and construction work.

In Israel, Finland, and England farm work is offered. Finns also hire American girls for child care. Switzerland and Luxembourg employ resort-hotel workers; while in France, good-to-fluent speaking ability of French is required for camp counseling. Young men may find jobs in Norway doing farm work or in Spain doing camp work. Positions in Holland include hotel work, farm work, lumber yard work, and cannery work.

Pay and requirement vary with each job. In some cases students receive free room and board. However, if it is not offered, the ASIS will make arrangements for the students. During the course of each safari students receive complete health and accident insurance coverage for 80 days and a student pass allowing you special discounts throughout Europe.

Pen Pushers Form Various Committees

The committees for the Pen Pushers Club have been named by Sondra Wilson, president.

The following were appointed: Sarah Burgess and Peggy Shelton, Hospitality Committee; Betty Lou Collins (chairman), Sam Garner, and Gene Marlowe, Publicity Committee.

Walter Winton, Sandra Schwartz, and Doug Neilson will work with Ritchie Watson who is vice-president of the club and chairman of the Program Committee.

Johnny Lindner, John Abbott, Freddy Newber, Louise Ambrosiano, Carol Fladd, Loretta Bancroft, and Randy Johnson and Beth Fineberg (co-editors of "With Pen In Hand"), compose the Editorial Committee.

Students are urged to submit their writings in the forms of themes, essays, poems, and short stories for publication immediately to either the co-editors, the president, or to Shannon Morton, advisor.

The next meeting of the Pen Pushers Club will be November 5, at the home of Sandra Schwartz.

Congress Hears Safety Proposal

Highway Patrolman, Ken Johnson, addressed the members of the student congress on a proposed safety project as "the result of an extremely tragic accident that has come upon one of the members of this college."

Johnson said that he felt his speech was late, since one life had already been lost; but the point was that we cannot afford to loose any more lives.

"The only thing we (the Highway Patrol) can do is punish you if you do wrong. We have no way to stop you.

Safety Program

"What we want is an educational program here at the college to keep all phases of safety before the students all the time."

"I would like to see a committee formed here to study the problem of safety at the college . . . study forms of action on the local and state level."

Johnson expressed his belief that a group of college students could do more than the Department of Motor Vehicles to bring about legislation to further safety.

Sets Precedent

"The publicity value if Wilmington College took this action would be nationwide," said Johnson, "not because this is a group of people, but because it is a group of young people."

Speaking on his proposed college safety club, Johnson suggested such possible projects as, "Have every vehicle at the college inspected, driver courses instituted, you can have Governor Sanford—any of a staff of lawyers from Chapel Hill come to talk to you on a point of law. You pay for these facilities; use them."

"You're not going to be popular if you adopt this sort of program, but you will be respected," said the Patrolman.

SRO Swings Into Production For Play, "Prince of Parthia"

By SAM GARNER

The Wilmington College Theatre has received an invitation from the North Carolina Society for the Preservation of Antiquities, Inc., to present "The Prince of Parthia" by Thomas Godfrey. The performance will be given at the Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, in the Virginia Dare Ballroom for the Society's Annual Meeting on Thursday, December 6, 1962.

Also, in the S.R.O. Theatre on the Wilmington College campus, the play will be presented on Monday and Tuesday, December 3 and 4, at 8:00 p.m. The tragedy was given in Chapel Hill last year and, on Saturday, April 14, the Carolina Dramatic Association presented honorary award for this presentation.

The cast for the play was announced on November 8, 1962, and is as follows: Arsaces—Robert Autry, Vardanes—Ray Oxendine, Gotarzes—Bert Gornito, Barzaphernes—Dale Stevens, Lysias—Wayne Robinson, Phraates—Sam Garner, Thermusa—Martha Parker, Evanthe—Pat Beasley, and Cleone—Beth Fineberg. "The Prince of Parthia" originally a five-act play was freely adapted by Martha Parker and Tommy Landen in the fall of 1961, retaining the iambic pentameter verse.

Godfrey, it is recalled, wrote the play while residing in Wilmington. It is the first play written by an American to be performed in America by a professional company of actors. The play was produced on April 24, 1767, too late for Godfrey to see the production. He died August 3, 1763, and was buried in the cemetery of St. James Episcopal Church in Wilmington.

The play is directed by Doug W. Swink; stage manager for the production is Carl Sneeden, lighting will be executed by Louise Ambrosiano, and scenery Sandy Carr, costume mistress is construction is by the Stage Crafts Workshop.

The play evolves around characters that are as interesting as their names. Arsaces—Robert Autry, is described as being generous, brave, wise, and good where Vardanes—Ray Oxendine, is a haughty prince that eyes all in his way to the Empire as contempt of a stern manner.

Gotarzes—Bert Gornito, a quiet brother; Barzaphernes—Dale Stevens, a person of great loyalty; Lysias—Wayne Robinson, a person that is loyal only when it will benefit him personally; and Phraates—Sam Garner, devoted to the old order and to justice; make up the list of interesting male characters.

Thermusa—Martha Parker, is a Queen of mixed emotions and purposes; Evanthe—Pat Beasley, adds a gentle touch to a tragic ending; and Cleone—Beth Fineberg, is a person of great responsibility.

Local Lawyer Talks On Court Reform

Gil Burnett, Wilmington attorney, spoke to the Panmathian Society November 1 on the then upcoming North Carolina Court Reform Amendment.

Under the system, Burnett explained that the Recorder's Courts and Justice of the Peace Courts would be abolished and a District Court instituted in their place. A uniform system of court fees and costs would be established statewide.

Back Yard Courts

Speaking against Justice of the Peace Courts, the lawyer gave examples of their having been held in "back yards, front porches, over the meat counter of a butcher shop, and in a funeral parlor."

"In most criminal cases before the Justice of the Peace gets one red cent, he must find you guilty. Is that right? Is it not?"

"Is it right for him to get paid only if you are found guilty?" Burnett asked the group. "If a man is on a salary, you're not going to worry too much about his decision not being just."

Burnett also mentioned the fact that men had awaited trial in jail for thirty to sixty days because they couldn't pay the bond premium and had then been found innocent.

Explains Redistricting

Under the reform bill, counties that only have court one day a week with an underpaid judge would presumably be grouped into a district with a regular judge on a decent salary. "In Brunswick County (a one day a week court) you have a judge who hasn't even finished high school. The justice you can expect to get from a court like that leaves a question mark."

"A stream rises no higher than its source," quoted the attorney, "By this I mean that justice can be no better than the men who run it."

Speaking on the effect of the bill upon himself and other lawyers, Burnett said, "This isn't just for the lawyers benefits—I'm going to be out of a job, I'm going to have to learn some new law."

Chess Club Rebukes Poor Care To Sets In Student Lounge

"I would like to remind the students that once you enter college you take on certain responsibilities, one of which is not tearing up chess sets," said Jack Mason at the Oct. 29 meeting of the student congress.

Mason, vice-president of the Chess Club, exhibited several chess pieces that had been broken in the three days that the sets had been available for use by any student of the college.

Calls Down Immaturity

"We thought that we had adult students," said Mason. "Evidently we don't."

The sets were being issued to the students by the radio station. An argument ensued as to who was responsible for keeping and distributing the sets.

Suggested Solution

Nat Bost, student body president, concluded the discussion by suggesting that the Chess Club take the sets out of the radio station . . . set up a schedule and have a member to be responsible for each hour in charge of the sets.

Plans were also made for taking initial action to acquire a place for playing chess and cards, other than the eating area.

Winter Quarter Registration Set

After fall exams, November 18, 19, 20, there will be a short break before registration for winter quarter, which begins on Tuesday, November 27, and extends through Wednesday.

Students should note which day and what time to register according to their alphabetical grouping. The system will be different from last quarter only in that it will begin from the last of the alphabet and work back from A to Z.

Tuesday	8:30-12:00	S-Z
	1:30-4:30	L-R
Wednesday	8:30-12:00	F-K
	1:30-4:30	A-E

Tuesday night only, from 6:30 to 8:00, registration will be open for those wishing to take night classes.

CIRCLE K SPONSORS CAR WASH

Today is the last day of the Circle K car wash.

The cost is $1.00 and covers a wash job, drying, and vacuuming inside.

Hours for the wash are from 10:30 to 1:30.

Approximately fifteen boys, all members of the Circle K, have been engaging in the project since Wednesday.

On the first day of the car wash, at closing time, twelve cars had been serviced by the group.

Proceeds from the project will go toward the homecoming game.

Judy Matthews was selected by the members of the club as their sponsor for Homecoming Queen at last Tuesday's meeting.

In efforts to make the homecoming festivities a success, besides helping to finance the dance, the organization hopes to put three or four units in the parade.

Campus Briefs

Three new pieces of furniture have been added to the almost empty publications room in the Student Services Building.

The new additions are two tables and a filing cabinet. The tables will be used for layouts and as writing tables. The filing cabinet will serve to keep records, pictures, and other data.

Both the Fledgling and the Seahawk use the facilities of the publications room.

Lloyd Hudson, associate professor of music, has ordered robes for the Wilmington College Chorus, of which he is director.

The new robes are the colors of the college; they are green with gold dickies. These will not replace the jackets that the chorus has been wearing, but will be worn at various special events.

Members of the Telephone Directory Committee are working under the co-chairmanship of Kay Wells and Nancy Lucas to have the directories out before the Thanksgiving break.

Concrete plans for the Sophomore Class project are expected to be mentioned at this coming Tuesday night's Student Council meeting. Karl Allen, president of the Sophomore Class, mentioned at the Oct. 29 council meeting that several initial ideas had been formulated and that suggestions would be welcome.

Mary Henderson will serve as head cheerleader and Ellen Tomz will act as assistant head this year.

Also chosen were (and returning for the second year) Nancy Bradshaw, Jane Wooten, and Francis Davis.

Betty Lou Collins, Memory Farrar, Louise Turner, Sara Avery, and Mary Macris, and alternates, Georgia Zezefellis and Jean Thorpe complete the squad.

Judging this tryout were faculty members, Frank Allen, Claude Howell, and Dorothy Marshall. Student judges were Nat Bost, Martha Jay Staton, Doug Carmichael, and Sondra Wilson.

To Whom Authority

By Louise Ambrosiano

Recently four male students of Wilmington College were involved in theft.

Since dishonesty, however deplorable, is rather rampant in various forms and degrees in our society, this particular instance did not have propounding repercussions, to say the least.

There were, however, two specifically noteworthy reactions among the other students.

Some people discarded the entire incident with a shrug, regarding it as an undesirable but inescapable part of human nature. Others were quite alarmed and shocked, and the hue and cry of "honor system" arose from the multitude.

Both of these attitudes are wrong.

First of all, stealing is wrong, according to moral law and the dictates of society. Therefore, when it occurs it should not be condoned in any way, especially in the apathetic, condescending attitude of others.

Then, in regard to an honor system, it is just not feasible. It is a fallacy. It is for this reason that a true, unadulterated communist state cannot exist, and if it is an impossibility in adults, how in all probability can it be proposed as a solution to dishonesty among the immature college students?

Proper authority (which is derived from God's authority) must be adequately, appropriately, and specifically designated; and it must be exercised solely by those to whom it is designated.

This honor system which is supposedly for the betterment of the student body will succeed only in pitting the students against each other with a consequent loss of self-respect. This is again a mirroring of communism.

The result will be comparable to totalitarianism.

Was The Cuban Crisis Necessary?

By Ritchie Watson

This editorial is directed toward the many who privately feel, though they do not say so, that the action that our government took in the Cuban crisis was morally wrong and unnecessary.

It cannot be denied that many students at Wilmington College must be considered in this category. In a crisis as severe as the Cuban crisis, there is no place for an uncertain or bewildered attitude. The reason for America's action must be clearly stated and explained. "Why do we have the right to blockade Cuba?" They are just doing the same thing we have done for years." This is a question that occurs over and over again in any discussion of Cuba. It refers, of course, to the establishment of U.S. missile bases in England, Italy, Turkey, and other countries. The differences between our own bases and the Soviet bases in Cuba are clear and evident:

United States forces and arms were sent abroad for purely defensive purposes. With the destruction of the democratic states of Eastern Europe complete, with communist forces on the move in Greece and Iran, with the engulfing of China imminent, American action was needed to halt the encroachment of Soviet imperialistic forces. In contrast, the missile buildup in Cuba can only be termed offensive in nature. Already the Cubans have tried unsuccessfully to ferment unrest in a number of Latin American nations, notably Venezuela. Russian missiles in Cuba have only one purpose: to intimidate the United States and to prevent it from resisting communist aggression in South America by the threat of nuclear destruction.

U.S. missile bases were established with the mutual agreement of each nation involved under mutual security pacts. There was nothing clandestine in these agreements, and they were signed in the glare of world publicity. The Cuban missile bases, on the contrary, were constructed secretly without a mutual defense pact and without the knowledge of the Cuban people, of the Russian people, or of the world. In this action the U.S.S.R. has inadvertently confessed to the sinister aspects of its action.

Vague moralistic reasoning is also used to condemn our actions in Cuba. Is it right, the question goes, to push the world to the brink of nuclear holocaust over such a small issue as Cuba? Such a question merely confuses the issue by placing the destruction of humanity on the shoulders of the United States. In the final analysis, this responsibility rests with the Soviet Union; the United States has taken measures to defend its government and those of the other Latin nations. The first shot, you may be sure, will not be fired from an American gun without communist provocation. Is it right to risk world destruction? Let us counter this question with another question. Is self-defense morally wrong or out-of-date?

Those who say that we take a stand for nothing are wrong.

The issue at stake is bigger than Cuba or the blockade. It concerns the future of the world. In its recent action the United States has shown a rare display of courage and determination. Our government has reversed, at least for the time being, a series of humiliating defeats and meaningless compromises and concessions. It has shown it is ready to defend our form of government and our way of life. God grant that this determination continue to lead our nation in the life-and-death struggles to come.

Letters To Editor

Dear Editor,

I WANT ACTION. I for one am tired of hearing how apathetic the student body is. I am weary of the insults hurled at all of us, when many are unwarranted. It is disgusting to listen to some people in the pub expound on the inadequacy of student leadership, in particular the Seahawk, and they themselves never do anything constructive.

On the other hand, it is somewhat tiring to hear replies to the charges from the staff. I can think of no tactful way to say this, so I shall be frank.

In a school or any organization, the members are only as dynamic as the leaders. Where there is no vision, there is stagnation. When the leaders close their minds to the possibilities of their "herd" and consider only the surface talents, there can be no great movement forward. I feel that it is imperative that we realize our own capabilities, and that they be realized. Then we can achieve a higher sense of value in more excellent things.

The academic standards set forth at Wilmington College are high and admirable; but the social interest, spirit of unity, and pride in our school is disastrously low. As we have been charged to "get with it"; I challenge our leaders to stop minimizing the abilities of the student body; make us feel that we are part of this thing. So much depends on our leadership.

Out of necessity (self-defense), may I say that there is no personal feeling behind this letter. Quite the contrary, as a member of the student body I write out of deep concern of our plight.

I am confident that, if I am right, the people to whom this letter is primarily written will realize the issue and consider this viewpoint.

Peggy Shelton

Dear Editor,

Why is it that Wilmington College has no instant mass media of communication among the buildings? Word of mouth and a few partially ignored bulletin boards are all the college offers.

What would happen in the event of fire or a disaster drill? This would merely bring disbelief or panic without effective warnings and directions.

A called meeting is held with a low percentage of members.

Lost articles, important or not, are forever in getting found, if found at all. Such things could be avoided with effective communications.

School spirit would be aided if students could find out what and where things were taking place.

Our college needs awareness, and I think a public address system would help immensely.

Sandra Schwarz

Dear Editor,

On Tuesday night, October 30, I attended a Democratic rally in Lumberton. It was typical of many political rallies; however, one essential facet was apparently missing. There were no substantial (valid issues). How similar this is to the campaigns of the nominees for freshman class officers. There is an issue now, if not then. An issue of vital importance is the students' personal conduct in the cafeteria.

When I officially came to Wilmington College for the first autumn quarter, I believed that the condition was caused by the administration. The pub was overcrowded and congested which resulted in excessive noise, confusion, and constant disruptions. At that time the apparent solution was to have more tables and chairs in the rear of the pub.

Yes, let's take a look at the other side. By everyday actions the students are proving that they—themselves—cannot take care of the facilities already provided. The card tables are becoming dilapidated. The furniture is dirty and smeared with soft drinks that have been spilled and allowed to dry. Paper, dirty plates and glasses are discarded on the floor. And who is to blame? The students must bear the responsibility. If this is to continue I fear that the use of the cafeteria for student recreation will be discontinued altogether. This is not only my opinion; but also, I have been told, it is being considered by the administration and many of the faculty members.

How many hours does the average student waste in the pub when he could be legitimately studying? Is it imperative that the students of Wilmington College evaluate their study schedules and their personal conduct in the cafeteria.

THE DRIFT

By Carla Schiller

For those unheard voices who wish to express themselves in current events and feel that we are "cut off" from the rest of the world, the National Student Association is your answer. It would be beneficial for every student to look into this if he doesn't mind exerting himself a little.

Thank you's are in order to Ronnie Steton and Dino Summerlin for providing the entertainment at our recent Halloween Dance. It's too bad that we couldn't hear the Baldhead Island Singers for the unnecessary noise from the "gwoop up front". (This is college?) People should at least give standing room to the performers or have some supervision over their own conduct and show a little respect for others.

Speaking of insanity, have you noticed the prices in the school cafeteria? Ha! What a farce. But you have to give them credit for the quick and efficient service in the line.

Since basketball season is dribbling near, why don't we get a mascot? (Well, it was only suggestion). Discussion over this was brought up last year in a Student Council meeting but nothing was ever done about it. I wonder why.

It is predicted that a NO-DOOZ boom will be on the in next few weeks.

Students Slack-off

We should all be ashamed that neither the student council nor the student body asserted themselves in the recent disciplinary action taken by the faculty Discipline Committee. The student council constitution provides for a student judiciary committee. I will not plead the Fifth Amendment; I did not know it. How many of us did? There was no evidence, whatsoever, that anyone at all knew of the provision. Here is its text: Article IV; Section 6: "The Judicial Committee shall consist of a chairman appointed by the president of the Student Government and of the two representatives from each class. The Committee shall review all charges brought to the attention of the Chairman, and shall submit to the Student Council all charges that it deems valid."

Now, I by no means propose that anyone try to change what has been done. What we must do is make sure that we do not fall in the future. There are those who say that a faculty committee is going to do what it wishes, regardless of any Student Council Judiciary decision. Such an attitude is illogical. The Student Council is a legal body and the Constitution a legal document; therefore, the Judiciary Committee is legally empowered to act in disciplinary matters. If that power is denied, the whole constitution must be denied, and that is quite unlikely. No one can say we have been denied any rights. I say we have failed to accept the duty which accompanies a right. I propose that the Student Council take immediate steps to insure against further failures. There must be cooperation between student body and faculty so that each can do its job. The Student Judiciary can afford the individual protection which will likely go wanting without the Judiciary. If we do not defend our rights, no one else will.

"Incomparable Uncle Zeb"

WC Faculty Blasts Inadequate Library

In view of the fact that many comments have been made, both pro and con, concerning the library, the staff interviewed six faculty members for their opinions on this issue.

Richard G. Stone, Jr., Assistant Professor of Social Sciences:

"Because of the simple truism that there is so much material written on my particular subject, there should be more books available to our department. At the present time, fifteen of my own personal books are being used by my students. Furthermore, I have a better collection of books on my subject than the library does. This isn't right; I don't get 250,000 dollars a year from the tax payers. Because of this inadequacy, I am having to resort to paperback books. We should have a minimum of 50,000 volumes in our library if we plan to become a four year institution. If we don't have money, we should get it, even if it means raising tuition."

Fred Vallianos, Assistant Professor of Psychology:

"Education has gotten outside of the classroom, and students have become involved in self-initiated study. This, in itself, calls for an adequately furnished library. I will say that the library is inadequate because of apparent apathy on the part of both students and faculty. The library in essence becomes nonexistent if students do not use it. I know of at least one department that has not used all of its allocations from last year. It is beyond me how any department can avoid using it."

Julia Evans Everette, Assistant Professor of English:

"I think there is a lack of closeness between the various departments and the library. The English Department was closely allied with the library only for a few days during Library Orientation."

Thomas C. McCall, Associate Professor of English:

"I think the collection we have is very good, and the money spent has been spent wisely. Our biggest problem is that we need more volumes and that we need more money. Any outside financial aid to the library must be completely unrestricted. The library staff and faculty who know the needs must decide what volumes will be bought. We are waiting for the time when we can have a browsing room as well as a reading and studying room and conference rooms. Since we don't have them now, we must make the best of what we've got. Those who knew the old library ought to consider the present one a living dream."

Mrs. Elizabeth G. Freeman, Head Librarian:

"We have more magazines than we need, and the reference section is the heart of any library."

Larry Ingle, Assistant Professor of Social Sciences:

"The library is tragically inadequate. We just don't have enough books—good books—to read. We have too many periodicals and should take the New York Times Newspaper daily instead of the one we secure on Sundays. I require my students to read two books each quarter. This is approximately 160 books and we don't have this many good books. As far as I am concerned, the historical novels are useless except for recreational purposes. We have an abundance of these books. There are no provisions to buy current books and best sellers. The problem is two-fold. The first is the lack of money, and the second is the inertia of the faculty in concerning themselves with this problem. The result of all this is that the students are not asking any questions and they are not seeking any answers."

Mr. Zebrowski Leaves After Years Of Service

By STAN WINBORNE

Uncle Zeb is leaving. He is past the age of retirement and will stop teaching after this quarter.

George Zebrowski has helped tremendously in making Wilmington College what it is now and what it will be. Dr. William M. Randall has said of him, "I can't praise him enough for what he has done."

He has helped in a broad sense by the constant improving of his department, but he has helped in a more personal sense by his relationship with the students.

His own humorous brand of teaching, his favorite subject, Zebology, has made this College a saner place for students to learn.

Mr. Zebrowski was born in Warsaw Poland, and came to the United States at a very early age. He obtained his B. S. from Purdue in 1921 and his M. S. in 1923. He then went to Pennsylvania University to study for his P. H. D. When his dissertation was destroyed by fire, he left and went to teach at Villanova. He taught for a number of years at Villanova and then established a small independent laboratory making microscopic slides. Later he went to N.Y.U. and studied law, and upon completion of these studies he went to St. Louis to practice. In 1954 he was hired by "old Wilmington College" and was for a while the sole member of the biology department.

Uncle Zeb has established himself as an authority in the field of biology. He is listed in American Men of Science and has discovered ten different types of marine fungi.

He has also established himself as an authority on love-life. This knowledge was gained by trial and error and has been passed along, in quantity, to many of his students.

Mr. Zebrowski says that in his life he has discovered that what one has to do and what one really likes to do are two different things.

"A dream is more real than everything that is real," he says, and to illustrate this he has submitted two poems he has written. The first was composed when he was young, and the latter was written in his later years.

I SPEAK TO YOU

I speak to you, undaunted youth,
Dreamers of love, the cosmic plan,
To hearts that keep their faith in man,
To pilgrims at the shrine of Truth —
Where Truth is chained to prison walls,
Who brave the hemlock and the gall —
I speak to you.

Howell Emphasizes To Pen Pushers Club Desperate Need For Aesthetic Development

By Sondra Wilson

Enthusiasm, a seemingly dead subject and nonexistent reaction, was certainly evident at the Pen Pushers' meeting Monday night as this group and guest speaker, Claude Howell, discussed possibilities of aesthetic development at Wilmington College.

What, precisely, is the college doing to promote aesthetic development and cultural interest was the proposed question upon which the group deliberated for over two and one-half hours.

Garrulity was not in vain; definite action resulted.

In order not to obliterate the primary purpose of the Pen Pushers Club (that of stimulating creating writing), a number of volunteers from this organization proposed to form a separate committee to initiate cultural programs such as concerts, lectures, campus periodicals, and art exhibitions.

This particular committee will appeal to the student council and various departments and clubs for their wholehearted support in this effort. The general consensus of opinion was that this form of awakening could take place on campus if students were willing to show interest and effort in its gradual formation.

There was agreement that the first obstacle to overcome was to get rid of any misconstrued ideas that a project of this kind was to benefit limited groups such as the Pen Pushers or the Panmathians.

Feeling was that every group, clique, following, or student at the college was ready and a bit impatient for more activity around the campus and more of a college atmosphere.

Howell, in citing several opportunities that student were apathetically ignoring, asked, "Are you taking advantage of the free tickets given to you to hear the chamber music presented at Thalian Hall which merits full audiences in New York City?" "Are you taking advantage of Mr. Swink's plays, Mr. Hudson's concerts, or my art exhibits?"

He mentioned that Wilmington College was experiencing growing pains and that it would take ideas and persons to make these ideas realities before a campus similar to other universities could begin to develop.

The Pen Pushers seemed certain that the participants of the Aesthetic Committee would not go unrecognized principally because of the many men and women in the community who would be willing and "able" to help a group of enthusiasts achieve its end.

There was an overwhelming response to Mr. Howell's subject. Only time can tell how successful and penetrating its effects will be.

You have but one, this one hard choice,
To stoop unto the vulgar plain,
Or live your lives in loneliness.

TRUTH

I fain would ask of every sage
Who loud acclaims and honors Truth

Why Sorrow seeks the haunts of age,
And Joy but deigns to dwell with youth.

Away with Truth, her knowing frown;

I saviour not her cynic breed.
Has she not robbed me of my faith

With her materialistic creed?
That holy faith which mothers teach —

To onward sons. So fair it gleams
A lovely star beyond my reach.

Away with Truth! I want my dreams.

I say we have failed to accept the duty which accompanies a right. I propose that the Student Council take immediate steps to insure against further failures. There must be cooperation between student body and faculty so that each can do its job. The Student Judiciary can afford the individual protection which will likely go wanting without the Judiciary. If we do not defend our rights, no one else will.

WC Faculty Blasts Inadequate Library

In view of the fact that many comments have been made, both pro and con, concerning the library, the staff interviewed six faculty members for their opinions on this issue.

Richard G. Stone, Jr., Assistant Professor of Social Sciences:

"Because of the simple truism that there is so much material written on my particular subject, there should be more books available to our department. At the present time, fifteen of my own personal books are being used by my students. Furthermore, I have a better collection of books on my subject than the library does. This isn't right; I don't get 250,000 dollars a year from the tax payers. Because of this inadequacy, I am having to resort to paperback books. We should have a minimum of 50,000 volumes in our library if we plan to become a four year institution. If we don't have money, we should get it, even if it means raising tuition."

Fred Vallianos, Assistant Professor of Psychology:

"Education has gotten outside of the classroom, and students have become involved in self-initiated study. This, in itself, calls for an adequately furnished library. I will say that the library is inadequate because of apparent apathy on the part of both students and faculty. The library in essence becomes nonexistent if students do not use it. I know of at least one department that has not used all of its allocations from last year. It is beyond me how any department can avoid using it."

Julia Evans Everette, Assistant Professor of English:

"I think there is a lack of closeness between the various departments and the library. The English Department was closely allied with the library only for a few days during Library Orientation."

Thomas C. McCall, Associate Professor of English:

"I think the collection we have is very good, and the money spent has been spent wisely. Our biggest problem is that we need more volumes and that we need more money. Any outside financial aid to the library must be completely unrestricted. The library staff and faculty who know the needs must decide what volumes will be bought. We are waiting for the time when we can have a browsing room as well as a reading and studying room and conference rooms. Since we don't have them now, we must make the best of what we've got. Those who knew the old library ought to consider the present one a living dream."

Mrs. Elizabeth G. Freeman, Head Librarian:

"We have more magazines than we need, and the reference section is the heart of any library."

Larry Ingle, Assistant Professor of Social Sciences:

"The library is tragically inadequate. We just don't have enough books—good books—to read. We have too many periodicals and should take the New York Times Newspaper daily instead of the one we secure on Sundays. I require my students to read two books each quarter. This is approximately 180 books and we don't have this many good books. As far as I am concerned, the historical novels are useless except for recreational purposes. We have an abundance of these books. There are no provisions to buy current books and best sellers. The problem is two-fold. The first is the lack of money, and the second is the inertia of the faculty in concerning themselves with this problem. The result of all this is that the students are not asking any questions and they are not seeking any answers."

Mr. Zebrowski Leaves After Years Of Service

By STAN WINBORNE

Uncle Zeb is leaving. He is past the age of retirement and will stop teaching after this quarter.

George Zebrowski has helped tremendously in making Wilmington College what it is now and what it will be. Dr. William M. Randall has said of him, "I can't praise him enough for what he has done."

He has helped in a broad sense by the constant improving of his department, but he has helped in a more personal sense by his relationship with the students.

His own humorous brand of teaching, his favorite subject, Zebology, has made this College a saner place for students to learn.

Mr. Zebrowski was born in Warsaw Poland, and came to the United States at a very early age. He obtained his B. S. from Purdue in 1921 and his M. S. in 1923. He then went to Pennsylvania University to study for his P. H. D. When his dissertation was destroyed by fire, he left and went to teach at Villanova. He taught for a number of years at Villanova and then established a small independent laboratory making microscopic slides. Later he went to N.Y.U. and studied law, and upon completion of these studies he went to St. Louis to practice. In 1954 he was hired by "old Wilmington College" and was for a while the sole member of the biology department.

Uncle Zeb has established himself as an authority in the field of biology. He is listed in American Men of Science and has discovered ten different types of marine fungi.

He has also established himself as an authority on lovelife. This knowledge was gained by trial and error and has been passed along, in quantity, to many of his students.

Mr. Zebrowski says that in his life he has discovered that what one has to do and what one really likes to do are two different things.

"A dream is more real than everything that is real," he says, and to illustrate this he has submitted two poems he has written. The first was composed when he was young, and the latter was written in his later years.

I SPEAK TO YOU

I speak to you, undaunted youth,
Dreamers of love, the cosmic plan,
To hearts that keep their faith in man,
To pilgrims at the shrine of Truth —
Where Truth is chained to prison walls,
Who brave the hemlock and the gall —
I speak to you.

Howell Emphasizes To Pen Pushers Club Desperate Need For Aesthetic Development

By Sondra Wilson

Enthusiasm, a seemingly dead subject and nonexistent reaction, was certainly evident at the Pen Pushers' meeting Monday night as this group and guest speaker, Claude Howell, discussed possibilities of aesthetic development at Wilmington College.

What, precisely, is the college doing to promote aesthetic development and cultural interest was the proposed question upon which the group deliberated for over two and one-half hours.

Garrulity was not in vain; definite action resulted.

In order not to obliterate the primary purpose of the Pen Pushers Club (that of stimulating creating writing), a number of volunteers from this organization proposed to form a separate committee to initiate cultural programs such as concerts, lectures, campus periodicals, and art exhibitions.

This particular committee will appeal to the student council and various departments and clubs for their wholehearted support in this effort. The general consensus of opinion was that this form of awakening could take place on campus if students were willing to show interest and effort in its gradual formation.

There was agreement that the first obstacle to overcome was to get rid of any misconstrued ideas that a project of this kind was to benefit limited groups such as the Pen Pushers or the Panmathians.

Feeling was that every group, clique, following, or student at the college was ready and a bit impatient for more activity around the campus and more of a college atmosphere.

Howell, in citing several opportunities that student were apathetically ignoring, asked, "Are you taking advantage of the free tickets given to you to hear the chamber music presented at Thalian Hall which merits full audiences in New York City?" "Are you taking advantage of Mr. Swink's plays, Mr. Hudson's concerts, or my art exhibits?"

He mentioned that Wilmington College was experiencing growing pains and that it would take ideas and persons to make these ideas realities before a campus similar to other universities could begin to develop.

The Pen Pushers seemed certain that the participants of the Aesthetic Committee would not go unrecognized principally because of the many men and women in the community who would be willing and "able" to help a group of enthusiasts achieve its end.

There was an overwhelming response to Mr. Howell's subject. Only time can tell how successful and penetrating its effects will be.

You have but one, this one hard choice,
To stoop unto the vulgar plain,
Or live your lives in loneliness.

TRUTH

I fain would ask of every sage
Who hoid acclaims and honors
Truth

Why Sorrow seeks the haunts of age,
And Joy but deigns to dwell with youth.

Away with Truth, her knowing frown;

I saviour not her cynic breed.
Has she not robbed me of my faith

With her materialistic creed?
That holy faith which mothers teach —

To wayward sons. So fair it gleams
A lovely star beyond my reach.

Away with Truth! I want my dreams.

Pub, Library Receive Conflicting Reactions

Your intentions were good ones. Last week-end was reserved especially for exam preparation but somehow the purpose was obliterated by more enticing and less tedious endeavors.

As exams draw closer, more and more students begin to realize that they are not prepared to meet their fate. Some are giving up, some are getting shakes, and a few are going in headlong, and confident.

In the library, silence reigns and hair is being pulled out, in quantity.

Consider the following "In-formation and Try" column.

Instead of flopping into the pub every class break, try the library for an hour of concentrated study. Instead of screaming #/Z&, I've got five exams in one day, try flunking in one grand conflagration. Instead of somber meditation over a chess move for two hours, try serious

Waterfowl Outlook Shows Few Ducks

Due to the drought on northern Canada this past summer, the predictions for the national outlook on the coming waterfowl season point toward a bad year. This drought, which has badly damaged the summer breeding grounds, is why waterfowl regulations include some of the most restrictive seasonal and bag limits of recent years.

Even with this drab national outlook, the local situation looks bright. In recent aerial surveys a large number of blacks and greenheads have shown up on the area. Also, several people have reported a large buildup in the size of a raft of geese in the Cape Fear River near Big Island.

The season opens Saturday at noon and many WC students will be looking forward to a big opening day shoot.

It won't be long before the second half of the split season on dove opens. Many Wilmington College hunters are eagerly awaiting the chance to add to their totals of the first half of the season. From present indications, it looks as though the birds will be accommodating—if the hunter is good enough.

Wilmington College hunters are out en masse this season.

Carolina Deer Seem Plentiful

Season reports show that deer populations have exploded to an all-time high with 13 1/2 million of America's number one game animal elusively filling this autumn's deer coverts.

"The statewide situation looks encouraging with the continued high populations in the eastern swamplands and in the Piedmont area around Uwharrie Wildlife Management Area and Camp Butner," says F. B. Barick, chief of the N. C. Game Division. Last year's kill has not hurt the population in any part of the range, according to information at hand. Overwintering populations have been at or near peak levels and in some very local spots they have been a little too high.

The basic season, for antlered bucks only, has been open since October 15. Area hunters have over seven weeks remaining to down their prey with the season ending on New Year's Day. With two days added, the archery pre-season provides an extra Friday and Saturday, increasing the total to 20 days for the bow enthusiasts.

A Seahawk hunter has already hit the jackpot. Sophomore hunting enthusiast, Steve Culbreth, brought home a ten-point trophy while hunting with the Island Creek Hunting Club. Steve has been very enthused with this season's prospects. "This is going to be a good season," he said, "the weather has been ideal and I have already seen several deer."

Finally, with the opening of the popular duck season Saturday, many more of our Seahawk hunters will be taking to the swamps.

Charlotte Club Pulls Out

Charlotte College, one of four members of the Virginia-Carolina Athletic Conference in the past, will not compete in conference basketball competition this coming season.

In an unexpected letter from Irving J. Edelman, basketball mentor at Charlotte College, Coach Bill Brooks was informed that the decision had been made after much serious consideration.

Sites Problems
Among the reasons cited for the withdrawal were the impending addition of a junior year and the corresponding need for developing contacts with schools upon which their athletic relations would have to depend, and the vast distance and inordinate travel problems which have kept Charlotte College from being any more than a distant member of the conference.

This decision will have an important effect on the small four school conference. Charlotte's withdrawal will leave only Chowan, Louisburg, and Wilmington to compete for conference titles. This is the minimum number of members that an organized league should have for effective competition. The future does not look bright for the conference; on the contrary, a dark shadow looms over it.

WC Leave Soon
Wilmington College hopes to become a four year institution in the very near future, itself. This, of course, will eliminate them from the competition and leave only Chowan and Louisburg as conference members.

Conference competition has been primarily in the sports of basketball and baseball. The league has operated under its present name since 1958 when it was comprised of nine schools. Campbell, Presbyterian, Frederick College, and Edward's and Oak Ridge Military Academies were then members, along with the present four member schools.

The conference operated for two seasons before five of the nine schools withdrew. Campbell, Presbyterian, and Frederick expanded to four year colleges, thereby becoming ineligible to remain as members. Edwards and Oak Ridge withdrew for other reasons.

"I'm tired of your having to work every night, Clarence."

Proposed Archery Club Readies For Chartering

Wilmington College's proposed new Archery Club is fast becoming a reality. The students interested in forming the club held their second meeting in room L-214 Tuesday, October 30.

In anticipation of an enthusiastic response from the students and faculty of Wilmington College, the club elected a slate of officers at the meeting.

Bowden President

Bob Bowden, perhaps the most enthusiastic archer at Wilmington College, was elected president. Berry Williams was named the club's vice-president, with Randy Coble elected to the secretary-treasurer post. The important position of range captain, the officer in charge of range safety and discipline, will be filled by Ted Graham.

At their next meeting the officers of the club plan to adopt the constitution with amendments appropriate for a college club. The plans will then be submitted to the Wilmington College Student Council for its recommendations and official approval.

Bob reports that the first order of business for the newly organized club will be the expansion and improvement of the existing target range on the college baseball field. The club plans to set up additional targets and provide them with the appropriate target faces for the caliber of archers to be found at Wilmington College.

Plans For Range

Already anticipating the demand for something more challenging than target archery, Bob states plans are under way for the establishment of an official field archery range behind the field house. A range consisting of 14 targets ranging in distance from 10 to 80 yards has been proposed. The proposed targets will range in difficulty from the small bird targets at 10 yards to the much larger bear targets at 80 yards. A total area of 10 acres will be necessary for the construction of the field range.

Also high on the club's agenda will be the formation of a crack six man team to represent the club in matches against other clubs in the area such as Wilmington's Cape Fear Archers. Several students have expressed their desire to hunt with bows and arrows and the club also expects to cater to their wishes after its organization.

Bob Bowden and Randy Coble count up their score on the target archery range.

Freshmen Add Depth To Seahawk Cagers

Continuing with its thumbnail sketches of the Wilmington College basketball players, this edition of the Seahawk features Larry Porter and Parris Croom. Larry and Parris are two more of the many fine freshman cagers who will enhance the Hawk attack this season.

Both boys bring with them to Wilmington College outstanding records as high school basketball players. Each lettered in the sport every year of his high school career.

Larry, a 6-1 18-year-old native of Kelly, comes to Wilmington College from Atkinson High School where he was a mainstay on the school's basketball squad for four years. His outstanding play and his 21 points per game scoring average further bear out his capabilities as an excellent Seahawk prospect. In his senior year at Atkinson High School Larry sparked his team to the championship of the Pender County Basketball Tournament. Parris is a 6-2, 185-pound native of Wilmington. He comes to the Seahawks by way of Beaufort, where he played for two years. Parris' basketball career began in Wilmington where he played for Chestnut Street Junior High School. After spending a year at New Hanover High School, Parris moved to Beaufort and the team that set the North Carolina state record for most consecutive games won at 91. This mark is topped only by the Ohio high school team that Jerry Lucas, the All-American from Ohio State University, led to the national record.

Larry and Parris share the high enthusiasm and morale of all the members of the Seahawk basketball team. These characteristics are also displayed toward the college itself, which both boys say they enjoy attending a great deal. They also plan to complete their college educations here if the college expands to a four year institution.

Coach Brooks states that their addition to the Seahawk squad will greatly enhance the team's potentiality and depth. He expects both Larry and Parris to develop into fine college cagers as they continue their education at Wilmington College.

Coach Brooks has released the 1962-63 Wilmington College basketball schedule. The Seahawks will journey to Chapel Hill on December 1 for their opening game of the season against the University of North Carolina freshman squad. The Seahawk mentor states he has scheduled games with the freshman teams of The Citadel, Duke, East Carolina College, and North Carolina State College as well as the Tarheel Frosh.

Wilmington College's basketball team will be facing one of its most challenging schedules in this season's campaign. In addition to the tough games scheduled with the major four year institutions in the state the Seahawks can expect strong competition from the greatly improved teams to be fielded by the other members of the Virginia-Carolina Conference. The junior college loop promises to be the strongest yet despite the withdrawal of Charlotte College.

Varsity Report

By HUGH PASCHAL

Basketball season is just around the corner and the Seahawks are in their fourth week of pre-season practice. The team is currently practicing in the Tileston Junior High School gymnasium because the New Hanover High School Wildcats are using Brogden Hall for their practice sessions. One look at a practice session revealed the excellence and confidence of Coach Bill Brooks' charges.

The schedule for this season shows that the Seahawks will be playing a wide variety of opponents. The Seahawk mentor expects stiff competition from the other two remaining teams in the Virginia-Carolina Conference. Both Louisville and Chowan are reporting vastly improved teams over their last year's efforts and promise to give the Seahawks a real battle for the conference crown.

It looks like another exciting season is in store for the Seahawk fans. The boys on the team are anxiously awaiting the opening whistle and latest reports reveal that they will undoubtedly live up to pre-season expectations.

Let's all make plans to attend every one of the Seahawk games this season. All home games will be played in Brogden Hall, next to New Hanover High School on Market Street.

Frank Allen, coach of the Wilmington College golf team, announced that several members of the Seahawk golf team are participating in the Municipal Golf Course's annual club championship. The Wilmington College golf team boasts the club's defending champion in the person of Ricky Berman. Ricky is defending his title against some of the best golfers in the Wilmington area including Jack Harrell, who is also a member of the Seahawk golf team. The fact that both boys are playing in the championship flight gives evidence of the caliber of golf played at Wilmington College.

Wilmington College hunters are eagerly awaiting the reopening of dove season. Their earlier successes served only to whet their appetites for more chances at these elusive birds. Meanwhile they are keeping their trigger fingers active by taking pot shots at the squirrels that are now in season. They are also looking forward to the fine crop of water fowl predicted for this week end.

Wilmington College archers are awaiting official recognition of the proposed archery club. They plan to present a constitution and a set of bylaws to the Student Council as soon as possible. An invitation to all Wilmington College students—that includes girls also—is being extended by the club. Bob Bowden, president of the club, announced several ambitious projects which the club members will embark upon this year. He says that the enthusiastic reception of the proposed club has been gratifying and that with continued support from the students and faculty of Wilmington College the Archery Club will live up to its potential as one of the college's most active clubs.

WC's Cafeteria Receives Criticism on Food; Service

By SANDRA SCHWARZ
Editorial Note: Many students are not aware that the college does get a certain percentage of income from proceeds of the cafeteria and that the money goes into the student activities fund.

Do we have a good, average, or bad cafeteria? What is a good cafeteria? Students and faculty now speak out on prices, service, space et cetera.

"I feel that it is a wonderful, inexpensive cafeteria, although I lie constantly!" Carl Sneed blantly announced.

Jewel Royal commented, "I think our cafeteria is rather small and quite expensive. I know quite a few students who either bring their lunches or go somewhere else."

Carla Otts thought "the prices for a balanced meal are high, but the prices for hotdogs, hamburgers, etc., are reasonable. The service is not very good because it is too slow."

Good Food, High Prices
"I think that the cafeteria serves excellent food, except the prices are a little too high for my budget," added Jenny Merriitt.

The proprietor, Frank Collier defended his prices by saying, "The cafeteria tries to be reasonable. The sandwiches are five cents less than the average. Compared to other places the students save 20 per cent to 30 per cent on drinks and food."

Jessibeth Brady raged, "The food is not as good as it could be, and the prices are outrageous. The services could be faster, too."

Service Slow
Barbara Hixon agrees, "We need faster service."

Billy Huggins thinks "the cafeteria is run very well except for the service. It should be faster."

"Service could be better organized, and perhaps an expansion of facilities would help," emphasized Thomas Gay, faculty member.

Memory Farrar, Stevie Hines, and Jack Mason agreed that the space needed enlarging. Memory pointed out that, "The food is very good and well prepared, but there is a lack of eating space at certain times during the day."

Hines interjected the thought, "It is very nice for the students to have a place such as this to eat at school instead of leaving campus at lunch. There should be more room for eating provided." While Mason emphasized, "The cafeteria should be separate from bridge and chess area. We need a new room, tables and chairs."

Variety of Food
Larry Ingle of the faculty had no comment other than "there aren't enough salads."

"The cafeteria is adequate for my needs," was Miss Ethel Murray's, faculty member, defending comment. "When I wish a light lunch or snack, I can get the right food for it. When I wish a full dinner with vegetables, meats, dessert, and drinks, these things are there for me to choose."

Still, people like Joyce Bennett say, "I think the prices are too high, and the food could be better. Also the service is awfully slow."

Complaint of Conduct

"All in all, the pub seems to be getting out of hand. A convenient place for the students such as this should be taken care of much better than it is. The students that use this facility at times make me think of Kiddies' Day at the park."

"Stop in sometime and look around at the careless way our 'new generation' treats everything. (E.g. cigarettes and trash on the floor, tables and chairs dragged and slammed around.) On occasion you can even find someone sleeping on the shelf provided for books."

"Yes sir, it sure looks like Kiddies' Day to me," strongly reminded Walter Wintin.

First College Play Sets Precedent In Quality

By Beth Fineberg

"Farewell, Farewell, Eugene" was a wise choice to initiate the season for the Wilmington College Theatre. The quality of performance on November 2 gave an example to be followed throughout this college year.

The delightful mood of the play was maintained by cast, scenery, and the music which irritated the prim Gertrude Povis.

The music, for the most part, followed that indicated by the script. It was too bad, however, that the tunes weren't manipulated to sound as if they came from an apartment above the Povises'. Mrs. Reardon (Carol Grotgen) did manage to sound as if she might be hollering from upstairs.

The small stage and cozy effectiveness of the scenery complemented the characterizations. Only a few times did a member of the cast find himself blocked by another actor.

The casting was excellent. Contrast of the voices and mannerisms of the players added a bit of polish. Each actor had some degree of success.

Emily Coddington (Gertrude Povis) gave a very capable performance in spite of unfamiliarity with the lines. Her pursed mouth, straight back, and emphatic rendering of "self-control" made her characterization unmistakable. When Miss Povis yielded to the love of her family, Emily never lost the essence of Gert's personality.

Rosemary Swisher (Minerva Goody) was charming as she showed the widow lady who had a "little nonsense about her."

Martha Parker (Peonie Povis) gave an inconsistent performance. But at all times she projected a woman who wouldn't resign her need for love. Sometimes her effort to maintain character was too obvious.

Sam Garner (Chuck Bailey) was the only actor who showed talent. His characterization had a tinge of reality.

Ray Oxendine (Mr. Reardon), Marietta Bowers (Flossie Reardon), Barbara Bradley (Miss Harmon), and Sandy Carr (Miss Davies), complemented the mood.

"Farewell, Farewell, Eugene" gave warm-hearted fun. We hope the quality of other productions will at least equal it.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE ELECTS JUDY MATTHEWS MAY QUEEN

Wilmington College has chosen pretty, petit, Judy Matthews to reign as May Queen this year. Judy measures a mere 5'2" tall and has black hair and dark brown eyes.

The new queen has recently been chosen Circle "K" Sweetheart and is a member of the Activities Staff of the Fledgling. Judy plans to major in elementary education and to be a teacher. She enjoys swimming, golf, and horseback riding and spends most of her out-of-class time in the library where she works as an assistant librarian.

Serving as Judy's Maid-of-Honor will be Freshman, Pat Beasley who is a local student and a graduate of New Hanover High School.

Pat is a judicial representative from her class in the student council and portrayed Evanthe in "Prince of Parthia." Planning to be a laboratory technologist, she works part-time in the lab at James Walk Memorial Hospital.

Martha Jay Staton and Nancy Bradshaw were selected by the Sophomore Class to represent them as Sophomore May Attendants.

Martha Jay stands 5'3" tall and has short brown hair and brown eyes. She is Editor-in-Chief of the Fledgling this year and plans to major in French at Meredith College.

Her hobbies include baton twirling and skiing. Nancy Bradshaw is the second attendant in the May Court from the Sophomore Class and was a cheerleader for the college last year.

Nancy works after her classes each day in the office at Penney's Dept. Store. She, too, plans to major in elementary education and to become a teacher.

Memory Farrar and Sara Avery were chosen Freshman May Attendants.

Memory is the tallest member of the Court this year and the only blonde.

Memory merited the Dean's List Autumn Quarter and will take her place on the cheering squad this year.

A resident of Wrightsville Beach, she loves to water ski and enjoys sewing.

Completing the May Court is the shortest member, brown-haired, blue-eyed Sara Avery.

Sara is a secretary at the college and is taking a course in Secretarial Science. She is one of the newly selected cheerleaders.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE, WILMINGTON, N. C.

December 14, 1962

Acie Kinlaw, Jack Mason, Dino Summerlin, Walter Winton, and Nat Bost were Student Council representatives for State Student Legislature.

Delegates Attend Raleigh State Student Legislature

Members of the State Student Legislature meeting in the capital building in Raleigh approved a bill presented by six members of the Wilmington College Student Congress to make this college a four year institution.

Wilmington delegates to the legislature and their positions were: Nat Bost, senator; Dino Summerlin, senator; Acie Kinlaw, representative; Jack Mason, representative; Mike West, alternate; and Ike Winton, alternate.

The three sectioned bill, in addition to providing for a four year college by the fall of 1964, gives the department of administration funds to finance the transition to a four year college and frees local funds presently supporting the college for other educational activities.

This bill, along with all others enacted by the student legislature for consideration.

The student legislature passed a ruling against the Internal Security and the Smith Act, abolished the House on Un-American Activities, and legalized abortion.

During their stay at the Sir Walter of Raleigh Hotel, the local delegation visited State Democratic Headquarters located in the same building, where they were allowed to print their bill for distribution among the other college delegates.

Larry Ingle

Faculty Member Improves

Associate Professor of Social Sciences, Larry Ingle was injured in a car accident November 10. Mr. Ingle has been released from Cape Fear Memorial Hospital and will return after the Christmas holidays.

Thomas Gay, Duncan Randall, and Richard Stone have assumed the duties of taking over Mr. Ingle's classes.

63 Students Achieve Dean's List; Winter Quarter Enrollment Drops 8%

Five straight-A students head the Dean's list for the autumn quarter. They include Louise Ambrosiano, Beth Fineberg, Lloyd Jackson, Carl Anderson, and Randy Johnson. Beth and Carl, both sophomores, have been all-A students since they entered Wilmington College in 1961.

Other Dean's list students from Wilmington are:

Evelyn May Adkins, Patricia Ann Beasley, Joyce Ann Bennett, Mary Emma Blanchard, Judith Ann Campbell, Stephen Dorenda Jr., Patsy Ann Dunn, George Edward Reiger, Roger Dale Fowler, Stephen Lee Helms, Nancy Anne Hendrix, Barbara Ann Hixon.

Edgar Wilson Horton Jr., John Andrew Lorek Jr., Marilyn Ruth Mack, Jenny Louise Merritt, Ron George Mihal, James Whitfield Moseley, Catherine Collins O'Brien, Harry Lee Rickenbacker, Eunice Martha Rivenbark, Edmund Elmer Ruhland, Sidney Murrell Salling Jr., Judith Rowena Skipper.

Patricia Marie Stiles, Barbara Jean Strickland, Robert Stuart Sullivan, Isabelle Frances Szczerbiak, Mary Etta Louise Towne, Mary Wilhelmina Vogels, Elizabeth Ormsby Ward, Robert Gerald Warshawsky, Ritchie Devon Watson, Evan Dale Watts, Ester Loretta White, Jerry Lynn Williams, Judy Pluta Wilson, Georgia Zezefellis.

From Wrightsville Beach: Memory Farrar, Charles Meadows; Burgaw: Ruth Batson, Nellie Vdovich; Jacksonville: Betsy Capps, Linda Jones, Elizabeth Ann Willis; Hampstead: Eleanor Gail Coleman, Henry Allen Sullivan.

Gloria Jean Baysden, Richards; Samuel Bowden Casey, Rocky Point; Linda Shayne Gaskins, Rose Hill; Margaret Hamm, Henderson; Phillip Wayne Lennon, Leland; Thomas Mead McLamb, Shallotte; Nancy Millikan, Randleman; Lloyd Harrell Saunders, Carolina Beach; Alta Faye Sealy, Whiteville; Harold Tysinger, Freeland; Margaret Jo Worrell, Goldsboro.

The Winter Quarter enrollment at Wilmington College for 1962-1963 is a total of 729 students, according to figures released by Dorothy Marshall, Registrar. Of the total number, 50 are nurses and 26 are Fort Fisher (AFB) students.

There were 132 students enrolled for the Autumn Quarter who did not return for the Winter Quarter.

Many counties are represented at the college, with 444 of the students coming from New Hanover County. Forty-four students are from out of state, and two are foreign students.

Historical Societies View SRO's "Prince of Parthia"

The 11 historical societies of the state of North Carolina met in Raleigh at the Sir Walter Hotel December 4-8 of this year to observe the state's annual Culture Week.

The Wilmington College Theatre was asked by one of the societies, The North Carolina society for the Preservation of Antiquities, Inc., to present the adapted version of the first American drama by Thomas Godfrey, "The Prince of Parthia", at their annual meeting on Thursday of Culture Week.

The cast and crew of the play, under the direction of Doug W. Swink, left Wilmington College on Thursday morning and arrived in Raleigh where the play was given at 8:30 p.m.

A feeling of really taking a show on the road prevailed when a stage had to be set up, lighting arranged, marques made, costumes ironed, rehearsals done, and all in a time limit of four hours.

After the show, all that had been done had to be taken down and packed up, and a tired 13 people finally made their way to a nearby motel for a few hours of well deserved sleep.

The drama group, leaving Raleigh in the late morning of Friday, December 7, arrived in Wilmington in the afternoon with a true feeling of accomplishment, according to members of the group. It seemed that all of the group were happy with the chance to perform at such a well known organizational meeting.

Destination: Raleigh

Clark Accepts Vacant Post As Freshmen Secretary

Judy Clark succeeded Peggy McAdams as secretary of the Freshman Class. Peggy resigned because of a job she now holds with a Durham bank.

According to the constitution, Mike West, president of the Freshman Class, chose the succeeding secretary. Mike appointed Judy on the basis of the September election votes, in which she was next highest.

Pat Styles has been chosen Engineering Club Sweetheart. She will represent the club during Homecoming Festivities.

Editorials

All of the editorials written in the SEAHAWK, unless otherwise signed, are written by the editor and express her personal ideas.

WE "ARE" SEGREGATED

Wilmington College is ridiculously segregated. Our social segregation (with all of its petty little cliques) is pitiful; our intellectual segregation is pathetic!

The probation list of fall quarter exceeded 220 students and a total of one-fourth of the members of the student body failed to attain a low minimum average of 1.5.

There are innumerable reasons why this list was so extensive, the most obvious one being the widespread success of the "pub" versus the library.

Apparently, the purpose of college is being misconstrued and the initiative of the student is not being used to its full capacity. The entrance requirements should be proof that every student here is capable of maintaining a "C" average.

Students must reach a compromise between leisure and industriousness. The vitalness of a college diploma cannot be overly dramatized nor exaggerated. Yet, as obvious as this realization may be, students are either oblivious to the fact or completely negligent.

Unskilled labor is becoming of little value in our society today and our economic and political system demands proficiency.

Those on probation have failed to recognize these ideals.

WE PLEAD FOR INDEPENDENCE

The independence of campus life somehow escaped the hands of the publications division of this college.

Exactly how much power to a college publication should the advisor (in the event that it has one) exert or be allowed to exert?

We certainly cannot complain about the service or capabilities of an advisor who has served as editor-in-chief of his college publications or dispute his ability to assist the staff in publishing a better paper.

BUT! We can protest against the "right" granted to an advisor to censor material to be printed in a newspaper. We feel that what is printed in a college newspaper should be decided by the students who are paying for it and the staff who composes it.

Of the numerous freedoms exacted to a democracy, the press is and should be one of the most directly affected.

We see no reason why a college paper should not possess equivalent rights.

The staff feels capable of adequate and proper judgment on how things should be said, and we recognize the difference between a newspaper and a scandal sheet. However, under no circumstances should a paper be restricted about what can and what it cannot print as long as its material rates as news and is worthy of print and of interest to its readers.

Students in college should be interested in and subjected to ideas, concepts, controversial ideas, etc., as well as who is doing what and when around campus.

We are not suggesting that the staff be gloriously free from reprimand either. Every article in this paper has an author whether the story is bylined or not and this article is susceptible to criticism by any reader who desires to publicly declare his opinion.

We reiterate that we have no intentions of condemnation or absurd radicalism; we simply feel that this paper should be free from censorship and coercive forces. A college staff should be mature and able enough to use acceptable discretion in their writings.

WHY WASN'T THE CHRISTMAS DANCE SUCCESSFUL?

Unfortunately for that small minority who attended the college Christmas Dance and especially for those who attempted to promote it, it cannot be termed as a success!

In the first place, some college students were compelled to work until 9 o'clock on the night the dance was held and the menacing Christmas rush prolonged their arrival even longer. For some, the dance lasted for an hour and a half!

Even in high school we are allowed to stay at school dances until 12 o'clock and since many of the college students have self-determined curfews, 1 o'clock would have been a much more suitable hour for the dance to end. (If we are not treated in adult fashion, we cannot expect to act as such.)

Dances, indubitably, would be better appreciated if the band or orchestra were more meticulously selected. The type of music should coincide with popular style and trend and popular music is not limited to rock and roll. Billy Melton may have been of a high caliber, but it was not suitable for its particular audience. Some form of audition (if possible) should be a prerequisite before we make decisions and contracts concerning a band for our dances.

In any social environment, there will be those things of which we disapprove and yet we will be forced to tolerate them. A relatively large group haughtily left the dance last Friday night because two of its members were reprimanded for a certain form of dancing. On the other hand other students were indignant and some complained bitterly about the "improper conduct."

There is no reason why this scene could not have been avoided. There was plenty of room in the dancing area for the other couples to reside had they found the performance inversely.

It seems that a matter of individualism was involved and would have needed in intervention had those who found the action disgusting ignored it. Those who gasped, raved, and steadfastly watched their object of discomfort were nonsensical. (We condone neither group.)

Finally, the majority of the student body completely ignored the fact that we were even having a dance. We become indignant because of the insufficiency of our social environment; yet our actions do little to convince the administration that we need and desire those things which we demand.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

"WELL, I'LL TELL YOU WHY I'M DROPPING OUT OF SCHOOL—I'M DROPPING BECAUSE ALL THIS UNLIE EMPHASIS ON ACADEMIC SCHOLARSHIP HAS KILLED MY INCENTIVE TO LEARN."

Critique Of "Prince Of Parthia"

By LOUISE AMBROSIO

In the presentation of "Prince of Parthia" the abilities and inabilities of each performer were quite obtrusive and recognizable.

Robert Autry presented a very effective Arcaces (the Prince of Parthia) in his appearance only. The quality of his voice was good, but his enunciation was poor and likewise his expression. His body English was good and added to the strength and virility of the character.

Martha Parker was quite successful in achieving the character of Thermusa (the Queen, the mother of Arcaces). She was ineffective in some instances, but her performance was nearly always in keeping with the character.

Pat Beasley's performance as Evanthe (the ingenue) was very amateurish. It varied from extreme underacting to extreme overacting. She ran her lines together, and her southern accent persisted throughout them. Her only attribute was her appearance.

During his lines, Ray Oxendine's characterization Vardanes was well done. He delivered his lines very distinctly with fairly good feeling and expression and in the appropriate tone of voice. But when he was not speaking, he seemed to lose character. His movements should have been much better and more effective.

In the role of Gotarzes (the brother of Arcaces) Bert Gornito failed completely to achieve any character. His body movements, especially with his arms and legs, were convulsive and ineffectual. His voice was his only asset. It had a fine quality, but his expression varied from very bad to very good.

The performance of Sam Garner (Phraates) varied greatly between the two versions of the play. His acting in the satire far outshone that in the serious version because of his natural ability for comedy. But in the serious version, he seemed unable to cope with the character of Phraates.

Beth Fineberg (Cleone) gave an excellent performance with exceptional projection of character which she never lost. Her one comedy line in the satire was the funniest line in the show.

Wayne Robinson (Lysias) was simply miscast and misrobed. However, his performance was as good as could be expected under these handicaps.

Dale Stevens' (Barzaphanes) best point was his voice which was appropriate to his part and provided a good contrast to the other players. His motions seem inhibited, but his expression was fairly good.

Christmas Comes Alive

The spirit of Christmas has vividly come to life on the campus. The Students Services Building has been beautifully decorated by all members of the Radio Station and the Student Council.

CARTER MASTER OF STRIKING MEDIUM

The current exhibition in Hoggard Hall offers us the exciting medium of the woodcut. The artist, Bruce Carter, has shown that the woodcut is an excellent medium to capture the spirit of the Norwegian people. He has also contributed a number of pen drawings and a water color, but they seem to retain the feeling that is elicited by the woodcuts. Carter uses the woodcut, which is essentially heavy and sombre, to convey tenderness and sensitivity. This is felt especially with the two: Wildflowers and The Farewell. Also the massivity of the father and the wee child, the man looming over the little flowers effect a startling contrast surprising in the woodcut.

The Martyr and The Patriots offer a bit of social criticism, along with what seems to be a statement for all of humanity conveyed in the executed man with his body lunging forward in death and in the cries of the Protest.

The one watercolor, The Gathering, furthers the impression of Scandinavian solidity and brings a cryptic message for us to decipher.

Carter finds his statement of man's enduring qualities not in the thematic perception of a situation but in the attitude humanity assumes. The woodcut is especially valuable for him because he can be subtle and monumental at the same time. It is a statement of an artistic fact, but the tone of the wood cut has already given the artist a mood to work with. The anguish of The Martyr, the anger of The Patriots, or the eternity in the stance of the Waiting Woman are all single statements but all exist as a truth in the woodcuts because they exist in mankind.

FINE ARTS QUARTET

Fine Arts Quartet appeared at Thalian Hall Sunday night, December 2. We were pleased to see that all of six Wilmington College students were present. It was really a wonderful performance that anyone would enjoy. There were three quartets by Easley Blackwood, a member of the University of Chicago's Music Department, Beethoven, and Brahms.

It was disappointing to see that so few students attended the concert. Out of some 700 students here, only six came; the rest were the much older people who were interested in the arts. We wonder what state our generation has attained when so few show any interest in the finest products of Western Civilization. If only the music students had gone we would have been well represented. One wonders what William H. Friday would tell Governor Sanford if he had seen the miserable showing by the students of WilCol. Do we even deserve the opportunities of a four year college when we do not take advantage of those we have now? Great artists cared enough for humanity to give it magnificent works of music, painting and architecture. These works of art constitute the human legacy as much as our governmental and social institutions, and we can derive just as much from them.

FACULTY SUPPORT

We note with satisfaction that several of the professors strongly urged their students to attend the lecture by Mr. Stanley South.

Letter To Editor

We would like to thank both the Seahawk and Radio Station WILC for the help they extended in publicizing for the Halloween Dance and the Christmas Dance. Your help enabled us to inform all the students of our plans and added to the attendance at both dances.

We would like to thank all the students who attended either one or both dances. We hope you enjoyed them.

Next year we plan to have the following dances: Homecoming, January 18; Valentine, February 15; Spring, March 15; May Dance, May 4. We are looking forward to your attendance at these dances.

We wish you a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Council Names Johnson Head of Fine Arts Plan

The Student Council has realized the definite need for an improved cultural atmosphere at Wilmington College and has supported the forming of a Forum and Fine Arts Committee here. At the last meeting of the fall quarter, the council heard short speeches by Sondra Wilson and Randy Johnson in which the speakers asked for Student Council support. The council approved Randy Johnson as chairman of the new committee. The committee will not be a club but an active part of the student government.

The function of the committee will be to work closely with the faculty in order to provide guest speakers and performers for the student body. The immediate plans are to invite one speaker a month and to focus attention to the work of the committee.

Probably the most ambitious part of the plans is the establishing of an annual Fine Arts Week. A week has been set aside toward the end of January for this school year. The committee will present speakers on the various arts, a play, a concert and assist in setting up the February art exhibition in Hoggard Hall. This exhibition will be a juried show of the Lower Cape Fear artists. Plans are already made for a nationally known juror to judge the show; he will also give a lecture for the students and interested persons from the area. The committee hopes to have all the departments dealing with the arts to participate in some way to offer an exciting program for the week.

The first Forum speaker was the archaeologist, Stanley South.

It is hoped by the members that the Fine Arts and Forum Committee will function as an impresario in the future, bringing all forms of entertainment to Wilmington College as it grows. This group will probably be one of the chief agents toward making the college an active force in the civic life of the city. Money will eventually constitute a problem, but as the college grows, sources for funds will increase. At present there is no difficulty; the committee simply invites speakers from the area and other colleges. The committee feels that its efforts will be culminated when it is able to present professional groups.

New Members Grace Faculty

Mrs. Raeford Trask, Jr., and Dr. Benjamin H. Allen come to us as new instructors this quarter.

Mrs. Frances Trask, a graduate of New Hanover High School, was a Phi Beta Kappa at her alma mater, Wake Forest. She teaches the 2:30 botany class, which now does not meet on Fridays due to her ingenuity.

Dr. Allen, acting director of the Mental Health Clinic, instructs the Mental Hygiene class. A graduate of Wofford College at Spartanburg, South Carolina, he earned his Master of Arts and Doctorate at George Peabody College for Teachers, Nashville, Tennessee.

Dr. Joanne King Corbett and Mrs. Mary Dixon Bellamy returned to teach English and Spanish respectively. Mrs. Payne who replaced Mrs. Bellamy has joined her husband who is fulfilling military duties.

Restoration of Fort Fisher Gives SENCLAND Added Attraction in Tourist, Historical Line

By CARL SNEEDEN

Fort Fisher is making its way back into North Carolina's history. It is being restored in such a manner that it is fast becoming a tourist attraction for southeastern North Carolina. The appropriations for this undertaking are being provided by the North Carolina State Legislature, although many people have contributed in varied ways in its restoration. Contributions in both time and money have been a great asset toward its final completion. Much of the glorious history of this place may be seen by merely viewing the fort's mounds, the largest earthwork in the Confederacy.

In the early 1830's, a movement to develop the site of Fort Fisher as a State or National Park originated with the local citizens of New Hanover County. The success of this movement met with very little enthusiasm from anyone and completely died after World War II, when the site once again became an active military post.

After the war, the site was once again abandoned by the Army. Then the visitor was left with little to excite his imagination in picturing the massive earth works and the battles which occurred at Fort Fisher. Destruction has been done by both the landing strip which had been placed there during World War II and the 100 years of sea erosion has obliterated the corner bastion and much of the sea face.

In the late 1950's, local and State forces joined together to revive the idea of restoring Fort Fisher. During the summer of 1960, work was begun on a 180-acre tract held by the State of North Carolina under lease from the United States Government. Underbrush was cleared from the six mounds and seven gun emplacements which lie within the leased property, and the mounds were seeded and marked with interpretive signs.

A long-range plan calls for continued clearing of the site, acquiring additional land, building trails, erecting numerous markers and outdoor displays, and restoring several typical segments of the fort, such as gun mounds, underground magazines, and bomb-proofs. A pavilion to house museum displays was constructed in the fall of 1961 and is now open to the public.

The most important future project is to erect a visitor center-museum of ample size for gathering groups of visitors for orientation and for exhibition of an extension collection of Civil War relics and a scale model of the fort as it was during the war. Funds for this building were appropriated by the 1961 General Assembly. It is expected that the restoration will advance during the Civil War Centennial years and be completed by January, 1965, the 100th anniversary of the second battle of Fort Fisher, when special ceremonies will import national recognition to the greatest land-sea battle area of the Civil War.

The Song Of A Modern Vigilante

I sometimes fancy, as I spy,
That I excel the F.B.I.
Right now I'm making little lists
Of folks I think are Communists.
I have no proof on anyone.
And yet the lists are lots of fun.
All friends of foreign aid,
I think,
Must be set down as rather pink;
A little pinker, not far off.
I list, perforce, the college prof.
And pinker yet the student crowd.
That lauds the Bill of Rights out loud.
U.N. supporters, as I've said,
Are always, ipso facto, red;
And redder still on my red lists
Are all the integrationists.
Just for good measure, in my labors,
I add a few of my close neighbors.
Thus I rejoice that loyalty
Resides alone in you and me.
Although, before my work is through,
You may, good friends, be listed, too.

Hawks Vs. Citadel Tonight

The Wilmington College Seahawks play their first home basketball game of the 1962-63 season tonight at Brogden Hall against a strong Citadel freshmen team.

The Seahawks, fresh from the Duke game, take on their third match of the season and the first against the much improved Bullpups. Coach Bill Brooks' team will be out to continue its push to exceed last year's excellent record of 21 wins and 5 defeats.

Ranked sixth in the nation among Junior College teams last year, Wilmington, again, will depend heavily on their ace point - getter and All-American Gene Bogash and two lettermen from last year's squad, Harry Buzzell and Marshall Hamilton.

Jack Barbour and Tommy Cole, a pair of 6-2 guards and Wray Ware, a 6-3 forward, have done a good job for Coach Brooks and will give the cadets from Charleston, S. C., something to worry about tonight.

Although they will miss the services of their lanky 6-5 forward of last year, George Metkiff, the Bullpups are expected to be a little stronger and a little faster. This cadet club always can be expected to give a team trouble. The boys from Charleston like to hustle and should provide tough opposition for the Seahawks.

In their opener, the Hawk cagers fell to defeat at the hands of the UNC Tar Babies, 74-52. Despite fine floorwork by Bogash, Coach Brooks' men could not compare their 26.6 per cent shooting average to Carolina's fat 48.4 average.

Wilmington's second game of the season scheduled for last Thursday, December 6, with Elon freshmen team was not allowed to play the game because of a recent ruling by the school restricting their freshman team from competing in more than one game a week and Elon had already scheduled one game for earlier in that week.

After tonight's encounter with the Citadel Bullpups, the Seahawks may look forward to their only other game before Christmas with Louisburg College on Monday, December 17, at Louisburg.

Varsity Report

By HUGH PASCHAL

Basketball season officially arrives at Wilmington College tonight! After several successful pre-season exhibitions in Georgia and Florida the Seahawks received their baptism under fire against the UNC and Duke frosh teams. Despite the losses suffered at the hands of these always powerful squads the Seahawks have already shown by their determined play the championship brand of basketball which earned them such wide recognition last year.

Home town fans will find their first opportunity to see the Seahawks in action against the Citadel tonight at Brogden Hall. The game will be a big one for Coach Bill Brooks' boys who are looking for their first win of their schedule and would like nothing better than to chalk it up before a large turn out here in Wilmington.

The Seahawks who are ranked twelfth among the nation's junior colleges are picked as slight underdogs to repeat their last year's performance. The experts are favoring North Greenville College of Tigerville, S. C., to take the Region 10 championship and advance to the National Tournament in Hutchinson, Kansas.

They cite as the basis of their prediction the fact that this year's Seahawk cage crew which was hit hard by graduation lack the experience and depth of last year's squad which beat North Greenville and placed sixth in the national tourney.

Coach Brooks believes that the Hawks' first two games have helped them tremendously. He has been putting the squad through extensive drills and exercises designed to correct the mistakes made against UNC and Duke and reports that the team is progressing rapidly.

The Hawks' morale is exceptionally high and they seem to be confident that they will be able to better their last year's 21-5 mark. Their enthusiasm and desire to win is becoming contagious and already many Seahawk fans are getting tournament fever. Bring on the opponents!

Both student and faculty golf enthusiasts are braving the inclement weather in an effort to knock a few more strokes off their games. Ricky Berman, the newly-elected captain of the Seahawk golf squad, and the rest of the team are making their way to the links on every available occasion. Ricky plans to have the team's ladder set up in the near future.

Meanwhile, Mr. Allen and the other faculty suffers have postponed their challenge round until after the Christmas holidays. In spite of some of the faculty members' somewhat elevated scores both teams are taking the proposed match seriously and are putting in many long hours of practice.

The Seahawk golfers are looking forward to a very interesting and challenging season. With matches scheduled with the formidable Big Four freshman golfers as well as the conference tilts, Mr. Allen's boys can expect to meet some strong adversaries. Come this spring all of you golf fans will be able to see some of the best young golfers in this area tangle with those from around the state.

Members of the college's Archery Club are eagerly awaiting the arrival of the tractor which the school has ordered to put the land between the baseball field and Hoggard Hall into shape. Bob Bowden plans to use the target backs and faces so graciously donated by Robert Marlowe of Sears, Roebuck and Company to set up a target range after the land is put into condition.

The boys of the club are working toward its chartering at the next Student Council meeting. All of the members are avid archers and are extremely enthusiastic over the club's acceptance by the students and faculty of Wilmington College.

Seahawk tennis players, NOTICE. The Wilmington College tennis team is looking for tennis players with some experiences. As the season peers ahead, Mr. Walter Biggs, head of the team, is considering the possibilities for the 1963 season.

A host of problems will have to be overcome before the 1963 edition of the Hawk tennis team goes on the courts. The most important of these problems is the lack of interest among the students.

The possibility of a tennis team and its success will depend entirely on the student interest. Because there are only two players returning from last year's squad, much of the success of this year's team, if there is one, will depend on the new players.

We urge all WILCOL students who are interested in playing on the Seahawk tennis team to see Mr. Biggs in his office (H-221) on the second floor of Hoggard Hall.

Frosh Starters Back Bo

In the third of a series of articles on the members of the Wilmington College basketball squad, The Seahawk features Marshall Hamilton and Jack Barbour.

Marshall is a 6-7, 190-pound freshman from Frostburg, Md. He played a year of basketball in Washington, D. C., before going to Frostburg for his remaining high school years.

As a senior at the Maryland school Marshall's 17-point-per-game shooting average helped Frostburg to capture the Potomac Valley Conference Championship and the third place ranking in the state tournament. Marshall is currently a first-string forward for the Seahawk cage squad.

Rewrites Records

Jack Barbour, a 6-3, 160-pound freshman, comes to Wilmington College from Clifton, N. J., where he lettered in basketball for three years at Don Bosco High School. As captain of the Bosco High basketball squad in his senior year, Jack rewrote the school's record books.

Jack broke the school's record for the most points scored in one game with 42. His 18 foul shots in one game broke another mark. With 15 field goals in one game he topped another record, and his 525 points in one season bettered still another of his school's records.

Jack compiled a 23.5 points per game shooting average while leading Don Bosco High School to a second place finish in the tough PBC Conference in New Jersey. Jack is now holding down a starting position as guard for the Seahawk cagers.

Determined Players

Both boys are very happy to be playing on the Seahawk five and display their confidence in Marshall and Jack are looking forward to the imposing slate of games scheduled for after the Christmas holidays with the desire to knock off a few of the freshman squads which they encounter and to add another Virginia - Carolina Conference title to their string before advancing to the National Junior College Basketball Tournament in March.

Coach Brooks has expressed a great deal of confidence in the abilities of both boys. Since both are freshman starters he and the Seahawk fans can plan

Seahawk Cagers Complete Tour; Bogash Shines Against Opponents

The Wilmington College basketball team successfully completed a four game tour against tough Georgia and Florida teams with a record of three wins and one defeat.

NJCAA Rates Hawks Twelfth

Wilmington College, which placed sixth in the National Jr. College Basketball Tournament held last year at Hutchinson, Kansas, has been ranked twelfth among the nation's two-year schools in a pre-season poll.

The rating was issued by the National Junior College Athletic Association with headquarters in Dodge City, Kansas.

Coach Bill Brooks' charges completed last season with a 21-5 record and their top-scorer and rebounder, Gene Bogash, was selected to the All-American and All-Tournament teams following his three-game performance at Hutchinson.

Coffeyville, Kan., last year's national champion, is favored to repeat their performance this season. Ranking second is Moberly, Mo., with Lon Morris of Jacksonville Tex.; Young Harris of Georgia; Tyler, Tex.; San Angelo, Tex.; Bethany of Mankato, Minn.; Flint, Mich.; Hutchinson, Kan.; and Pueblo, Colo., rounding out the top ten.

Leading the second ten is Howard of Big Springs, Tex.; followed by Wilmington; Kellogg, Tex.; Parsons, Kan.; Trinidad, Colo.; Eastern of Wilburton, Okla.; Arkansas City of Kansas; New York City CC; Broome Tech of Binghamton, N. Y.; and Lincoln, Ill.

Despite Wilmington's rating in the pre-season poll, North Greenville Junior College of Tigerville, S. C., is team most favored to advance to the National Tournament from Region 10.

Last year the Seahawks downed North Greenville in the regional finals before going on to the Hutchinson tourney.

The NJCAA plan to issue weekly ratings of the junior colleges starting on January 17.

The Seahawks, who have only one starter back from last year's team, whipped the University of Jacksonville freshmen, Central Florida Junior College, and Southern Georgia College, and lost to Chipola Junior College at Marianna, Fla.

Big Gene Bogash, the 6-5 Hoosier, led Wilmington with a total of 129 points in the four games. "Bogash had a real good trip. In fact, we all had a good trip," Hawk Coach Bill Brooks commented.

"I think the trip did us a lot of good. We got more done in those five days than in two weeks of just practice," the Seahawk mentor added.

The Seahawks whipped the University of Jacksonville freshmen 84-78 in Florida. Bogash at forward pushed 38 points thru the nets to spark the club in the hard fought contest.

At Central Florida Junior College, Bogash scored 33 points as Wilmington downed the Sunshine State team 102-89.

For their third win the Seahawks roundballers defeated Southern Georgia College 84-71 at Waycross, Ga. The Georgia team had won 25 straight games in 1961 but could not stop the one, two scoring punch of Bogash (36 points) and 6-2 guard Jack Barbour (27 points).

In their only loss, Wilmington College fell at the hands of Chipola Junior College 78-68 at Marianna, Fla. Chipola, who has three players standing 6-4, used its superior height and balanced scoring to defeat the visitors. Bogash, Barbour, and 6-3 forward Wray Ware lead the scoring for the Seahawks with 22, 13, and 11 points, respectively.

Other standouts on the trip were 6-7 pivot-man Marshall Hamilton, guard Tommy Cole, and 6-6 freshman Jim Braxton.

Archers Choose Brooks Field To Improve For Target Range

A tract of land adjacent to Brooks Field has been approved by the college as the site for the Wilmington College Archery Club's new target range.

Bob Bowden, president of the Club, reported that the school has agreed to furnish the tract for the club's new six target range and to condition the land with the help of a new tractor the school has ordered, but not yet received.

An expansion and improvement of the existing range has been anticipated and needed for a long time. The new land will present quite a challenge to the club. Included on the range will be five 24 inch targets and one large target for beginners.

The very generous gift of five 24 inch, compressed, straw targets with faces was donated to the club by the Sears and Roebuck sporting goods department through Robert Marlowe. The gift of the targets is the largest one received by the club from a local merchant. The targets which were presented to the club president, will be put into use on the new range.

The club has also announced the appointment of Jack Der-mid of the biology department as its faculty advisor. Mr. Dermid is in his second quarter of teaching at Wilmington College, after having served on the editorial staff of the "Wildlife in North Carolina" magazine.

Golfers Set Season Ladder; Faculty Team Delays Match

At their first meeting this quarter on Wednesday, December 6, the Seahawk golf team elected Ricky Berman to the team captaincy. Frank Allen, the team's faculty advisor, called the boys together to present plans for the upcoming season and a few long range possibilities.

Mr. Allen stated that the first order of business for the team would be to set up a ladder to determine which golfers will compete in the spring matches. Ricky was placed in charge of getting the team's scores and organizing the ladder.

The boys were told that Coach William Brooks was to attend a Virginia - Carolina Conference convention on December 9 where he would set up the team's conference schedule on a home and home basis. The team voted unanimously to continue playing matches with the freshman squads of the Big Four universities as well as the East Carolina College frosh. Mr. Allen expressed the desire to set up a twelve match schedule for the team with the first match to be played by mid February.

On the lighter side of the meeting the team was informed that the faculty team consisting of Walter Biggs, Tommie Lupton, Rolla Nelson, Fred Toney, and Mr. Allen wished to postpone their challenge until after the Christmas holidays in order to lower their handicaps. The 'Hawk golfers graciously con-plans were tentatively arranged for the match to be played as the first exhibition game of the season.

Ricky and Mr. Allen urged the members of the team to practice as often as possible and stated that the squad will start regular practice sessions at Wilmington's Municipal Golf Course three weeks before their first match of the season.

Members of the Hawk golf team are: Ricky Berman, Harry Buzzell, Val Edwards, Ed Freeman, Will Gemmell, Jack Harrell, Scott McKinnon, and Roger Fowler.

Ricky Berman, Wilmington College sophomore, tees off.

Art As Communication

Art is communication, whether the medium is literature, music, the dance, or the graphic arts. The remnants of our earliest civilization show man's preoccupation with an attempt to communicate with his fellow man. At first there were no words. In the beginning, perhaps there was only gesture, such as we use today when we nod our head in agreement. Soon, however, in caves and on rocks primitive man began to carve and paint the objects he knew. Man could express, by use of a pictograph or a sign, a particular house, a particular dog, or a particular man; but not man, or dogs, or houses in general. This was a poor excuse for language and communication. Only after centuries of groping, did he develop a sign for man which meant all men. At this point man could still express only things, and not ideas. But he persevered in his search for means of communication, and with the discovery of symbols for ideas and the endless combinations of signs which communicated more complicated thoughts, language was born and soon developed into the elaborate systems of cuneiform writing of the Sumerians and the hieroglyphic signs of Egypt, which were capable of expressing, in poetic form, some of the greatest ideas the world has yet known.

At the dawn of history, writing and the graphic arts were one and the same, but eventually literature and the graphic arts became separate forms of creativeness, until today only the Chinese and the Arabs think of word signs as a form of art in themselves.

In twentieth century America, we sometimes forget this close association between literature and the graphic arts. We fail to realize that the various art forms in each century closely parallel each other. The media are different, but the expression of the age remains the same. Compare, for instance, the Romantic writers and the Romantic school of painting, the Symbolist poets and the Symbolist painters, the Impressionist painters and French Impressionist music, or the great theological writings of the Middle Ages, and the carvings of the Romanesque and Gothic cathedrals.

We are apt to criticize painting which is descriptive, not realizing that once all painting was sign, symbol, idea, and description at one and the same time. In painting we refer to "the limitations of the material" as a fundamental of a work of art. The same is true in other art forms. It simply means that literature, of necessity, deals with words, and painting deals with paint, and music is made with sound. However, no matter what the medium may be, all works of art have a common denominator, i.e., the expression of an idea, which is simply a form of communication with one's fellow man.

An artist expresses an idea with paint, whether the manner of the painting is naturalistic, abstract, or non-objective. Sometimes the ideas are difficult for us to understand, and this is true not only of painting; but of music and literature. Perhaps the artist has delved into a problem a little more thoroughly than we have, or, perhaps, his message is meant for and will be understood by a later generation. This has happened many times in the past, for an artist trains himself to look, to see, to feel, and to express. Often he is a prophet of things to come, and we are apt to dismiss many of the more profound of our artists by saying they have nothing to communicate to us. Certainly the true artist is concerned with paint, stone, musical notes, and words; but his primary interest lies not in these tools of his craft, but in his ability to transmit ideas. He wishes to express his great love of the world, or his hatred of its inequalities and wrongs, or maybe he is more interested in commenting on the world of the spirit, of unseen things, and unknown quantities.

Random words on a sheet of paper, casual notes struck on a keyboard, slashes of paint of a canvas with no idea behind them, these are not art. John Ruskin has expressed this so well in his "Modern Painters" when he writes:

"He is the greatest artist who embodied, in the sum of his works, the greatest number of the greatest ideas."

European Summer Travel Offers Education, Thrills

If you are interested in a trip to Europe for the summer, sans Army or Peace Corps, yet still don't want to be one of those pathetic creatures with a tour and three cameras, perhaps you would like to look into Experiment in International Living. This organization sends students to Europe each summer to live with European families.

If you've had two years of a foreign language, and there is a particular European city you'd like to haunt, you may write Experiment in International Living in Putney, Vermont, and get additional information.

Looking for something more on the educational side? Then try Institute of International Living, 800 Second Avenue, New York, and tell them. They may arrange for you to take summer courses at some famous university, perhaps Oxford or Lausanne.

Want to really rough it? If so, write to the American Youth Hostels, 14 West Eighth Street,

New York; and they will let you know how you can ride a bicycle through Europe all summer, touring as you please, and stay at their hostels which are scattered throughout the continent.

If you are just interested in getting there, you may like to go inexpensively on a converted American troop ship that hauls immigrants in the winter, but makes for a lot of fun when three or four hundred mixed students travel in them to Europe during the early summer. Write to Council on Student Travel, 179 Broadway, New York. These ships aren't the most comfortable way to make the trip, but you will meet many students who perhaps have made the trip before and can pass on a lot of information that may be valuable later.

If you really want to go and do it big, you might leave and tour in the summer. Then when the fall comes, don't come home, but try a year of college in Italy or France—anywhere you like (can get in). The AYA (Academic Year Abroad) program can send you there at very minimal cost. Administrative matters related to admission, guidance, evaluation, transfer of academic credit, and coordination between European and American Education systems are managed by the AYA. The primary requirement is your foreign language; and, aside from that, it is relatively simple.

For further information write Mr. Stetson Holmes, Academic Year Abroad, Inc., 225 E. 46th St., New York 17, N. Y.

WILC Birthday Proves Festive

WILC celebrated its first anniversary December 3 with gifts of free records and gift certificates to students.

The station, which was formed a year ago to "promote student school spirit and act as an informative media", has grown from one console and a desk to three turntables, a new control board, a new mike, and a table for files.

On the anniversary day a table was set in front of the station with free 45's for students to choose from. An album was given away on the hour along with gift certificates for English Leather.

At present the station has over a thousand 45's and over a hundred LP's.

At the last Student Congress meeting, Head Announcer Wally West succeeded in obtaining $45 for a four-speed turntable and other needed supplies from the student activities fund.

WC Students Speak Out About Probation List; Give Opinions On Why, What Can Be Done

The new probation list has come out, and an alarming number of students' names have turned up on this list.

Why are so many people on the probation list? And what could be done about it?

Jo Anna Weaver—"Complete boredom—If the college would have more social functions, the students would have something more to look forward to; and they would be more willing to work; and people wouldn't cut classes as much."

Lynn Simmons—"Because of bad grades, make better grades."

Ricky Berman—"Because people are just getting back from summer vacation and not yet adjusted to the rigorous grind of college. Require summer quarter, require a course on college appreciation so people would realize how important it is."

Nicky Giovenitti—"Because of the Pub, it is the pitfall of the college. The skilled art of bridge drains your mind so you can't study properly. More supervision should be placed on the students."

Teddy Graham—"Because the school doesn't present an interesting enough atmosphere. They should build a duck blind behind the school."

Karl Allen—"Because there are so many students who simply can't make it. They shouldn't let them stay out here."

John Abbot—"Attitude of students—they just don't realize what college is for—it is up to each person to re-evaluate themselves."

Freddy Wells—"Because there are just too many people at the school—too many class hours and not enough lab hours."

Club Representatives Battle For Floats At Congress Meet

By GENE MARLOWE

Representatives of the various clubs battled in the Student Congress January 7 for the right to design their own floats for the Homecoming parade.

Ronny Staton began the presentation of the clubs' case by reading an editorial that appeared in the last issue of the Seahawk that asked for continued freedom of the press. Staton asked for the same freedom for the clubs in designing their floats.

Bob Bowden, representative of the Circle K Club, showed a diagram of his club's float which was turned down by the administration. The idea for the float, a satire on Maidenform Bra advertisements that appear in leading magazines, was originated by State College four years ago.

Four Years Behind State
"This college is four years behind State," argued Bowden, "and still can't get the idea through."

Bowden stated that the float had been turned down on the grounds that:

(1) It is vulgar.

(2) The college doesn't wish the bad reflection it might cause.

"It may start a precedent—I hope so—but not the type the administration means," said Bowden, saying the students are tired of people thinking of Wilmington College as a continuation of high school and that a more collegiate Homecoming parade would help change this view of the college.

Pannathians Defend Float

Sandy Wright spoke in defense of the Pannathian's float titled, "Bury the Braves." The float, which was suggestive, had not been submitted to the administration at that time.

Jack Mason read a resolution calling "for a vote of confidence from the Student Council, who represent the Student Body, for the support of student freedom as represented in the floats."

A vote by ballot was taken. Before the results had been counted, Mr. Allen stated that regardless of the results, ideas

Homecoming festivities swing into action tomorrow night after the final voting for the Homecoming Queen with the lighting of the bonfire.

The bonfire will be lit on the field behind the college at 8:30. Cheerleaders will be present to hold a pep rally.

The XL's will play at a street dance on the parking lot beside the bonfire from 8:00 until 10:00. The Circle K and Civitan Club are holding a carwash through Wednesday of this week to finance the street dance.

Friday afternoon the Homecoming parade will begin at the Community Center, go down Third Street as far as Red Cross, and then back up Front Street.

The Circle K Club will have a float featuring a gallows decorated with a Catawba Brave. The Modern Language Club will enter a float.

A baby carriage, symbolic of the college's youngest club, will represent the Civitan Club. Several of the clubs will combine to form a marching unit.

The Engineers Club is responsible for the bonfire and the parade route.

The Homecoming Queen will be presented Friday night at the basketball game.

Following the ballgame, the Homecoming dance will be held from 10:00 to 1:00 at the college. The Delmars, a group from Fort Fisher Air Force Base, will play at the dance.

The dress for the dance is school clothes. Tickets will be sold two days in advance.

SRO To Present Plays Of Thurber

Another production is in the making at the SRO Theater of Wilmington College. This time it is "A Thurber Carnival" by America's leading humorist, James Thurber. A winner of the special Tony Award, "A Thurber Carnival" opened at the ANTA Theatre in New York on Friday night, February 26, 1960, for the first time and was reviewed as both the freshest and funniest show of the year," by the New York Times.

The "Thurber Carnival" is a type of revue of Thurber's works done in sketches with musical interludes. It is an arrangement of sketches with such interesting titles as: "The Night the Bed Fell," "The Little Girl and the Wolf," "If Grant Had Been Drinking At Appomattox," "The Macbeth Murder Mystery," "Mr. Preble Gets Rid of His Wife," and many others.

Doug W. Swink, director of dramatic arts, said in an interview, "Technically, it is quite difficult both for scenery and lighting effects. The play is a very lively and spirited form of tongue-in-cheek humor. It is felt that the play will prove to be a pleasurable evening spent with James Thurber, who was an aphorist of said truths who mourned his times with laughter."

"Among other myths created by Thurber, the audience will see the unicorn as he nibbled his last rose and left the garden."

By MORRIS BROADWELL

There will be no idle moments for Wilmington College coeds January 17, 18, 19, as it is the biggest weekend of the entire year—Homecoming!

Highlighting this weekend will be the Homecoming Court. Every organization at the college is sponsoring a freshman or sophomore girl, one of whom will be chosen as Queen of Homecoming.

Representing the Fiedling is Martha Jay Staton, petit sophomore, who stands only 5'3" tall. Martha, Editor-in-chief of the year book, plans to transfer to Meredith College next year where she'll major in French. Although Martha enjoys doing most anything, her main hobbies are baton twirling and skiing.

Mary Henderson, head cheerleader, represents her entire cheering squad in the Homecoming activities. Mary is planning for a successful game Friday night with lots of enthusiastic cheerers. A slim 5'6" brunette, she spends her leisure time as a dance instructor. Mary's plans for transferring next year are indefinite; but while at Wilmington College, she is "enjoying every minute of it."

The Pen Pusher's Club is sponsoring Marie Lassiter as their candidate for Homecoming Queen. She stands 5'5" tall and has long brown hair and hazel eyes. Marie spends most of her time working in the office as secretary to the Dean, assisting on the Fiedling, and attending classes. Marie admits that she "spends all her extra pennies on records" as she is quite fond of classical and semi-classical music. In closing her interview Marie added "I'm sure that this Homecoming will be a most memorable time of all my years in college."

Students are to be commended for their cooperation in helping ease the crowded situation in the Student Services Building during the lunch hours. It is asked that they continue to refrain from playing cards during the hours from 11:30 to 1:00 so that our students and faculty will be able to find a place to sit down and eat lunch.

Frank Allen
Dean of Students

Sondra Wilson, who executes her job as editor of The Seahawk, has been favored by The Seahawk staff as they elected her their sponsor. A 5'2" brunette, weighing exactly 100 lbs., Sondra plans to major in journalism and will be working as an intern at the Star-News this summer. Working closely with the Student Council in many campus affairs, Sondra remarked, "The enthusiasm and order of Homecoming this year has improved tremendously over this activity last year, and we are hoping that everyone will turn out for the bonfire, game, dance, and parade."

Measuring a mere 5'1" and weighing only eighty-five lbs., Carla Otts is sponsored by the Modern Language Club. She is following the secondary education course and plans to major in biology. Carla enjoys sewing, playing cards, and working with

The Right to Opinion

By BETH FINEBERG and LOUISE AMBROSIO

Why is our development being stifled? Is it the negativism of certain elements in the college system? Or is it the apathy that supports these elements? When does licit exercise of authority become domination? The answers to these questions can not be ascertained by us. The fact, however, that this situation is evolving is of prime concern.

We will be responsible for ourselves; therefore, let only necessity curtail the growth of responsibility. Everyone will agree that it is one of the purposes of college to aid in mental expansion of the individual, but the necessary nutrients are being withheld. Granted every man does not have potential to become completely responsible; but irresponsibility, like ignorance can ensue from deprivation, rather than incapacity. Since students of which we speak are in college, we must assume they have the potential which must be realized.

The realization comes from the exertion of opinion in response to intellectual stimuli. Moreover, it matters not whether this opinion be liberal or conservative, as long as it exists. Apathy must not be allowed to arrest development. The void resulting from indifference is more to be regretted than the most "radical" ideology of college students. Even fanaticism will be modified into a synthesis of the two extremes by dynamic people of matured perspective. This process can be aided by authority which encourages and directs with knowledge that hostility of youth attends a melange of conflicting ideas which are an integral part of youth.

Unless irrational restriction is eliminated from colleges, it is not inconceivable that a collective society with overtones of false altruism will result. At its head could be the ever-watchful big brother, subsequent echelons being a secret police, and the proletariat.

A situation such as this can not be allowed to occur. Rational dissent from the established order is a healthy sign of a growing awareness in student bodies. Society needs to be criticized by youth which can one day improve that order.

Support Homecoming

The Homecoming Activities this year show a creditable improvement over those of last year and the majority of students seem to be taking a greater interest in the various projects.

Clubs and organizations did not have to be repeatedly reminded of their privilege to select a Homecoming sponsor; in fact, most of them had named their choice several days prior to the deadline.

The request of transferring the voting procedures to the lobby of the Library building has been granted and the pictures of the Homecoming Court have been displayed on the bulletin board in the same building. This will, indubitably, aid voters in associating names with faces.

The prime reason for our having voting in the Library building is to increase the low percentage of voters.

Only apathy can cause our Homecoming to be unsuccessful. A bonfire and band Thursday night, and the Homecoming Parade, Game, and Dance Friday night should encourage participation and enthusiasm from every student.

Letters To Editor

The editorial entitled "Why Wasn't the Christmas Dance Successful?" that appeared in the December 14 edition of "the Seahawk" advanced certain questions and made several complimentary insinuations that we believe need clarification.

The editorial plainly stated that the dance was not a success. We disagree emphatically. The purpose of the dance was to provide entertainment for the students of Wilmington College and that entertainment was provided. We are not so naive that we expect everyone to enjoy the dance equally, but we do believe that the dance was well received by the majority of those present. Those who "attempted" to promote the dance think that it was a success.

We agree that it was unfortunate that some students had to work until nine. However, this group was a small minority of those present, and it would be unfair to arrange the hours of the dance to suit such a small group.

We think it would be proper to point out that high school dances (at NHHHS) lasted until 11:30 and not until 12:00 as was stated in the editorial. The funds at the disposal of the Cotillion Club make it impossible to have more than a three hour dance. The amount that we can pay a band also puts a severe limitation on whom we can secure. We doubt that the "Seahawk" would relinquish any of its appropriations to finance a big name band for Wilmington College. (However, we do believe that the "Seahawk" could be a better newspaper if it had more money to finance its operations.)

Considering the above obstacles, we believe that the selection of the band was quite meticulous. In addition, to living within its means there are several other factors the Cotillion Club has to consider when selecting a band. It must strive to provide varied entertainment. It would not be fair to have the same kind of entertainment at every dance. One final point to be considered is the type of dance being presented. The correlation between semi-formal clothes and a twist party is very slight. We are sure the editor agrees that the music must be suitable to the occasion.

One final point that merits discussion. Contrary to what was stated in the editorial, it is our opinion that students must act as adults in order to be treated as such. The act of stealing expensive decorations was certainly not one expected of an adult. One would not expect an adult to litter the lawn of his home or of a friend's home with whisky bottles and beer cans. The parking lot behind the Pub bore an amazing resemblance to the city dump at the close of the last dance. It seems to me that those students who choose to bring their own entertainment to the dance could at least have the decency to take the rema-nents of it home with them rather than leave it here on campus.

The last of your article merits repetition and we would like to quote it.

"Finally, the majority of the student body completely ignored the fact that we were even having a dance. We became indignant because of the insufficiency of our social environment; yet our actions do little to convince the administration that we need and desire those things which we demand."

Attendance at the first two dances did not show that the students were interested in having any further social functions. However, for those few who chose to attend, we will continue to do our best to provide an oasis of entertainment in the otherwise barren desert of culture that now prevails at Wilmington College.

Yours truly,
Ronnie Staton, Co-Chairman
Cotillion Club

January 10, 1963

To the editor:

In recent weeks, it has come to my attention and many other students about the misuse of our parking lots. There has been an excess amount of glass broken on the lots. The lots were made for the convenience of students and faculty of Wilmington College. We, the students, use these lots to the fullest extent. It is up to us and us alone to keep these lots clean. It is our money and our tires that will pay the price. I sincerely hope that faculty and students will look into this matter.

Cynthia Murphy

Dear Editor:

The recent edition of the Seahawk boasted an excellent editorial on the unwarranted censorship to which the paper could be subjected.

While in high school, we were told how to dress, what courses to take, and how to run our activities. In other words, we had no academic freedom whatsoever. Everything we did was governed by a dictatorial administration, and we expected this.

When we reached college, we anticipated changes. One of the main differences in high school and college is that we supposedly have the freedom to dress as we like, take what courses we want, and participate in any academic activities in the way we like. The latter is not the case at Wilmington College. Our well-known reputation as an advanced high school is most certainly deserving.

Enthusiastic plans to make this year's homecoming representative of college tastes and thinking were disappointingly downed by undemocratic and unchecked censorship. Even though these plans were firmly backed by the student council, the ruling percentage of the faculty sires and ruled emphatically NO. It seems as if the students' wishes are completely disregarded, school spirit is undesired, and a democratic student body is unwanted.

So as in the past, this year's Homecoming will be juvenile, uninteresting, and lacking in enthusiastic student participation.

Insights

By RANDY JOHNSON

I am by no means one of those fellows who think the U.N. to be the most insidious organization on earth because we are sitting on it with those "Roosians." However, it seems to me that the recent squeeze play on M. Tshombe should raise a question or two from even the liberals. For example: Is the "sovereign state" of Katanga fair game for the U.N.? or, why couldn't the U.N. have helped Belgium keep the Congo if it can help the Leopoldville government contain Katanga?

It seems to me that the U.N. was set up to mediate between nations rather than settle internal disputes. What a holler would have risen to the heavens, though, if anything slightly resembling a U.N. trooper had been seen in the vicinity of Oxford, Miss., when Barnett was trying to prove his point.

Nobody is particularly disillusioned; but big-stickism is always interesting. Rally 'round the flag, boys!

Hold That Line!

And they sang, "We'll hang the sacred cows on the Maginot Line." Well, we voted seventeen to one abstention to pass the resolution endorsing the floats. The relative merits of certain Homecoming floats were relative indeed, but the issue took on the proportions of a test case. It was interesting. It was a nice gesture. But it was more than a gesture? I think so. First of all it accentuates the fact that this year the students of Wilmington College have finally come alive, or at least a certain nucleus. It also shows that there are categorical gulfs between the faculty and the student body in some areas.

Now the plea that we be treated as adults doesn't ring so solidly with me upon reflection. I would suggest that we be treated, if we must be treated, like the inquiring, doubting, foolish, radical students which we should be and most of the time are not. If we are not these things; what on earth will we have learned by 40, or what ideas will we have to temper with the "wisdom" of maturity?

There must also be a closer communion between the students and faculty. Very often one gets the impression of "Big Brother is watching." While it is understandable that the faculty is slow in giving responsibility to students who have for so long shown no responsibility about anything, it is also obvious that as this college grows there will be too much work for the faculty to carefully keep vigil.

The Fine Arts Committee of the Student Council is an example of what student-faculty cooperation will merit. There is a great deal of enthusiasm over the forthcoming Fine Arts Week in February. The faculty is giving assistance without which these plans would be nearly impossible. As has been shown in the past; however, the faculty cannot directly engender vitality in the student body. With the growth in attendance there has been a parallel increase in students with ideas.

Many of these ideas are new and out of context with this area. There is no cliché intended about the vigorous American youth either; but really, one way or the other, these ideas will out. If you don't think there are any, just come up to a student council meeting sometime. Things seem pretty unruly, and there are conflicts; but this will always be the case, and gladly so, if this is to be a real college and font of ideas, etc.

Spring Fashions Turn To Prints, Skinny Look Becomes Popular

Season's trends turn to the striking and the colorful as spring approaches. Gay, splashy prints in synthetics, jerseys and silks are right for our times.

Designers are finding their soft natural body dresses attracting most attention. These silhouettes are described as semi-fitted, body-conscious, open-air, and even skinny.

Look Becomes Skinny

One of the newest creations is the skinny coat-dress in Italian silk buttoned in brass. The back is tab-belted. This coat begins the string bean look in spring fashions.

The biggest news in spring fashions is the overblouse, seen everywhere in all forms. Short ones ride the midriff and show a high-rising waistband; others are waist-length and tunic length, with sleeves or sleeveless, or with ruffles, lace, or buttons. The overblouse with a nautical turn gives a new audacious look.

Vests are showing pointed fronts and sleeveless lines over soft contrasting blouses. The jumper style is being used in coats, in suits, in costumes, in coat-dresses—in many unusual ways. Skirts are gathered softly and blouse-sleeves are puffed.

Waistlines Wander

Waistlines still wander, sometimes high and empire-looking, sometimes slung low, and sometimes non-existent. Hem lines remain unchanged for James Galanos, California fashion designer. Other designers are contemplating bringing the hems lower for the spring and coming fashions.

Blacks, clinging and wonderful, make a sharp impression on spring. More often than not, they are dashed with white for distinctive contrast. Dinner suits are tailored with jackets or coats that could start the glamour ball rolling, while the suns still beams.

Laces and prints are often given a dusting of beads for the dewy twinkle effect. Full length coats, also impeccably tailored and worn over matching dresses of lace and chiffon, are for gorgeous effects after five.

Boots Claim News

For the remaining winter months, boots seem to be the thing. Fur topped boots worn over socks, all weather boots—and though delightfully light weight, they are as warm as toast—thanks to their fleece lining.

The boots are leather-like in appearance—but with advantage that leather cannot claim. They are washable, scuff-free, non-shrinkable, and weather proof.

There are boots for every occasion and location—from suburbia to college campus to town areas.

Hair styles are swinging to the sleek and short. The Cleopatra and Mona Lisa looks are still in evidence but giving way to the new. Pert hair bows will still grace the locks of the younger generation.

Spring 1963 looks like a season to be remembered in fashions.

for floats should still be checked by club advisors and the administration.

The resolution was passed, 17 voting in favor of it with one abstention.

Despite the overwhelming majority backing of the Student Congress, administrative pressures upon the leaders of the resolution forced them to back down in the middle of last week.

"The idea of trying to submit the floats had been abandoned," said Jack Mason, "but the principle, student freedom in extracurricular activity, has not been forgotten."

Mansur Furthers Education, Plans To Aid His Country

By CARL SNEEDEN

"When I travel in America, I thought every people and director of the school would help and advise me," commented Mansur Fares, the Iranian student at Wilmington College. However, Mansur, or George as he prefers to be called, has not been helped as he had hoped. Mansur's main reason for coming to the United States was to further his education.

His future plans are to become a mechanical engineer. When he has completed his education in the United States, he hopes to return to Iran to help the people of his country. He also commented that the United States has helped his home country of Iran in many ways. The United States government has helped to put his country

In the United States, most people seem to have time both to work and to get an education at the same time, if it is necessary. In Iran, you either do one or the other.

Mansur has two sisters and no brothers. His father is a banker in Tehran. Mansur studied English in an Iranian high school for four years. He commented that the only difficulty is that his teacher did not pronounce the words as the American people do.

For recreation he plays volleyball. He is also interested in piano and accordion music. In a high school combo, he played the accordion. He commented that the Iranian people liked "rock-n-roll" music very much and that the "twist" was very popular with the high school students.

Mansur also commented that his home country is the fourth largest oil producer in the world. He stated that there is only one large university in Tehran, the capital of Iran; but there are several smaller ones throughout his country.

In "Shiraz", an American Medical Center has been erected to help the Iranian people. Mansur's cousin is a doctor in this center and studied twenty years to become a doctor.

Mansur has been in Wilmington approximately forty days. He came to Wilmington via Paris, New York, and Raleigh.

The Right to Opinion

By BETH FINEBERG and LOUISE AMBROSIO

Why is our development being stifled? Is it the negativity of certain elements in the college system? Or is it the apathy that supports these elements? When does licit exercise of authority become domination? The answers to these questions can not be ascertained by us. The fact, however, that this situation is evolving is of prime concern.

We will be responsible for ourselves; therefore, let only necessity curtail the growth of responsibility. Everyone will agree that it is one of the purposes of college to aid in mental expansion of the individual, but the necessary nutrients are being withheld. Granted every man does not have potential to become completely responsible; but irresponsibility, like ignorance can ensue from deprivation, rather than incapacity. Since students of which we speak are in college, we must assume they have the potential which must be realized.

The realization comes from the exertion of opinion in response to intellectual stimuli. Moreover, it matters not whether this opinion be liberal or conservative, as long as it exists. Apathy must not be allowed to arrest development. The void resulting from indifference is more to be regretted than the most "radical" ideology of college students. Even fanaticism will be modified into a synthesis of the two extremes by dynamic people of matured perspective. This process can be aided by authority which encourages and directs with knowledge that hostility of youth attends a melange of conflicting ideas which are an integral part of youth.

Unless irrational restriction is eliminated from colleges, it is not inconceivable that a collective society with overtones of false altruism will result. At its head could be the ever-polite big brother, subsequent echelons being a secret police, and the proletariat.

A situation such as this can not be allowed to occur. Rational dissent from the established order is a healthy sign of a growing awareness in student bodies. Society needs to be criticized by youth which can one day improve that order.

Support Homecoming

The Homecoming Activities this year show a creditable improvement over those of last year and the majority of students seem to be taking a greater interest in the various projects.

Clubs and organizations did not have to be repeatedly reminded of their privilege to select a Homecoming sponsor; in fact, most of them had named their choice several days prior to the deadline.

The request of transferring the voting procedures to the lobby of the Library building has been granted and the pictures of the Homecoming Court have been displayed on the bulletin board in the same building. This will, indubitably, aid voters in associating names with faces.

The prime reason for our having voting in the Library building is to increase the low percentage of voters.

Only apathy can cause our Homecoming to be unsuccessful. A bonfire and band Thursday night, and the Homecoming Parade, Game, and Dance Friday night should encourage participation and enthusiasm from every student.

Letters To Editor

The editorial entitled "Why Wasn't the Christmas Dance Successful?" that appeared in the December 14 edition of "the Seahawk" advanced certain questions and made several complimentary insinuations that we believe need clarification.

The editorial plainly stated that the dance was not a success. We disagree emphatically. The purpose of the dance was to provide entertainment for the students of Wilmington College and that entertainment was provided. We are not so naive that we expect everyone to enjoy the dance equally, but we do believe that the dance was well received by the majority of those present. Those who "attempted" to promote the dance think that it was a success.

We agree that it was unfortunate that some students had to work until nine. However, this group was a small minority of those present, and it would be unfair to arrange the hours of the dance to suit such a small group.

We think it would be proper to point out that high school dances (at NHHS) lasted until 11:30 and not until 12:00 as was stated in the editorial. The funds at the disposal of the Cotillion Club make it impossible to have more than a three hour dance. The amount that we can pay a band also puts a severe limitation on whom we can secure. We doubt that the "Seahawk" would relinquish any of its appropriations to finance a big name band for Wilmington College. (However, we do believe that the "Seahawk" could be a better newspaper if it had more money to finance its operations.)

Considering the above obstacles, we believe that the selection of the band was quite meticulous. In addition, to living within its means there are several other factors the Cotillion Club has to consider when selecting a band. It must strive to provide varied entertainment. It would not be fair to have the same kind of entertainment at every dance. One final point to be considered is the type of dance being presented. The correlation between semi-formal clothes and a twist party is very slight. We are sure the editor agrees that the music must be suitable to the occasion.

One final point that merits discussion. Contrary to what was stated in the editorial, it is our opinion that students must act as adults in order to be treated as such. The act of stealing expensive decorations was certainly not one expected of an adult. One would not expect an adult to litter the lawn of his home or of a friend's home with whiskey bottles and beer cans. The parking lot behind the Pub bore an amazing resemblance to the city dump at the close of the last dance. It seems to me that those students who choose to bring their own entertainment to the dance could at least have the decency to take the rema-nents of it home with them rather than leave it here on campus.

The last of your article merits repetition and we would like to quote it.

"Finally, the majority of the student body completely ignored the fact that we were even having a dance. We became indignant because of the insufficiency of our social environment; yet our actions do little to convince the administration that we need and desire those things which we demand."

Attendance at the first two dances did not show that the students were interested in having any further social functions. However, for those few who chose to attend, we will continue to do our best to provide an oasis of entertainment in the otherwise barren desert of culture that now prevails at Wilmington College.

Yours truly,

Ronnie Staton, Co-Chairman
Cotillion Club

January 10, 1963

To the editor:

In recent weeks, it has come to my attention and many other students about the misuse of our parking lots. There has been an excess amount of glass broken on the lots. The lots were made for the convenience of students and faculty of Wilmington College. We, the students, use these lots to the fullest extent. It is up to us and us alone to keep these lots clean. It is our money and our tires that will pay the price. I sincerely hope that faculty and students will look into this matter.

Cynthia Murphy

Dear Editor:

The recent edition of the Seahawk boasted an excellent editorial on the unwarranted censorship to which the paper could be subjected.

While in high school, we were told how to dress, what courses to take, and how to run our activities. In other words, we had no academic freedom whatsoever. Everything we did was governed by a dictatorial administration, and we expected this.

When we reached college, we anticipated changes. One of the main differences in high school and college is that we supposedly have the freedom to dress as we like, take what courses we want, and participate in any academic activities in the way we like. The latter is not the case at Wilmington College. Our well-known reputation as an advanced high school is most certainly deserving.

Enthusiastic plans to make this year's homecoming representative of college tastes and thinking were disappointingly doused by undemocratic and unchecked censorship. Even though these plans were firmly backed by the student council, the ruling percentage of the faculty sires and ruled emphatically NO. It seems as if the students' wishes are completely disregarded, school spirit is undesired, and a democratic student body is unwanted.

So as in the past, this year's Homecoming will be juvenile, uninteresting, and lacking in enthusiastic student participation.

Insights

By RANDY JOHNSON

I am by no means one of these fellows who think the U.N. to be the most insidious organization on earth because we are sitting on it with those "Roosians." However, it seems to me that the recent squeeze play on M. Tshombe should raise a question or two from even the liberals. For example: Is the "sovereign state" of Katanga fair game for the U.N.? or, why couldn't the U.N. have helped Belgium keep the Congo if it can help the Leopoldville government contain Katanga?

It seems to me that the U.N. was set up to mediate between nations rather than settle internal disputes. What a holler would have risen to the heavens, though, if anything slightly resembling a U.N. trooper had been seen in the vicinity of Oxford, Miss., when Barnett was trying to prove his point.

Nobody is particularly disillusioned; but big-stickism is always interesting. Rally 'round the flag, boys!

Hold That Line!

And they sang, "We'll hang the sacred cows on the Maginot Line." Well, we voted seventeen to one abstention to pass the resolution endorsing the floats. The relative merits of certain Homecoming floats were relative indeed, but the issue took on the proportions of a test case. It was interesting. It was a nice gesture. But it was more than a gesture? I think so. First of all it accentuates the fact that this year the students of Wilmington College have finally come alive, or at least a certain nucleus. It also shows that there are categorical guils between the faculty and the student body in some areas.

Now the plea that we be treated as adults doesn't ring so solidly with me upon reflection. I would suggest that we be treated, if we must be treated, like the inquiring, doubting, foolish, radical students which we should be and most of the time are not. If we are not these things; what on earth will we have learned by 40, or what ideas will we have to temper with the "wisdom" of maturity?

There must also be a closer communion between the students and faculty. Very often one gets the impression of "Big Brother is watching." While it is understandable that the faculty is slow in giving responsibility to students who have for so long shown no responsibility about anything, it is also obvious that as this college grows there will be too much work for the faculty to carefully keep vigil.

Seahawks Meet Braves In Homecoming Game

Friday night at Brogden Hall, the Seahawks will take on the Chowan Braves to highlight Wilmington College's annual homecoming festivities.

The homecoming game will have a special significance for the Hawk cage crew who are currently tied for second and last place in the small Virginia-Carolina Conference. Coach Bill Brooks' charges will be looking for their first conference victory of the season after suffering their 90-75 loss to Louisburg December 17.

However, because of the National Junior College Athletic Association ruling, which affects the competitive status of teams employing the services of transfer students before their period of ineligibility is up, both Louisburg and Chowan Colleges are unable to represent the Virginia-Carolina Conference in NJCAA competition. This situation automatically gives the Seahawks the right to represent the conference in the Region 10 playoffs later this year.

Last year, after winning the conference title, the Seahawks defeated the North Greenville College basketball squad to advance to the national tournament in Hutchinson, Kansas, in which they placed sixth.

The Seahawks, until last month's loss to Louisburg, had not lost a conference game in two years in sweeping to consecutive conference championships.

Wilmington College will be out to attain superiority in the Virginia-Carolina Conference in actuality, as well as in theory, when they take on the Braves of Chowan for their first conference encounter of the season on their home court.

As Friday's game marks the Seahawks' annual homecoming engagement, the 1963 Homecoming Queen and her court will be presented during the intermission proceedings between the halves. Each student organization at Wilmington College has chosen its representative to the homecoming court. From one of these sponsors the 1963 Wilmington College Homecoming Queen will be chosen to reign over the dance to be held in the Student Services building immediately following the basketball game.

Cold Weather Fails To Dampen Spirits Of Wilmington College Holiday Hunters

Wilmington College hunters report that targets have been plentiful during the hunting seasons which have been open on several types of game.

The boys state that the number of doves, ducks, and squirrels has far exceeded last year's crops in this area; and, as a result, limits have been bagged with greater frequency.

George Savage, perhaps Wilmington College's most enthusiastic duck hunter, reports that he bagged 26 during the season which ended December 29. George went hunting every day during the Christmas holidays en route to accomplishing this record. He claims to get his best results around Baldhead Island, Sunny Point, and the mouth of the Cape Fear River. The majority of his total consisted of black ducks, mallards, and wood ducks.

Wilmington College dove hunters report the same successes which they compiled during the first half of the split season. The cold weather during the second half of the season did little to dampen the spirits of the avid WC hunters. The frequency with which limits were bagged came close to those of the first half of the season which always has the higher dove population.

Carl Hyatt's shooting accident in which he wounded himself in the leg served only to slow down his hunting exploits. The holidays found him out after squirrels again despite his limp. Carl's leg is coming along fine, but he is being extra careful to see that his pistol doesn't misfire again. Carl and the other WC squirrel hunters claim that this year's crop was one of the best ever.

Louisburg Drops WC Cage Crew

LOUISBURG—Louisburg College combined sharp shooting from the free-throw line as well as from the floor to down Wilmington College 91-70 here Monday, December 17.

The Hurricane victory marked the first time Louisburg's coach Wayne Benton has ever defeated a Seahawk basketball team under Coach Bill Brooks.

Wilmington's loss marked their third in four starts and placed them in a second and last place tie with Chowan in the Virginia-North Carolina Junior College Conference.

However, because both Louisburg and Chowan are using the services of ineligible players this season, the loss will not count in the final standings of the three-team league.

The Seahawks managed to hold the Hurricane lead to two points at the half on fine shooting by Marshall Hamilton and Jack Barbour. But the second half saw Jerry Combust and Jack Reid open up the Louisburg lead despite Gene Bogash's red-hot effort.

After opening up a 75-69 lead with four minutes remaining in the game, the Hurricanes employed delaying tactics to preserve their lead.

Varsity Report

By HUGH PASCHAL

Does school spirit win games? This question has been raised on several occasions by students of Wilmington College. Such short-sighted individuals most certainly are ignoring the tremendous psychological effect that a wildly enthusiastic crowd has upon a player.

In a word the answer to this question is emphatically YES! For verification all one needs to do is ask one of the members of the Seahawk team. Any one of the boys will say that they feel the enthusiasm of a crowd acutely when they are playing.

The presence of a spirited student body gives the players a sense of accomplishment when they strive to win the game. No one likes to feel that his efforts are unappreciated and ignored. Certainly the display of enthusiasm has a great affect on the brand of basketball played here at Wilmington College.

The players have expressed their appreciation toward the students who have turned out to cheer them on this season. Their come-from-behind victories this year have borne positive evidence of the tremendous effect of the student cheering section at the games.

In the present as well as in the past Wilmington College students have been noted for their wildly enthusiastic support of their athletic teams. This fact undoubtedly led to this school's undeniably great accomplishments in the sporting field.

Of course WC students want their athletic representatives to continue to add to their accomplishments. Their activities at the basketball games verify this belief. Student support for the cheerleaders by holding cards and buying WC pennants, as well as taking an active part in the performance of the cheers, adds immeasurably to the morale of the players on the court.

Such students show that they realize the value of their support for their team, realizing fully well the adverse affects which would result from student apathy toward the team.

Citadel Bullpups Fall In Home Team Victory

In their first home game of the season Friday, December 14, the Wilmington College Seahawks trounced The Citadel's Freshman team at Brogden Hall.

The Seahawks got off to a slow start, but as the game progressed, their play was marked by steady improvements as they rolled to the 88-65 victory.

After spotting the Bullpup's an early five point lead, the Seahawks unleashed their talented attack to tie the score at nine-all on Marshall Hamilton's field goal.

Despite their slow start the Hawks, paced by Gene Bogash and Jack Barbour, managed to accumulate an amazing 50 per cent shooting average hitting on 35 of their 69 shots.

Barbour led the Hawk attack by connecting on 10 of 14 shots from the floor while accumulating 22 points. Bogash, double-teamed and hampered by an injured back, hit for nine of 16 field goals while totaling 21 points.

However, the scoring honors for the game went to the Citadel's Jim McCurdy with 28. The Bullpup standout prepped at Wilmington College last year.

Two other Seahawks, Marshall Hamilton and Tommy Cole, hit in double figures of 13 and 12 points respectively. Walt Janssen hit for 16 points for the losers.

Despite outstanding play on part of the Seahawks, it was not until the second half before they could mount a substantial lead over the stubborn Citadel squad.

After a 44-37 lead at the half the Seahawks caught fire widening the gap with 15 straight points to place themselves safely out of reach.

The outstanding defensive play of the Hawks was sparked by Bogash, Bobby Shipp, and Barbour. Bogash snared 18 rebounds to lead both teams, and Barbour placed second with seven.

Shipp, a reserve guard from NHHS, sparked the successful Seahawk fast break by twice stealing the ball in the second half.

Baby Bucs Stave Off Climatic WC Rally

East Carolina's freshman cagers, in spite of a game rally on the part of the Seahawks, dealt Wilmington College their fourth loss of the current season by an 85-78 score here at Brogren Hall, Tuesday, January 8.

The Baby Bucs took advantage of an uneven scoring attack by the Hawks to set up a three point half-time lead 37-34. Continuing where they left off, the ECC freshmen built up a 54-44 lead in the second half before the Hawks led by Gene Bogash could rally to gain a 74-73 lead late in the game.

Bogash in an outstanding performance, despite being double teamed, poured in 31 points and grabbed 15 rebounds in route to taking the game honors in both categories.

But it was ECC with all five starters hitting in double figures who dominated the play for most of the game. Neil Hodges led the Baby Bucs in scoring with 24 points. Jerry Woodside with 22, Robert Kinnard with 14, and Grady Williamson and Larry Phillips with 12 and 11 points respectively rounded out the well balanced Buc attack.

The lead changed hands several times during the second half as both teams battled furiously for superiority. After Hodges, Williamson, and Woodside sparked the 54-44 ECC rally, Bogash hit a scoring spurt to help trim the lead to 60-59. Jack Barbour and Tommy Cole each sank a field goal to give the Hawks a 61-60 lead.

ECC's frosh came back to recapture the lead on Hodges' shot. The lead changed hands frequently in the remaining minutes of the furiously contested battle.

With 1:15 left in the game the Hawks got the ball as a result of a rebound and drove to tie the score. But Barbour lost the ball on a slow pass. Woodside hit to make the score 83-78 with only seconds remaining on the clock.

Louisburg, Chowan Lose Positions In V-C Conference Competitions

Louisburg College and Chowan College have become ineligible to represent the troubled Virginia-Carolina Conference at the annual National Junior College Basketball Tournament at Hutchinson, Kansas.

Both Chowan and Louisburg have knowingly violated a V-C conference rule prohibiting the participation of transfer students in conference competition for a period of one year from the date of their admission.

Chowan's basketball team includes a transfer student from Wingate College in North Carolina. An Indiana University transfer has been playing ball for Louisburg. Both players transferred in September of 1962 making them ineligible to play until September of 1963, according to conference rules.

Since Chowan and Louisburg will forfeit all conference games in which ineligible players participate, Wilmington College will represent the V-C conference at the National Tournament.

Actually playing in this tournament would be the only reason member schools (Chowan, Louisburg, Wilmington) of the conference would abide by the rules and neither Chowan nor Louisburg is interested in competing in the National Tournament. Therefore, the two schools see no reason for not using all their players regardless of eligibility or rules. All three schools play the great majority of their games against the freshman teams of the much larger colleges and universities and the rules of the conference do not apply to these games, but only to conference games.

However, another question is raised by the action of the two schools. Where does this leave the Virginia - Carolina Conference tournament? Actually there is no need to have such a tournament this season, but because tournaments in the past have been so successful school officials are reluctant to abandon plans for this year's tourney.

'63 Tennis Season Nears Opening Date

By DICK CARAVATI

As the tennis season approaches, the Wilmington College tennis team is considering plans for their 1963 season.

In the past, the Seahawk team has always been plagued with problems. The troubled Virginia-Carolina conference, of which Wilmington College is a member, has no organized tennis competition. At the present, Wilmington College has no tennis courts on which to practice, so the team must rely upon the limited facilities of the city.

The most important of these problems is the lack of interest among the students. Actually, as said before, the possibility of having a good tennis team will depend completely on student interest. Because there are only two players returning from last year's team, much of the success of this year's team will depend on the new players.

Larger colleges and universities in the state have excellent tennis teams which do much to further the name and image of their schools. So it is with our racket team, it may have a bright future and, with the students' interest, represent well a growing Wilmington College.

Bogash Leads To Victory Against USC Freshmen

Wilmington College, paced by Gene Bogash and aided by brilliant play from substitute guard Harry Buzzell, came from behind to hand the South Carolina freshman squad a 68-54 defeat at Brogren Hall, Saturday, January 5.

Seemingly inept, the Hawks trailed by as much as nine points during the first half. However, they managed to pull to within three points of the Biddies at the half 21-24.

After the half the Hawks tied the score briefly. A Bobby Shipp field goal gave the Hawks the lead for the first time since the first quarter.

South Carolina came back to capture the lead again and to hold it by one point, until a basket and a foul shot by Bogash tied it at 45-all.

Held scoreless for most of the first half, Bogash, the Hawks' big gun, found the range in the second half to capture the game scoring honors with 28 points.

South Carolina which was hurt by fouls was led in the scoring department by 6-6 Bill Woofert with 25 points. The Biddies were forced to play mostly their subs for the last five minutes of the game when Woofert, John Schroeder, and Joe Tonelli fouled out.

With seven minutes left in the game the Hawks took advantage of the tight man-to-man defense employed by South Carolina to open up their fast break. Buzzell and Jack Barbour teamed up with Bogash to give the Seahawks a 59-49 lead and put them out of range.

With less than two minutes remaining, the Seahawks poured in nine straight points to give them their final 68-54 advantage.

Seahawk Features Buzzell, Shipp In Continuation Of Player Series

Continuing with its series of articles on the members of the Wilmington College basketball squad, the Seahawk features Harry Buzzell and Bobby Shipp, two boys who have provided Hawk cage fans with many exciting moments thus far this season.

Buzzell, a 6'2", 170-pound sophomore, hails from Presque Isle, Me., where he lettered in basketball for three years. As a senior co-captain, Harry's outstanding play and fine 15-point scoring average sparked Presque Isle High School to the championship of eastern Maine and the runner-up spot in the state basketball tournament.

After leaving his alma mater, Harry entered Wilmington College as a freshman in 1961 and played on the Seahawk team which placed sixth in the National Junior College basketball tournament in Hutchinson, Kan. Well-known to all Seahawk fans for his brilliant defensive play and heads-up basketball, the soft-spoken forward has made himself a fixture in the Hawk line-up.

After leaving WC the Seahawk forward plans to continue his basketball career at Springfield College in Massachusetts.

Bobby Shipp is no stranger to Wilmingtonians who have followed his exploits at NHHS for the past three years. After distinguishing himself in three sports at the county high school, Bobby comes to WC with the promise of going on to even greater heights as a Seahawk athlete.

The 6-1, 180-pound freshman proved to be an outstanding high school athlete during his stay at NHHS. He was on the Wildcat basketball squad, which has won seven of eight state championships for three years; and as co-captain of both the football and baseball teams, Bobby was elected to the all-state squads in both sports.

Coach Brooks plans to make use of Bobby's baseball talents as well as those that he has displayed on the basketball court when spring rolls around.

As a native of Wilmington, Bobby plans to complete all four years of his college education here at Wilmington College, where he has become a welcomed addition to the Seahawk sporting roster.

Last Cheering Practice Brings New Victory Song To Light

It is now 7:15 p.m.! Where the heck is everybody? Looks like they could get here on time once in a while.

Time passes.
Squo-o-nk! Bam!
A friendly face at last! — Several, in fact!

Where are the rest of our illustrious cheerleaders?

Come on, I'm ready to start! Let's go! Two bits, four—Calm down! Calm down! We'll wait five more minutes.

Squo-o-nk! Bam!
O.K., what your excuse! — Forget it! I haven't got time to hear them.

Everybody here? Tomz? Davis? Wooten? Zefefellis? Avery? Turner? Macris? Farrar? B. L. C.? What do you know! Everybody's here at last.

First of all, everybody be at Brogden Hall at 7:15 p.m., bring your pom-poms, and be prepared to sell pennants. Everybody's asking for them, and we should be able to sell them all.

Remember they're fifty cents, but if they want to pay a dollar — don't sass 'em.

This is the last practice before Homecoming, so let's make the best of it. Let's live up to our job and show school spirit like never before. Who knows! It might be catching!

We're going to use our victory song Friday night, so let's run through it.

Here come the Seahawks,
Let's give a cheer,
Stand up and shout so that they can hear.
When they jump and pass and shoot
Be sure you're there to clap and root!

Jazz enthusiast, Thomas Gay, invites his audience (of near 50) to step into his world of "real" music.

Thomas Gay Talks On History Of Jazz In Second Of Fine Arts Programs

"Jazz is the result of a three-hundred-years blending in the United States of the European and West African musical traditions; and its predominant components are European harmony, Euro-African melody, and African rhythm," said Thomas E. Gay, Jr., in his jazz lecture last Thursday night. This history of jazz was the second in a series sponsored by the Fine Arts Committee.

"Cool jazz may be tentatively defined as semi-improvisational American Music distinguished by an immediacy of communication, expressiveness characteristic of the free use of the human voice and complex flowing rhythm."

Mr. Gay wanted the audience to realize that jazz represents "changing values and depicts our dynamic times." The listeners heard about jazz from its children. She is a member of the Modern Language Club and the Cotillion Club.

The Basketball team is sponsoring Memory Farrar, who is "really thrilled" that the basketball boys elected her to represent them. A cheerleader, freshman May attendant, and a Dean's list student, Memory is interested in interior decorating. A resident of Wrightsville Beach, she loves to water ski, sew, and read. French is a favorite subject of Memory's this year.

Betty Gore, a local student and graduate of New Hanover High School last year, is sponsored by the Chess Club. "Five-foot-two, eyes of blue" Betty sports a blond bouffant hairdo. She loves piano and crowns psychology as her favorite subject. After transferring from another college last quarter, Betty says "I like Wilmington College because it's home to me, and I'm associating with people I know — that means so much."

Millie Stone is being sponsored by the Student Council, of which she is vice-president. She is usually distinguished by her blond, bouffant, teased hairstyle and her light brown eyes. Hailing from Lake Waccamaw, Millie likes music of all types. Her other hobbies, typical of where she lives, are swimming and water skiing. English is her favorite subject and her major.

Circle K Sweetheart, Judy Matthews, will represent the Circle K Club in the Homecoming activities. Judy, who has recently been chosen May Queen, is a member of the Activities Staff on the Fledgling, a library assistant, and a Student Congress representative. With intentions of becoming a teacher, Judy is looking forward to next year at East Carolina.

Pat Stiles is a sweetheart, too, but for the Engineer's Club, whom she will represent during Homecoming Festivities. Pat is a sophomore this year and a Liberal Arts student. She works in the office and is a member of the Fledgling staff.

A freshman this year, Pat Flynn is sponsor for the Panmathian Society. Pat is the tallest girl in the court and has brown hair and green eyes. She has chosen English as her major and dancing and music as her hobbies.

Pat Beasley represents the Collegiate Civitan Club. Maid of Honor in the May court and a freshman Judicial representative, Pat works part time in a hospital lab. She plans to be a medical technologist.

Thomas To Give Painting Lecture

The Fine Arts Committee is sponsoring a lecture by Mr. Howard Thomas of the University of Georgia Art Department. Mr. Thomas has been Director, Division of Art, University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee; Acting Head, Department of Art, Women's College of the University of North Carolina; Head, Art Department of Agnes Scott College. He has exhibited in all the major painting competitions and exhibitions in the United States. His paintings have won him many awards and he is represented in important private and public collections.

The lecture will be titled "The Emergence of Style in Painting" and will be given in Room 210, Hoggard Hall, at 8:30 P.M., Monday, January 28.

Good Yuck, Seahawks

Four year old Cathleen (Cathy) Hand, daughter of Sgt. and Mrs. Richard Hand, lives at 2232 Milmosa Place and is the cheerleading mascot this year. She has the biggest brown eyes you ever saw, is the "yittilest cheerleader and just yoves it." Ask her!

Louise Towne is a sophomore sponsor for the Archery Club. She stands 5'4" tall and has brown hair and blue eyes. Louise, whose hometown is Whiteville, wants to become a teacher.

WILC is sponsoring Joanne LeGwin. Joanne stands 5'3" and is Exchange Editor for the Seahawk and was recently chosen as a member of the Top Twelve Singers.

Del Royals To Return For Valentine Dance Here Tomorrow Night

Plans for the Valentine Dance, under the direction of Ronnie Staton and Dino Summerlin, include the return of the Del Royals.

"Everybody remembers their fine performance at the Homecoming Dance," said Staton, mentioning their popularity among those who have heard the Del Royals before.

The dance will be held February 15; the dress is school clothes; and tickets will be sold two days in advance in the boiler room.

Tickets will be $1.00 in advance and $1.50 at the door. The snack bar will be open during the dance, which last from 9 until 1 o'clock.

Carla Otts, who is in charge of decorations, "has lots of surprises in store," stated Staton.

Pen Pushers Plan With Pen In Hand

Members of the Pen Pushers Club met at the home of club advisor, Miss Shannon Morton, January 14. Sondra Wilson, president, called upon John Abbott, Randy Johnson, and Freddie Newber to present their creative writings.

The club members are now working on the publication of the literary magazine, With Pen In Hand. All members are required to submit writings and interested students may contribute any poetry or prose to the club for consideration.

Among recent activities, the Pen Pushers have stimulated an interest in and have become a part of the committee for the aesthetic development of the college. This committee is responsible for the success of Fine Arts Week, beginning February 18.

At the February 18 meeting, Mary Henderson and Betty Lou Collins will serve as co-hostesses. The reading and criticisms of compositions from all the members will be the program.

Panmathians Act As Ukraine At Chapel Hill Model UN

Representing the Ukraine, six members of the Panmathian Society will leave February 20 for the United Nations Model General Assembly at Chapel Hill.

Sandy Wright, Acie Kinlaw, Jack Mason, Dick Caravati, Steve Preston and Larry Ingle, faculty advisor, will go to the convention.

Purpose of Meet

The purpose of the Model UN is to inform college students of the operation and problems of the organization, said Mr. Ingle.

Sixty-one delegations from Maryland to Florida will be present at the meeting with resolutions appropriate for the various countries they represent.

Support for Reds

The delegates from Wilmington College, being members of the Ukraine, a communist block country, will support those resolutions presented by the Russian delegate—Carolina, and also present two of their own.

The bills to be presented by our college at the Model UN call for the immediate acceptance of Red China into the UN and the concurrent withdrawal of recognition of Ching Kai Shek and the Nationalist Chinese.

Colleges' Countries

The United States will be represented by a delegation from the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado. Some of the other colleges and the countries they will represent are: State—India and Panama; Duke—Cuba, Finland, Pakistan, and Argentina;

College Prepares Plans For Fine Arts Week

The Fine Arts Committee of the Student Council is presenting the first annual Fine Arts Week from February 17-23.

Randy Johnson heads the student committee for the week. Chairmen of the Faculty Seminar Committee are Claude Howell, Walter Biggs, and Miss Shannon Morton.

Correspondence has been going on for two months with the performers who are coming to the College. Eight events have been scheduled, four of which are to occur in the Fine Arts Week.

On Tuesday, February 19, at 8 o'clock in the Student Services Building, Mrs. Betty Vaiden Williams will present her repertoire of folk songs. She is a professional singer with considerable reputation in folk music circles.

The songs will vary from Smokey Mountain ballads to ethnic songs from foreign countries. Mrs. Williams will be the first professional performer the college has had in recent years.

At 8 o'clock Saturday, February 23, a jazz concert will be given by the Bill Hanna Quintet from Charlotte, N. C. Reputedly one of the best small groups in North Carolina Jazz, they promise to give an exciting performance.

Mr. T. Gay will introduce the quintet. Mr. Gay said that he is very happy with several taped recordings which he has received from the group.

The SRO Theatre, under the direction of Doug Swink, will present a play, "A Thurbur Carnival", February 21-22. Written by James Thurbur, this play was rated by the New York Times as the "freshest and funniest show of the year."

Doug Neilson, Faye Barnes, and Emily Coddington are working with Miss Shannon Morton on the Publicity Committee.

Boys from the Collegiate Civitan and the Engineers Club will work in setting up the Student Services Building for the performances.

The Student Council has a heartily supported the Committee and its proposals. It has approved the use of five-hundred dollars for use in the fine arts program.

Radio Station Elects Paschal As Manager

Hugh Paschal was elected Station Manager of WILC at a special meeting of the radio station staff February 6. Ed Freeman resigned the position due to lack of time.

Members of the radio staff attended a seminar at East Carolina College February 2. Those attending the meeting were Barbara Bradley, Frank Rogers, Hugh Paschal, Robert Rich, Sam Garner, Robert Autry, Jimmy Bordeaux, Don Ellis, Ernest Fullwood, and Doug Swink, dramatics professor and advisor to the group.

The members of the trip toured radio and TV station, WWWS, on the campus of ECC and attended lecture sessions on station operation and management.

Two ideas picked up at the meeting which the radio station hopes to put to use are a method of filing records and a system of cataloging them. An unsuccessful attempt was made at the last Student Congress to obtain funds to carry out these ideas.

The request for money, which was blocked by a filibuster, will be presented again to the Student Congress at its next meeting.

The station has recently been closed for repairs, and music from local radio stations have been piped through to the Pub.

Campus Briefs

The Student Congress, still working to make its procedure more efficient under Roberts' Rules of Order, has installed Millie Stone as timekeeper of debates. Individual debate in the Council is limited to ten minutes.

At the February 4 meeting, handbooks on Roberts' Rules were distributed to the members of the Student Congress.

"We need to revise our constitution," said Jack Mason, parliamentarian, "a lot of it is uninterpretable. It will be revised in the spring." This statement came as a result of a dispute over the right of certain committee officials to vote.

Randy Johnson reported to the February 4 Student Congress that 115 people were present at the art lecture by Howard Thomas.

Johnson said that volunteers will be needed throughout Fine Arts Week to help set up chairs and that interested persons should contact him.

Nat Bost, Martha Jay Staton, Sondra Wilson, Richie Watson, and Millie Stone took part in a nation-wide college election for the recipient of the Horatio Alger Award February 4.

The Horatio Alger Awards Committee, headed by Norman Vincent Peale, is "dedicated to the fostering of an interest in education and enhancement of American traditions of equality of opportunity, industry, and achievement."

The committee, which awards scholarships to worthy and needy students, calls on campus leaders throughout the country each year to vote for their selection of "today's Horatio Alger on the American scene."

Previous winners of the award include such men as J. C. Penney, Bernard Baruch, Eddie Rickenbacker, and Herbert Hoover.

Karl Allen reports that the planned Sophomore Class Project to erect a scoreboard on the field has been dropped because the Coca-Cola Company has already done so.

Bost Names Students To Council Positions

Nat Bost, President of the Student Council, appointed Scott McKinnon to the position of chairman of the Judicial Committee and Tim Chappell as Chairman of Board of Elections.

The positions were recently vacated by officers who procured two successive absences in the Student Council. One of the members had unofficially resigned.

Dick Caravati, Jack Mason, Larry Ingle, Sandy Wright, Acie Kinlaw, and Robert Price are participants from the Panmathian Society to the Model U.N. Meeting.

Editorials

With You In Mind

Fine Arts Week is evidence of closer student-faculty co-operation. This particular week, set aside to increase cultural interest and activity in the college, has received favorable support from the administration and from the faculty, and the Fine Arts Committee has been generously supplied with the necessary funds to make the project a successful one.

Not infrequently, the word "culture" receives negative response from certain students. This negativism stems from the fact that aesthetic development is invariably associated with only the intellectual elite.

Granted, any form of true art will be profound, but this does not mean that the average student cannot enjoy the beauty portrayed in paintings, drama, and music. It takes time to appreciate the true values of these arts; Fine Arts Week can be a starting point in this understanding.

The immediates committee has used commendable discretion in its selection of entertainers and has kept in mind the importance and significance of variety.

Those who persist in ignoring the attempts to develop the college aesthetically and to stimulate its social environment are acting to their own disadvantage.

We think that if you will attend the various programs to be presented during Fine Arts Week that you find it a very pleasurable and a very worthwhile experience.

Where Did We Fail?

A very special student has come and gone from our college with very little recognition.

It is not what we did that deserves this editorial; rather, it is what we did not do.

This student was representative of a foreign country and the mere fact that he was confronted with strange customs and a new language made conditions rather difficult for him.

A foreign student for all practical purposes should be given special attention; and since instructors are compelled to consider the average learning ability in their classes, they cannot and are not expected to decrease their pace of teaching. Consequently, this special attention depends largely on the students.

Whether we have one or a dozen foreign students should not interfere with our concern. The impression that we make on these students (whether there is one or more than one) will be directly transferred to their friends and to their people, when they return home.

How can we expect to maintain healthy relations abroad when we neglect our opportunities to foster good will at home?

From the moralistic standpoint we have an even greater need to promote a friendly relationship.

New mannerisms and a new environment can necessarily cause a person unfamiliar with our way of life to feel uneasy and alone.

People would tend to be less egocentric if they stopped to put themselves in the positions of others sometimes.

More than a reprimand, this is an appeal. This student plans to return to Wilmington College after special language training and students from other foreign countries will inevitably follow.

We feel that every student should make an effort to aid and to be friendly to these students—not only as an American trying to promote good relationships with our country and theirs, but as one student trying to lessen the burden for another student—and as a friend endeavoring to include someone very far away from his own home in his social activities.

It is not inconceivable that some people were unaware that we were hosting a foreign student. However, those of us who did know should have accepted the responsibility of promulgating our news. It is true that we are lacking in communicable media, but our college is still relatively small and impersonal.

Frequently in our busy lives, we are not conscious of those things which should be foremost in our minds.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

Insights

By RANDY JOHNSON

HENRY MILLER

Henry Miller has never stopped saying "yes" to man. He has said "no" to the United States many times, but those "No's" have been directed to those insidious elements of the American countenance while men of broad vision like Thoreau, Whitman, and Dos Passos have denounced from the beginning.

His disappointment has been that in our drive to keep the New World new we have forsaken the soul of the individual, left little in our culture age to a ripe maturity, and lived lives on the fringe of universal consciousness. Like Whitman and the others, Henry Miller has offered us the challenge to outlive ourselves, to expand our lives beyond the limits of the mechanics of materiality.

The Tropic books have unfortunately cast a shadow of misapprehension over most of America. These books have been termed "just plain dirty" by almost everyone from the Chicago police department, surely noble protectors of American morality—the existence of which is doubtful, to the literary magazines. Then again it was said that Walt Whitman was the worst kind of reprobate, but Miller's recollections of the Paris adventures are typically American. Pregnant experience in great quantities seems to be the mark of the nation.

It will indeed be a great shame if those who read the Tropics do not bother distilling the experiences. But it would be even worse if they did not read more by Henry Miller. His is a dream also of great individuals but he wants us to remake ourselves into great men. In Big Sur and The Oranges of Hicronymous Bosch, The Cosmological Eye, Stand Still Like the Hummingbird and many others he offers us his life and observations. The wonderful part is that his life is one of complete renunciation but at the same time one of complete engagement with living. He does not evangelize; he points to an alternative in which men can find themselves if they dare.

It is ironic that Whitman, who sang so gloriously of the American promise and of the promise of the individual, has been relegated to the academicians. Also ironic is it that those books by Henry Miller which were not officially banned have, in effect, been banned by most of the American public because they did not care enough to read them.

JUNIOR ROTC

Remember last year's Russian May Day festivities? If so, surely you recall the massive ranks of children marching in cadres. Were you thrilled and inspired? I was not! Neither am I any more thrilled when I see fifteen year old high school students in America regimented, taught the methods of combat, and imbued with military "spirit." In fact, it doesn't make me too happy to see ranks of any sort; the faces become ciphers.

Someone suggested that when you fight something you take on the characteristics of that which you fight. This suggestion is pertinent. Since America's defeat of the Kaiser and "Prussian Militarism" it has appeared that "Prussian Militarism" has conquered us much the same as Roman culture conquered the barbarian invaders who counted coup on the crumbling Empire.

Rep. Lennon says: "I feel, however, that the ROTC program in our secondary schools contributes to overall national strength in many ways." This statement was in reply to the Defense Department's claim that Junior ROTC did not advance national security. Now the Sunday Star-News has not enlightened us as to how Lennon thought ROTC would advance National security. All it did was to quote the following: "The leadership, patriotism, respect for authority . . . insure high quality individuals for later entrance into the military service. . . . My concern is what kind of individuals, if any, will emerge as real individuals. It is indeed an early age to fall in step. When a congressman who applauds a program by which children are militarized, it is time we got another boy. At least Virgil said, 'I sing of arms and a man . . . and they sang 'Give me some men who are stout-hearted men . . .'"

Letters To Editor

Dear Students and Faculty:
In appreciation for your assistance in the Homecoming activities of Wilmington College, January 17-18, 1963, the Student Council would like to thank you for your organizing, working, and participating so extensively in these activities.

We feel that your enthusiasm and school spirit added greatly to the success of Wilmington College's Homecoming.

Again thank you and with deepest gratitude,

Sincerely,
Wilmington College
Student Council
Kay Wells, Secretary
Nat Bost, President

Dear Editor:

When a student goes to classes the entire week, he is almost in a trance. About all he has on his mind is his work and studying his courses. A person in college has a tremendous amount of studying to do if he is to gain all from a course that he should. Therefore, he needs some way of relaxing himself. If there is a school activity on the week-end, and that is the time they are usually held, I do not think a student that drinks at a school activity should be looked down upon or punished. However, if a student appears in a drunken state and causes trouble, that is a different situation. I do not agree that a student should come to the school activities so drunk that he is completely out of his mind, but I do not think he should be kicked out of school for being a little high at a dance or ball game. Some people find getting a little high relaxes them and lets them be themselves.

Therefore, I don't think that a student should be kicked out of school for coming to a school activity with the smell of alcohol on his breath.

Yours truly,
C. A. Tanner

Note: Because this problem seems to concern a certain percentage of the student at our college, we feel that an explanation is in order.

Dear reader:

In any public institution, there will be regulations by which we are expected—compelled to abide. This is an absolute necessity if we want to maintain order and to prevent utter chaos.

Your term, "a little high," is not only an ambiguous one but could have several applications.

We are to assume, however, that by being high, the student will not react as normally to situations as he would if he had abstained from drinking.

Individualism should not be infringed upon unless it tends to offend someone else. In the case of drinking, it often does. Mass punishment is not a commendable procedure but has to be used in certain circumstances. If the college allowed drinking on the premises, some students would carry their privilege to ridiculous extremes. There is no proof that those who drink excessively at other public places would not do it here.

College officials have no authority over the student's private behavior, but they have an obligation to the community and to the taxpayers of that community to sponsor those conditions on campus that will be considered healthy and respectable. After all, we are dependent to a considerable degree on their financial support and we do not want to cause antagonism between these two forces.

Early Clubs Provide Interests, Today's Develop Similarly

By SAM GARNER

Social Clubs and extra-curricular activities always seem to be in abundance around any college; and Wilmington College is, in this respect, like all other colleges.

One of the first clubs chartered at Wilmington College was the Wilmington College Stagers, a dramatic club formed to "further dramatic inspection and experience in Wilmington College, to provide cultural entertainment for the student body and for the general public and to provide additional social contacts for the members."

Another club, the Bowling Team, which promoted and developed teamwork, sportsmanship and athletic ability among those students interested in bowling, was officially made part of the athletic program of the college in the fall of 1949.

The Wilmington College Debating Club was established to encourage the debating ability of students, to future educational qualities of intellect and free speech and was an active part of College life in 1950.

The International Relations Club was organized to create interest in the promotion of international goodwill and to further the knowledge of international affairs.

The Varsity Club was to promote good sportsmanship in all phases of athletics and other college activities and to foster and perpetuate all types of athletics in Wilmington College.

1955, 1977, 1958, and 1959 saw the establishment of the Wilmington College Honor Society, The Over-21 Club, the Romance Languages Club, and the Student U. N. Council.

Today, the club and social interest of extra-curricular minded students are seen in the Pen Pushers Club, one of the oldest; the Cotillion Club; the Circle K Club; the Engineers Club; the Wilmington College Chess Club; the Archery Club; the Wilmington College Chorus and Band; the Panmthian Society; Radio Station WILC; and the newly-formed Collegiate Civitan Club.

The Out-of-Town Club for students that attended Wilmington College from out of town and the Wilmington College Alumni Association were two of the active clubs during 1952.

Legislature To Decide Expansion, Sanford Supports Plan Proposal

By BETH FINEBERG

Dr. William M. Randall states that there "seems to be no objection from anyone for making Wilmington College a four-year college beginning in fall of 1963 with additional state support." In six to seven years the college will probably be fully state supported.

Governor Terry Sanford, on February 7, called on the 1963 General Assembly to provide that community colleges at Wilmington, Charlotte, and Asheville achieve four-year status.

In the "State of the State" message the governor urged that the General Assembly support the recommendation made by the Governor's Commission on Education Beyond the High School. The Commission recommended that University trustees seek legislation giving the power to include new campuses, to extend the University of North Carolina. If the power is granted, the trustees will begin a survey of the state which could eventually result in Wilmington College becoming part of the greater University.

Representative Robert Calder in an open meeting held January 31 at the college said that success for the four-year plan is almost assured, although there is always a possibility that some disagreement could cause delay or defeat.

Plans have been made to open a junior class in fall 1963. If Wilmington College becomes a four-year institution, the plans will go into effect. A degree from a four-year Wilmington College will be offered.

Accreditation is almost certain to be granted. It may be stated unofficially that the Southern Association recently passed a resolution whereby a new institution can be provisionally accredited during the senior year. After graduation of three senior classes, permanent accreditation can be attained.

A recommendation has been made for the division of the College in to the General College (first two years) and Arts and Sciences (third and fourth years). This arrangement, named or unnamed, would enable the retention of all programs now offered and the simple addition of the third and fourth years.

The first two years would include present programs although the Liberal Arts Course would be replaced by a program called Basic Requirements. Only the student who desires to pursue a four year degree at Wilmington College is advised to elect the Basic Requirements Course.

Majors would be offered in American history, European history, English, business administration, mathematics, and biology. Minors could include chemistry, French, and Spanish. Supplemental courses would involve education, medical technology, and possibly nursing.

Other plans premeditate a gymnasium for Physical Education and formal sports. A Liberal Arts Building is in the offing. Ten new faculty members would be hired in 1963 and five in 1964. Wilmington College will continue to be a non-residential institution.

Theatre Presents Thurber's Carnival

February 21 and 22 the S.R.O. Theatre will present the James Thurber creation, "A Thurber Carnival", which drew unqualified raves after it opened and became a hit over-night at the A.N.T.A. Theatre in New York.

The cast for the production is as follows: John Allen, Lilly Bloodworth, Robert Bowden, Marietta Bowers, Barbara Bradley, Donald Buie, Sandy Carr, Randy Coble, Emily Coddington, and Julia Everette.

Sam L. Garner, Nathan Heath, Ed Herring, Mary C. Hodgins, John King, Van Lurton, Doug Neilson, Martha Parker, Otis Seward, Joanne Starnes, David Starnes, David Stone, Richard Stone, Dino Summerlin, Charlotte Taylor, and Tony Waddell.

Providing the musical accompaniment for the production is Dale Stevens. Scenic artist is William Gemmell. Posters have been designed by Gale Hammond; wardrobe mistress is Judy Counts; technical consultant is Calvin Doss; stage lighting is by Sandy Carr.

The set construction has been provided for by Jerry Benton, Gene Bogash, Ray Fraley, David Williams, Nick Giovinetti, Sid Salling, Allen Trask, and Marshall Hamilton.

Many interesting scenes make up the "Thurber Carnival." The audience will see the real story of what would have happened if "Grant Had Been Drinking at Appomattox"; the moral of "The Little Girl and the Wolf" is seen in the true light of a real Red Riding Hood and a wolf in a black leather jacket.

"The Pet Department", "File and Forget", and "Take Her Up Tenderly" make up part of an evening with James Thurber, one of America's greatest modern humorists.

Harris, Hoyland, Lichenstein Promising Members Of Hawk Team

Continuing with its thumbnail sketches of the Wilmington College basketball team, The Seahawk features Bill Harris, Ronnie Hoyland, and Lenny Lichenstein in this edition.

Bill Harris, a 6-0, 170-pound freshman, hails from Hamlet, where he lettered in basketball during all four years of his high school career. As captain of the Hamlet cagers Bill's 16 points per game scoring average sparked his team to the championship of the Southeastern AAA Conference Tournament in his senior year.

Bill plans to complete his education at Wilmington College when it becomes a four year institution. As a former high school baseball star he also counts on contributing his talents in this field to the Seahawks when basketball season is over.

Ronnie Hoyland, a 5-10, 160-pound freshman, is a product of Providence High School in Clarksville, Ind., where he lettered in basketball for two years and baseball for three.

As captain and playmaker of the Providence High School cage crew, he boosted the team to the championship of the Indiana Holiday Tournament in his senior year. Also a baseball stand-out, Ronnie plans to compete for a berth on the Seahawk nine in the spring.

Lenny Lichenstein is a 6-1, 200-pound freshman out of Bayside, N. Y., where he won a basketball letter for three years at Bayside High School. In each of his seasons on the squad, Bayside advanced to the city quarter finals.

As captain of the Bayside cagers in his senior year, Lenny led his team to the No. 3 slot in the standings. It was Kenny McIntyre, the former Seahawk cage star, who convinced Lenny to attend Wilmington College where, like most of the Seahawk athletes, he plans to complete all four years of his college education.

Although these boys have seen only limited action this season, their play in the past few games of the season has displayed a marked degree of improvement which well warrants Coach Brooks' confidence in their abilities to gain starting berths on next year's Seahawk basketball squad.

Each of the boys enjoy attending Wilmington College and exhibit a great deal of enthusiasm toward the student body's support of the team.

Building Of Gymnasium Pending On 4-Year Plan

Plans for construction of the Wilmington College gymnasium — physical education building — are being displayed until the North Carolina State Legislature considers a bill to make Wilmington College a four-year school by September of 1964.

If the bill is passed by the legislature, the College building fund will be taken over by the State and the State will finance all further development including a new gymnasium. It is hoped the legislature will pass the bill within the next month so the State will approve a contract for construction of the new building in order that it may be completed this year.

The preliminary drawings and blueprints were first submitted to the Board of Trustees of Wilmington College in December of 1961 by Leslie N. Boney and the firm of Ballard, McKim, and Sawyer, Associate Architects.

Drawings specify a main gymnasium with seating facilities for 2,000 people and an auxiliary court which could be used for tennis, assemblies, physical education classes, or as an expansion of the main gym. The auxiliary court would lie perpendicular to the main gym and could be closed off by a movable wall — dividing the two when desired.

Proposed plans, also, include balconies on both sides of the main gymnasium with roll-away bleachers. The balconies would be used for gymnastics when the bleachers are not in use. A catwalk would lead from the balcony to a television and radio platform overlooking the main gym. There would be locker rooms, showers, and dressing rooms on each side of the building.

Offices would include those for both men and women coaches, referees, physical education director, and the director of athletics. In addition, there would be ticket offices on each side of the front entrance and concession stands on both the main floor and on the balconies.

The building design would be of Georgian architecture, similar to the new Library, Student Union, and Hoggard Hall and would have a total floor space of approximately 29,000 square feet.

The gymnasium would be built next to the parking lot between Hoggard Hall and the Student Services building with access roads and parking lots being constructed especially for the new facility.

Gymnasium In The Future

Varsity Report

By HUGH PASCHAL

In the last edition of The Seahawk we talked about school spirit and its effect on the athletes of Wilmington College as well as the type of performance which good school spirit inspires on the part of these athletes. We interviewed several members of the Hawk basketball squad en route to proving that the display of enthusiastic school spirit has a definite effect on the players themselves.

If any doubts remained they were most certainly erased by the Seahawk's performances against Chowan College and the N.C. State Freshmen at Brogden Hall. Two excellent crowds turned out to cheer the Seahawks to victory in both contests. As the Chowan Braves rallied to tie the score in the last few seconds of play, the loyal Seahawk fans rose to throw their whole-hearted support behind their team. The cheers were not in vain as the Seahawks put on a rally of their own to capture the game in overtime.

Perhaps the game against N.C. State presents a better argument for our case. In January, the Seahawks journeyed to Raleigh where they fell victim to the Wolflets by nine points, 70-61.

However, when the Hawks played host to the Wolflets within the friendly confines of Brogden Hall—with the support of some of the most enthusiastic demonstrations we've seen this season—State was vanquished by an 80-73 score in a game in which the Seahawks completely dominated. We maintain that this is the result of the support of the student body of Wilmington College. To further support this argument we point out the fact that Wilmington College has lost only one game this season in Brogden Hall and that one to a fine freshman team from East Carolina College in a close game.

We also maintain that whatever good strong school spirit does for the athletic program of Wilmington College this goes double for the student body itself. For this spirit is carried over to the everyday life at the college and is conducive to a better atmosphere in which to learn and grow.

Wilmington College has this spirit! The results of this spirit have become increasingly evident in the past few weeks. The students of Wilmington College are taking a much more active interest in the school and its programs. They are even instituting programs of their own as witnessed by the Student Council which has granted charters for several new clubs and organizations this year.

This school spirit has given the students a sense of belonging. It has aroused in them a desire not to sit back and watch the world go by but to pitch in themselves in an effort to improve the college in any way possible.

Progress such as this is healthy. The faculty and Student Council are recognizing this fact and are throwing their whole-hearted endorsement behind this surge of interest in Wilmington College by the students themselves.

We are not so naive as to believe that the school spirit displayed on the athletic field is the only reason for the tremendous interest generated by the students, but we do believe that this interest can be traced directly back to the fact that Wilmington College has displayed great school spirit in supporting its athletic teams.

LINE-UP

Ed Diddle, the Western Kentucky coach, decided to open a coaching school for youngsters. On the first day, a huge group of high school boys ran out to report to him. As the swarmed around him for instructions, Diddle backed away.

"Whoa, there boys!" he shouted. "Get back against that wall and line up — in alphabetical order and according to height!"

SPARE DIME

An unsuccessful basketball coach had just had his team eliminated from the state tournament. After the crowd had left, the coach dejectedly approached the pay phone to call a friend. To his surprise, he discovered he had no change. "Hey, Mac, lend me a nickel. I want to call a friend."

"Here's a dime," replied the stranger, "go call all your friends."

TIME

In the closing minutes of a hectic game, the visiting team called a time-out and huddled at the near foul line. After plotting some strategy, one of the veteran players suggested that the newly appointed team captain check the time. The captain ran over to the sideline and then dashed back.

"Well, fellers," he reported, "it's 9:45!"

Hawks To Battle UNC

The Wilmington College Seahawks close out their 1962-63 basketball season Saturday night here against the University of North Carolina Tar Babies.

The Hawks, fresh from their game with Newport News Apprentice, tangle with a strong Carolina frosh team which whipped them back in December, 74-52.

Ranked sixth in the nation among junior college teams last year, Wilmington has traveled a rocky, uphill battle all season trying to retain its ranking of twelfth this year. In their first outing against the Tar Babies,

Coach Bill Brooks' team could not stop the hot shooting and stifling "shuffle" offense of Carolina. UNC's stingy defense checked the Hawk attack to 24 points in the first half while collecting 35 for themselves and held the Wilmington team shooting percentage to a modest 26.6 per cent while pushing 48.4 per cent of their own shots through the hoop.

Heading Coach Ken Rosemond's Tar Babies at Brogden Hall Saturday will be 6'8" frontcourt ace Bob Bennett. The Mount Lebanon, Pennsylvania, native has replaced the vacancy left by last year's frosh star Billy Cunningham. Bennett, like Cunningham, is a southpaw and the team's top scorer. His rebounding and 14 points were decisive factors in UNC's victorious first outing against the Wilmingtonians.

Balancing the attack for Carolina will be four eastern North Carolina natives. 6'1" Wilmingtonian Jimmy Moore will return to play on the court where he made All-State guard at New Hanover High and Honorable mention All-America. Moore, a sparkplug and one of the top scorers, is areal asset for Carolina's "shuffle" offense. Ray Hassell, a 5'11" guard from Beaufort; Bill Harrison, a former Virginia Episcopal School captain from Rocky Mount; and a 6'3", 205-pound Raleigh native, Earl Johnson, are other strong reasons why UNC supports an outstanding freshman squad.

The eight o'clock encounter at Brogden Hall will mark the end of junior college play for WILCO All-American Gene Bogash. "Big Bo" has consistently led the Seahawks with his unique hook shot and fantastic rebounding ability. Bogash was able to penetrate the Carolina defense for 19 points in their earlier meeting in Woollen gym at Chapel Hill. Well-known to all Seahawk fans for his consistent brilliancy, Gene has become a fixture in the Wilmington lineup.

Also, bowing out tonight will be 6'2", 170-pound Harry Buzzell. The Presque Isle, Maine, native is well-regarded as a Seahawk standout. His 14 has been seen in both the front and back court and he has been particularly valuable for his utility play.

Monday Set For Hearing Of Tennis Season Plans

Monday, all Wilmington College tennis players will meet at 3:30 P.M. to hear plans for the approaching 1963 season. Room H-210, on the second floor of Hoggard Hall, will be the scene of the first meeting of the season at which Walter Biggs, tennis team advisor, will outline a new intramural tennis program.

For the first time a school intramural tennis program will be set up for all interested students to practice together and compete in intramural tennis tournaments. From this group of students, the tennis team will draw its players for competition in Virginia-Carolina conference competition.

In previous years, the tennis team has held tryouts for students wanting to participate in competitive tennis. The new program is being initiated for a three-fold purpose.

1. Provide an organized tennis program for the whole student body.

2. Stimulate a greater interest in tennis among the students.

3. Improve the potential of the WILCO tennis team.

Only two experienced players, Doug Ward and Billy Lanier, return from last year's team. The team will schedule matches here and probably travel to Chowan and Louisiana with the baseball team during the spring to compete against their tennis squads.

Tar Babies Trained For Shuffle Offense

What is the "shuffle" offense? To the untrained observer, it may at times resemble five individuals hustling to reach a fallout shelter during an air alert. Saturday night's game at Brogden Hall will give basketball fans an opportunity to see this "air alert" which is employed by the University of North Carolina basketball teams.

Varsity coach Dean Smith of UNC likes to regard this offense as a well-disciplined manner in which to make the most of an opponent's defense lapses. Coach Smith played against the shuffle as a collegian and later, while coaching a service outfit in Germany, began using it. He was serving as an assistant at the Air Force Academy when it was instituted there. Smith installed the new offense at Chapel Hill last season and has high hopes for it in his future plans. "The shuffle enhances team play," believes Smith, "and all five men have shot opportunities. It also revolves players into various offensive spots. It is not uncommon to see a backcourt operative move into the pivot."

The shuffle offense is the brainchild of Bruce Drake, the former University of Oklahoma coach. He developed it during the years of 1949-1950. The Air Force Academy was the first to swing into the pattern, then Auburn became a convert. Inventor Drake labeled his innovation the "shuffle" because the players are always changing sides—or much akin to the shuffling of a deck of cards.

Because of the tempo of motion and the variety of screens, the shuffle provides many opportunities for layups and a more direct approach to the target—or basket. The post man is normally the screen artist.

An abundance of major college basketball teams utilize some phase of the shuffle—but only a few make an art of it. One of these is Carolina.

ASU Students Pose Questions

TEMPE, Ariz. (I.P.) — Students on the campus of Arizona State University recently questioned the University's scholarship program at the first in a series of forums whose purpose is to air opinions on issues that affect good faculty-student relations.

The forum, sponsored by the Student-Faculty Relations Committee, was attended by Dean of Students W. P. Shofstall and Clyde Smith of the athletic department. They represented the administration at the meeting.

One major question asked at the forum was why ASU doesn't have a better academic scholarship program. Bonnie Olson, student representative on the Student-Faculty Relations Committee, pointed out that an average of 1.6 is necessary to compete for athletic scholarships while a 3.25 grade average must be maintained for academic competition. Athletes must carry 24 hours a year while academic scholarship holders must carry 30 hours.

Athletic scholarships have increased on this campus from 96 to 147 while academic scholarships have remained the same in number since 1954. Scholarships, the forum agreed, should increase in proportion to the student body. This problem, the forum indicated, sends many students to other schools.

Archery Club Awaits Fit Practice Weather

The Archery Club plans a shoot as soon as the weather permits for the purpose of selecting a team to challenge the Cape Fear Archery Club of Wilmington. Bob mentioned that he was working with the city organization in an effort to work out an agreement whereby members of the college club could use the facilities of the Cape Fear Archery's field range.

Jack Dermid, advisor, suggested that the club look into purchasing a subscription to an archery magazine in order to pick up useful tips for their use. He urged all members to equip themselves and practice frequently in preparing for the more active shooting in the spring.

Collegiate Civitan Club Beats Circle K In College's First Intramural Game

The Civitan Club plastered Circle K in the first intramural basketball game of this college. The game, which was held before the regular Seahawk game February 5, ended 28 to 19 in favor of the Collegiate Civitans.

The Circle K team led by Wall West includes Bruce McCrary, Roger Webb, Jim Brothers, Eddie Wilson, Bud Sullivan, Pult

Ward, Nat Bost, Don Lewis, and Bobby Eakins.

Highscorers for the Civitan Club were Jimmy Sharp and Terry Horton. Staton was outstanding on defense and the boards.

Bruce McCrary led Circle K, racking up ten of their 19 points. Wallace West, speaking for Circle K, said both teams enjoyed the game. Circle K has challenged the Civitans to another game to be played before the next Seahawk game.

Hoggard Hall Art Exhibition Has 37 Works

The First Annual Lower Cape Fear Art Exhibition is being displayed February 3-28 in the lobby of Hoggard Hall at Wilmington College.

Of the 75 entries to the exhibition 37 works were chosen to be displayed. These works are from 10 southeastern counties and represent all styles of art from realism to abstraction to non-objective and are presented in a variety of approaches.

Mr. Howard Thomas, Professor of Art at the University of Georgia, served as juror and was pleased with the quantity and variety of the show.

The opening of the show, Sunday, February 3, was attended by approximately 200 spectators. Refreshments for the visitors were served by hostesses from the Art Department.

There were three First Awards and seven Honorable mention awards given. Those receiving First Awards were: The Young Negress (drawing), Guillian Hornstein; Light Upon Tapestry (oil), Neal Thomas; East Howard St., Ocracoke (watercolor), Henry B. Wyche.

Receiving Honorable mention were: Calabash in Yellow, Margaret W. Davis; Lobster Wharf, Virgil Lanchester; Martha, Henry Jay MacMillan; Trees, Ray Oxendine; Flight to the Edge, Ray Bennett Sawyer; Tom and Cora, Henry B. Wyche.

Staton Blocks Move Of WILC For Money

By GENE MARLOWE

Station WILC petitioned unsuccessfully for financial aid at the February 4 Student Congress.

Hugh Paschal, WILC station manager, said that the radio station needed $50 to improve the present facilities.

Part of the $50 would go to purchase new albums, the present ones being chipped, cracked, and several years old. It was also mentioned that Dr. Howard Thomas criticized the station for playing rock and roll, which isn't in his opinion, "educational." The $50 would help remedy this situation, explained Paschal, and enable the station to buy records tending to be more educational, such as chamber music.

Johnson Favors Idea

Randy Johnson spoke in favor of the idea of getting new albums as suggested by Dr. Thomas to "give us something that human beings can be proud of and to give us something from other spheres. . . ." He mentioned that we should "get classical and good jazz records, and consult those who know something about it."

The second use of the money which the radio station wished to obtain from the Student Activities Fund would be to purchase stationary with letter-heading. The station writes to record companies for free records, and Paschal explained that letters with WILC letterheads would be more impressive and bring a better response from the record companies.

Staton Objects

Ronnie Staton opposed the station's move for money. Twice during the night, the time of adjournment was set back fifteen minutes. Working to close the meeting and thus table the bill, Staton mustered support to try to defeat the second bid for an extension of the time of adjournment. Being defeated in an effort to stop the second fifteen minutes from being added to the meeting by a vote of 9 to 15, Staton unsuccessfully called for immediate adjournment.

During the last half of the second setback in the adjournment time, Staton launched a filibuster which lasted the remainder of the meeting and thus killed the radio station's bill for the next two weeks.

Station Filibusters

During the course of his speech, Staton said, "As long as we're wheeling and dealing with the student's money, all should get a part of it. . . . If one club should get stationary with letterheads, then all should."

Staton mentioned that the Committee for the Revision of the Constitution could use some letterhead stationary to confer with other colleges throughout the nation that are revising their constitutions.

Several Viewpoints

Using several methods of attack and viewpoints to present his case, Staton said at one point that every club should get some money from the Student Activities Fund, "all clubs should be able to make some use of the money." At another point in his speech, he said that no club should get any money; they should get out and work as the Circle K and Civitan Clubs did with their carwashes.

After the meeting, Staton said that he regretted that the Baptist Student Union which was scheduled to present its constitution after the radio station was unavoidably denied its opportunity at the February 4 meeting.

Parliamentary Procedure

Frank Allen, advisor to the Student Congress, said that all had been carried out according to rules of order and was in perfect order according to parliamentary procedure, referring to Staton's filibuster.

Staton, who filibustered because of lack of sufficient support at the meeting to defeat the radio station's bid for money, hopes to have the needed support present at the next meeting of the Student Congress.

The radio station is also working to hold and strengthen its present backing in the Council.

Queen Again

Judy Matthews was elected Homecoming Queen recently in a campus wide election. She also holds the title of May Queen.

Artis Society Forms For Chess, Bridge

A club under the name of the Artis Society has been formed to create more interest in table games such as chess and bridge.

The club holds weekly meetings Tuesdays at 7:30 in H-111. The officers of the club are Robert Stewart, president; Jack Mason, vice-president; and Randy Foster, secretary-treasurer. Advisor to the club is Dr. William Randall.

"The object of the Artis Society," said Jack Mason, "is to promote interest and develop skill in popular games. The society is presently divided into two divisions: bridge and chess."

The society plans to send teams to other colleges such as State.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE, WILMINGTON, N. C.

February 28, 1963

ARTS FESTIVAL BIG SUCCESS

Betty Vaiden Williams, Carolina folk singer, entertains approximately 150 students of Wilmington College and members of the community at the first event during Fine Arts Week.

In a daydream, Walter Mitty, played by Dino Summerlin, has become a famous surgeon called in on a difficult case.

By SONDRA WILSON

Experiencing formidable success from the first vocal performance of Betty Vaiden Williams to the final concert of Bill Hanna and his quintet, Wilmington College displayed an ability to stimulate cultural interests on campus and in the community during Fine Arts Week.

Folk Singer Entertains

Betty V. Williams, not having completely recuperated from the flu, held an attentive audience throughout her performance—an audience a trifle cool in the beginning, warming up prior to intermission, and overwhelmingly responsive at the end, applauding enthusiastically and begging for an encore.

Mrs. Williams' historical knowledge of folk music, and her informal and humble manner intermingled with her friendly and optimistic personality added to the audiences' enjoyment and approval.

Throughout the noiseless room the voice of Betty Vaiden Williams rang with Carolina and foreign folk songs. She sang in Spanish, French, Italian, Portuguese, and Arabic and entertained her audience with accompanying tales of the origin of the songs.

The Williamses have traveled abroad five times visiting every country outside the Iron Curtain and never forgetting their pet recorder on which they tape actual foreign folk singing. By listening to these recordings, Mrs. Williams masters the pronunciation and attempts to get the exact feeling that the native emotes in his song.

Mrs. Williams admitted that she preferred a relatively small audience (similar to ours) where more intimacy prevailed. Stressed the folk singer, "I want to preserve our heritage which will die unless it is sung—folk music encompasses a literature which cannot be written down in order to survive but a literature oral in its nature."

"You must live music and you must love it," she continued.

Although not the Joan Baez image that excites the college student so much today, Betty V. Williams had a style and projection all her own.

"The Titan" Reveals Great Artist

A magnificent portrayal of a man's genius through his art, The Titan revealed the greatness of Michelangelo Buonarroti.

"A creator dies," says the artist, "but his work survives; and it is to escape death that I bind myself to my work."

The viewer could not help but be amazed that one man could contribute as much to the world as Michelangelo and leave an eternal mark to be admired by every generation.

The film showed a fascinating world of profound expression come alive through his dedicated endeavors and gave one an opportunity to see through photography such work as "The Last Judgment," "The David," and the Sistine Chapel painting.

70 Turned Away

No one factor could be attributed to the popularity of Thurber's Carnival (approximately seventy persons were turned away on opening night and there was scarcely "standing room only" the second night). The enlarged cast, the participation of faculty members, excellent publicity, and the admiration for the best-selling author, James Thurber, could account for the copious success.

A first in many ways, the play and variety, and the light, sub-flavored with liberalism the clever entertainment was generally received well by the audience.

Hanna Quintet

The Bill Hanna Quintet was received with eager enthusiasm by those attending the jazz concert by the group in the Student Services Building on the last night of Fine Arts Week.

The quintet, consisting of a trombone, a sax, drums, a bass fiddle, and an upright, comes from Charlotte and is quite well known in jazz circles throughout the State and elsewhere.

The group, working in several different moods of jazz, performed both traditional jazz standards and selections written especially for them.

Arts Festival culminates with the jazz concert of Bill Hanna and his Quintet from Charlotte, North Carolina.

Campus Briefs

WILC successfully bid for $50 to make improvements at the last Student Congress meeting of the quarter.

Ronnie Staton, who previously spoke in negative debate on the issue at the preceeding meeting, took an affirmative stand.

Saying that he wished to clarify his position, Staton said that he wasn't opposed to WILC having the money, but he was opposed to the group having the money as a club.

Staton then went on to outline his belief that the radio station should not have the status of a club, but rather the position of an organization such as the Fledgling or the Seahawk.

The Carolina Beach Jaycees are sponsoring a "Miss Rebel Pageant" to be held March 23 in the Carolina Beach Auditorium.

Contestants must be single, between the ages of 16 and 21, have talent that can be displayed in the Pageant, and attend all screening committee meetings and rehearsals.

The winner of the event will be awarded a scholarship of not less than $100.00. Interested girls should contact the Carolina Beach Jaycees by no later than Midnight, March 2.

The college's newest club, the Baptist Student Union, was presented its constitution at the last Student Congress meeting.

Jeff Johnson, outgoing president, stated that the purpose of the BSU is to "promote Christian activities in the college."

Officers of the organization are Sara Fussell, vice-president, and Barbara Ann Hixon, secretary-treasurer.

The club meets every other Tuesday at 5:30 in L201 and is planning a banquet March 15. Thus far, BSU has approximately 15 members.

The club is open to all students on an active, associate, or honorary membership.

At the Student Congress meeting in which the club was chartered, Jack Mason spoke in favor of the club, praising them for their "spunk and initiative" in forming a club, and saying that he would like to see other clubs of the sort started, including all forms of religious belief.

Library Stays Open Saturday for Exams

The library will be open Saturday, March 2, from 1:00 until 5:30. The library was also open last Saturday.

The library was opened for those two days as a result of a resolution presented by Jack Mason calling for permanent opening of the library on Saturday.

The resolution was unanimously passed by the Student Congress, and Nat Bost appointed a committee to work with Fred Allen to seek the opening of the library on Saturday.

Members of the committee Barbara Singletary, chairman; Judy Campbell, and Barbara Black.

Draft Bureau to Give Test To Those Seeking Deferment

Students planning to seek deferment from the draft will be able to take a test April 18 that will aid the Selective Service System in determining their eligibility for exemption.

The test will be given at Chapel Hill, Duke, and Lenoir-Rhyne at Hickory. Those wishing to take the test must obtain an application from the local draft board and send it to the State headquarters by March 28.

In past years the test has been administered at NHHS; however, this year the previously mentioned colleges are the closest places where the test will be given.

The local bureau reports that a person may seek deferment without taking the test, that it is only used as an aid to determine a student's aptitude for continued undergraduate and graduate study.

To be eligible to take the test, the applicant must be satisfactorily pursuing a full-time college course, undergraduate or graduate, leading to a degree. He need not be a student to a 4-year college, but his entire course of study must be satisfactory for transfer of credits to a degree-granting institution.

Next Friday Date Of All Registration

All registration will be held next Friday, March 8. In order to register you must obtain a permit from the Registrar's Office. Registration will be held as follows:

A - L 8:30-12:00
M - Z 1:30-4:30

Night Classes, 6:30-8:00
Any deviation from the assigned letters must be approved by the Registrar.

Why Not Unlimited Cuts?

It is simply irrational that a student in college can not make up his own mind when and when not to attend classes and even less feasible when the instructor has to take up valuable time to compose absentee reports every day and for every class.

The prime concern of any college should rest with those students superior in ability and determination. Yet, a considerable amount of time and effort is being spent on absentee recording and, consequently, the inferior student.

The best pupils are those who thirst for knowledge and those who, although they may not relish the education system, realize the necessity and value of it. These are the students who will attend classes regularly and who, in the event that they do cut classes, will do so with justifiable reasons.

It is infrequent that a good student is an absent one. Rarely will that student who misses classes consistently pass the course. If he does, it is apparent that he has gained a sufficient amount of knowledge to pass.

It is certainly true that if we were allowed unlimited cuts, there would be some who would take advantage of their prerogative. Ultimately, we would lose students. But, why should a college lament over their loss of disinterested, irresponsible, and apathetic individuals?

Those students who would overcut their classes would be those who found classes ponderous, and it is doubtful that the instructor would miss these whom he bored.

Why should the faculty or administration act as a babysitter? If self-responsibility does not originate in college, where will it have its beginning? College is supposedly the preparation for tomorrow's free thinkers and after twelve years of educational guidance and direction, we should be capable of making wise and reasonable decisions.

The basic problem with students in our colleges today is that they are not here by choice. They have been influenced by the prevailing conditions of society or, in some cases, they have been compelled by over protective parents. In some colleges, they still cannot escape compulsion and resentment becomes more deeply engrained in them. If one could use his own discretion in attending classes, he would be less apt to carry his personal resentment into the classroom.

It is not improbable that a student who had used his cuts unwisely would profit by his mistake and take college more seriously.

Recently, students who have overcut classes have had a copy of their attendance record mailed to their parents. This report is a fallacy.

1. It is ironic that the limited unexcused cuts granted to every student should be recorded on this sheet submitted to the parents. If this is a privilege, we should not be blamed for using it.

2. Secondly, to list "excused" overcuts for the parents' consideration seems impractical since the student had to submit a note from the parents (or doctor) to be admitted to class again.

3. And, lastly, unexcused overcuts have already been submitted to the parents when slips are sent to the homes indicating consequent quality point deduction.

We feel that this issue deserves consideration.

Students' Threat To Faculty

PAOLO ALTO, Calif. (I.P.) — Once quiet college campuses, like their surrounding society, are becoming centers of intense emotional stress and pressure, according to John D. Black, director of Stanford University's Counseling and Testing Center.

"For the student, the pressure to achieve intellectually is the culmination of the stress he has been under since elementary school days to obtain admission," states Black, who is also an associate consulting professor of psychology. "For vast number (e.g., over 85 per cent of our male students), the problem is not simply to obtain an A.B. but to qualify for graduate or professional school.

"To quite school, or to flunk out are no longer reasonable options, as they were when most of us were in college; they are as unacceptable as a dishonorable discharge from the service or a felony conviction. Twenty years ago, those who cared studied, and got good grades; those who didn't played. Today, or tomorrow, everybody cares, everybody studies, but the old grading curve hasn't changed much. The result can only be more intense, self-serving competition and more temptation to succeed by hook or crook, more hostility and anxiety.

"For the faculty, the pressures are equally great. They are faced with more and brighter students. Up to a point, brighter students are a blessing; beyond that point, they can be a challenge and a threat.

"In our universities, faculties are under great compulsion to do research and to publish. More and more administrative work is required of them, managing research contracts, supervising graduate programs; for many men of scholarly temperament, administrative work is unusually stressful. One of our deans commented last week that the average assistant professor today does more administration than the average department head did twenty years ago. By and large he does not enjoy it and it reduces his resources for teaching and advising.

"When obviously bright students criticize the teaching, champion a professor whose contract isn't being renewed, complain about the 'sick call' aspect of the health service, demand membership or university committees—these potentially constructive expressions of adolescent energy tread on sensitive toes. To handle such problems constructively requires a respect for students, an understanding of them, and a maturity and patience that the administrator who already feels pressured may not be able to display."

Ultra Modern Classrooms

AMES, Ia. (I.P.) — Maximum use of audio-visual learning aids is made in Iowa State University's new $1,575,000 Classroom Building. Television, motion pictures, recordings and specialized study equipment are used throughout the 40 classrooms. A total of 1,750 students can be accommodated at any one time in the three-story structure.

Sixteen classrooms are equipped for closed-circuit television, each having two screens. The programs originate in the studios of WO-TV, the University television station. Through the use of video tape, difficult-to-perform experiments and demonstrations need to be done only once. Students get a closer look at such experiments than is possible in conventional classroom situations.

The new language laboratory has 80 booths, each equipped with tape recorders, earphones and microphones. A central control makes it possible for a teacher to work with students scattered throughout the laboratory or for three teachers to work at the same time with different student groups.

The department of English and speech maintains a developmental reading laboratory. Its 25 booths enable students to work privately to increase their reading proficiency. Each booth is equipped with study devices to help students develop their vocabularies, accelerate their reading rates and improve their comprehension.

Perfect Roommate

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (I.P.) — Students at a University of Michigan Residence Hall now have a perfect roommate—a language laboratory whose sole purpose is to help them with homework. For the first time anywhere, an experimental 10-booth language lab has been set up in a residence hall with full access to all language programs playing in the central language laboratory several blocks away.

Thanks to a device called Dial Selector, a student using the main lab puts on earphones, then turns on his lesson by simply dialing a number on the dial in his booth—a process rather like a person phoning for correct time. By using the same device a student at the dormitory lab gets his program from the central lab in somewhat the same manner as placing a direct long-distance call.

This experiment may open up a new avenue in the field of language lab operation, now an integral part of foreign language teaching at the University, said Erwin M. Hamson, developer of the experiment and acting director of the University's Language Laboratory.

Not only do dormitory labs operate closer to dormitory students, but more important, relatively inexpensive auxiliary labs are one practical solution to the ever increasing number of students in need of lab. Last year, for example, more than 4,000 students on this campus spent nearly 9,000 hours per week in the central lab's 145 listening-booths. If properly scheduled, Hamson explained, the dormitory lab can handle from 200 to 300 students.

The Bill Hanna Quintet

For the first time in years there was a jazz concert in Wilmington. The group, the Bill Hanna Quintet, is from Charlotte and is an important new voice in modern jazz in North Carolina. Electric in voice, it reflects the styles of the great contemporary groups such as Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers, The Modern Jazz Quintet, and the amorphous Miles Davis Quintets.

ADULTS . . . HA!

Despite the relatively poor attendance at the jazz concert last Saturday night, the affair was a great success. One can only speculate concerning the reasons why attendance was so low. It would seem that such a really lively art as modern jazz would draw an overflow crowd; however, at Wilmington College it did not. No one can say they didn't know about it; the concert has been advertised for a month. Could it be that most of the students don't care? It looks that way, doesn't it? But, of course, one must be realistic. There are always those dolish, unsensitive, and ultimately boring persons who claim they have the qualities which distinguish men from animals but never do anything to prove it. These persons who claim they have the qualities which distinguish men from animals but never do anything to prove it. These persons are forever claiming also that those who enjoy good things are trying to set themselves up as some sort of cultural elite. Well, I had some faint hope that Wilco would be different, or at least that the majority of the students would. But it seems that 95% of our illustrious students fall into this ultimately boring class. Do you who comprise this 95% feel that you are getting anything that remotely resembles culture. Of course, you are living in a culture, sociologically speaking; you live by mores and institutions. But do you in any way acknowledge the fact that man is free to exercise his creative powers. Does it ever occur to you that what makes us human is more than a highly developed ability to provide food and shelter, procure mates, and die. The animal does all these things. Stone Age man in the Aurignacian period did much more, whether you know it or not; and that was 15,000 years ago. These were men, men who had not yet developed pottery, flint arrowheads, or wheels, but who had created something beautiful; they painted animals in caves, away from the light of day, with such a feeling for beauty and human understanding of beauty that it confounds and leaves even the most accomplished modern artist in awe.

When you do not appreciate or even try to avail yourselves of the chance to appreciate the beautiful and man's conception of the beautiful, which is essentially art in all its forms; and it is fairly obvious that you do not, you have not come as far toward humanity as did the Old Stone Age man.

Do you feel insulted? Have I used too many "big words" for you? I don't think the answer to either question is yes. An animal is pretty hard to insult. He usually just wags his tail. But at least a dog will give every-thing one sniff.

Drama Department Gives Standing Room Only Play

By BETH FINEBERG

Review: A Thurbur Carnival, book by James Thurber. Directed by Doug W. Swing; assisted by Carl Sneed. Technical consultant, Calvin Doss; special effects, Louis Adcock; house, Robert Autry; lighting technician, Sandy Carr; assistant lighting technician, Ranny Gardner; costumes, Judy Counts; scenic artist, Will Gemmell. Wilmington College Theatre, February 21, 8:00 p.m.

The S. R. O. Theatre lived up to its name for the first time Thursday night. Forty-five people were turned away from the door of the production of The Thurbur Carnival. Those who managed to get in were witness to an "... animated anthology of pen and pencil work by the most splendid man of modern humorists." Thurber's reiew reflects clichés of our time. Through his gentle humor, Thurber protests ridiculous vacuity of our social customs.

The book is such that it would take a cast of miraculous ineffectualness to bury its delight. The cast of the W.C. Theatre managed at time to mingle the "Thurberisms" quite effectively and sometimes to project the humorous world of suburbly demented beings.

Word Dances

The "Word Dances" gave unity to the theme of triviality of everyday life. The second one was executed with finesse comparable to the mobile freezing of characters in "How to Succeed in Business without Really Trying."

"The Night the Bed Fell" had a dry humor which was not conveyed to the audience. In fact, the audience itself was lacking in perception of Thurber's sophisticated funmaking.

"Fables for Our Time" was for the most part admirably presented. It sets, as those of all the sketches, were truly Thurberian.

Summerlin as Grant

Dino Summerlin fought his beard successfully in "If Grant Had Been Drinking at Appomattox" and he poignantly portrayed a Walter Mitty who retrieves his ego in suave imaginings. His covering of prop absence was professional. The closing structure of "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty" was abominable.

Projection of a man suffused with wonders until he takes refuge in preoccupation with Caroline Kennedy was terrible. The whole "Casuals of the Keys" was a dismal failure.

Richard Stone was so enchantingly English in "The Macbeth Murder Mystery" that he was unintelligible. Mr. Stone was one of the few actors who fully realized that Thurber's characters are cartoons, for he did not try to find depth in characterization.

Although a second rate Huckleberry Hound as the aide de campe of General Grant, Tony Wadell came through beautifully drunk in "Gentlemen Shoppers", "The Last Flower" evidenced the eternal destruction and hope of the world. "The Pet Department" was a shamble perpetuated by awkward silences.

Highlight of Play

Sandy Carr as Thurber was the highlight of the evening in "File and Forget". Delivery of the line, "Once when I met her she came very close to making sense", showed that Mr. Carr caught Thurber's idea of the human comedy.

The secret of "Thurberish" acting was given in Saturday Review as "... doing less than one is tempted to do with a potential uproarious situation." Thurber's subtlety was lost in "Mr. Preble Gets Rid of His Wife".

Shoddy Presentation

"Take Her Up Tenderly" was a shoddy presentation of the poems of comfort and cheer only redeemed by "I Love It".

The voices of many of the other members of the cast lacked volume and quality. Over-acting was rampant. Voices offstage should have been brought onstage. Timing at places was bad, and in the sequence of finger-snapping, tempo was monotonous.

The guitarist, Dale Stevens, played unforgivably sentimental strumming that did little to bridge the gap between sketches.

Criticizes Noise

As much as the sets were excellent, the technical end was bad. The projector was misaligned. Noise of changing scenes disturbed the mood of the play.

Repetition of the black and white costumes blended with the scenery to give coherence to the witty, sage "A Thurbur Carnival." I congratulate the Dramatic Department for a selection well made and toned to the limited stage. Wilmington College Theatre will demand larger quarters if like material is chosen in the future, for it will need a theatre that allows more standing room.

Graduates Return To Teach At College

Some quick glances at several old yearbook student sections will reveal four familiar faces. Can you identify any faces in the photos on your left?

A graduate of 1958, Miss Linda Hines, assistant librarian, attended Wilmington College in the days of Kisa (Magpies) Epsilon Sorority among the some 30 girls in her class. These were the car washers and house parties of the era.

She was a member of WC delegation to the first Model UN Assembly. They argued the Cyprus controversy for Greece.

Miss Hines marvels at the advancement of the college in this short time. The buildings, larger faculty, and larger number of girls are not the least of these. Also, she is glad to see that the academic studies are more parallel with other colleges and universities.

Seven of her own teachers are still on the faculty—Miss Morton, Duncan Randall, Mrs. Cheek, Coach Brooks, Loyd Hudson, Adrian Hurst, Frank Allen, Claude Howell, and Uncle Zeb.

After graduation from WC, she went to East Carolina where she finished in 1960. Now she is going to summer school at UNC to earn her Masters in Library Science.

When asked why she came back to Wilmington, she said, "Most people like to come back home. When I was here before, I liked it. Here I was known and knew people."

Walter Biggs, Wilmington College 1951 graduate, remarked on the obvious improvement of space since his time as a student in this college. He commented on the "tremendous improvement in the library during the past ten years, and the continuing efforts to enhance this facility."

"Isaac Bear was so close to New Hanover High School, it was very difficult to separate the two atmospheres and activities. Today there is room to function at collegiate level."

"The Pub consisted of a shelf beneath the stair wall in the basement, and the recreation area was composed of one ping pong table among the boiler pipes."

He served as the President of the Wilmington College Student Government, and as a delegate to the student legislature in Raleigh.

Mr. Biggs once came under the specific jurisdiction of Mr. Hurst and Miss Morton in classrooms. Among the teachers of the past, he recalls Miss Mildred Johnson as being very influential and helpful in history.

He received his BS at East Carolina, studied at the University of Kansas at Laurance, Kansas, and was awarded his Mas-

His tremendous interest in the teachers at Texas A and M College. growth of the Wilmington area prompted him to return. He wants "to be a part of the growth and progress of the college."

Mrs. Julia Everett, 1958 graduate, also "noticed the larger faculty, student body, 'pub', buildings, and the addition of the faculty lounge."

While attending here, Mrs. Everett was married and expecting her first child. Mainly, she participated in studies, but she did join the chorus.

She misses the ivy covered walls, cracked bricks, drafty windows, and hominess of Isaac Bear. She also misses Miss Mildred Johnson, a faculty member very much interested in Mrs. Everett's well-being.

After WC, she continued her education at East Carolina. She came to Wilmington College to teach because of the "freer academic atmosphere than in high school teaching. I love it here."

Thomas E. Gay, Jr., graduated from Wilmington College in June of 1954 in Retailing. He continued his studies at the University of Tampa and, after receiving the Bachelor of Science degree in August of 1956, he taught for three years at the University of Maine in Portland. In June of 1959 he entered the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences at the University of Virginia to begin work on the Master of Arts and Ph.D. degrees. In September of 1960 he returned to the Wilmington College campus as an Assistant Professor in the Department of Social Sciences.

Hattie, Buck Serve From Beginning

Entwined with the growth and development of Wilmington College are the lives of two familiar and friendly figures, Hattie and Buck Bronson, who have faithfully, served the college from its beginning.

During the first year of its existence, the college met in New Hanover High School building from 4:30 until 9:00 each afternoon. Hattie, who worked at the high school at the time, went to work at 6:00 every morning to sweep up cigarette butts and ashes before the non-smoking high school students came to school.

When the college moved into the Isaac Bear building, Buck

John, Albert, Mott, and Florence.

Hattie continued to divide her time between the high school and college up until 1952 when she began to work full-time at the college. Hattie has been the confident of many a school girl since that day, and she can tell you almost anything you want to know about any one of them. Commenting on the friendliness of students, Hattie says, "There used to be four or five students who were real friendly, but in the last few years everyone has been very nice to us."

She remembers quite well when Mr. Crews came to the college "young and good-looking" or when Mrs. Marshall was hired to work about three hours each afternoon after a full day's work at the ship yard to clean up and maintain the heating system. Contrasting the facilities at the time with the equipment he uses now, Buck says, "We didn't have many tools, not even pliers or a wrench. That was when the college was poor. When I wanted something, I didn't ask for it; I bought it myself if I could." Today we can see Buck riding around campus on the lawn mower or working behind a modern electric floor waxer. Now he works a full day, and the staff has increased to include Hattie and Buck have been married 25 years now, and have three children and six grandchildren. They both admit that they love working for the college, and Buck says he plans to remain with us until retirement.

As for Hattie, we plan to keep her around for a right long time. Why the halls just wouldn't be the same if Hattie's constant humming of some obscure tone weren't sounding throughout them to stimulate the weary student.

Biggs Reorganizes Net Crew For 1963 Season

Tennis is being revived at Wilmington College. Walter Biggs, tennis team advisor, reports that sufficient interest in the sport has been displayed to warrant official support of a team.

The Seahawk tennis program has suffered in the past from lack of interest on the part of enough students to make a team worth while. This year, however, the aficionados of the sport have rallied to the cause in an effort to secure not only the college's approval but also its support.

Most of the players agree that tennis is suffering from the same type of dilemma which confronted the golf team prior to this season. The lack of adequate facilities and sufficient competition which has for so long plagued both sports hopefully will be erased this year.

Both Mr. Biggs and Coach Brooks have spent a great deal of time and effort in the organization and scheduling of the tennis team. The problem of a schedule has been a difficult one to surmount. This area lacks a sufficient amount of competition from which to choose. However, Louisburg and Chowan Colleges will field teams this year and matches with these schools have been agreed upon.

In addition the players have expressed their desire to compete with others teams in this area such as New Hanover High School and possibly even Camp Lejeune.

Another problem facing the program, perhaps the source of all the problems, is the lack of adequate facilities. Mr. Biggs claims that this presents one of the most difficult of all the team's troubles. The city of Wilmington's courts at Eighth and Ann Streets are in foul shape and nothing short of a major overhaul would present them suitable for competition. Negotiations are under way with the Parks and Recreation Department to renovate the courts, however, nothing has been agreed upon as yet.

College officials are in hopes that the outstanding facilities of the Cape Fear Country Club might be made available to the squad on a similar arrangement as that the golf team has with the Municipal Golf Course.

Bill and Doug are given much of the credit for building the renewed interest in the team. Their enthusiasm has proved contagious to the other members many of whom they personally recruited. There are currently nine members on the team: Dick Caravatti, Tim Chappel, Bill Lanier, Jack Loftus, Robert Rich, Ronnie Staton, Doug Ward, W. C. Ward, and David Watson.

Mr. Biggs reports that the team will be organized along the same lines as the golf team. A ladder will be set up on the basis of practice matches with the top six members competing in intrascholastic competition. He stressed the importance of practice sets to the organization and competitive positions of team members.

Hurricanes Halt Seahawks, 76 to 66

LOUISBURG — Despite a 38-point performance on the part of Gene Bogash, the Seahawk's All-America ace, Louisburg defeated Wilmington College 76-66 in the Virginia - Carolina Conference Basketball tournament held here Saturday night.

With about eight minutes remaining in the game the Hurricanes opened up a four-point lead and used sharp shooting combined with stalling tactics to protect it as they handed the Seahawks their tenth loss.

The Seahawks led 31-30 at the half in a close game which saw both teams swapping field goals for most of the contest. It was only in the final stages of the game that the Hurricanes were able to break away in the championship contest.

Wilmington College played without the services of 6'7" forward Marshall Hamilton who has been sidelined with the flu.

Engineers Club To Aid SENClend Science Fair

The Engineers Club will be in charge of setting up the Southeastern North Carolina Science Fair which will be held here March 23.

The work of the club will entail providing marshalls, getting posters, and setting up approximately 125 projects from schools up through high school from about half a dozen neighboring counties.

Varsity Report

By HUGH PASCHAL

It looks as though the Collegiate Civitan and Circle K Clubs have really started something. The success of their intramural basketball game has caused everyone to want to get into the act.

Other clubs and organizations around the campus have picked up the cry and are in the process of organizing softball teams to challenge each other. Representatives from these clubs are quick to point out that the competitive spirit of the athletic field will spread to other areas and promote keener competition between the clubs in other functions as well.

The faculty, after shying away from basketball because of the short uniforms, is lending its full support to the movement. In fact, the faculty members themselves are in the process of organizing challenge teams in golf and softball.

Dean Allen reports that if the intramural softball season is a success the program will be expanded next year to include such other sports as basketball, tennis, golf, and volleyball.

We believe the proposed intramural athletic program at Wilmington College will be a success and it will further boost the already soaring school spirit evident on campus.

The faculty and campus organizations which are supporting the program are to be commended for their continuing interest in the extra-curricular activities of the students. It is these activities which serve to round out the student's development and as such they are every bit as important as the scholastic program.

Extra-curricular Development

Development of the extra-curricular program at Wilmington College during the year has been tremendous. Several new clubs have been formed to satisfy the varied interests displayed by students and an intense interest in all phases of college life has directly resulted from this growth of the extra-curricular program.

No one can deny the value that this expanding program is having on the college. An almost universal awakening has resulted among the students. The administration, always eager to help develop the school's program to the fullest extent, is giving the proposal both direction and wholehearted endorsement financial as well as moral.

It is gratifying to see the mounting interest in extra-curricular activities on the Wilmington College campus. We sincerely believe that this program can only lead to even greater student participation in all college functions athletic or otherwise.

National Tournament

Chances are that the Seahawks will not enter NJCAA basketball competition this spring. Many sound reasons are given for this decision. Among them are the amount of time spent in regional playoffs, the travelling involved, expenses, and absences from class on the parts of participating players.

While all of these excuses are valid we feel that there are also many good reasons why the team should compete. One fact must be realized — none of the above mentioned reasons for not playing are peculiar to this season alone. Last year, the first time Wilmington College took part in NJCAA basketball play, all of these problems and more were encountered and overcome. The question remaining then is, why is our participation being discouraged this year?

The reason given by most is the team's poor record. Granted the record is not as good as last year's sixth ranking team. It still isn't as bad as it first appears. Let's take a quick look to see where we stand.

It must be conceded that in at least three of their games the Seahawks were thoroughly outclassed playing freshman teams that could easily defeat many of the major universities' varsity squads. While the Seahawks managed to hold their own against this competition they could hardly be expected to defeat such teams. It is evident that these games were scheduled to give the Hawks the experience that they would need during the remainder of the season. Thus the games were designed to point out the team's weaknesses. As such they served their purpose well and should not be held against the team.

Cancelled Games

In addition four regular season games were cancelled — four games which the Seahawks most likely could have won judging from the other schools' records. The cancelled games caused the Seahawks to lose the sharpness which comes only from competition.

It must also be remembered that the Seahawks hold victories over four of the schools which defeated them proving that they have the ability to beat these teams.

Another fact should be pointed out: the only junior college to defeat Wilmington College was forced to employ the services of an ineligible player in order to do so and that the loss was later avenged.

These facts and many others as well should support our belief that Wilmington College's basketball team is capable of competing successfully in NJCAA competition. We do not claim that they would win the national tournament or even that they would win the regional title but we do believe that they should be given the chance.

The mere fact that they would be competing in the tournament — whether they won or not — would bring the school some of the recognition it so richly deserves. The time, money, and effort spent in the pursuit of this goal is well spent.

MVP—Gene Bogash

Bogash Featured

Editor's note: This is the last articles in The Seahawk's series on the feature basketball player.

Most basketball teams are able to boast of their star player but very few indeed can acclaim the services of an All-American as Wilmington College's EUGENE EDWARD BOGASH.

Much has been said of Bogash's basketball career at Wilmington College. His reputation as an outstanding competitor has spread far and wide earning him a place of honor in the ranks of junior college cage stars. This reputation is evidenced by the tremendous attention given to him by the coaches of the major universities which are vying for his services next year.

The 6-5 native of North Judson, Ind., lettered in basketball during all four years of his high school career. As a senior and captain of the team his 21 points per game scoring average led North Judson High School to the Indiana Semi-State Basketball Tournament. The North Judson team competed in post-season tournaments in each of Bogash's years as a member of the squad. Also as a senior Bogash picked up the team honors in three categories: rebounding, field goal percentage, and total scoring.

After graduation he planned to enter the University of South Carolina but later decided in favor of prepping for the Seahawks. Oddly enough, the first time Coach Brooks met him was when he reported for school in 1960—no effort had been made to recruit him.

Bogash's collegiate record speaks for itself. In his freshman year at Wilmington College his 522 points led the Seahawks to a 22-6 record and sixth place in the National Junior College Athletic Association Basketball Tournament in Hutchinson, Kansas. Bo's 344 rebounds, 20.1 points per game scoring average, and a 60.3 field goal percentage earned him a place on the junior college All-America team.

In the 1962-63 season, despite a schedule shorter by nine games, Bogash racked up 515 points and 274 rebounds for an amazing 27.1 points per game scoring average coupled with a 14.4 average in the rebound department. His two consecutive 38-point games led the Seahawks to second place in the recently completed Virginia-

Carolina Junior College Conference Basketball Tourney held in Louisburg. As a result of this performance Bogash was selected the tournament's Most Valuable Player.

With a two-year total of 1037 points and 618 rebounds in 47 games, Gene Bogash truly deserves the title All-American.

Coach Brooks says of him, "Considering everything, Bogash is the best basketball player we've ever had at Wilmington College."

Wilmington College Golf Team Readies For Challenging Spring Competition

With the return of warmer weather Wilmington College golfers will be returning to the links in preparation for spring golf competition.

Frank Allen, faculty advisor to the golf team, reports that this year's golf season already promises to be the most active and the best yet. An agreement whereby college golfers can use the excellent facilities of Wilmington's Municipal Golf Course has been arranged with Lawrence Cook, the club's pro.

In the coming weeks the golf team will be engrossed in the process of getting in shape after the long winter's lay-off, setting up a scoring ladder, and preparing for the first match of the season against a team composed of faculty members.

The game against the faculty seems to have captured the team's fancy. Scouting reports from both sides are increasing in number and careful tabs are being kept on the scores of the members of both teams.

A date for the match has not as yet been decided upon. The student golfers are leaving that matter up to the challengers, giving them ample time to prepare themselves.

Meanwhile Coach Brooks is working on completing the team's schedule for this season. Games with Louisburg and Chowan Colleges have been arranged. A pair of matches against the University of North Carolina

Hawks Begin Baseball Practice Next Week

Plans for the 1963 baseball season at Wilmington College are under way. Coach Brooks reports that spring practice will begin with end of examinations for the winter quarter and continue until March 14, 15, and 16 when the Seahawks journey to Camp Lejeune to open their regular season.

Already several hopefuls are limbering up their arms and sharpening their batting eyes in preparation for the strenuous ordeal ahead. Athletes who did not participate in basketball can be found running off a few of those extra pounds which they accumulated during the colder winter months.

Much of the schedule is yet to be completed but it looks as though the Seahawks will be competing against some of the best talent in the eastern part of the country. Many of the larger universities of the east and midwest make southern tours at the beginning of the season. The trips are made necessary by difficulty of getting in shape for baseball in the colder weather which lingers on in the north.

On these southern spring training tours the larger schools are always willing to compete against local teams. It is believed that the tournament at Camp Lejeune will be played against some of the larger schools.

The first home games of the season are tentatively scheduled for March 29 and 30 against a strong nine from Williams College in Williams, Massachusetts. Wilmington opens up its conference schedule here April 9 when the Seahawks play host to Louisburg. Chowan will follow close on their heels visiting here April 12 and 13.

Even now the 1963 season promises to be one of the best ever. The Seahawk mentor professes to have an abundance of talented ball players who display an earnest desire to play the game. Most of the members of the basketball team plan to continue on into baseball giving Coach Brooks a solid nucleus on which to build another of his successful Seahawk baseball squads.

The team members feel confident at this early stage that they will have another successful season and some members are already predicting that this year's club will better last year's record including that at the national tournament in Colorado.

Seahawks Doubtful Starters In Region 10 Competition

A big question mark looms over whether the Seahawks will compete in the Region 10 playoffs for the right to travel to Hutchinson, Kansas, for the National Junior College Basketball Tournament.

The Seahawks who completed regular-season play with an 8-9 record against some of the toughest opposition in years are doubtful whether to pursue the title this year. It has been customary in the past for a school to present a winning record before entering region competition.

This year, unlike last year when the Seahawks downed North Greenville, South Carolina, for the region title, the region championship will be decided from a four-team Virginia Conference, the Western Carolinas Junior College Conference and possibly a Negro junior college in South Carolina.

The abundance of teams participating in the playoffs will incur a great deal of time consuming elimination games. Brevard, the leading team in the Western conference began their conference tournament competition February 20 and completed it on the 23.

Ferrum, Virginia, and Roanoke Business College met Saturday to decide the Virginia Junior College Conference championship while reports from the region indicated that the all-Negro Voorhes Junior College of Denmark, South Carolina, might possibly be invited to participate in region competition.

The Seahawk mentor plans to leave it up to the regional director to invite Wilmington College to play.

Last year the Seahawks participated in the national tourney for the first time and finished sixth in the double-elimination event at Hutchinson, Kansas.

Down with Conformity!

Because their English instructor, Gerald Rosselot, had complained bitterly of conformity among college students in class, Marilyn Mack, Carla Otts, Mary Antley, Margie Smith, Marietta Bowers, and June Giddeon make attempts to be individualistic.

Students Comments Reveal Poor Contacts

Some recent student interviews reveal poor communication at W.C. Why don't out-of-town students participate in school activities?

Betty Jane Reynolds (Winna-bow, N. C.): The disadvantage of participating in the college extracurricular activities depends on the location of the out-of-town student's residence. After finishing his courses for the day, an out-of-town student usually returns to his home. Then to participate in these activities he would have to come back to school. This would be making two trips a day and would involve two major things, the doubled automobile expenses and doubled traveling time.

Judy Norris (Kelly, N. C.): I think the main reason for out-of-town students not participating in the college activities is that the activities are not made interesting enough to overcome the inconvenience of having to travel so far to participate. The fact that we do not have a good communication system in the college could also be a reason for non-participation.

Jerry Hooks (Kenly, N. C.): Most of the students at Wilmington College come from New Hanover High School, and they keep the same groups. They seem to have the attitude that this college is theirs, and they are going to run it by and for themselves. It is harder for an outsider to break into these cliques; however, many of the out-of-town students do not want in these groups because of their attitude.

Eleanor Gail Coleman (Hampstead, N. C.): There are probably several logical reasons why some out-of-town students do not participate in extracurricular activities at Wilmington College. The students who commute thirty or forty miles each way are at an inconvenience to come to Wilmington twice in one day. They probably feel that the traveling time is needed to study. Other students who live in Wilmington during the week wish to visit their parents on weekends. Thus they are unable to participate in weekend activities.

Percy Wood (Charlottesville, Va.): Under the present conditions with everyone living off campus, the students in general show very little interest in the school. Eventually dormitories will solve the problem partially.

Nat Bost (Wilmington, N. C.): There isn't a feeling of friendship between the Wilmington students and the out-of-town students. Therefore the out-of-town students feel unwelcome.

C. A. Tanner (Wallace N. C.): The commuters and those who room in town do not have time for extra-curricular activities. The local students have a monopoly on most of the activities and many have the attitude that the activities are held in Wilmington for Wilmington people.

Many of the out-of-town students are shy and do not make friends easily, especially with those students who act superior.

Marie Lassiter (Wilmington, N. C.): Many of the students from Wilmington do not make an effort to include students from other areas in the activities. We are going to school with people we have known practically all our lives; we already have friends and fail to go out of our way to meet new ones.

Hiking Fad Reaches College Cheek, Allen Hit North 17 Trail

"Everybody thought we were only kidding about it; they didn't take us seriously," said John Allen, referring to the 50-mile hike to Jacksonville that he began with Larry Cheek Feb. 16.

The two men set out early that Saturday morning to walk the fifty miles "just to see if we could do it because it was there to be done."

"I would have felt kind of bad if I couldn't have made it," said Cheek, "since a general with a game leg had made the trip."

In addition to fifty miles laying before them that morning, "a northern wind blowing in our faces made it that much tougher," said Cheek. "We hoped it would let up during the day, but it persisted for the entire trip."

It was also very cold when they started from home. "That was one thing that was good, because we didn't get hot walking," said Allen.

The two were escorted for some distance out of town by two cars of rooters including Terry Horton, Karl Allen, Putt Ward, Will Gemmell, Andy Gemmell, Harry Paterson, Bobby Greer, and Jack Harrell.

"A lot of people said they were going to hike with us," said Allen, "but they didn't show up."

At Hampstead, Allen was forced to drop out of the hike, despite the fact that he wasn't "that tired", but because "blisters started bursting and new ones forming" on his feet.

"I was real tired when John dropped out, but since we had committed ourselves already on the radio, I decided to finish it," Cheek said.

At Holly Ridge, Cheek was very tired and stopped to rest and eat. When he tried to continue, he found that his legs had become stiff, and they caused him to stumble and fall off a curb in front of an ABC store.

As he continued out of town, people nodded knowingly and pointed at the man who had staggered over the curb and fallen at the ABC store.

It was dusk when Cheek arrived in Jacksonville and called his father to come get him.

"Almost everybody ought to be able to hike fifty miles, because it's not as hard as everybody puts it up to be," said Cheek. "A little bit of determination, a stout pair of legs, and the proper shoes and most anybody can do it if they put their mind to it."

"We went to a dance the night before," said Allen, when asked if they had any practice before the trip.

Cheek, who does a great deal of walking in hunting and has done some mountain trail hiking, said, "I always like to do a lot of walking."

"Toward the end of the trip, the only thing foremost in my mind was making it standing up," Cheek said.

French Maximes Point Out Human Truths In Observation Of Any Man's Conduct

You are only human! You like to read those things which directly concern you or those subjects which will affect you personally. This is the obvious reason for La Rochefoucauld's popularity and the inevitable success of his French maxims.

What is a maxime? A maxime is an observation of man's conduct expressed concisely in a few sentences and this particular French moralist has a very cynical and pessimistic outlook in his concern for human nature.

Is man helpless, obsessed with himself, and naturally depraved? Read and study these thoughts by Rochefoucauld and then draw your conclusion.

On aime mieux dire du mal de soi-même que de n'en point parler.

One had rather speak badly of himself than not to speak of himself at all.

Region Ten Champions

A Tribute To Our Basketball Team

No other group on our campus has been as successful in bringing fame and recognition to Wilmington College as has our basketball team.

Monday night our ball club defeated Brevard College in an intense game to become conference champions. Tomorrow, they will leave for Kansas to vie for the National Junior College Championship.

Coach Bill Brooks

With pride, we dedicate this paper to a very deserving team and to their devoted and conscientious leader, Coach Bill Brooks.

We also applaud the cheerleaders for their timeless energy and enthusiasm in promoting school spirit, for their successful attempts in convincing students to sit on the bleachers in the gymnasium, and for the improvements they have made in publicizing each game.

Nor can we neglect mentioning the extremely talented and popular All-American Gene Bogash who received a standing ovation in Brogden Hall Monday night from avid fans for his superior performances throughout the basketball season.

"Bo" has been offered scholarships for his tremendous potential by innumerable colleges throughout the United States; it is unfortunate that Gene has not received more publicity while he has been here.

And, finally, we wish to commend the pathological y limited number of students for their excellent attendance at the games and the vigorous school spirit they have shown throughout the year.

We are certain that you will join with us in praising a great ball club and in wishing them the very best of luck and success in their stiff competition next week for the title of National Junior College Champions.

Hawks Leave For Kansas Saturday To Vie For National Championship

By Hugh Paschal

The Wilmington College Seahawks' journey to Hutchinson, Kansas, this weekend where they will compete in the National Junior College Tournament for the second consecutive year.

The Seahawks, unranked in junior college competition for most of the year, surprised everyone by upsetting highly-favored Brevard College in two games to win the coveted Region 10 basketball championship and the right to a berth in the national tourney.

Coach Brooks' charges posted an 11-2 record at the end of their regular season competition and the Virginia-Carolina Conference Tournament held in Louisville. As conference champions the Seahawks met National Business College in Danville, Va., to decide who was to play Brevard College for the region title. Wilmington dropped the Danville squad by a 77-56 score.

In the regional playoffs the Hawks traveled to the western part of the state where they triumphed Brevard, 92-64. In the second game of the series the team took to the confines of Brogden Hall where the Hawks were victorious, 78-66.

Broome Tech of Binghamton, N. Y., a team sporting a 20-4 record, will be the Seahawks' first opponent in the competition this year. The teams will take to the court Tuesday at 5:30 in the second game of the double-elimination event. It takes two losses to eliminate a team but a team can finish no higher than third if it loses before the final round.

This will be Wilmington College's second visit to the NJCAA basketball tournament. Last season Coach Bill Brooks took his charges to Kansas after they had downed North Greenville College in South Carolina.

The Seahawks were doubtful participants in this year's competition because of the tough sledding they experienced during their regular season. However, due to Louisville's forfeiture of their conference and tournament victories because of their ineligible players, the Hawks were able to continue their pursuit of a berth in the national tourney.

Led by their great All-American, Gene Bogash, the Seahawks have posted a 14-8 overall record thus far this season. In 22 games Bogash has racked up an amazing 621 points while posting a 28.2 points per game average and a .576 shooting percentage. Bogash also leads the team in rebounds with 347 for a 15.8 average in that department. He is a veteran of last year's sixth ranking squad.

Marshall Hamilton, the tallest Seahawk, is second in the scoring department with 235 total points. Appearing in 20 games this season, "Stick" holds an 11.7 points per game scoring average.

Tommy Cole and Wray Ware, two freshmen starters from Danville, Va., have boosted the Seahawk scoring attack this year by 157 and 91 points respectively. These boys have worked together since their high school days and provide an experienced attack for the Hawks.

Bobby Shipp, the only Wilmingtonian in the line-up added 114 points in his 22 games this season. Shipp is a product of New Hanover High School where he excelled in athletics being voted an All-State performer in football and baseball.

Bill Harris and Ronnie Hoyland hail from eastern North Carolina and their fine backcourt play has greatly aided the Seahawk cause. Their appearances have added much needed depth to the Hawk attack.

Model UN Accepts Communist Chinese

The Panmuthian Society, representing the Ukraine for Wilmington College at the United Nations Model Assembly in Chapel Hill February 20-24, met relative success.

Parliamentarian Blocks Majority Movement

"Ridiculous!" "Silly!" "Juvenile!" were accusations made by student council members of the meeting Monday night.

Mike West, president of the Freshman Class, led a majority contingent in an effort to pass a resolution providing for conditional excused absences at the March 18 meeting of the student council. Jack Mason, parliamentarian, blocked several attempts at the meeting to pass the bill on the grounds that it violated parliamentary law.

West Calls For Attendance Committee

In brief, West's bill called for an attendance committee to which the members of the council would submit their excuses for absences to have them cleared in the case that they were accepted.

The move was seconded and Barbara Singletary rose to speak first in affirmative debate. Miss Singletary said that West's motion would aid students, such as Dino Summerlin, who have to be absent occasionally from council meetings but who "do the council a lot of good."

Mason Debates Negatively

Jack Mason took the floor for the first round of negative debate; and, speaking as parliamentarian, said that the resolution was not a standing rule as West presented it, but rather an amendment to the constitution which is therefore out of order. Mason, thus by technical point of parliamentary law as parliamentarian, forced the bill off the floor.

The six delegates, Sandy Wright, Acie Kinlaw, Jack Mason, Dick Caravati, Steve Preston and Larry Ingle, faculty advisor, were seeking the expulsion of Nationalist China from the UN and the admittance of Red China to the organization.

A surprise move at the assembly came when the Air Force Academy, representing the United States, presented a resolution calling for the admittance of Red China with the retention of Nationalist China.

Conflict with Reality

Since the United States in the actual UN has followed a policy of opposing any attempts to admit Red China into the UN, some of the members of the Model UN questioned whether or not the Air Force Academy was acting in character as the US to propose a bill contrary to US policy.

Put before a special committee designed to handle such situations, it was decided that due to current world situations it could be conceivable for the US to act in such a manner.

Resolution Passes

Afterwards, the US resolution was passed by the Model Assembly; thus also partially fulfilling the aims of our college and other colleges representing communist countries.

The main speaker at the meeting was Dr. William P. Jordan, an Englishman who works in the UN Secretariat. Also speaking to the group was Edward P. Morgan, radio commentator, and Dr. George Taylor of UNC.

Telegram from JFK

While in session, the Model UN received a telegram from the President.

"A good time was had by all," commented Mr. Ingle; "all delegations saw the problems of the UN... the problems of doing anything effectively."

NC Ballet Demonstrates Three Types Of Dance

On Monday night four soloists from the N. C. State Ballet and John Lehman, its artistic director, gave a lecture demonstration which emphasized the pas de deux, classical and modern.

The Dances

The program opened with a pas de deux from the dance of the Sugar Plum Fairy from the Nutcracker Suite danced by Frances Prevatte and Mickey Hinton. This was a dance centered about a narrative. Then a classical piece from the ballet Raymonda emphasizing virtuosity was performed by Glynn Sprinkle and Kay Atkinson. Mrs. Lehman then presented Frances Prevatte who did the Dance of the Dying Swan with a sensitivity for interpreting emotion through the dance. This dance was originally done by Ana Pavlova. He pointed out that he had adapted the Dying Swan to the Hex Dance of Pauline which was danced by Kay Atkinson and showed the movements which were used in each.

Obvious Need for Theatrical Facilities

Arrangements for a stage had been made and a stage constructed of band risers borrowed from New Hanover High School. However, upon the arrival of the soloists it became evident that the makeshift stage would not be large enough; consequently, at the last minute the risers had to be disassembled and stored away; the floor of the Pub was used as a stage. The performance had difficulty getting the necessary "push" for many of their movements—although resin was sprinkled on the floor. Also the stone floor offered much more resistance than would the ordinary stage. Some of the spectators had difficulty seeing the dancers' feet. Despite these handicaps the performance received favorable response.

Intimacy at the Expense of Illusion

The fact that the audience was so close to the performers offered an intimacy which is quite unusual to the Ballet's public. Mr. Lehman commented that this intimacy had its advantages and disadvantages in that one could view the movements more analytically but that the illusion and theatrical nature of the ballet was lost when the audience was so close. He emphasized, however, that it was a valuable viewing experience and pointed out that the ballet originated in

Parthia Play Travels Again

Wilmington College's traveling play, "The Prince of Parthia", hit the road March 22 for another tour.

The play was presented at Mount Olive Junior College on March 22, and on March 26 the group will be sponsored in Whiteville by a women's society.

Members of the cast include Robert Autry; Martha Parker; Pat Beasley; Ray Oxendine; Beth Fineberg; Bert Gornto; Wayne Robinson; Dale Stevens; and Sam Garner, narrator.

Stage manager for the production is Carl Sneed; Sandy Carr is in charge of the lighting; and Louise Ambrosiano is costume mistress.

Doug W. Swink is the director of the play.

The cast, which was originally formed in early November of last year, has previously presented the play before an audience in Raleigh composed of the State's eleven historical societies.

Last April the play, containing several of the present members of the cast, went on tour and participated in the 40th anniversary celebration of the Carolina Dramatic Association.

"Comic Muse"—Tonight

Dick Walser of the North Carolina State English Department will deliver a talk on 19th century North Carolina poetry entitled "The Comic Muse" in the Student Lounge tonight at 8:30.

Mr. Walser, who has achieved fame because of his research and consequent books on North Carolina literature, has been described by a member of the faculty who is acquainted with him as "the kind of fellow that if he didn't have anything at all to say, you would enjoy listening to him because he has such a wonderful enunciation."

the court of Louis XVI in a relaxed setting which was more like the Monday night stage rather than the grandiose setting grandiose setting of the big theater. Mr. Lehman's lecture was very casual and not at all the typical academic lecture. He punctuated the performances with background information on the various pieces preparing the audience for the particular type of choreography and if one was relating the particular dance to the ballet from which it was taken.

The N. C. State Ballet presented at Wilmington College was made possible through the efforts of Randy Johnson, chairman, and the Fine Arts Committee.

Crackpots Control Student Council

by Gene Marlowe

Unchecked crackpotism among several of the student council's senior leaders has turned that body into a debating society of inane and moot points. Since the beginning of the enforcement of Roberts' Rules of Order, certain members of the council have increasingly taken advantage of the ignorance of the majority of the members of the congress concerning parliamentary procedure and the imperfections of the constitution to gain the floor and expatiate on nonsense at the expense of constructive matters.

Those less-than-a-handful of people who can be given the credit of understanding parliamentary procedure, have, for the most part, used their knowledge to indulge in vain-glorious and ridiculous meticulousness which is a thief of the council's time. Somewhat incongruous to common sense with their demands of astringent "letter of the law", this same group is fascinated by the idea of using the prepotency of their private knowledge of Roberts' Rules to dominate the floor of congress meetings while they hold forth on such issues as "the problem of do-not wrappers on the campus." On one such occasion, half a dozen members of the council walked out in disgust at the effrontery of hearing the Lord's Prayer used as material for a filibuster.

Regardless of these few members' rationale and motives, whether they are opportunistic, whether they are simply enjoying their sport of making a mockery of our government, or whether their intentions are to lead us by methods as paradoxical and unfathomable as those of God into good, efficient government under Roberts' Rules; they are either shortsighted or indifferent to the immediate needs of our government which is hamstrung and demoralized as a result of their actions.

While suffering under the deleterious effect of the doctrinaire exactions and vaudeville of those who have taken the entire leadership of the congress into their hands by Roberts' Rules, no less palpable is the harm caused by the great majority of the council which sits through a meeting wishing the whole thing were over so they could leave and delighting in the occasional comedy provided. If these members of council, the voting majority, had assumed the responsibility of their offices as they were elected to do, had cared enough about their offices to learn parliamentary procedure, the three-man circus now going on at a level above their heads would never have inaugurated.

The council was informed that difficulties would come with the enforcement of Roberts' Rules. Since the majority of the council assumed the onus of tackling the inevitable problems of change by voting for Roberts' Rules (four opposed it), and since reform in the council should be a majority undertaking, each member can begin by personally learning parliamentary procedure so that he can regain his emasculated voice in council and rid the organization of the ignominy of the crackpots now running it, who can, in turn, ease the situation by taking their show elsewhere and having a little less to say until the majority of the council is comparably sufficient in its knowledge of procedure to meet them on their own ground.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

Why Not Unlimited Cuts?

In last month's editorial, we were concerned with the problem of giving to the students unlimited cuts. I believe that the most pertinent attitude toward this, is that we should not give to the student the right to cut.

We Must Be Regimented

In looking at the matter, the student will notice that his individuality and independence is hampered. This may be the case, but this must and will take place. I, like yourself, would like to live in a free unregimented society in which people could do and act as they please. But in reality, society must be regulated in order to insure the progress of that society. If people wish to do as they choose only chaos can result.

We Should Be Concerned with the Irresponsible

In the prior editorial, "Why Not Unlimited Cuts?", we were informed that "the prime concern of any college should be with those students superior in ability and determination." Also the editor stated, "But, why should a college lament over those disinterested, irresponsible, and apathetic individuals who would take advantage of the privilege?" If these statements were advocated, we would lose many students who do have the ability, but who are disinterested and irresponsible.

We live in a dynamic system of new innovations and rapid scientific and technological advancement. Our world is changing about us. Things are more complicated than they used to be. How can one understand our complex world if one is not aware of the stimuli that is about him? But to be only aware is not enough; what we should be concerned about is its significance, and its long range applications in our society.

We must realize that life is not just to be lived for the present, but also for the future. We as citizens and as members of a larger society have a implicit obligation to our member citizens. To abuse this is to forfeit our rights in society.

There is a great demand and urgency for a highly educated society. We are dynamic in our society, in our government, economy, and in our institutions. Why should not our educational facilities be parallel to this movement? Can we be on one hand dynamic, and on the other hand be static, and still progress as fast as we wish to?

For just a few in our society to understand the motives of life would defeat the whole purpose of our system.

I Disagree with Editor's Solution

I agree that many students are disinterested in college, but I do not agree on your method to combat this problem. If we have a problem, we should not let it manifest itself against us, instead we should correct it. I advocate that it is the mass of people that is important in our society, not the minority. We must tolerate the apathetic student, but in tolerating him, we must educate him, because through education and only education can a society progress.

The majority of us believe in a democratic form of government—one that gives to the people life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. If a society is to attain this goal, there must be certain prerequisites. Certainly, one of these is that the mass of people, not the minority, be educated. It is only through education that the people can function in a democratic society.

We Must Be Educated

How can one understand the problems of our complex system without the proper knowledge of the circumstances which govern the way it functions? In a democracy we have choice, but in order to choose we must be educated. To insure this to the individual and to posterity, what could we ask more than a mature, dedicated, and educated

SOMETHING FOR NOTHING

Dear Editor:

Wilmington College's Circle K and Collegiate Civitan clubs have been more interested in what they could do for themselves than what they could do for the College! In the past three months both organizations have carried on many money-making campaigns in order to boost their fame and prestige and have forgotten, in many cases, the College. The College should come first and then one's service club.

Continual rivalry and bickering between the Collegiate Civitan and the Circle K shows a great loss of school unity. To paraphrase both clubs' creed in relation to this subject, it would read: true friendship is the greatest asset any person can possess, and I pledge myself to develop the spirit of service for the improvement of all human relationship.

Why should service clubs ever want fame and recognition when their purpose is service? Are social "cliques" and motives creeping into these clubs? We think that the clubs should be dedicated to an atmosphere of friendliness, mutual helpfulness, and service. This can only be accomplished when we work in unity with each other.

We would like to take the first step to make Wilmington College a unified school. Let us not fight one another but work for the glory of the College in its hardest years. Great nations of the past have moved mountains through national unity, let our school move the future of the world through school unity.

Parliamentarian Blocks Majority Movement

West immediately asked Nat Bost for an appeal. Bost decided to refer the matter to a committee set up for the purpose outside of the council.
